And it gave me a glow of happiness as I rode to think that I had done to the letter what the emperor had ordered. What would he say when he saw me? What could he say which would do justice to the incredible way in which I had risen above every danger? He had ordered me to go through Sermoise, Soissons and Senlis, little dreaming that they were all three occupied by the enemy. And yet I had done it. I had borne his letter in safety through each of these towns. Hussars, dragoons, lancers, Cossacks and infantry, I had run the gauntlet of all of them and had come out unharmed.

[TO BE CONCLUDED.]

TO BRING UP your weight in firm, sound, healthy flesh, after the "Grip," or Pneumonia ("Lung Fever"), Bilious or other Fevers, or any wasting disease; to thoroughly purify your blood, rouse your liver to healthy action, and brace up your system when you feel "run-down" or "played-out"—take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Arrington, Nelson Co., Va.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Sir—Allow me to offer my thanks to you for my good health since using your "Golden Medical Discovery." I was but the shadow of a person, so thin and haggard, without one moment's ease; had suffered for years with my stomach and liver, and this spring had a very severe attack of La Grippe, I then commenced using the "Discovery" and my recovery is wonderful. I am forty-five years old, and feel as well and strong as I did when sixteen years old; my sleep is as sound as an infant's. I remain,

Yours thankfully,

More Wonders at Reform Hall.

JOHNSON HOWARD OF WESTFIELD A HAPPY MAN.

All Rheumatic Cripples Who Cannot Walk Without Canes or Crutches Are Invited to Go at Once to Reform Hall—Vano, the Great Healing Power, Will Cure Them as He Has Done More Than Twenty Others This Week—The Vano Electric Remedies Have the Greatest Record in the World.

Johnson Howard, who has been a cripple from rheumatism and walking on crutches for years, visited Reform Hall today and was treated with Vano's Electric Fluid. In twenty-five minutes he could walk and run round the hall without his crutches, and became so excited he leaped and cried with joy. His friends who came with him were also excited and amazed. This man, who has not been able to work for five years, can now return to his business. He is permanently relieved of this terrible rheumatic demon, and by following the doctor's advice will never again be afflicted with it. He had been treated by several physicians, and and spent three months in a Philadelphia hospital witnout obtaining any practical relief, and had been pronounced incurable. One treatment with Vano's Electric Wonder has shown Mr. Howard, his friends, the people of Westfield, and the world what modern electric remedies can do against ancient treatment, and that there is hope and a practical radical cure for the most despondent. Mr. Howard was in less than 30 minutes transferred from the depths of misery, suffering, hopelessness and despair, to a seemingly new world—where he can again enjoy life, and be a help and blessing to himself and his family and the world—instead of a burthen. There is nowonder that such cures as this excite our people and create such interest in this wonderful man and his new remedies. Let all our afflicted people go and see this man before it is too late, as he will remain here only a few days more. A few extreme cases of rheumatic cripples will be taken free of charge and publicly treated, to show what these wonderful remedies can do. Make immediate application at the hall, which is open every day from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Vano and associates will lecture and give an exposition of modern wonders at the hall this evening, free admission. Extraordinary hypnotic experiments will be produced by Miss Agramonte that will astonish and amuse the audience and illustrate the stupendous electric power in the human system. Let everybody go and be instructed, entertained and amused, and see and hear things you do not see every day.

—It is reported that the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company are canvassing for consents on South avenue for a right of way to run an electric railroad from Elizabeth to Westfield.

BETHEL'S GOOD TIME.

Happy Celebration of Its Tenth Year of Work.

The people of Bethel Chapel gave a fair and concert last evening to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of the chapel. The chapel was very tastefully decorated with evergreens, floral wreaths and banners. A large wreath containing the figures 1884 hung on one side, and one containing 1894 on the other.

Andrew Carpenter furnished the instrumental music. The musical programme opened with a selection by the church quartette, Oscar Green, Samuel Conway, Thomas Haines and J. Taylor. Miss Perry favored the audience with a vocal solo, "Father, bring home your money tonight". Miss Burgess gave a recitation entited "Little Bessie Gray".

The next number was a solo by John Taylor, "Flee as a Bird to the Mountain". Miss Allen sang "Goodbye, but Come Again".

A dialogue entitled "Exorcising an Evil Spirt" was given by Miss Burgess, Miss Wally, Miss Anderson, Miss Douglass, Miss Johnson, Miss Hegeman. Miss Burgess again favored the audience with a solo, "Take Back the Heart". The next number was a solo "When the Leaves Begin to Fade", by Miss Wood. Miss Perry gave a recitation, "The Last Hymn".

A vocal solo, "The Last Kiss Grandma Gave Me", by Miss Hegeman, was the next selection, and Miss Hamilton sang a solo, "Juanita".

Mr. Hynes gave the ever-beautiful "Oh, Promise Me", and a solo was sung by Miss Jenkins, "The Haunted Stream". The final chorus was sung by the quartette, and Miss Holland sang "Goodnight, but not Good-bye".

A short talk was given by Rev. Mr. Alexander, pastor of the chapel, announcing the next entertainment. He said that R. Henri Strange would give in Bethel Chapel, Thursday, Dec. 27, an interesting programme, and spoke of him as the greatest colored elocutionist and tragedian in the country.

The following expert committees served:

Lemonade and cake—Miss Dorsey, Miss Nally, Miss Green.

Fruit and candy—Miss Nelson.

Check table—Miss Brown and Miss Douglass.

Fancy table—Mrs. Henry, Miss Dorsey, Miss VanBlake.

Postoffice—Miss Dorsey and Frank Kelsey.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. At L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00, our price 45c and 90c.

GRACE HAS A FAIR.

It Is a Thing of a Beauty, and a Joy to All Attending.

The fair which opened in Grace M. E Church last evening under the auspices of the Epworth League is a great success All the arrangements were complete, and nothing was left undone to make it one of the most enjoyable events of the season. As usual, sociability was pre-eminent, and one could not enter without experiencing it everywhere.

The decorations were prettily arranged under the direction of A. A. Taft, assisted by E. E. Winckler, L. A. Hummer and Frank Schuck. They consisted of red and white streamers running from every part of the large room, centring at the large chandelier.

At gay booths and tables the actual business of the fair was transacted.

The candy table was in front of the platform, and was very attractive. Mrs. Most was the efficient chairman, and she was assisted very ably by Mrs. E. E. Winckler, Miss Della Voehl, Miss Carrie Tingley, Miss Libbie Springer and Miss Margaret Schuck. Anyone going near the table was sure to purchase some of the excellent home-made candies.

From there one would naturally be attracted to the corner grocery, which was well filled with all that goes toward making a country store a success. Miss Grace Carroll had charge of this, with the Misses Alice Carroll, Alice Loomis, Clara Steiner and Mamie Steiner as helpers, and they did exceptionally well in securing buyers for their goods.

One could not escape the lemonade booth, which was presided over by Mrs Herbert Randolph, chairman, Mrs Griffin and Miss Emma Stevens. The lemonade was so good that many and frequent calls were made.

On the other side of the room was the fancy table, and such a lovely display of fancy articles brought many purchasers to those in charge. Mrs A A Taft was the chairman, assisted by Mrs John Valiant, Mrs L A Hummer, Miss Minnie Force, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Matie VanHorn and Mrs W Lunger.

After the people got through looking around, they drifted to the Sunday-school room, where ice-cream and cake were served. Mrs Charles Hummer and Miss Emma Smalley were in charge, and those assisting were Mrs A Lutkins, Mrs Nelson, Mrs DeMott and Mrs Stein.

An amusing feature of the evening was the contest in pie-eating by J Valiant, Charles Hummer, E E Winckler, L A Hummer and Ezra Loomis. Owing to the number of pies on hand, the judges were unable to decide the contest.

The fair will continue this evening and all who go will have a good time.

THE WESTFIELD FAIR.

One of the Prizes Comes to Plainfield.

The Westfield Club fair closed last Saturday after a period of four days. It proved to be a great success, financially and socially, and high credit is due to the various committees who had charge of the management. The voting contests proved a money-making feature, especially that for the doll.

Following is a list of the prizes and names of the fortunate ones who carried them home:

BOWLING HEAD-PIN TOURNAMENT.

Second prize, handsome banquet lamp and shade, Elmer Love of Westfield.
Third prize, elegant silk umbrella, J. F. W. Bamburger of Plainfield.
Fourth prize, silver-trimmed cane, Ezra Bloodgood of Westfield.

VOTING CONTESTS.

Silver fire trumpet, Empire Engine Co. No.2.
Royal Arcanum badge, W. C. Barton.
Masonic jewel, John Dorvall.
Silver water set, I. O. S. Club.
Fairbank's scales, P. Traynor.
Lamp-shade, Mrs. C. W. Smith.
Doll, Miss Ethel Smith.

RIFLE RANGE CONTEST.

Pearl-handle revolver, G. H. Embree.

Report and Tea.

Miss Cara Peck, President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, arranged a reception and tea which was enjoyed by the members in the rooms yesterday afternoon.

The special feature of the occasion was the report of Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson on the recent National Convention which was held in Cincinnati. It was a very able and interesting sketch of the large gathering, and gave all present something which they have often desired, that is: an idea of the workings of the National body.

After the report the members were served with tea and wafers and a social time was spent in discussing various plans and methods of the work of the Union. Mrs. Walter Haviland poured tea and other members assisted. The meeting was a helpful one and much real good resulted.

The Poisoned Pie Case.

The case of Vanderveer against Cuff came up in Justice Newcorn's Court this morning and after hearing the evidence, which was all circumstantial, the Justice dismissed the case, it not being sufficient to hold the parties for the Grand Jury.

Christian Endeavor Union.

The Nominating Committee appointed at the last conference of the Local Christian Endeavor Union held in Dunellen, met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening to make nominations for the ensuing year. At the next meeting of the local union, which will be held in this city Monday evening, Jan. 21, the nominations made last evening will be presented for election. Dr. French of Newark has been secured as the speaker of the evening. It has not been decided yet at which church the Endeavorers will meet.

Not Down on the Bills.

A clever act not down on the bills was peformed behind the wings of Music Hall stage. Lack of room for the five horses used in the great race scene in the fifth act compels unusual caution as they turn to come down the back-stretch, and one of the horses which was crowded against the wall by his neighbor, slipped and fell. Instantly the jockey threw himself clear, caught his horse by the head, assisted him to his feet, vaulted into his saddle, and was well in the bunch when they passed under the wire at the grand finale. Few of the audience saw the clever fall.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. THE CASINO RECITAL.

The appearance of Miss Addie Parker Jackson, the reader, and P. Ludwig Conde, Plainfield's violinist, at the Casino last evening, was greeted by a large audience which showed its appreciation by generous applause of the excellent programme provided.

Miss Jackson and Mr. Conde were assisted by the Rubinstein Quintette, the Young Men's Symphony Orchestra (made up largely of Mr. Conde's pupils) and the Grace Church choir boys.

The programme opened with an overture by the orchestra. They played very well indeed under Mr. Conde's leadership and their performance was loudly applauded. A number by Miss Jackson followed, entitled "Lorraine", in which the dialogue was cleverly carried out. Miss Jackson has a pleasing presence and stage manner and her audience was in sympathy with her from the first. Each of her numbers was encored. She responded cheerfully to all but the one after her reading of the "Angel and the Shepherds" from "Ben Hur", and in declining to spoil the effect of that she showed rare good sense.

Mr. Conde was next heard in a Fantasia on Themes from Gounod's Faust which was encored. In response to the applause he played Moskowski's "Serenade".

Miss Jackson was again on the programme after Mr. Conde and was heard in a selection called "The Swing" by Fred Emerson Brooks, in which the unfortunate young man from the city (for some occult reason always drawn as a subject of paresis demonstrates his tremendous inferiority to the country swain.

In part 2 of the programme the Rubinstein Quintette played: a. "Menuette" by Beethoven; b, the second "Moment Musicale" by Schubert, and "Love's Dream after the Ball" by Czibulka.

The reading of the "Angels and the Shepherds" was effective and the choir boys acquitted themselves well and received their share of applause when they emerged from behind the scenes.

An elaborate arrangement of the "Evening Star" from Tannhauser and a Chopin Valse by Mr. Conde were duly appreciated. It may be said that Mr. Conde was heard to better advantage in the Chopin Valse than in any other of the solo numbers.

The entertainment was brought to a close by the "Egyptian Midnight Parade" by the full orchestra. Taken as a whole the recital was eminently successful, and the many friends of the principals went home well pleased with the evening's performance.

HYMENEAL.

TenEyck—VanArsdale.

The marriage of James Andrew TenEyck of this city to Miss Emma Louise VanArsdale took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride in Pluckamin. Rev. Samuel Parry officiated. Miss Minnie D. Voorhees and Miss Ida M. Voorhees of Brooklyn were the bridemaids, and Louis TenEyck of North Branch and J. A. Robinson of this city were the groomsmen.

The bride and her maids were most charmingly arrayed. The presents were numerous and beautiful and testified to the high esteem in which the brida is held. There was a very large number of guests in attendance.

Among those from Plainfield were Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Powlison, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of Grandview avenue, J. A. Robinson and Miss Robinson, Peter Van Arsdale and his daughters, Cora and Georgia, Miss Josie Van Arsdale, Miss Anna VanArsdale, and John G. McLaughlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck will spend a week or so in Philadelphia and Washington.

P. B. C. Beats E. B. C., "Dead Easy".

A game was bowled last evening on the Trade Temple alleys, between the Plainfield Bowling Club and the Elizabeth Bowling Club, which, though not as close as was expected, had many interesting features. When Mr. Watters of the home team rolled up a grand total of 203 pandemonium reigned supreme. The score:

TRINITY TEA.

Delightful Sociability Enjoyed by a Large Gathering.

Many Plainfield people had a good time in a good cause last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Marshall, 416 East Fifth street. The house has been newly furnished throughout, presenting a beautiful domestic scene, which was heightened by the decorations of ropes of evergreen and smilax.

The teas given by the Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed Church are famous for their sociability, and this was a marked example of hospitable good fellowship. The table, illuminated by a beautiful banquet lamp, was tastefully adorned with flowers; and silver and cut glass added to the richness of effect.

Mrs. Demarest and Mrs. Church presided, re-enforced by Miss Gillem and Miss Force. The committee directing the affair were Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. F. A. Church, and Mrs. P. M. Demarest. Under these experienced hands, everything moved smoothly and well.

Not only was there a feast of th season's edibles, but also a feast of song and recitation equally as enjoyable. A piano duet by Miss Olive Newell and Miss Edith Hurlburt, a vocal solo by Miss Frances Mattison, a piano solo by Miss Hurlburt, a recitation by Mrs. Samuel Burhans (nee Miss Susie Marsh) of Westfield, and a piano solo by Miss Newell, made up the programme. All of this was excellent, and Mrs. Burhans was encored and gracefully responded with "The Auction Sale of Old Bachelors", which caused much laughter and renewed applause. She is an accomplished elocutionist, and has a host of friends in Plainfield who delight to see and hear her.

Throughout, the tea was an event of great enjoyment. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are popular young people, and their cordial reception of the large gathering will be long remembered by all present.

The guests left substantial remembrances for the society in whose behalf the tea was held; and E. T. Van Winkle, who is as expert an accountant as he is a popular letter-carrier, counted up nearly $20 proceeds.

THE TRACY RECEPTION.

All Plainfield Society Attended, and It Was One of the Most Elaborate Functions of the Season.

One of the largest and most elaborate afternoon receptions that has ever taken place in Plainfield was that given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy to bring out their daughter, Miss Edith H. Tracy. The Tracy house on West Eighth street was crowded with guests from 4 until after 7, and the carriages were in line in the street for many blocks. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and plants, and the constantly changing throng of beautifully dressed women made a pleasing picture for those who had retired to some quiet corner to see and not be seen.

Mrs. Tracy was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Howard Tracy and Mrs. E. C. Perkins. The debutante wore cream colored silk and carried a large bunch of la France roses.

Mrs. Daniel Ginna and Mrs. Fred Yates presided at the elaborately set table in the dining room while the wants of the guests were ministered to by the Misses Tracy, Miss Beaman of New York, Miss Wadsworth, Miss Haviland, Miss Kathryn Wood, Miss Whiton and Miss Mary Bushnell.

It is estimated that over 500 people were present during the afternoon. This fairly opens the season, and teas and dances follows each other in rapid succession until after the holidays. Lack of space forbids a detailed list of the guests, but from the general verdict that "everyone" was there the knowing ones can provide the list for themselves.

Lively Riding at the Academy.

A lively and interesting spectacle was presented last evening as the spirited horses flew over the tanbark at the Riding Academy, during the class meeting, performing graceful and intricate evolutions under the guidance of their masters, led by Mr. Holly. Among those present were: Mr and Mrs Pentz, Mrs Cruikshank, Mr and Mrs Serrell, Miss Henderson, Miss Vail, Miss Henderson, Miss Coard, Miss Holly, and Messrs. Ginna, Roome, Coard, Roland, J W and Harry Johnson, Henderson, Vail, Broadwap, Buttfield, Opdyke, Moore and Samuel McCutchen.

A new hurdle, which was used for the first time last evening, is a very great improvement. One of the features was the graceful manner in which Mr. Henderson's mount took the four-foot hurdle.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE REAL SANTA CLAUS.

His Name Is Seely Edsall, and His Vast Storehouse in the Commercial Palace Beats the Arabian Nights.

OVER the mantelpieces the stockings will soon be hung, awaiting Santa's visit; and the happy little people will revel in the delights of exploration of the hosiery's depths. But all the people, little and big, have come to realize that many of the choicest gifts come not from jolly St. Nick but from papa, mamma, and other members of the household and friendship circle.

Many have anticipated a poor Christmas, after so much cry of hard times; but Edsall at his Commercial Palace, Babcock Building, has shown and is showing that the holiday season may be a merry one for all in spite of financial stringency.

His great establishment (many stores merged in one) offers bewildering bargains in goods of every sort. Not a household want, not a personal desire, but can be fully and reasonably satisfied at his great mart. Books for young and old, pictures, games, toys, happy mediums for bringing fullest pleasure out of the long Winter evenings or the days of any season, are there in vast abundance. Home furnishings, personal supplies, goods to suit masculine needs, the thousand and one things that delight the feminine heart, are displayed at Edsall's. The wonder of the town is the mammoth assortment and the astonishingly low prices.

Plainfield is proud of Edsall's. It is the biggest Christmas bazar in all New Jersey, and the figures are lower than in the great city to which a journey is so tiresome. To go through Edsall's is a pleasure trip, and when one has enjoyed it all he marvels how Plainfield has grown to support so grand and glorious an establishment. Don't be content with enjoying the attractive display in the show windows, but go inside and revel in the immensity of the place and the variety of the stock. It is all as big and bountiful as the cave explored by Aladdin, and is more glorious because it is real.

There is just this one thing about it: If anyone in Plainfield has his heart set on anything, you will find that thing at Edsall's, and it is yours for less money than you would pay if you went out of town.

Edsall enables everybody to be a generous Santa Claus to all his friends.

The Moslers Lead the World.

S. W. Clark of 118 West Fifth street has been appointed special agent for the Moeler Safe Company, whose fire and burglar proof safes are of such superior merit that the United States and Mexican Governments have chosen them as the standard of security. All through the world the Mosler safes are in general use, and the prices are as satisfactory as the safes are excellent. Mr. Clark is prepared to furnish full information to those desiring safes that will hold valuables most secure against invasion. The Mosler company have chosen wisely in their selection of him as a special agent, he being experienced in the business and a faithful representative.

Looking for Bibulous Town Fathers.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

The trolley question has been little thought of this week. Our commissioners are waiting to see what is to be done in Plainfield before doing anything here. One of the representatives was in a hostelry of this place a short time ago and asked the names of our commissioners. Upon being told he asked if any of them frequented the hotels of the place. He was informed that they were all temperate men, whereupon he said he had no time to waste in town.

"Carmen" Tonight.

The picturesque opera of "Carmen; or, the Bull Fighter", which will be given in Music Hall tonight by the Duff Opera Company, is the master-work of Bizet. "Carmen" is the present musical rage in New York city. It will be sung in English.

The costumes and stage effects are said to be the finest ever imported to this country. Mr. Duff goes abroad every Summer, and returns here with all the most exquisite fabrics from London and Paris, with which to adorn his singers.

Gifts of Comfort and Ease.

Chas. Hall has with his accustomed good taste arranged in the show windows and cases of Reynolds's Pharmacy an elegant display of choice holiday goods in the line of cut-glass bottles, perfumes, mirrors, and toilet requisites. Reynolds's Pharmacy has a superior stock of substantial and beautiful goods for milord and milady, and Christmas gifts may there be procured that will promote the comfort, ease and happiness of the favored recipient.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

TO PROTECT THE COAST

Money for Defenses Appropriated by Congress.

Nearly Two Million Dollars Will Be Spent on Guns and Forts and Half a Million on the West Point Military Academy—The Senate Hears a Discussion on a University.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The Nicaraguan canal bill and a measure to establish a national university in this city were the only matters of importance considered in the senate. In the house several important appropriations were passed. Aside from about an hour devoted to an animated discussion of the policy of the pension bureau under the present administration, in which Messrs. Henderson (rep., Ia.), Bingham (rep., Pa.), Bynum (dem., Ind.) and Coombs (dem., N. Y.), took the leading part, the session was strictly a business one.

The bills appropriating $2,005,595 to meet urgent deficiencies for the current fiscal year; $1,879,057 for fortifications and coast defences for the year ending June 30, 1896, and $457,675 for the expenditures at the West Point military academy in the same year, were passed as they came from the committees.

The pension appropriation bill also for the year ending June 30, 1896, carrying a total of $141,381,070, was also taken up and after a brief speech by Mr. Pickler (rep., S. D.), it went over without action until this afternoon when, by agreement, there is to be four hours of general debate.

The bill to establish the University of the United States at Washington was taken up in the senate and speeches in favor of it were made by Senator Hunton (dem., Va.) and Vilas (dem., Wis.)

The idea of a national university originated, Mr. Hunton said, in the mind of Washington, before the revolution; and its establishment had been urged by nearly all the presidents of the United States from Washington to Hayes.

The lack of a university for higher education in this country, he said had been compelling ambitious students and professional men to resort to the great universities of France, England, Germany and other foreign countries, from which they might return with monarchical ideas incompatible with American customs. No action was taken on the bill and it remains on the calendar.

Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.) asked unanimous consent to have the vote on the Nicaragua canal bill taken next Thursday but an objection was made by Mr. Caffery (dem., La.)

The Nicaragua canal bill was then taken up and Mr. Morgan resumed his argument in support of it.

Mr. Peffer (pop., Kan.) however, took the floor to address the senate on the bill. Then motion to adjourn over to Monday was made by Mr. Wolcott (rep., Col.), and it was agreed to. An amendment to the Nicaragua bill was offered by Mr. Call (dem., Fla.) and its reading was called for by Mr. Morgan. The reading clerk glanced over it and quietly informed the presiding officer that he was unable to decipher it.

Another call for its reading was made, and the presiding officer announced that it could not be read, as it was illegible.

The reading clerk tackled it, however, but could get no further than the words: "The United States of America."

Then he came to a full stop and handed the paper, in desperation, to Mr. Gilfry, the legislative clerk. This gentleman, however, declined to make the attempt, and the senate had to adjourn in ignorance of Mr. Call's amendment.

May Force a Financial Bill.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Chairman Springer of the banking and currency committee says he is in favor of passing a financial measure through the house before the Christmas holidays.

His position in that respect is sustained by a large number of democrats from all sections of the country, who favor prompt action.

The watch word of Mr. Springer and those who are ready to follow his leadership in this business is "no Christmas turkey until the financial bill is passed."

It is proposed if necessary to hold continuous or night sessions in order to facilitate the passage of the bill.

Too Small for Morton.

Albany, Dec. 14.—Governor-elect and Mrs. Morton's winter retinue at Albany will consist of fifteen servants. The mansion will prove inadequate for the family, and Supt. Perry, of the capitol, will prepare at once an addition which will cost about $16,000. There are no stables attached, and Mr. Morton's coaches and horses will be quartered in some large stable nearby.

A Woman Assistant Pastor.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 14.—The South Congregational church of Bridgeport has appointed Mrs. S. J. Shear as assistant pastor. This is said to be the first recorded case of such an appointment of a woman in this state.

Great Coal Company.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 14.—There was a new coal and coke company organized here with a capital of one million dollars to control the output of coal and coke in the Kanawha and New River coal fields.

The Pope Has Catarrh.

London, Dec. 14.—The Lancet says the pope is suffering from catarrhal symptoms, and that he has been forbidden by his physicians to leave his private apartments.

END OF THEIR DIVORCE

William K. Vanderbilt and Wife Are Reconciled.

The Multi-Millionaire and His Spouse Said To Have Settled All Differences and To Have Forgiven Each Other Several Unpleasant Episodes—They Will Live at Islip, L. I.

New York, Dec. 14.—Judging from reports and appearances the threatened Vanderbilt divorce case will be dropped. Mr. William K. Vanderbilt and his wife have met in this city, and it is said that a complete reconciliation has been effected. Mrs. Vanderbilt has left the marble mansion at Newport, where she was living, to establish a residence in Rhode Island for the purpose of sueing, and Mr. Vanderbilt returned the other day from Europe in the steamship Teutonic. Relatives had been at work for some time trying to smooth over the troubles and prominent among them was Colonel William Jay and Mr. Chauncey Depew. The former returned with Mr. Vanderbilt, and now it is reported that he couple will return to conjugal bliss and occupy the new mansion recently purchased by Mr. Vanderbilt at Islip, L. I.

Prior to these developments the latest reports were that Mr. Vanderbilt had settled $10,000,000 on his wife and had given her several mansions. He would allow her to bring suit for divorce and not oppose the proceedings. Mrs. Vanderbilt was to have control of the children except the eldest daughter, who was to live with her father. Now, however, the reports state that all proceedings have been dropped.

Chauncey M. Depew was seen at his residence last night and politely but firmly declined to discuss the case, saying he was a "sort of counsel" in the matter and it would be highly improper for him to discuss it. When asked point blank if there had been a reconciliation, he said:

"I would be glad to give any information I consistently could but my lips are sealed. You must excuse me from saying anything at all."

At the residence of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt the butler said:

"Mrs. Vanderbilt has gone out to luncheon with her husband. I don't know where, but with relatives, very likely."

The butler said also that Mr. Vanderbilt had spent the night there and that husband and wife had gone away together. The butler said the Vanderbilts were preparing to go to their home at Islip, L. I. He thought they would go very soon and would divide their time during the winter between that place and their residence in the city.

The trouble which led to the institution of divorce proceedings was of long standing. Mrs. Vanderbilt was a Miss Alva Smith of Mobile and was married in 1874. She desired to shine in society and when the old Knickerbocker stock turned their backs upon her she organized a society of her own, and spent money so lavishly that a few months ago it was reported that her husband had become temporarily financially embarassed. The Newport house cost $4,000,000. That in this city $3,500,000 and another at Hempstead $1,500,000.

These figures do not include millions more spent for furniture and interior decorations. Her social seasons frequently cost $2,000,000 and her gowns nearly a $1,000,000. She then went in for yachting and the Alva, which cost $2,000,000 was the result.

Then gossips begun to whisper. Yachtsman O. P. H. Belmont and she were very friendly. He was one of the party on the yacht when something happened that brought a cruise planned for two years to an end in six weeks. Then Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt seperated, the latter going to London and the former to Paris where he met Miss Nellie Neustratter, and has been published, gave her $60,000 at the Paris races, furnished a house for her and presented her with horses and wagons galore.

When Mrs. Vanderbilt heard of this she is said to have brought the proceedings which have now been discontinued.

Senator Smith's Father Dead.

New York, Dec. 14.—James Smith, the father of Senator James Smith, jr., of New Jersey, died at his home in Newark. He was born in Ireland in 1824 and came to this country in 1845. He was a member of the common council of Newark for eight years and an assemblyman two years, but would not accept a nomination for a third term, although urged to do so. Mr. Smith leaves two children, Senator Smith and Mrs. John F. Shanley.

HELD FOR JURY BRIBING.

Three Men Arrested and Placed Under Bail on Serious Charges.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 14.—Fred Hopkins and George F. Tyler, of New Britain, were arrested there, and Jarvis Messenger in this city, on bench warrants issued by Judge Torrance. Hopkins is charged with perjury and bribery of a juror, Tyler with perjury, and Messenger with accepting a bribe while acting as a juror.

At the September term of the superior court, Hopkins, who is a member of the New Britain drug firm of J. W. Cotter & Co., was charged with selling liquor illegally. Two witnesses testified that he sold them a bottle of whiskey, which he and Tyler, a witness, denied under oath.

The jury disagreed, 11 to 1 for conviction, Messenger being the juror who voted for acquittal. The case was tried again last Tuesday when Hopkins pleaded guilty and was fined $100.

Between the trials, Hopkins, it is said, boasted that it cost him $25 to fix the jury, and State's Attorney Egglestone determined to get at the facts.

Messenger is an employe of the United States court in this city. He was released under bonds of $1,500. Bonds were fixed at $2,500 for Hopkins and $1,500 for Tyler and were furnished.

RIVAL OF THE STANDARD.

A Formidable Competitor with Over $6,000,000 Capital.

Toledo, O., Dec. 14.—A big deal was consummated here involving from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000, which will make Toledo the most important oil centre in the Ohio field, and at the same time give the Standard Oil company a new and formidable competitor. It is a combination of three independent companies, with the chances in favor of two more going into it.

The Sun Oil company, of Toledo, has the largest production of crude petroleum in Ohio except the Standard. Its chief owners are Pew and Emerson, of Pittsburg.

The next member of the combine in importance is the Merriam & Morgan Parafine company, of Cleveland, and the third is the Crystal Oil company, of Toledo. The two others which will probably enter are the Paragon Refining company and the Craig Oil company of Toledo.

An oil pipe line will be laid to Toledo from Mermill, near Cygnet, O., at once. The new concern will refine by the Berg process, which, it is claimed, eliminates the sulphur from the Ohio oil, and thus makes it the superior of the Pennsylvania product. Deeds have been recorded here and the deal is closed.

RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

A Protest Against the Action of the Ansonia Board of Education.

Ansonia, Conn., Dec. 14.—A great protest is being made here, and much rancorous feeling aroused against the action of the board of education, which has voted to abolish religious services in the public schools.

The matter came to the board on complaint of a teacher in the Park Row school, where Catholic pupils refused to recite the Protestant version of the Lord's prayer.

One of the pupils alleges that he was punished because he would not recite the prayer. The teacher says she punished him for being impudent.

The vote in the board to abolish religious services stood 5 to 1, the minority being the Rev. Mr. Woodcock, rector of Christ church, Episcopal. All the members of the board but W. H. Kane, the president, are Protestants. The Rev. Mr. Marckwick, a Congregational minister, is leader of the protest against the board's action.

SHE SHOT HER LOVER.

Gideon Lattimer Had Threatened To Break His Engagement.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 14.—Gideon W. Lattimer was shot this morning by Annie Maud Brower because he intended to break off his engagement with her. He lies in a very critical condition, and there is little hope of his recovery. His would-be slayer has thus far eluded the officers, though they are convinced that she is still in the city.

It has been learned that after the shooting the woman went to the office of Dr. Wilkinson, on Market street, where she remained for several hours. She confessed that she did the shooting to Dr. Wilkinson, and expressed the hope that it would be fatal. Dr. Wilkinson has been arrested for failing to notify the officers of the woman's presence at his house.

He Refuses To Resign.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 14.—J. Rice Winchell, collector of the port of New Haven, will not resign his place owing to the nomination of H. H. Babcock and will force President Cleveland to remove him. Mr. Winchell, who has been an excellent officer, before refused the request for his resignation made by Secretary Carlisle, holding that he had a right to serve until the expiration of his term of appointment.

Seely Leaves for New York.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Samuel Seely, the Shoe and Leather bank embezzler, has left for New York over the Pennsylvania railroad in the custody of United States Deputy Marshal Donnelly. President Crane, of the Shoe and Leather bank, and Detective Nugent, of New York, accompanied the prisoner.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

WAS A MORMON WIFE.

TWELVE YEARS WITHIN THE INNER CIRCLE OF MORMONISM.

Characteristics of Brigham Young. A Queer Story of Polygamy, Religion and Wickedness. It is a Wonder Uncle Sam Stood the Blot so Long.

"I lived for twelve years in what you might call the inner circle of Mormonism during the years that were the era of assasination, and persecution in the rule of the church in Utah," said a woman whose present husband is a well know mine owner of Montana, "and I have many lively recollections of that sojourn.

"My first husband was a Mormon. He was converted to that then queer faith under the preaching of Brigham Young in London in 1844. He had an unbounded faith in most of the tenets of Mormonism but never accepted the doctrine of the plurality of wives. He was a civil engineer. When a young girl I married him in my native town in Ohio, and accompanied him in 1857 to the Mormon capital. I was a Mormon only in name, and my disgust at the practices of the Church and its leaders was intense from my first entrance into its society, and I never could understand how a man so honorable and upright as my husband was could accept that religion as the truth.

"I knew Bringham Young intimately, and shall always have kindly recollections of him as a man. Our house was one of the few he was in the habit of visiting, although our circumstances were limited. He was very fond of my husband, who had contrived some ingenious appliances for the gas and water works, which had pleased the prophet very much.

"The second day after I went to Salt Lake City I heard Brigham Young preach. I was not used to hearing religious teachers denouncing their hearers as fools from the pulpit, and using similar expressions more vigorous than pious, but I got used to there style, and went to their Tabernacle services regularly.

"Once in my presence Brigham Young told my husband that he had a nice wife picked out for him, and that he had better take her at once, and fetch her home as company for me. I replied that if my husband attempted to copy his prophet and took another wife every little while he would find that part of Salt Lake City much too warm for his comfort. Brigham laughed heartily at that, and said I wouldn't be the right kind of a wife for a Mormon prophet to start out with. I was bold enough to say that if the Mormon prophet had had just such a wife to start out with the Mormon religion would have been the gainer. I gave a passive adherence to the religion for my husband's sake, contributed all I could toward its support, and mingled with the Mormon families exclusively. It was my love for my husband that kept me so long among the iniquitous people. When he died, in 1869, I did not tarry long in Utah.

"I went to the Mormon country about the time the inquisitorial reform began. The outside world never knew much about the workings of that movement of the Mormon Church. The Church authorities had proclaimed that the people, by their dilatoriness in taking plural wives, their scanty payment of tithes, and their other shortcomings had displeased the Lord.

"Missionaries were sent out all through the Territory to preach to that effect, and a confessional was established—or rather a cathecism prepared with the view of obtaining information as to the life of every family and its members.

"The country was districted, and a faithful polygamist, called a Teacher, was put in charge of each district. The duty of these men—for the Teachers were all men—was to visit every house in their district and put the questions laid down by the Church to each member with no one else by.

"These inquiries searched into the most sacred relations, and had to be answered on oath. The result of this inquisitorial reform was that the Mormons were found to be the most iniquitous of people, and Brigham young decreed a general baptism of every male and female in the Church.

"My house was visited by one of these Teachers while my husband was absent. I refused to hear his questions, and he, insisting on my doing so, I took my husband's rifle and ordered the man to leave the place at once, which he did with great haste.

"A sister of mine has the distinction of having refused the hand and harem of Brigham Young. She was but sixteen when she visited us at Salt Lake City in 1859. Brigham saw her at our house, and three days afterward asked her to become his wife—his twelfth, I think. She refused the honor with such indignation that Brigham left the house highly insulted. My sister was in such terror lest the Prophet should seize and force her to marry him that we asked permission of a party of tourists who were on their way East after a trip overland to California for her to accompany them back, and she joined them the very next day. The Mormons had everything their own way in those days, and were controlled by some of the worst of men. I often tremble to think what might have befallen the girl in thus defying the head of the Church. I believe if it had been John D. Lee, or Orson Pratt, or Bishop Hyde, instead of Brigham Young, my sister would either have become 'sealed' or she would never have left Utah.

"The Prophet made daily calls upon his wives during all the time I lived in Salt Lake City, and they were the best provided for of all the Mormon women. I knew them all—at least all that he had up to that time—some of them quite intimately, and I never heard one of them complain of neglect of any kind.

"Do I believe that Brigham Young knew of the Mountain Meadow massacre? What I have read of that murder is all I really know about it, and believe the same may be said of all the Mormons except those who were engaged in it. It doesn't seem to me that Brigham Young could have deliberately ordered that massacre, nor do I believe that he knew of it until afterward. John D. Lee was a fiend incarnate, and one-half his crimes will never be known.

His Idea of It.

"What do you think of the emancipation of woman, Mr. Henpeck?"

"Why, sir, I think it has been pretty thoroughly accomplished."—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

A Frail Staff.

"Why so glum," asked his friend. "Aren't you doing a roaring trade."

"Yes, I am," admitted the basso, "but it is all on notes."—Cincinnati Tribune.

DANCED TO UNHEARD MUSIC.

Deaf Mutes Felt the Sound Waves, but Not in Their Ears.

The Fanwood Quad Club of Deaf Mutes held its annual reception at Lexington Opera House recently. There were about five hundred persons present, and all but four or five of them were unable to either speak or hear.

The hall was draped with blue and gold and there were many very pretty costumes. The uninitiated who happened in wondered much how the mutes were going to keep time to the music in dancing.

Many skeptical persons advanced the theory that they would have some one stand on an elevated platform and beat the time for the dancers. But these persons found out how mistaken they were when the time arrived for the promenade. The signal was given by the shrill blast of a whistle. The president of the club said that when a whistle was blown the mutes had a sensation similar to that which would be produced by running a match stick over the teeth.

The music struck up and the promenade began. It was surprising to see how these persons, who had never in their lives heard a sound, kept time to the music. The noticeable thing about the music was that the drum and the piano were hammered just as hard as the strength of the operators would allow.

The president explained that the vibrations of the drum and piano could be felt in the stomachs of the mutes. The music of the violins and cornets, he said, was of no use at all, as their tones could not be felt.

The mutes all seemed to have very good ideas of time, but they could not distinguish between a polka and a schottische without looking at their programmes.

Most all of the company wore evening dress, and much good taste was shown in the costumes of the ladies. The company talked entirely by signs, and the snapping of fingers was almost as distracting as very loud talking would be.

One of the instructors at the deaf mute school of this city said there was nothing in any language that the mutes could not convey by signs.

The most distinguished mute present was James H. Caton of Jersey City. Caton is not only deaf and dumb, but is blind, and despite this he can carry on a very animated conversation.

He has trained his sense of touch to such an extent that he can, by placing his forefinger over a person's hand, tell exactly what signals are made.

Last night a gentleman who had not seen Caton for ten years went up to him and signalled:

"I'll bet you don't know who I am."

"Give me your initials," signalled Caton.

When this was done the blind mute signalled back the name of the man and the date and place of their last meeting.

The great command that the deaf mutes have over their facial muscles and their ready interpretation of all signs was very apparent.

Conversation while dancing was carried on by the ladies tapping the men's shoulders and the men tapping the ladies' waists.

Secrets could be told without any fear of the rest of the company overhearing them. The only persons who did not thoroughly enjoy themselves at the ball were those possesseed of speech.—N. Y. Sun.

Value of Outdoor Exercise.

How some people suffer in winter! They are constantly having chills; a feeling of cold water trickling down their back or some local stagnation of the blood, with altered nervous sensations is experienced; the hands, feet, nose or ears are especially likely to give inconvenience. Such individuals cannot get warm, even in bed, and, as a consequence, often suffer from insomnia, for sleeplessness, is often caused by cold feet.

Many such conditions arise from the fear of taking outdoor exercise because the weathar is too cold. Hence the circulation is not kept going and the blood vitiated by the close, impure air of the house, has no chance offered it of being allowed to purify itself.

The foulest river or stream of water is rendered pure by exposure to the air as it comes along, and after a run of a few miles becomes fit for consumption. Why, then, will delicate people deny the stream of life an opportunity to purify itself as it courses through their veins? Here is the secret of how to keep warm in winter—outdoor exercise in pure air.

Many individuals mistake the feeling of cold for catarrh. But feeling cold and taking a cold are different things. A shiver from exposure to cold—indeed, a half frozen condition—is not in itself likely to end in a so-called, cold so long as the exposure has been in the open air; but we hold that by breathing the impure air of ventilated rooms a chill may be very easily contracted that will end in a cold.—Philadelphia Times.

The College-Bred Sister.

She has just returned from college where she studied each improvement which has been achieved in learning and in scientific lore.

She had stored her mind with knowledge vast enough to start a college, but she cannot carve a chicken without musing up the floor.

She writes phillipics and stories and in thoughts poetic glories, and talks universal suffrage in a way that strikes one dumb.

With undisguised admiration at her learned inspiration, but she cannot darn her stockings without boring through her thumb.

Oh, she is a pearl, a treasure, this sweet sis, with eyes of azure, and I'm sure she'll make a record as a happy mortal's wife.

But I warn the swain aspiring, that she'll boss with sway untiring, and will make him walk a chalk line for the balance of his life.

The Wisdom of Experience.

"My wife," said young Mr. Fitts to a group of others of his ilk, "takes it as an insult to her sex if I make unkind remarks about any other woman, and as an insult to herself if I make kind ones. What the doose is a fellow to do?"

The oldest married man in the party advised him to do nothing.—Indianapolis Journal.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

Miss Carrie Tingley has been very ill at her home on West Front street.

Miss Audsley of Grove street will sail for England tomorrow, and from there will go to South Africa.

John E. Stewart and family will soon take up their residence on Forty-first street, New York, for the Winter.

Mrs. Irving W. Young of White Plains and Miss Grace Odell of Tarrytown are guests of Miss Florence Conover of Hotel Albion.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff are now "at home" at 109 Duer street, the property recently purchased by them of L. B. Woolston.

Miss Martha Tracy of Bryn Mawr College came home yesterday to attend the reception given by her mother, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy of West Eighth street.

Randolph Shotwell, who has been visiting his nephew William H. Shotwell of Emily street, returns to his home, Albany, tomorrow. He has a very warm spot in his heart for Plainfield and her hospitable people.

Miss Inez Tolles of Westervelt avenue was very pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening by a jolly party of friends who invaded her home and held complete sway until a late hour. The evening was most pleasantly enjoyed by all.

Our distinguished fellow citizen, A. J. Leader, residing at 63 Duer street, gave a dinner last evening to Drs. Vano and Stamford, the medical wonders now lecturing at Reform Hall, with whom he has been acquainted for many years.

Theodore Kurtzhals had a fall last evening and sprained his right arm. It was found necessary this morning to call on Dr. Adams, who relieved the pain very much. Mr. Kurtzhals will not be able to use the arm for some time.

Rev. George N. Greene, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Cranford, who was a member of the Honeyman coaching party in England the past Summer, gave a lecture on "English Cathedrals" last evening in his church to a large audience There were elegant stereopticon views illustrating the lecture, which was interesting throughout.

A Narrow Escape.

John H. Blimm, the well-known Third street grocer, recently had a fortunate escape from what would have proved a most disasterous affair had it not been for his prompt action and the assistance of his wife. Sunday evening at 9:30 Mr. Blimm went down cellar for the morning kindling wood and set the candle on the stairs while he started to fill his basket.

Hearing a noise he turned, to find the stairway ablaze of fire. Hanging around the stairs were several rags and articles of clothing which had caught from the candle, completely shuting off the exit.

Mr. Blimm dashed up through the flames singeing his clothes as he did so. Mrs. Blimm, who had been attracted by his shout, rushed to his assistance, cleared the hallway of such clothing as had not yet caught fire and in less time than it takes to tell both were throwing water on the fire. Under their vigorous onslaught the blaze was soon extinguished and the two exhausted firefighters sat down and congratulated themselves on their escape.

Burial of the Babe.

Certificate of death and burial permit were granted yesterday to Casey & Son by Dr. Victor Mravlag in the case of the little one who met death at Scotch Plains in such an unhappy manner.

The body was that of a healthy and fully developed infant, and the wound in the side, mentioned yesterday, proved to be only a superficial abrasion of the skin Messrs Casey & Son buried the body today in the city plot.

SHE WORE 'EM.

That's Why Uncle Josh Didn't Take the "Pants" that He Wanted.

Uncle Joshua was selecting a pair of trousers in the clothing store.

"What do you think o' them?" he said to the good-natured salesman.

"Why, I think they're all right," the salesman said; "but the idea is to please the one that's to wear them. The question is, do they suit you?"

"Ain't they pretty gay for an old fellow?"

"Gay! That's a very quiet stripe. They look well on you, too."

"I guess they do fit pretty well. I ain't worn a pair o' striped pants, though, in I dunno how many years, an'—still, you say they are all right."

"I say if they please the one that's to wear them they most certainly are all right; and you are wearing them, so you're the judge."

"I believe I do like 'em, by ginger! 'Bout right for len'th, ain't they?"

"They are about as near right as any custom tailor could have made them—length, waist and everything."

"You wouldn't call it a loud stripe?"

"I would not!"

"No; it don't seem to me so. Still, I've been wearin' either black or pepper 'n salt for I dunno how many years now, an' everything else looks kind o' queer. But, I declare, it does seem good to get something else on. There ain't any good reason why a man o' my age shouldn't wear these pants, is there?"

"No earthly reason that I know of, if you like them. They certainly look well, and they are first-rate trousers."

"Well, I guess I'll go take 'em off and let you do 'em up. You'll throw in a pair o' suspen—Pshaw! there comes—er—this lady comin' is my wife. I'll wait a minute, I guess—All through with your shoppin', mother?"

"Thank heavens, yes!" replied the vigorous-looking woman who had been ushered up the aisle. "What you got on?" she added.

"Five dollars," said the old gentleman, clutching one leg of the trousers and stretching out the cloth for inspection.

"They be, be they? Hev you got lots of time, Joshua?"

"Time?—How—why?"

"Because if you hev, mebbe it's all right to rig yourself up in fancy costoom for the entertainment of this young man; but I ain't got overmuch time, myself, an' I guess we might as well pick out a pair o' pants now like what I told ye to git."

"What's the matter with——"

"Lemme see somethin' on the pepper-'n-salt order that'll about fit him," said the lady to the salesman. After selecting a pair about the size required she handed them to the silent man at her side.

"Now you run into the cubbyhole and git into these," she said; "and let's see how they look."

"The idee of a man o' his age pickin' out streaked pants," she said to the salesman, as her husband moved meekly away. "The pair he's got in his hand is somethin' like. Don't you think so, yourself?"

The salesman smiled pleasantly. "They are good goods," he said. "The thing is to please the one that wears 'em."—Puck.

A Winter Coat.

The Song of the Frog.

When the frog wishes to express his joy he bursts forth into song. He lifts up his voice and makes the woodland ring. Only the male frog sings. The females constitute the audience who sit in the front row and enjoy the music. And it is the speckled green frog who is the prime soloist of the woods.

These operettas only take place at night, and the performances begin at 8:30, after an overture by the katydids and the early mosquitoes. The frog, however, does not come out upon the the stage with a roll of music in one hand and a smug smirk on his face. Neither does he proceed to scatter sand upon the floor from a cornucopia and preface his performance with a song and dance.

He jumps right into the middle of his song, without even a preliminary bow to the front row in the audience, and after a succession of short, sharp notes uttered in quick succession, he lets it go at that.

A French scientist, after long listening in the woods, has made out and reduced to writing the song of the frog, or "swamp music," as he calls it, and has discovered that the frog repertory is varied and extensive. Frogs can carry on conversations at long distances and can communicate to each other emotions of fear or hunger.

A big, old green frog can make himself heard for a distance of more than two miles.—Scientific American.

She Squared the Account.

The director of one of our Chicago banks tells about how his wife overdrew her account at the bank last month. "I spoke to her about it one evening," says he, "and told her she ought to adjust it at once. A day or two afterward I asked her if she had done what I suggested. 'Oh, yes,' she answered, 'I attended to that matter the very next morning after you spoke to me first of it. I sent the bank my check for the amount I had overdrawn!'"—Chicago Record.

THE VETERAN
BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

On Saturday, Dec. 22, The Daily Press will begin the publication of a Christmas drama in two acts by Mrs Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward It is entitled "The Veteran", and tells in simplest, yet most pathetic fashion of the sorrows of a hero of the war, wounded by a bursting shell, blind, forgotten by his country, and reduced to singing in the streets for a livelihood until rescued from poverty by a friendly hand It is a story of Christmas time, touching the heart and triumphing in justice. It is an appeal to sentiment, but the tears it starts are tears of joy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward is one of the foremost figures in American literary life, and has been regarded for years as our strongest woman writer. This study in the dramatic form is almost unique; it is probably her masterpiece in its direct appeal to the emotions and in its terse strength.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill

can be consulted daily (except Thursdays) on all CHRONIC, OBSTINATE AND COMPLICATED diseases of the human system of whatever name and nature, at his office and residence,

No. 144 Crescent Avenue.

Piles of the most aggravated nature radically and permanently cured in a few weeks, without pain or detention from business, and all other rectal diseases are treated with equal success.

Mental and Nervous Derangements Epilepsy, Diseases of the Skin and Blood, Rheumatic, Neuralgic and Scrofulous Affections.

Diseases of the Heart, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Bladder are successfully treated, even when other medical skill has failed.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at L. W. Randolph's Drug store.

COLORED WOMEN IN THE SOUTH.

A Successful Farmer and Types of Others Who Have Made Their Way.

In one of the wire-grass countries of Georgia, in a four-roomed cabin, surrounded by fertile and well-cultivated fields, lives a curious family—a great-grandmother, her daughter, grand daughter and great granddaughter.

M'm Nancy, the oldest, is a relic of before the war. Polite and respectful to a degree and much given to courtesies, she is the ideal servant of the Old South. But it is not the first, nor yet the third or fourth generation that attracts attention; it is the daughter, Alice Williams, who not only rules this household, but also looks after another, that of her employees', and does a man's work in the field.

When a visitor called to see her she was at work in the cotton field, leading her row with the foremost of her gang, and while she talked her hoe flew in and out among the cotton in a way marvelous to see. A somewhat peculiar looking woman Alice is—short, thickset, and with just a trace of white blood, only enough to give a brownish tinge to her skin. An otherwise pleasant face is marred by a coarse, sensual, mouth, and the head, eyes, and brow indicate an intellect of no mean order. She was barefooted, and a string tied just below the waist lifted her homespun dress in a puff about the waist—a style much in vogue among the working women of her race. The front of her dress was open nearly to the waist. She spoke with the musical accent of the coast negro, talking rapidly and with evident relish, but she did not pause in her work. In order to hear what she said the visitor was obliged to walk along by the roe she was hoeing.

Even if she were white and a man Alice would be considered well off for the section in which she lives. Her farm is well stocked with mules, cows and hogs, and she is one of the best farmers in the neighborhood. Her credit is excellent, she rides in her own carriage, and is altogether a person of consequence. She has the somewhat unfeminine virtue of always being on time and keeping her promises faithfully, punctuality being a quality upon which she greatly prides herself. One of the oddest things about this woman is her shrewdness in selecting laborers.

Very old people and very young ones—the lame and the halt, together with boys and girls who have been deprived of their natural protectors, either by death or desertion—make up the greater portion of her force. They are such hands as could not find employment elsewhere, but they are able to earn their food and clothing, which is all they expect to receive, several times over. Among them are a few really good laborers, and, at the head of all—or, as she she would say, "behind them"—is Alice, and she sees to it that every one of them does every stroke that he or she has the strength to do.

Alice probably has the idea of driving when she speaks of having "to keep behind them."

Not only does this remarkable woman cultivate her own fields; she supplies hands, mules or wagons to any one in the neighborhood who may need help, and white farmers who are behind with their crops often apply to her. She rules her employees with a rod of iron, not infrequently resorting to the lash, which she wields with much dexterity and effect.

She is more than a match for the strongest man on the place, and she deals out justice of a certain quality with an even hand.

Cindy Scott is a colored evangelist, with Salvation Army tendencies. She has left home and friends to preach to the people of her race.

Plainly but neatly dressed, she travels from place to place, always carrying a little handbag which contains a Bible and hymn book, though she cannot read a word in either. She is received kindly and entertained hospitably wherever she goes, and her large congregations, who listen to her sermons with great respect, contribute sufficient money to supply her simple wants.

Cindy, when asked how many children she had, replied with an earnestness that almost extinguished the sense of humor excited by her answer:

"I is had nine [Cindy's grammar is not quite up to the standard] but de Lord was good to me and tuck eight on 'em."

Pretty Tight Squeezing.

"Why do you leave your watch on the bureau whenever George calls?"

"Because I've broken four crystals this month."—N. Y. Herald.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

GREATER VARIETY AND RICHER MATERIALS NEVER KNOWN.

The New Material Called "Moire Scintillate." A Chapter on Trimmings. Embroideries Studded with Mock Jewels. Fancy Waists Still in High Favor.

This is what may be called a well-dressed season, for there was never a time when greater variety in dress or richer materials prevailed. Everything between cheap serge and the richest velvets and thinnest gauze is used for gowns and wraps.

Furs in every form are worn, and all sorts and conditions of trimmings which ingenuity and artistic taste can devise are to be had for a price which unfortunately is not often a low one. One of the novelties among dress decorations is velvet cut out in floral patterns and embroidered in gold studded with sequins and turquoise. Another embroidery has coral mixed in with paillertes of irridescent colors.

Embroideries are studded with mock jewels, which makes them very effective, and a fine cloth of gold embroidered with black and white pearls is used for dress trimming.

But the woman who can buy everything her fancy dictates is not the one who is searching everywhere for ideas which may help her to solve the perplexing problem of how to make the gown do service at receptions and dinners, church and the opera. It is the happy medium in dress which is so hard to strike, and fortunately simple gowns are quite as good fashion as the more elaborate creations.

Fancy waists, which are still in high favor, are a boon to the woman of few gowns, as they afford a greater variety in dress than any other fashion could possibly produce. The only novelty in these waists is in the beautiful material and colors of which they are made. Silks, satin brocades, with gay flowering velvets, plain and ribbed, and every variety of chiffon, goes into their construction, and they are either high or low in the neck, as the occasion requires.

"Moire scintillate" is a new material this season which is used for skirts which are to be used with odd waists. It comes in all colors, and is used for entire dresses as well. It is the complete gown, with waist, skirt and sleeves of one material which specially attracts attention now.

guipure, which forms revers, and a wide collar across the back. Four handsome buttons finish it at the waist, and the collar of velvet has a tuft of feathers at each side.

Most all skirts which are trimmed at all have very narrow, unassuming decorations, which is a kind of dispensation of fashion, since she decrees that they must be so voluminous that five and sometimes eight yards are needed.

Something odd in sleeves is shown in which two different materials may be utilized. Straight pieces of the cloth like the skirt and gored pieces of silk in a contrasting color are sewn together. And then the sleeve is cut out as though it were all one piece. The wide pieces are plaited at the top over the fancy pieces to hide the seams, and the sleeve is gathered at the bottom into a band, below which is a fall of lace.—N. Y. Sun.

Some people never learn how to keep out of debt until after they lose their credit.—Galveston News.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The basketball game between the High School and the North Plainfield Public School will not be played until after the opening of the Y. M. C. A. Building.

The Fourth class has begun the study of the life and works of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Selections from that author were read by Miss Helen Philips, Miss Ella Cooley and George Coard. Holmes's famous poem "The Chambered Nautilus" was explained by George Hyde and Howard Miller.

The beginners Physics class has taken up the study of electricity.

Leon H. Vincent will deliver a series of four lectures on famous lecturers during January. The subjects and dates are as follows: Dickens, Tuesday, January 15, 1895; Carlyle, Tuesday, January 22; Thackeray, Thursday, January 24; Holmes, Tuesday, January 29. Course tickets, one dollar, are to be sold for the benefit of the Library fund. Mr. Vincent is an old friend of the High School, and everyone will be glad to listen again to his interesting and instructive talks.

Edgar I. Serrell '95 has returned to school again after his absence due to his injured foot.

The Class of '95 has challenged the Class of '96 to a tug-of-war contest with teams of six men each. The challenge has been accepted, and Volney F. Green was selected by the Juniors to represent them in a joint committee which is to arrange details.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The theme of Rev. Dr. Lewis tomorrow will be "Our Personal Responsibility for Each Other's Spiritual Welfare".

—An organ concert by Clarence L. Eick, assisted by Miss Lillian Kent of Elizabeth, will take place in the Congregational Church, Bound Brook, this evening.

—U. B. Crane, hatter, 120 West Front street, has a large ad today giving some special prices for holiday goods. You should look over the list of bargains he has to offer, and profit thereby.

—One of the most attractive windows in town is at J. V. Berkaw's shoe store The scene is very appropriate, and the work was all done by Mr. Berkaw, even to the building of the log cabin.

—The popular dry goods store of Putnam & DeGraw is crowded nowadays with seekers of bargains in staple and holiday goods. Everyone remarks the well-selected stock and low prices. Call and be convinced.

—There is some talk of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., accompanying the Odd Fellows when they move in their new rooms in the Babcock Building. Four members were elected last evening, and one application received.

—The Sunday-schools of the First Baptist Church will meet next Tuesday evening to rehearse Christmas music. Every member has been asked to bring a contribution to be distributed among the poor. Arrangements for the Christmas entertainment are being made and give promise of excelling those of previous years.

—Rev. Hobart Clark will lecture in All Souls Church tonight on "Six English Cathedrals". He will tell of the fine Norman cathedral at Durham, the early English cathedrals at Lincoln, Salisbury and Wells, and the varied architecture of Canterbury and Winchester. The lecture will be more historical than architectural, and beautifully illustrated.

APPROVAL

THE SEAL

Of approval of 25,000 prominent physicians has been placed on Bovinine, the original raw food. It is acknowledged by them to be one of their greatest factors in the cure of all wasting diseases.

Bovinine

Is not a medicine, but a strength and flesh producer, giving to the patient at a critical moment the real strength — not that of a stimulant,— to tide over the crisis, and make the physician's skill available. For convalescent cases, chronic invalids and infants, Bovinine is invaluable. Sold at all druggists. The Bovinine Co., New York.

STRUCK HER AT PRAYER

Mrs. Doyle Fatally Stabbed by Alfred Climer.

While Kneeling at Her Bedside the Ruffian Drove His Knife into Her Side, Snapping the Blade in the Wound—Councilman Haines Shot by a Vindictive Saloon Keeper.

Burlington, N. J., Dec. 14.—Two crimes were committed in this city, and as a result Bridget Doyle lies at her home probably dying from a stab wound in the abdomen, and ex-Councilman I. Snowden Haines, who is head book-keeper for the A. H. McNeal Pipe & Foundry company, is suffering from gunshot wounds in the back and legs.

It was about 11:30 o'clock when Mrs. Doyle, of East Burlington, who keeps a little store on Columbus avenue, retired to her room and prepared for bed. She was kneeling by the bedside, engaged in prayer, when she heard a slight noise behind her. Turning quickly, she saw a man, whom she recognized as Alfred Climer, approaching.

Before she could utter a sound the fellow seized the defenceless woman by the throat and plunged a shoemaker's knife deep into her left side. Mrs. Doyle fell back unconscious.

Climer thereupon jumped through a window to the portico and then to the ground.

As soon as Mrs. Doyle's condition was discovered, Dr. Hugh was summoned and the police were notified. The doctor probed for the broken blade, but without success. Mrs. Doyle is 60 years of age, and the chances are against her recovery.

Climer fled, when he escaped from the house, but was captured this morning by Officer Gall in the woods near Florence. It is supposed that Climer's purpose in breaking into the house was solely for robbery.

The first person to respond to the call for help at the Doyle residence was ex-Councilman Haines. After rendering what assistance he could he started for home. As he passed the residence of Stacy Britton he noticed James O'Neal and Mrs. Britton standing on the doorstep.

O'Neal had a gun in his hands. As Haines passed, Mrs. Britton, it is alleged, said to O'Neal: "Shoot him!" and the next moment Haines received a full charge of birdshot in the back and legs. The wounds are not considered serious.

O'Neal had been fined a few hours previous for shooting his neighbor's ducks. When Haines was a member of the council he opposed O'Neal's application for a liquor license, and for that reason there has beeen a standing feud between the two ever since. Climer, O'Neal and Mrs. Britton are imprisoned in the city hall.

POPULIST SENATORS' VIEWS.

Mr. Allen Explains His Vote Against Sugar and Cloture.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Senator Allen (pop., Neb.), in commenting upon the fact that he and Senators Peffer and Kyle had voted against taking up the sugar bill and the Vest cloture resolution, said they had taken this position on the sugar bill because they considered the movement to get it up as made in the interest of the speculators and in no wise an effort at serious legislation.

"As for the cloture resolution," he said, "the populist senators believe on general principles in rules that will permit the transaction of business, but they are of opinion that the present effort to secure closure is for the purpose of passing the Nicaragua canal bill and putting through Secretary Carlisle's currency scheme, and they are not ready for that just yet."

BLIZZARD UP THE STATE.

Snow and High Wind in the Adirondacks Blocks Railroad Traffic.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Dec. 14.—A veritable blizzard prevailed throughout the Adirondack region. Snow fell for hours, while a fierce wind raged, piling the snow into high drifts, blocking highways and delaying trains. The storm raged only in the mountains, the weather at Plattsburg, Malone and other points being mild.

Snubbed the Kaiser.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—The standing orders committee, of which Herr Singer, the socialist leader is chairman, to which was referred the application of the public prosecutor to punish the socialist members of the reichstag who refused to rise and cheer for the emperor last Thursday, has by a vote of 9 to 4 rejected to prosecute Herr Liebknecht for his recent utterances.

Supt. Brockway Reinstated.

Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 14.—The managers of the Elmira reformatory at a full meeting reinstated Supt. Brockway in charge of the institution. Resolutions were passed commendatory of the services of Hon. R. P. Rush while engaged in his duties as acting general superintendent during Mr. Brockway's temporary withdrawal.

Demands Made for Millions.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Senator Blanchard of Louisiana has introduced a bill in the senate directing the secretary of the treasury to return to the people of Louisiana $1,569,790 and interest, which was confiscated by union generals during the war.

WRECKED BY VOLCANOES.

Islands Devastated and Probably a Hundred Persons Killed.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 14.—The Australian steamer Warimoo brings startling news that a majority of the New Hebrides group are passing through a baptism of fire, earthquakes and volcanic disturbances, threatening the very existence of several of the largest and best islands, including Ambrym, celebrated for the excellence of its coffee.

On the latter an entire village of natives was recently carried into the sea, the loss of life being estimated at sixty to seventy-five men, women and children, while in others of the group fatalities are also reported.

A layer of ashes from two to six inches deep covered the once fertile fields. At Epi on Nov. 2, there was a severe earthquake in the early morning, which opened an entire volcanic crater on the west side of Ambrym, and on the next day the whole island trembled. Since then it has opened in five or six different places.

Even the island of Eph, which was much less effected, has felt sixty-three distinct shocks, and for weeks had been covered by clouds of ashes and smoke. Traders and planters living on Ambrym island have fled precipitately to Port Sandwich (Mallicollo), the nearest port, in many cases abandoning all their possessions. On the 13th of November an earthquake shock rocked Ambrym for east to west, causing the ground on which stood a native village to slump, with the houses of the inhabitants, into the sea.

CHANGED THE FUNERAL.

Sir John Thompson's Body Goes to Canada on the Bienheim.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 14.—The funeral arrangements of the late Sir John Thompson have been changed. A dispatch was received from the British government offering her majesty's ship, Blenheim, to convey the body to Halifax. Lady Thompson agreed to this. The state funeral will therefore take place in Halifax and the funeral services will be held in the different churches here.

Hon. MacKenzie Bowell, minister of trade and commerce, and acting premier, and Lord Aberdeen have held a brief conference.

It is generally believed that Mr. Bowell was asked to assume the task of forming a new administration. After leaving his excellency, Mr. Rowell met all the ministers. The question of the premiership was discussed but no decision was reached and none will likely be for a few days. Mr. Bowell's strong opponent is Hon. John Haggart, minister of railways.

PATIENTS FOR PASTEUR.

Eleven Persons Bitten by a Mad Dog Go to an Institute.

Columbus, O., Dec. 14.—The analysis at the Ohio State university here of the stomach of the Mount Vernon mad dog revealed no trace of poison, and therefore it was concluded it must have been hydrophobia.

A meeting of the Mount Vernon board of health was called this morning, at which it was decided to send all the patients to the Lagorio Pasteur institute at Chicago. Those who will go are:

Earl Davis, Ed Singer, Fleming Jackson, John Bunnell, John Brown, Buck Taylor, James Parke, Mrs. Van Rhoden, Willie Wolge, aged 5, Gordon Wolfe and Sherman Chase. The city council met and appropriated $1,500 to defray the expenses.

Drs. John E. Russell, George E. Bunn and H. G. Boynton, who were here investigating, all say that the physicians consulted there gave it as their unqualified opinion that the dog had rabies.

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

Prince of Wales To Discuss the New Deed of Gift.

London, Dec. 14.—Mr. Richard Grant, secretary of the Royal Yacht Squadron, has arranged for a meeting of the flag officers of the squadron. The commodore, the Prince of Wales, will preside.

Should the meeting consider itself competent to deal with the question without reference to a general meeting of the members of the squadron, it will immediately decide whether to accept the trusteeship of the America's Cup, under the new deed of gift, if it should be won by a British yacht.

No License for Lloyds.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 14.—Attorney General Hensel has directed Insurance Commissioner Luper not to issue a license to Lloyds' association, organized under the laws of New York, to transact business in Pennsylvania and directing that any person doing business for the association in this state is lable to prosecuton.

An Indian Murderer Lynched.

Fort Jones, Cal., Dec. 14.—A masked mob took William Dean, an Indian who murdered William Barmore, from the custody of a constable named Dixon, and hanged him to a derrick. Dixon was on the way from Happy Camp to Eureka with Dean, and had stopped for the night at Fort Jones hotel.

Diphthera Kills Over a Dozen.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 14.—Diphtheria is raging in this county. At Cottekill six of the Snyder children and Miss Sarah Hasbrouck are dead. Several children have also died at Lawrenceville, Brink Post and South Flatbush.

Civil Service Reform Officers.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Carl Schurz was re-elected president of the National Civil Service Reform association. George McAnany of New York was elected secretary, and Silas W. Burt of New York, treasurer.

Jenkins on Garnisheeing.

Milwaukee, Dec. 14.—Judge Jenkins has issued an order prohibiting the garnisheeing of the wages of an employe of the Northern Pacific road during the life of the receivership.

Vetoed the Cantilever.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Secretary Lamont has vetoed the application for permission to erect a cantilever bridge across the Hudson river at New York.

Chief Gaul Dead.

Pierre, S. D., Dec. 14.—The death of Gaul, one of the noted Sioux chiefs, is reported from Standing Rock Agency. He was next to Sitting Bull in rank.

WILL NOW TAX INCOMES

Carlisle Is Ready To Begin Under the New Law.

The Secretary of the Treasury Issues the Regulations Under Which His Subordinates Are To Make Collections—Two Per Cent. on All Salaries Above Four Thousand Dollars.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The secretary of the treasury has approved the income tax regulations. Every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and every person residing or doing business in the United States, who has an annual income of more than $3,500, is required to make return under oath before the first Monday of each year.

The first return is to include all income received in the year 1894, from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31. Guardians, trustees, and all corporations acting in any judiciary capacity are required to make similar returns for minors, wards or beneficiaries.

Persons having less than $3,500 annual income are not required to make returns. All incomes of $4,000 and over are taxable 2 per cent.

The gross gains, profits and incomes returned by persons are to include: "Gross profits of any trade or business wherever carried on; rents received or accrued during the year; profits from sales of real estate purchased within two years; farming operations and proceeds; money and value of all personal property acquired by gift or inheritance; premiums on bonds, stocks, notes and coupons; income from trade or profession not by stated salary and not heretofore enumerated.

"From salary or compensation other than that received from the United States; from salary or compensation paid by the United States; undivided gains and profits of any partnership; interest received or accrued from all notes, bonds or other securities; interest on bonds or coupons paid of any corporation; dividends from corporations; income of wife or minor child or children; all other sources of income not above enumerated."

If any person fails to make return, or makes false return, the collector is to make return for him from evidence obtained by summoning the person and examining his books and from all other evidence obtainable, and shall add 50 per cnet. to the amount of tax found due as a penalty for neglect, and 100 per cent. penalty in case of a fraudulent return.

Certain specified corporations for charitable and like purposes and certain savings banks, mutual insurance companies and building and loan associations are exempt from income tax.

The tax due from salaries of officers and from pay of employes of the United States is to be deducted from the first excess payment over $4,000 by paymasters and disbursing officers.

It is provided that no part of the salary, fees or emoluments of any state, county or municipal officer shall be subject to income tax, and no return thereof shall be made of the salary or fees of such officers. Salary received by government officials in 1894 shall be included in the first annual return to be made on or before the first Monday in March, 1895.

Appeals, in the first instance, are to be made by dissatisfied taxpayers to the collector, and if dissatisfied with the decision the appellant may have the entire cause with all papers and evidence relating thereto transferred to the commissioner of internal revenue for his decision.

Severe penalties are imposed upon all officers and other persons who make known, in any manner, any fact or particulars contained in or relating to an annual return of any taxpayer, or any fact as to the sources or amount of the income of any such person.

The tax on incomes for the year 1894 will be due and payable on or before the 1st day of July next, and, if not paid at that time, the penalties will attach for non-payment.

The full text of the regulations contain about 75,000 words and will not be printed for distribution for a week or more.

Populist Vivian's Crimes.

South Fork, Pa., Dec. 14.—James Vivian, a resident of this place, made an attempt to kill his wife and sister-in-law, Miss L. Draden. After slashing them badly he went out in his back-yard and cut his own throat, dying instantly. Mrs. Vivian's wind-is severed and her sister's injuries will probably prove fatal. Mr. Vivian was chairman of the county committee of the populist party in Cambria county.

Was To Murder Her Father.

Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 14.—Ida Berger, aged 16 years, and her lover, Otto Straley, had conspired to shoot the girl's father because he objected to their marriage, but timely interference of the police prevented a murder. The girl confessed to the officers. She was to do the shooting. She has been sent to prison.

General Porter Dying.

New York, Dec. 14.—General Josiah Porter is in a critical condition from the result of a stroke of apoplexy. Drs. Bryant and Pierce held a consultation at General Porter's residence, No. 56 West 124th street, and decided that there was no hope of recovery.

Boy Convicted of Murder.

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 14.—Frank Morris was found guilty of murder in the first degree here. He is but 17 years old. On Sept. 13 he deliberately killed Bernard Loker.

The Czar Will Help.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—The czar will cooperate with England in Armenia, but will not allow any modification of the treaty stipulations concerning that country.

The Detroit at Naples.

Naples, Dec. 14.—The United States cruiser Detroit has arrived here with the Vatican relics which were displayed in the World's Fair at Chicago.

Blown from His Cab and Killed.

Pittsburg, Dec. 14.—Fireman Fogle was blown from an engine cab on the Pennsylvania railroad during a gale of wind and instantly killed.

BATTLE OF 118 DAYS.

THRILLING WAR STORIES FROM GEN. FULLERTON'S DIARY.

Howard's Bravery and Piety. Stimson's Costly Look at the Rebels. The Shot that Killed Bishop Polk. The Chaplain of the Sixth Arkansas.

"The Battle of One Hundred and Eighteen Days" is the title Gen. J. S. Fullerton would give to that wonderful series of operations commonly called "The Atlanta Campaign." It was continuous fighting from May to September, and it embraced a battlefield 135 miles long. There is nothing in history to compare with it. The fighting began at Tunnel Hill. It ended at Atlanta. Every foot of ground was contested. Every day had its battle, and more than once the firing continued from sundown to sunrise.

There is no more thrilling page in Gen. Fullerton's diary of the Atlanta campaign than that which narrates the circumstances of the death of the Bishop-Gen. Polk.

"I was going along the line one day," said Gen. Fullerton, "when I came to Foraker—Burt Foraker, the brother of Gov. Foraker of Ohio—setting beside a tree gazing intently through a glass toward the top of Pine Top.

"'Those fellows are signaling up there,' he said, when I asked him what he was doing, 'and I am reading what they say.'

"Pine Top had a surrounding cluster of works, and above the fortifications and overlooking all was a clear space. We were going to try and take the position that afternoon and were getting everything ready. As I stood there, near Foraker, a group of horsemen rode out in the clear place on Pine Top and seemed to be examining and discussing the field. Simonson, with his battery, had taken up position right where we were when Gen. Sherman came along with some of his staff and stopped. He wanted to know what we were doing. I told him Foraker was watching the Confederate signals.

"'Is that so?' he asked. 'What do they say?'

"'Oh, nothing of any importance,' said I, and then I added, 'Simonson, here, wants to try a shell at that party up there on Pine Top.'

"'All right,' said Sherman, 'give 'em three; give 'em just three, Simonson.'

"And then Sherman passed on. Simonson trained one of his guns, cut the fuse with his own hands, and the piece was fired. The shell fell a little short. Simonson tried again. The second shell seemed to drop right over the heads of the group and explode. There was a sudden scattering, and the open place was deserted by the horsemen. In a few moments the Confederate officer on Pine Top began to signal excitedly to another part of their line. Foraker watched him intently, and jumped up, saying:

"'My God! That shell killed Gen. Polk.'

"And it was so."

In the battle of 118 days the calendar was lost sight of by even so devout a man as Howard.

"I went along the line one morning with Gen. Howard," said Gen. Fullerton. "When he came to a battery that was firing at Confederate works on a hill the General became much interested. After watching the effects for a few minutes Howard said to the artillery officer:

"'If you would elevate your guns I believe you could drop some shells right into the centre of the town of Marietta. Try it.'

"The officer put his guns into position, cut the fuses, and prepared to experiment. Gen. Howard got out his glasses to study the effect.

"'General,' said I seriously, taking out my watch, 'this is Sunday morning. It is now 11 o'clock. The Presbyterians of Marietta are just in the midst of the long prayer, and——'

"'Cease firing,' shouted Gen. Howard to the artillery officer.

"There came down to the front one day a pleasant gentleman from the Christian Commission, Capt. Stimson," said Gen. Fullerton. "It was while we were in close quarters at one point of this Atlanta campaign. He said to me soon after he arrived:

"'Fullerton, I should like to look at the rebels.'

"'All right,' said I. 'There's no trouble about that. I can arrange it.'

"I took him out behind the breastworks and said to him:

"'Now, get your glass all ready, and when I say the word we'll jump on top and take a look.'

"I gave the word and up we went. Capt. Stimson clapped his glasses to his eyes. Out a little way we could see the Confederates swarming about like so many huge gray ants building new fortifications. 'Ping!' went a bullet, and Stimson dropped. It had gone through his lung and into a tree behind him. I wrapped him in a blanket, and had just started him back on a stretcher when it occurred to me:

"'Perhaps Stimson's friends at home would like to have that bullet for a souvenir.'

"I climbed on top of the breastworks, got out my knife, and began to pry at the bullet. 'Ping!' sang another, and went into the same tree six inches above my head.

"'If Stimson's family want that bullet they'll have to come after it,' thought I, and I got down.

At the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, one sergeant of Harker's brigade actually reached the top of the breastworks. A Tennesse captain sprang to meet him and was killed. The sergeant fell. Gen. Johnson told me afterward that 28 bullets struck that sergeant from the waist up. A color sergeant of McCook's brigade reached the top of the breastworks in front of that column. The Confederates right in front of him were so affected by this exhibition of dauntless courage that they wouldn't shoot him. They presented arms to the hero. But a bullet from another part of the line struck him down.

"While moving back from one position to another, Hardee—you know what a disciplinarian he was—came upon a great gaunt fellow in butternut squatted down in a fence corner puffing away at a pipe."

"Why aren't you in your command?" thundered Hardee: "who are you?"

The loose-jointed soldier straightened up slowly, and removing his pipe said:

"I am the Chaplain of the Sixth Arkansas. Now, who the hell are you?"

A CITY BUCKWHEAT.

That All Jays are Not From the Country is Conclusively Proven.

It happened right in the Century office, that temple of fame, literature and erudition, than which there are none greater in New York, or the whole world, for that matter. William W. Ellsworth, one of the wise men of the Magazine, fairly musty with intensity and moss grown with knowledge, was the hero. The visitor was a nice old gentleman, who introduced himself to Mr. Ellsworth thus:

"I am William L. Ellsworth of Detroit. I thought I'd look you up. I think I knew your father. Let me see—your name is William W.—William Walcott, isn't it?"

"No; my name is Webster," was the short reply, which sought to discourage the old man.

But he only beamed genially, and babbled on. He talked of Mr. Ellsworth's father, whom he knew years ago in Valparaiso. He inquired concerning several members of the family who had married and moved about the world since he had heard of them.

Then he reverted to the subject of kinship and said he could prove it, as by a somewhat curious chance he had with him the Ellsworth genealogical tree. He had been looking it over with a friend the night before in Boston, and it had been left out of his trunk, so he was carrying it.

Again he beamed benevolently over his spectacles as he unrolled a document as large as the moral law. Probably he found his old friend's son somewhat unresponsive, for there was a distinct note of disappointment in the nice old gentleman's voice as he remarked:

"You do not take much interest, perhaps, in family records?"

At this Mr. Will Ellsworth began to feel as if he had been put in the wrong. He had a mortifying consciousness of having allowed the Ellsworths of the present to absorb him to an extent which amounted to disrespect to the Ellsworths who belong to the remote past.

"I suppose you have the family coat of arms?" was the next question.

"No, I have never cared to have it, though I have seen it in use by some of relatives."

"Ah! I was going to show you this copy I had done in the British Museum. I could not part with it, but if you had desired a copy I was going to propose that you have it photographed."

By this time the two men were on pleasant conversational terms. They adjourned to a neighboring photographer's to have a negative taken of the coat of arms. As they were coming out Mr. Ellsworth noticed that the old man dropped his pocketbook upon the pavement, but without interrupting his conversation he stooped and recovered it before the younger man could pick it up. They parted on the street with mutual expressions of friendliness.

In a couple of hours the old man reappeared at the Century office. He was nervous and upset.

"I have met with a serious misadventure since we parted," he began.

Then he related how he had gone over to Gramercy Park to see Samuel J. Tilden's House and the Player's Club house, about which he had always had much curiosity.

He loitered about for awhile, and then, going west to Sixth Avenue, boarded a car, only to discover that his pocketbook was gone. It contained something over $30, all the money he had with him, and he was going to Buffalo that night!

"But," said the old man, "it is lucky that these bonds were in another place."

He produced a long envelope sealed. This he opened and took out what purported to be bonds of the North Atlantic Transportation Company.

"I am glad I have these," said the old man, "for I want you to take them as security and lend me enough money to get to Buffalo. I have no friends here in New York, and would be utterly at a loss if I had not formed your acquointance this morning, my dear sir. I know people in Buffalo, and can get all the money I require there, so I can remit to-morrow."

Well, Mr. Will Ellsworth lent the nice, smooth-faced old man $20. He declined the collateral proffered, however. The old man insisted upon giving a receipt for the amount. That document and a photograph of a coat of arms are all that remain to assure him that the old man was a tangible creature.

Nothing has been heard of the nice old man since. No one of his name or description could be traced in Detroit by Mr. Will Ellsworth. He gave no address there; only said anything sent in his name to the Post Office would find him, as he was well known.

Conquered His Disability.

A Confederate soldier after the Battle of Antietam, and when his regiment was on the retreat, threw his musket on the ground, seated himself by the roadside and exclaimed with much vehemence:

"I'll be dashed if I walk another step! I'm broke down! I can't do it!" And he sat there the picture of despair.

"Git up, man!" exclaimed the Captain, "don't you know the Yankees are following us? They will get you, sure."

"Can't do it," he replied. "I'm done for. I'll not walk another step!".

The Confederates passed along over the crest of a hill, and lost sight of their poor dejected comrade.

In a moment there was a fresh rattle of musketry and a renewed crash of shells. Suddenly he appeared on the crest of the hill moving along like a hurricane and followed by a cloud of dust. As he dashed past his Captain, that officer yelled:

"Hello! thought you wasn't going to walk any more?"

"Thunder!" replied the soldier. "You don't call this walking, do you?"—War Relics.

Jadam's Political Economy.

"A mince is truly the representative pie," said J. Adam Bede yesterday, "and should be patronized liberally by the masses."

"Why?"

"Because," Jadam replied, "it represents more of the products of the country than anything on record."—St. Paul Daily Globe.

Palmer Cox's Queer People

Racing on a Bicycle.

The thousand and one pranks, comic adventures and mischievous escapades that Palmer Cox, in his flights of imagination, takes his Queer People through are wonderful in their variety, and most charming in their likeness to the exuberant fancies of childhood; and yet, in every thrilling story of adventure and exciting incident, the sweet sunshine of kindness is always present, and, while captivated with the fun, unconsciously the heart of youth is inspired with pure and good impulses. Of all the Juvenile Books yet issued, there is more rollicking, jolly fun in one of these eight books than in any dozen others we ever saw.

"No more entertaining book could be put in the hands of children."—Boston Traveller.

"Every page is crammed full of wholesome delight for the young folks."—Manchester Union.

"It is a book that will tickle the little ones."—Hartford Globe.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

When I had got as far as Dammartin I caught a first glimpse of our own outposts. There were a troop of dragoons in a field, and of course I could see from the horsehair crests that they were French. I galloped towards them in order to ask them if all was safe between there and Paris, and as I rode I felt such a pride at having won my way back to my friends again that I could not refrain from waving my sword in the air. At this a young officer galloped out from among the dragoons, also brandishing his sword, and it warmed my heart to think that he should come riding with such ardor and enthusiasm to greet me. I made Violette caracole, and as we came together I brandished my sword more gallantly than ever—but you can imagine my feelings when he suddenly made a cut at me which would certainly have taken my head off if I had not fallen forward with my nose in Violette's mane. My faith, it whistled just over my cap like an east wind. Of course it came from this accursed uniform which, in my excitement, I had forgotten all about, and this young dragoon had imagined that I was some Russian champion who was challenging the French cavalry. My word, he was a frightened man when he understood how near he had been to killing the celebrated Brigadier Gerard.

Well, the road was clear, and about three o'clock in the afternoon I was at St. Denis, though it took me a long two hours to get from there to Paris, for the road was black with commissariat wagons and guns of the artillery reserve, which were going north to Marmont and Mortier. You cannot conceive the excitement which my appearance in such a costume made in Paris, and when I came to the Rue de Rivoli I should think I had a quarter of a mile of folk riding or running behind me. Word had got about from the dragoons (two of them had come with me) and everybody knew about my adventures and how I had come by my uniform. It was a triumph—men shouting and women waving their handkerchiefs and blowing kisses from the windows. Although I am a man singularly free from conceit, still I must confess that on this one occasion I could not restrain myself from showing that this reception gratified me. The Russian coat had hung very loose upon me, but now I threw out my chest until it was as tight as a sausage skin. And my little sweetheart of a mare tossed her mane and pawed with her front hoofs, frisking her tail about, as though she said: "We've done it together this time. It is to us that commissions should be intrusted." When I kissed her between the nostrils when I dismounted at the gate of the Tuileries there was as much shouting as if a bulletin had been read from the grand army.

I was hardly in costume to visit a king, but, after all, if one has a soldierly figure one can do without all that. I was shown up straight away to Joseph, whom I had often seen in Spain. He seemed as stout, as quiet and as amiable as ever. Talleyrand was in the room with him, or I suppose I should call him duke of Benevento, but I confess that I like old names best. He read my letter when Joseph Buonoparte handed it to him, and then he looked at me with the strangest expression in those funny, little, twinkling eyes of his.

"Were you the only messenger?" he asked.

"There was one other, sir," said I, "Maj. Charpentier, of the horse grenadiers."

"He has not yet arrived," said the king of Spain.

"If you had seen the legs of his horse, sire, you would not wonder at it," I remarked.

"There may be other reasons," said Talleyrand, and he gave that singular smile of his.

Well, they paid me a compliment or two, though they might have said a good deal more and yet have said too little. I bowed myself out, and very glad I was to get away, for I hate a court as much as I love a camp. Away I went to my old friend, Chaubert, in the Rue Miromesnie, and there I got his hussar uniform, which fitted me very well. He and Lizette and I supped together in his rooms, and all my dangers were forgotten. In the morning I found Violette ready for another twenty league stretch. It was my intention to return instantly to the emperor's headquarters, for I was, as you may imagine, impatient to hear his words of praise and to receive my reward.

I need not say that I rode back by a safe route, for I had seen quite enough of Uhlans and Cossacks. I passed through Meaux and Chateau Thierry, and so in the evening I arrived at Rheims, where Napoleon was still lying. The bodies of our fellows and of St. Prest's Russians had all been buried, and I could see changes in the camp also. The soldiers looked better cared for, some of the cavalry had received remounts and everything was in excellent order. It is wonderful what a good general can effect in a couple of days.

When I came to the headquarters I was shown straight into the emperor's room. He was drinking coffee at a writing table, with a big plan drawn out on paper in front of him. Berthier and McDonald were leaning one over each shoulder, and he was talking so quickly that I don't believe that either of them could catch a half of what he was saying. But when his eyes fell upon me he dropped his pen on to the chart, and he sprang up with a look in his pale face which struck me cold.

"What the devil are you doing here?"

"WHAT THE DEVIL ARE YOU DOING HERE?"

he shouted. When he was angry he had a voice like a peacock.

"I have the honor to report to you, sir," said I, "that I have delivered your dispatch safely to the king of Spain."

"What," he yelled, and his two eyes transfixed me like bayonets. Oh, those dreadful eyes, shifting from gray to blue, like steel in the sunshine. I can see them now when I have had a bad dream.

"What has become of Charpentier?" he asked.

"He is captured," said McDonald.

"By whom?"

"The Russians."

"The Cossacks?"

"No, a single Cossack."

"He gave himself up?"

"Without resistance."

"He is an intelligent officer. You will see that the medal of honor is awarded to him."

When I heard these words I had to rub my eyes to make sure that I was awake.

"As to you," cried the emperor, taking a step forward as if he would have struck me. "You brain of a hare, what do you think that you were sent upon this mission for? Do you conceive that I would send a really important message by such a hand as yours, and through every village which the enemy holds? How you came through them passes my comprehension, but if your fellow messenger had as little sense as you my whole plan of campaign would have been ruined. Can you not see, coion, that this message contained false news and that it was intended to deceive the enemy whilst I put a very different scheme into execution?"

When I heard these cruel words and saw the angry white face which glared at me, I had to hold the back of a chair, for my mind was failing me and my knees would hardly bear me up. But then I took courage, as I reflected that I was an honorable gentleman and that my whole life had been spent in toiling for this man and for my beloved country.

"Sire," said I, and the tears would trickle down my cheeks whilst I spoke. "When you are dealing with a man like me you would find it wiser to deal openly. Had I known that you had wished the dispatch to fall into the hands of the enemy, I would have seen that it came there. As I believed that I was to guard it I was prepared to sacrifice my life for it. I do not believe, sire, that any man in the world ever met with more toils and perils than I have done in trying to carry out what I thought was your will."

I dashed the tears from my eyes as I spoke, and with such fire and spirit as I could command I gave him an account of it all; of my dash through Soissons, my brush with the dragoons, my adventure in Senlis, my rencontre with Count Boutkine in the cellar, my disguise, my meeting with the Cossack officer, my flight, and how at the last moment I was nearly cut down by a French dragoon. The emperor Berthier and McDonald listened with astonishment upon their faces. When I had finished Napoleon stepped forward and he pinched me by the ear.

"There! There!" said he. "Forget anything which I may have said. I would have done better to trust you. You may go."

I turned to the door and my hand was upon the handle when the emperor called upon me to stop. "You will see," said he to the duke of Tarentun, "that Brigadier Gerard has the special medal of honor, for I believe that if he has the thickest head he has also the stoutest heart in my army."

MYSTERIES OF HEALING.

Medical Wonders Performed Every Day at Reform Hall

PLAINFIELD PEOPLE ASTONISHED.

Put Aside Prejudice and Want of Faith and Go and See for Yourselves—Never Mind What You Think or What You Think You Know, Vano's Wonderful Remedies Are Curing Hundreds and Will Cure You—Investigation Shows that Vano Has Cured More Chronic Sufferers in the Last Two Months Than Were Ever Cured by Any System of Medicine in History.

A fine audience consisting of Plainfield's leading citizens assembled at Reform Hall last night to see and hear for themselves something of the wonders that Vano and associates are performing, and many of them left with the impression that they have at last met men and things that have some virtue in them—remedies that will do what is claimed for them, and with their minds made up to give them a trial. They were helped to arrive at this conclusion by what others than the doctors said, and the result has been that a large number of people have visited the hall today and have gone away with packages of Vano's remedies and the positive assurance that the remedies will produce the same effect with them as with thousands of others, and no matter what their previous experience and failures to find relief has been positive relief in all cases, and absolute cures in nine cases out of ten is guaranteed by using these unsurpassed electric remedies. The people of Plainfield are awakening to the fact that Vano and his remedies are entitled to the consideration and respect they deserve, and all through the cures they are making now, and not from mere talk. Office open at the hall all day. Advice free. This Friday evening special free lecture and entertainment, consisting of magnificent dissolving views of the wonders of the world. Tomorrow, Saturday evening, special entertainment when the little Spanish magnetic wonder of the age, Miss Agramonte will be presented in some remarkable feats in dexterity, magnetism and legerdermain.

SUBURBAN ROBBERIES.

Thieves Visit Netherwood and Fanwood.

NOT MUCH OF VALUE TAKEN.

Netherwood Station and Fanwood News-stand Plundered—Slot-Weighing Machine Bank Broken—Police Chase Suspicious Characters, But Fail to Catch Them.

At an early hour this morning thieves broke into the Netherwood railroad station. Station Agent Erickson left for his home, which is but a short distance, at 9 p. m., which is the usual hour for closing, and everything was then all right.

When he came around at 6:20 this morning, the key which he uses to open the main door would not work, and his suspicion was aroused. A search revealed the fact that a large glass had been broken. He opened another door, and found that the glass in the ticket office door was broken and that thieves had entered the office.

Everything that had been left locked about the station had been opened, even to a slot weighing machine. All that was taken was the money in the machine, which was a small amount.

A sprinkling of blood on the floor showed that the robbers had cut themselves handling the glass.

During the night the Union News Company's stand at Fanwood was entered, and it is thought that the same persons are responsible for both robberies.

Three well-dressed strangers, who are supposed to be implicated in the Netherwood-Fanwood robberies, were noticed in the Boulevard acting suspiciously about 6:30 last evening. Policeman McCue gave chase but did not capture them. Chief Grant has the broken chisel which was used, and which was found at Fanwood.

Court Plainfield Elects.

Last evening the annual election of Court Plainfield, I. O. Foresters, took place in their Park avenue lodge rooms. During the evening ten new members were initiated and seven applications for membership were received. The officers:

Chief Ranger—Francis Whitley.
Vice-Chief Ranger—John Bird.
Recording Secretary—James Patterson.
Financial Secretary—Henry Hansen.
Treasurer—David Nuttall.
Chaplain—John J. Praed.
Senior Woodward—Chas. Soscraker.
Junior Woodward—Chas. Jager.
Senior Beadle—George Gould.
Junior Beadle—Thomas Fitzgerald.
Court Deputy—Louis DeCamp.
Finance Committee—Henry Brientnall, John J. Praed, John Allen, William J. Eakins.
High Court Representatives—J. Paterson, C. McIntosh, J. Bird.

Prosperous Bethel.

The promoters of the anniversary, fair and concert concluded last night at Bethel Chapel are gratified at the financial and social success of their entertainment. The total proceeds will not be definitely known until Sunday, but is expected that they will be large, as almost all of the eatables and fancy-goods were sold. And they believe the good fortune which has attended their efforts so far, will not desert them December 27, when they hope to have the chapel crowded to hear R. Henri Strange.

White of Plainfield.

About this time of year everyone wishes he had an unlimited bank account to draw on. Such pretty, useful things are seen in the afternoon visits to Plainfield's leading store, which has been turned into a regular Mecca for holiday shopping. There is everything to be found there, and the moderate prices that White of Plainfield asks proves that this popular house is living up to its reputation of selling goods on a very close margin, and for every dollar you spend there you receive its equivalent.

—The office business of John Ulrich will be suspended for the present, and his very able assistant, Miss Dottie Sears, will attend to his private affairs until all is satisfactorily arranged.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. At L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00, our price 45c and 90c.

HOME MISSION TEA.

Miss Peck Tells of Her Experiences in Indian Territory.

Yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church an interesting and well-attended home missionary meeting was held during which Miss Cara Peck gave a graphic account of her work among the freedman. Miss Peck was for three years stationed at Oak Hill, Indian Territory, where she was domiciled in a log house so loosely constructed that one could get an almost unobstructed view of the surrounding country by simply standing near the walls. Extreme destitution was everywhere apparent among the ignorant negroes who composed the innabitants, yet they were always willing to learn and were devout in their simple way to the last degree.

After Miss Peck's remarks tea was dispensed and pleasant chat followed. A special offering was taken for the work among the freedmen.

Grant Avenue Social.

The Grant Avenue Social Club gave a delightful dance in the hall on Grant avenue last evening. About 40 guests were present, being largely the young people living in that neighborhood. The evening hours were passed in dancing, singing, and other amusements. About 12 supper was partaken of, and all present did justice to the dainty things put before them.

Among those present were: Miss M DeNise, Miss M McComas, Misses Lena and Dottie Cose, the Misses Martin, the Misses Slorah, Miss Lucy Clifton, the Misses Drake, Miss M. Page, Miss Nash, Miss May Thompson, Miss Maggie Thompson, Miss Lucy Westphal, Miss P Mercier, Miss L Woodland, Mrs C Leland; Messrs A Muir, G Firstbrook, J Cose, B Tallamy, T Reid, D B Gray, J Penny, A and W Leland, W Gray, H Foose, H McComas, J and P Johnson, B Snoden, D and J Thompson, H Dayton, F Schomp, Al Wilson, Amos Wilson, C Wilson, T Randall, A Sherman and C Leland.

Modeling on Plainfield.

Civil Engineer E. A. Howell of Morristown was in this city yesterday to examine the plans and method of construction of our sewer system.

Mr. Howell is about to construct considerable sewer work and wished to see the Plainfield work, which is considered an example of the best modern practice.

He was particularly interested in the Ninth street construction, where so much water is encountered that the six-inch underdrain is unable to carry off the ground water when the trench is first opened, and it is necessary to pump continuously to keep the water down.

Reception and Dance.

Miss Holmes of East Front street gave a charming reception and dance last evening to her friends, and all present enjoyed the genuine hospitality of the hostess.

The guests were: The Misses Taylor, Kellogg, Burr, French, Woodruff, Schoonmaker, Hasbrouck, Williams, Lessignolo, Vermeule, Wright, the Misses Darling, Ferris and Bartindale of Brooklyn, Miss Jeffrey of New York, Dr. Hall, L VanBuren, A Horton, Alfred Holmes, Harry Williams, Arthur Freeman, Charles Coriell, William Coriell, John Kirkner, Jr., and Charles Angleman.

Relief Corps Officers.

The officers elected at the meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps last evening for the ensuing year were:

THE SEWER CONTRACT.

Time Extended by the Common Council.

CONTRACTORS GIVEN TILL JUNE 1.

Sewer Work to Continue Through the Winter So Far as the Weather Permits—Little More Than Half the Contract Done—$15,000 Appropriations for Streets.

The Plainfield Common Council last night granted extension of time to the sewer contractors. The time limit expiring Dec. 15 was extended to June 1.

Those present at the meeting were President See and Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frost and Ginna.

A petition was received from James E Martine and other heirs of the estate, requesting apportionment of taxes. It was referred to the Finance Committee.

W. W. Cook & Co., the sewer contractors, and their endorsers the American Surety Company, asked for an extension of time from Dec. 15 to June 1. This was referred to the Sewer Committee, who subsequently recommended granting the extension, which was done by unanimous vote.

A short time ago the streets were left in such wretched condition by the contractors that they were peremptorily ordered to restore them to good shape within five days. This order had been obeyed, but the committee had ordered the company to stop work till Spring. A tition from the contractors asked to be given the privilege of working with a limited force in short lengths of streets, closing up the trenches as fast as the pipe was laid. The matter was left with the committee, who showed a disposition to permit work to be continued through the Winter as far as the weather permits.

The amount of sewer pipe laid to date is as follows: East Ninth street, 1,517 feet; Grant avenue, 1,449; West Third, 3 907; Plainfield avenue and Fifth street, 3,400; Putnam avenue, 2,529; Woodland avenue, 2,990; total, 14,592. The total amount of the contract is 27,480 feet.

A petition from J. C. Pope and others, asking for an electric light on West Fourth street between Park and Arlington avenues, was referred to the Committee on Lights.

A petition for a crosswalk on Grant avenue was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The election bills were presented, but owing to the absence of finance and auditing committeemen their payment was laid over.

Councilman Erickson reported the receipt of $625 from the Gamewell Fire Alarm Company for the old bell and gong.

Under the new State law a resolution was adopted fixing the street appropriation at $15,000 for the next year.

Treatment of a Valuable Mare.

Watson J. Tunison's Hambletonian bay mare, which has a road record way below three minutes, has been under the weather since Thanksgiving. Mr. Tunison drove down to Fanwood Tuesday to exercise the mare and was much alarmed on his return at her strange actions. Dr. D. W. Nolan, the popular North Avenue veterinary surgeon, was called in and at once performed an operation, the result of which was almost instantly noticeable in the improved condition of the mare. She is now almost completely recovered, and Mr. Tunison speaks in terms of the highest praise of the skilful treatment which saved her life.

Christmas Celebrations.

Teacher:—"Johnnie! When did the people first begin to celebrate Christmas?"

Johnnie:—"According to history it was in the year 103 B. C."

A slight error on Johnnie's part, but the 103 is all right as indicating the place on Park avenue where aids to the celebration of Christmas are surprisingly abundant and numerous. At Collier's you will find everything new, elegant and reasonable.

THE PROVOST GUARD.

A New Play to Be Given by the Third Regiment Cadet Corps.

Contract was signed last night by Capt. Edwards of the Third Regiment Cadet Corps and Washington Davis, dramatic author, for the production in Music Hall, January 10, of "The Provost Guard", a new play by Mr. Davis.

The play has been produced in California and finished in the highest style of the art, and has been pronounced a great success. In its Plainfield production the parts will be taken by some of New York's cleverest actors, and the Cadet Corps will appear in striking scenes.

The Santa Rosa, (Cal.), Democrat says: "The Provost Guard is a realistic military drama founded on incidents of the Civil War. The play does not deal with bombastic clap-trap, but is a drama of excellent situations, very bright comedy, clean and witty dialogue and vivid tableaux. The third act deals with the battle of Cross Roads, Kentucky, and shows the purpose of the Provost Guard, which all well-read people, especially Grand Army men, fully understand and appreciate. The material for this play was very carefully gathered by Mr. Davis, and the result is a strong piece different in plot and action from any other military drama that has been produced. All in all it is fully equal to 'Shenandoah' or 'Held by the Enemy'.

"Mr. Washington Davis has displayed quite a talent for dramatic composition, both in the text and in the grouping of the characters."

The corps will act as a committee of the whole in the matter of securing patronesses, and the other committees appointed were:

Programme—L. Bull, W. Bartindale, Volney Green.

SIX ENGLISH CATHEDRALS.

Rev. Hobart Clark Delights a Cultured Audience.

The second lecture of the All Souls Church course was delivered last evening by Rev. Hobart Clark, whose subject was "Six English Cathedrals". The stereopticon was managed by W. E Gibbs of Fanwood. Before commencing his lecture Mr. Clark announced that the date of the next lecture "The War Between China and Japan", had been changed to January 4 on account on account of the holiday season.

After a few introductory remarks, in which he spoke of the art of church building in the Middle Ages and its influence on the church building of today, and of the vast army of artists and artisans drawn from among the monks that constructed them, Mr. Clark exhibited several views showing the improvements in naval architecture since the time of the Vikings.

The first of the cathedrals was the cathedral at Durham on the river Ware, one of the most complete in all its appointments; views were also shown and described of its beautiful interior, the famous old iron knocker on the door, and the underground chapel.

Lincoln Cathedral was the next, and after viewing the town itself every one was interested to hear its exciting history.

The third cathedral was that of Wells, and after viewing the cathedral a few minutes were spent in visiting the Bishop's Palace nearby and the famous banquet hall adjoining.

Salisbury was the location of the next, with very little history of interest, but its beautiful interior charmed the audience.

Winchester Cathedral, with its vast store of famous legends and its prominent place in history, was next described and examined.

The Cathedral of Canterbury, so famous in the ecclesiastical and political history of England, completed the list.

The church was well filled, and everyone departed with the thought that the evening had been well spent in listening to such an interesting and instructive talk.

A Serious Accident.

Chris. Ketzel, an agent for the Prudential Insurance Company, whose office is at Park and North avenues, had a narrow escape from instant death on Elizabeth avenue at 5:30 Thursday afternoon. He had just entered his buggy, when a large dog ran up and bit at his horse's heels.

The horse started on the run but stopped so suddenly at the word of command from Mr. Ketzel that the latter who was standing up in the buggy lost his balance and was thrown with fearful force against a stone carriage step. He was rendered unconscious, but was picked up by a spectator who drove him home.

Mr. Ketzel looks as if he had been through a thrashing machine. A bad gash over his eye, scratched cheeks, a broken thumb and a dislocated wrist are among his injuries and it will be some time before he can again dilate on the beauties of the policy which he writes.

SCOTCH PLAINS TROLLEY FRANCHISE

The Deliberative Body of Committeemen at Last Ready to Proceed if Their Lawyer Says So—Citizens Protest Against Paying for Lights They Don't Use.

A large gathering of the citizens and property-owners of Scotch Plains attended the Town Committee meeting in the town rooms last night, when the committee met once more to consider the application of the Philadelphia and New York Traction Company to construct and operate an electric road through the township of Fanwood.

After a long wait, Chairman Terry called the meeting to order. On motion of Committeeman Miller the minutes were laid over, and trolley business was taken up. Clerk Hand read the ordinance as amended, requiring the road to put a spur from the main line up to the village. On motion the ordinance was laid on the table for discussion.

Mr. Stanbery said the ordinance was to have been amended so as to read a spur from the village to the station.

Mr Young arose to protest against the company putting a spur from Midway avenue to the village, as that would necessitate a car standing in front of his property about three-quarters of the time, and he never would agree to that, but he said the Committee should amend Section 21 so as to read from Midway avenue to a point in the village to be designated by the Town Committee, and from Midway avenue to a point near the Fanwood station.

The Committee and the company's representative, Mr Bethel, conferred, and agreed to amend Section 21 so as to read from the village to a point near the station.

Mr. Townsend thought the Committee had been very forbearing with the people in hearing their views on the subject at several meetings, and that the matter had arrived at a point for a decision—either to grant the franchise, or not grant it; but he was in favor of it being granted, as it would benefit the town.

Mr. Stanbery asked Mr. Bethel what paid-in capital the company had, as he had never been able to find any capital as a company. Mr. Bethel made no answer to the question.

Mr. Colgate, a resident of the town, and an electrical engineer, said he had had a great deal of experience with electric roads, but he had never heard of an ordinance so liberal as the one the company asked for. The company practically held all other companies from coming through the town for nearly two years. The company should give some security to the township that they would put a road in operation in the time specified. The Committee discussed the matter, and a resolution was adopted that the ordinance be passed if it meets with the approval of the township attorney, ex-Judge W. R. Codington. Mr. Bethel objected, as that was delaying the matter and necessitating another meeting for a final passage, but the Committee remained firm, and the matter rested.

Regular business was taken up. Mr. Scheirenbeck of Terrell road protested his tax bill; he had been before the Commissioners of Appeal, but they would do nothing. He would refuse to pay the electric light assessment, as he received no benefit from the lights. He also wanted a reduction on his property tax, claiming that a house of disrepute near him had depreciated the value of his property.

A petition was presented by the property owners of the lower end of the township protesting against the electric light tax, claiming they were unjustly taxed. The protests were placed on file, and laid over until the next regular meeting. The treasurer's report was read and accepted. On motion the session stood adjourned to meet again Tuesday evening, Dec. 18, at 8.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Instead of the regular Friday morning talk or reading, the High School and Grammar School practiced the Christmas carols together.

The Senior class held a class meeting at the close of school. It was decided to decorate for Christmas, and give the Juniors their regular Christmas present. Miss Helen A. Hazen, George A. Horne and Miss Mabel Force were appointed a committee in charge of the Christmas decorating. Charles B. Morse, John V. Beekman, Jr., and Edgar I. Serrell were appointed a committee to procure the present for the Juniors.

There was a meeting of the Third class immediately after dismissal. Miss Lilla Livezey, Miss Euphemia Johnston and Miss Alice Jenkins were appointed a committee to take charge of Christmas decorations, and Elwood Davies, Ernest Rapalje and J. V. Rittenhouse were appointed a committee to procure greens for decorating. Another class meeting will be held Monday afternoon.

The Fourth class has elected the following officers: President, Walter Serrell; vice-president, Perry Vosseller; secretary and treasurer, Miss Emma Sterling.

Only one week more to Christmas and now all the classes are busy preparing for that occasion. All of the classes have decided to decorate, and special exercises will be held next Friday.

The Junior class has appointed the following committee to unite with the other classes in choosing school colors and a school yell: Carlos C. Gallup, Miss Louise Bowman, Miss Clyde Burnett

The Third class essays are due Monday. The date on which the Senior essays shall be handed in is now set at next Thursday.

The Third class have begun to read Dickens's "Christmas Carol," in the Literature division.

The Kappa Delta Phi met Friday afternoon as usual. The programme was a hat talk, and the speakers and their subjects were as follows: John V. Beekman, Jr., "A New High School for Plainfield; Arthur B. Crane, "The Ragan Lectures of the Season; Charles B. Morse, "The War in China"; Lewis Rand, "Shall the Kappa Delta Phi Attend the Vincent Lectures Together?" Henry Eggerding, "Winter Sports"; Ernest Rapalye, "The Use of the Fire Drill"; Edgar I. Serrell, "Need of Fire Escapes on the High School Building"; George A. Horne, "That Tobacco Essay"; Charles Noble, "The Advantages of Having the Kappa Delta Phi a Secret Society"; Wilbur F. Cornwell, "Should the City Furnish Employment to the Unemployed.

It was decided to have Dickens's Christmas story, "Gabriel Grubb", read and illustrated with stereopticon next Thursday evening if the proper views can be secured. A B Crane, J V Beekman, Jr. and C B Morse were appointed to take charge.

The Lyceum was challenged to a debate to take place sometime during February. C B Morse was elected principal and J V Beekman, Jr his second. F W Cornwell and Lewis Rand committee of arrangements.

The regular meeting of the Lyceum was held at 4. A hash debate was the programme and the following subject was selected:

"Should the average young man of today part his hair in the middle?"

The speakers for the affirmative were A B Crane, E Rapalye, H Miller and J V Rittenhouse.

Those for the negative were Nathan Lane, Jr, G A Horne, C B Morse and E Suffren.

The negative won the debate after a very exciting and somewhat amusing contest.

The challenge of the Kappa Delta Phi for a joint debate was accepted. Nathan Lane, jr., '94 and George A. Horne, '95, were a committee te make arrangements.

It was decided not to hold a meeting next Friday afternoon.

President—F. W. Cornwell, '96.
Vice President—C. B. Morse, '95.
Secretary—H. B. Drake, '95.
Treasurer—Nathan Lane, jr., '94.
Critic—G. A. Horne, '95.
Sergeant-at-Arms—J. V. Rittenhouse, '97.

—The schedules of Samuel Corrigan, doing business as the Pacific Mail Tea and Grocery Company at 1965 Third avenue, and also at Yonkers, N. Y.; Somerville and Plainfield, N. J., and Westport, Conn., show liabilities of $12,357, nominal assets of $10,063, and actual assets of $6,475.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. HE DISCLOSED THE DEAL

Capt. Creeden Informs to Lexow's Committee.

The New York Police Officer Tells How He Was Compelled To Pay $15,000 To Secure Promotion—Suspended from Duty—Commissioners Have To Give Testimony.

New York, Dec. 15.—Recorder-elect Goff has kept his promise made to the public and the members of the Lexow committee. He has "gone up higher" with a vengeance and as a result Police Justice Voorhis stands a convicted bribe taker, and it is pretty clearly proven that no one can become a police captain in this city unless he pays $10,000 or $15,000 to Tammany Hall for the place.

Mr. Goff also invited Ex-sachem "Dick" Croker to appear before the committee and vindicate himself by proving that the charges of bribe taking made against him were untrue. Mr. Croker respectfully declined the invitation. The man who gave the sensational testimony was Captain Timothy Creeden, who has an untarnished record of thirty years service and who was a brave soldier during the war, having fought through no less than ten battles, being wounded four times.

He swore that he had paid $15,000 to Police Justice Voorhis while the latter was a police commissioner for a captaincy after he had lost all hope of being promoted for faithful services. His story was substanciated by a man named Reppenhagen who gave the money to Voorhis' lieutenant.

When Captain Creeden's story became known at police headquarters a special meeting of the commissioners was called. They suspended the captain from the force. There was a sensation when the fact became known at the Lexow committee meeting, and Mr. Goff immediately subpoenied all of the commissioners and Superintendent Byrnes. They appeared upon the stand later, and promised to reinstate Captain Creeden immediately.

The first witness of this morning was Police Captain Schmittberger who was accompanied by a lawyer named Howe who refused to let him testify. The next witness was Captain Creeden. He appeared pale but defiant. He did not ,he said, want to appear in the light of an informer. His ancestors had been Irish revolutionists. Then he began his story.

For years he had tried to earn promotion by honest endeavors. He rose to the rank of sergeant. Then his friends advised him to secure influence. He saw a man named Reppenhager.

The latter said that Police Commissioner Voorhis had an appointment to make. It would cost $15,000. A Sergeant Wiegand, who was also an applicant, had offered $12,000.

Reppenhagen promised him that if he paid the $15,000 he would not only be appointed captain, but would be allowed to remain in the Eleventh precinct.

"I then saw my friends," said Captain Creeden. "They said it could be arranged all right. Then I went to a stationery store, purchased a dozen blank notes, signed them and handed them to Rourke. He was to fill in the amounts."

"Was there not something said about a life insurance policy?" asked Mr. Goff.

"Yes. I proposed to take out a life insurance policy to protect those who loaned me money, but I was refused, as I had the grip. The policy was to be for $10,000."

"When the money was gotten together," went on Captain Creeden, "it was put in the hands of Mr. Snell, at Reppenhagen's suggestion. I told Snell's brother-in-law, Assemblyman Patterson, all about it."

"What next, captain?" asked Goff, softly and encouragingly.

"Matters went along until several days later, when John J. Martin, who keeps the police headquarter's saloon, came to me and told me that Commissioner Voorhis wanted to see me. I went and saw the commissioner. He asked me about the length of time I had been on the force, and finally said that he wanted to appoint me.

"He said that he had heard that there were a number of liquor dealers in the Tenth district who put up a sum of money for me.

"He asked me if I knew anything about it. I said I did not. I thought that if I said 'Yes', that I had heard about the money being collected, that I would not get the appointment. Then I went back to the station house. Five minutes later I was telegraphed for to return to police headquarters. When I got there I found that I had been appointed a captain."

Creeden said that Voorhis had asked about the fund simply to protect himself. He told of the various precincts he had served in and said that he had been offered a captainey in 1887 for $6,000, but had refused to buy it. His percentage at the examination had been 97.

After paying the money he had met Police Commissioner Voorhis on the street. The latter remarked that if he had paid the money he had been swindled. That ended his testimony. Then Mr. Goff said very quietly:

"The committee wishes, in conjunction with me, to express the great sympathy we feel for your position here, with the trying work your emotions must have undergone. They wish me to say, further, that in view of the splendid services you have rendered to your country and to the police force, it is the unanimous expression of the committee that you could not be disturbed in your present position as a police captain."

The words were scarcely spoken when the thousands of people present broke into a cheer. The applause lasted five minutes. Reppenhagen next took the stand and testified that he had paid the money to Ex-assemblyman John T. Martin who gave it to Voorhis. He said Martin had gone to Albany and tried to get out of having Voorhis make the appointment. He followed him there and a fight was the result.

Proceedings were then stopped and Mr. Goff announced that Captain Creeden had been suspended. The words caused an uproar. The commissioners were denounced and immediately subpoenied with Superintendent Byrnes.

President Martin of the police board first testified. He told of the suspension and admitted that tainted captains were still in command of their precincts. He said he would have Creeden reinstated. He was followed by Superintendent Byrnes, who told why he had recommended the suspension of Captain Creeden. The committee then adjourned.

BEHEADED BY PROXY.

Gen. Wei Hires a Man To Allow His Head To Be Cut Off.

London, Dec. 15.—A dispatch from Nankin says that Li Hung Chang's nephew Chang has been arrested for peculation, and his property has been seized.

A news agency publishes a dispatch form Shanghai saying that Gen. Wei, who was supposed to have been executed for cowardice at Ping Yang, is in prison at Pekin. He admits that the man beheaded as Gen. Wei was procured at his instigation to represent him.

A Tien-Tsin dispatch says that an order has been issued for the arrest of Li Hung Chang's son-in-law for fraudulent practices.

Sheng, the Taotai of Tien-Tsin, is reported to have been dismissed from office on account of his inability to raise a war loan. He will be succeeded by Wang-Fah-Woong.

TRADE REPORTED QUIET.

Bradstreet's Review Gives Details of the Week's Business.

New York, Dec. 15.—Bradstreet's report on the condition of trade during the week ending to-day says:

At Providence manufacturers of cheap woolens have had a good season. General trade at Indianapolis is quite dull, and at Pittsburg an improvement in volume is reported. Fourteen western and northwestern cities agree that general trade has continued dull. Unfavorable weather has had something to do with the check to distribution of merchandise, although the season is responsible for most of it.

Among southern cities Chattanooga and Atlanta report a light volume of business, and Memphis and New Orleans each a moderate gain.

FORMED A BUTTER TRUST.

A Syndicate Purchases for $1,500,000 Important Dairy Interests.

New York, Dec. 15.—Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., of Newark, are the principal stockholders in a syndicate which has purchased the creamery interests of F. W. Edmunds, of Sherman, N. Y., in western New York and Pennsylvania, including the Sherman creamery, the largest in Chautauqua county, and sixteen other creameries and cheese factories located in several counties in western New York and Pennsylvania.

The consideration of the sale is unknown, although $1,500,000 is believed to be the amount invested. The company will be known as the Sherman Creamery & Milling company, and will assume control of the business on January 1 next, the stock to be paid in full in a few days.

LIFE'S ORIGIN IS FOUND.

Professor Hockert Alleged To Have Made a Remarkable Discovery.

Springfield, O., Dec. 15.—Prof. Hockert of this place has created a sensation among the clergy and others by publicly declaring that he has discovered the unknown energy, or fourth estate matter which exists in explaining even the origin of life.

He claims his discovery is of far greater importance than any ever made by Dr. Matthew Tindall, whose most important work is "Christianity as Old as the Creation, or the Gospel a Re-publication of the Religion of Nature," in which he declares that Christianity contains no truths which the human reason might not have discovered of itself.

Fashionable School Quarantined.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 15.—Health Officer Fitzgibbon has quarantined the Golden Hill seminary, a fashionable boarding school for young ladies. A number of scholars have been ill with what was diagnosed as tonsilitis, but examination has proved the cases to be scarlatina in a mild form. The only severe case is that of Miss Susan Perry of Fairfield. The school is closed.

"Short" Lobsters Dumped.

Boston, Dec. 15.—Seventeen barrels, containing 3,328 "short" lobsters, were dumped into Boston harbor. They were seized at the Providence station. The law requires that lobsters, when offered for sale, shall be at least 10 1-2 inches in length, and every one of the lot captured was below the standard. The shipper, if arrested, would be liable to a fine of over $16,000.

Stopped the Sale of Medals.

Philadelphia, Dec. 15.—The secretary of the treasury has stopped the sale of books descriptive of work at the mint, and souvenir medals, claiming that they furnished information to counterfeiters.

INJURES HER BUSINESS

Germany Protests Against Our Sugar Tariff.

During the Debate in the Reichstag Count von Posadowsky and Baron von Bieberstein Said That Stipulations in Our Treaty Had Been Violated—Cleveland Endorsed.

Berlin, Dec. 15.—The reichstag discussed interpellations by Herr Paasche and Herr Friedberg, asking the government to amend the law for the taxation of sugar, in order to remove the injuries produced on the the sugar industry of Germany by the imposts placed upon German sugar by foreign countries. Count von Posadowsky, secretary of the imperial treasury, said:

"Our position toward America is not yet clearly defined, and it is still impossible to formulate any distinct proposals. The chancellor has made the sugar crisis the subject of careful inquiry, with the assistance of the Prussian ministry, and when the time arrives he will communicate with the federal government. The house can rest assured that he will give the question his best attention."

"That we conceded the most 'favored nation' treatment to the United States without receiving anything in return is entirely false. As soon as it became probable that the United States would sanction the proposals for the differential treatment of German sugar, we did our utmost diplomatically to prevent the imposition of the proposed duty. I am bound to admit that we arrived at a complete entente with the United States government. Immediately the proposals for the additional duty became law we protested that it was a violation of the treaty of 1828.

"President Cleveland thereupon informed congress of this matter and urged earnestly that the one-tenth of 1 per cent. sugar duty be abrogated. The United States government thus fulfilled its promise. The final solution of the question rests with congress. Having on our part loyally and conscientiously fulfilled the treaty of 1828, we are entitled to expect similar treatment."

The foreign minister's statements were greeted with applause.

GEN. PORTER IS DEAD.

New York, Dec. 15.—Adjutant-General Josiah Porter is dead at his home in this city.

General Porter was stricken with apoplexy at the close of a banquet of Company G., Seventh regiment, at Jaeger's, Madison avenue and Fifty-ninth street, Wednesday evening. He was taken home and scarcely regained consciousness before he died.

General Porter was born in Massachusetts about sixty-one years ago. In 1861 he joined the First Massachusetts Battery as first lieutenant and after four months service became captain. He served until September, 1862, when he was honorably discharged. He afterward served as firsa lieutenant of the Boston city guard and later as the adjutant of the ancient and honorable artillery.

DEVOURED BY HOGS.

Probable Fate of Two Children Who Disappeared Last Monday.

Waupun, Wis., Dec. 15.—Two hundred men are searching the country in the vicinity of the town of Trenton in a thorough manner to find some trace, if possible, of two small children of Chris Schulz, who disappeared from home last Monday.

Many theories are advanced, among them that the children have been devoured by a drove of half wild hogs which have been in the neighborhood for several years, running at large in winter and summer on a tract of wild land.

It is possible that no trace of them may be found until the snow leaves the ground open to more free inspection.

Wants Damages for Honor.

Greenfield, Mass., Dec. 15.—Mrs. Mary Sherwin of Orange, has sued Mrs. Ellen Grout for $35,000 damages, claiming that her character has been ruined by the latter who circulated letters defaming her.

The Mayor Caused an Uproar.

Cork, Dec. 15.—The mayor caused an uproar in the town council by moving that the government be condemned for refusing to release the Irish political prisoners.

Fish's Election Assured.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Hamilton Fish claims that he has the written pledges of sixty-five assemblymen who will vote for him as speaker. These will elect him.

Pardoned a Murderer.

Albany, Dec. 15.—John Trumpbour, who while trying to rob a bank in 1874 killed a cashier has been pardoned by Governor Flower.

More Failures in St. John.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 15.—Several more small firms have failed. There is little chance of the five banks resuming.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. AN OLD MAID'S VIEW.

KATE SANBORN ON THE JOYS AND SORROWS OF CHRISTMAS.

She Says It Should Be Exclusively a Children's Day—The Ideal Found In the Home Gathering—What an Old Bachelor Confessed.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

ES, for decades, centuries, eons, there has been but one authorized, stereotyped, fatiguingly uniform view of this annual festival—at least as given to us conscientiously, and with unflagging voluminosity by the universal public press—the editorials, the long, inevitable historical articles, the cheerful, moralizing appeals for general charity and good deeds, the last usually from a woman's pen, are exactly like those ground out in '84, '74, '64, '54, '44, and so on ad infinitum and ad nauseam. The lay sermons at the end of all magazines agree with these entirely in information vouchsafed, in mellow reminiscences, in rather patronizing greetings to their large clientelle. Encyclopedias are searched, the same old bits from favorite carols given. Carols are kindly explained. The "boar's head" they all bring is at last associated in a general way with the brain that so bores me that I sympathize just a little with that old tyrant, Caligula, who "wished the Roman people had but one neck that he might cut it off at a blow."

"Gallinbursti" was the name of the old original bore, not boar. Let us push him once for all "down the back entry of time" and have a little rest.

I do not believe that these facts, many of them doubtful; these quotations; these gentle lessons, so many, many times exhumed and reprinted, are even read through by any one. Why feel obliged to follow on in the same old path? I am going to dare to give another side of the subject, one that will find an answering echo in many an honest heart, for after one has arrived at middle age he or she, married or unmarried, finds the recurrence of Thanksgiving and Christmas rather sad occasions, when one must try to push away the past, shut the eyes to the dear dead faces that come up so vividly, forget oneself in making the time pass pleasantly for those whose lives are still unsullied by sin or sorrow or bitter disillusions and try to give the children as good a time as possible.

Christmas should be exclusively a children's day. Let us give it to them, who can find glowing delight in transparent myths, a few toys and bags of popcorn and bright colored sugar plums. For us grownups it has degenerated into a laborious farce that to some is approaching the tragic. Presents must be exchanged through the entire family circle, relatives expect remembrances, and especially intimate friends, not forgetting a set of claimants who only send you greeting and a cheap card, but carefully estimate the cash value of your enforced remembrance and treat you accordingly. The rich waste thousands in endeavoring to excel each other in needless trinkets, bric-a-brac, bonbons, superfluous gems, luxurious nothings, big dinners, costly wines, illustrating that text so true, yet so difficult to explain, to those less fortunate, "To him that hath shall be given," or, in everyday parlance, "The Lord gives apples to those who have no teeth." It is with such simply "a quid pro quo," and there is very little honest merriment in the system.

In big, blessed, unbroken, congenial families the ideal Christmas is often realized, where the boys and girls return with families of their own, never forgetting the old people, return loaded with gifts and goodies, and bringing the lively music of happy, satisfied hearts. But to the starved out, the repressed, who make a brave pretense of being at peace and gladsome, it is a hard part to play. In stories written expressly for such people the old lover returns faithful and fond; the generous old bachelor carries away captive the youngest, prettiest maiden of the lot. Alas! in real life the young flirt captivates the aunt's most devoted standby and laughs at the ancient bachelor who tries to be gallant.

One old bachelor confessed to me last year that he was so forlorn at the glad Yuletide that he wished he could be made unconscious until it was over. He longed to skip it and escape from its depressing horrors. As he must live right through it, however dismal the experience, he would always take the cars for a long trip, or even cross the ocean, armed with a lot of exciting novels to drive away sad thoughts. He was a fine looking, prosperous, popular fellow, and I know his generosity to others to have been unbounded. He made Christmas a day of feasting and junketing to many. All that does not cure the aching old heart.

Throw off the conventional shackles and don't try to be so terribly, so unnaturally, jovial yourself, and soon the smiles on the dear faces, as yet free from lines of care and sorrow, will be reflected way down in each lonely hearts. Then we shall not have to say, with Longfellow, "How inexpressibly sad are all holidays!" KATE SANBORN.

It is estimated that New York spends $1,500,000 for its Christmas candies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC.—Different ways of rejecting Christ.—Mark xv, 6-14; Heb. vi, 4-6.

That there are different ways of rejecting Jesus Christ, the Son of God, as a Saviour is a matter both of observation and of testimony of the word of God. In the references given above there are practically three rejections of Christ and each one of a different character. The first is the Jews' rejection of Christ, the second is Pilate's, and the third, given in Heb. vi, 4-6, may be called the backslider's rejection of Christ. It is to these that our study is directed.

The first rejection is that of the Jews. The Jews as a nation rejected Christ, although many prominent people of the kingdom accepted. They rejected Christ because of their unbelief in Him, and they did not believe in Christ because He did not fulfill their idea of what the Messiah ought to be. They had certain exalted ideas as to what the Saviour should be, and when Christ came and did not fulfill these they violently rejected Him. This is the rejection of unbelief, for the reason already stated. There is much of the same kind of rejection of Christ and for the same reason in the world today. Christ does not fulfill the ideas of many as to what a savior of men should be. His plan of salvation is different from what they expect, and they refuse to believe in Him and reject Him because of their unbelief. The absurdity of such a rejection can be easily seen, as if God did not know what Christ should have been better than men.

The second rejection was by Pilate. Pilate in a sense rejected Christ, but for a different reason from that of the Jews. In a sense he did not disbelieve. It was purely moral cowardice that caused him to reject Christ. He feared the effect of standing up for Christ upon the people, and therefore sided with the populace against him. This is also a common way by which Christ is rejected today. Many feel like Pilate, that they should champion his cause, but they fear to do it. They are afraid to face the sneer and ridicule of friends or the opinion of the world.

The third kind of rejection is the backslider's rejection. This is the saddest of all, if it could actually be, for it would be the rejection of one who had already believed in and tasted the goodness of the Lord. Those who really and truly do this we do not believe can ever permanently reject Christ.

Bible Readings.—I Sam. viii, 7; x, 19; xvi, 1; Isa. liii, 3; Jer. viii, 9; Hos. iv, 6; Math. x, 14, 15, 32, 33; Mark i, 23, 24; Luke xxiv, 25 John vi, 36; Rev. ii, 10.

Outline of Reception Meeting.

At the lookout committee conference at Cleveland Rev. Elwell O. Mead of Burton, O., gave the following outline form for the reception of new members to his Christian Endeavor society.

The new members are received at the consecration meeting only. First they sign the constitution, in the presence of the society. After a brief address by the president the chairman of the lookout committee gives the new members the right hand of fellowship, with appropriate remarks. Then follow a prayer by the pastor and the presentation to each of a Christian Endeavor pin, the latter ceremony being performed by the treasurer.

The little ceremony—that, though it is simple, may be made exceedingly effective and helpful in promoting the spiritual life of the society and of the new members—is closed with the singing of "Blest be the tie that binds."—Exchange.

Imagination.

The imagination will sometimes fly up to God with such a power that eagle's wings cannot match it. It sometimes has such might that it can almost see the King in His beauty and the land which is very far off. But if it is potent one way it is another, for imagination has taken us down to the lowest planes of earth. But I rejoice and think of one thing—that I can cry out when this imagination comes upon me. So it is with the Christian. If he cries out, there is hope. Can you chain your imagination? No, but the power of the Holy Ghost can.—Rev. D. C. Knowles.

Contributions For Foreign Missions.

Says The Missionary Herald, the foreign missionary magazine of the Congregational church: "Within the six months since January last not less than 700 Christian Endeavor societies have sent contributions to our treasury, amounting in all to nearly $11,000. This shows a distinct advance upon the contributions from this source for the 12 months of 1893, which amount to $13,535."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Rev. O. J. White having removed from New Hampshire, his place as state president has been filled by the appointment of Rev. O. W. Waldron of Concord.

The Congregational Y. P. S. C. E. of Auburn, Cal., holds meetings at the county jail every Sunday afternoon, the uniform topics being used and the leaders being appointed by the prayer meeting committee. At a recent meeting nearly all of the prisoners expressed their intention to live a better life when they went out.

The Christian Endeavor society in St. Mark's church of Seattle, Wash., is proud to be one of the first parishes of the American Episcopal church to adopt the Endeavor movement.

"Come Early" is what "C. E." means during convention times, says the York (Pa.) Union.

Few towns that have the felicity of entertaining a state convention but are greatly blessed for many weeks. Holyoke, Mass., received last year a most inspiring state convention, and the Endeavorers of the Second Baptist church propose to utilize the enthusiasm and have sent out a call for a week of prayer.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Ask for our little booklet "Re-Freshing Thoughts." It tells about cleaning men's clothing.

A SURGEON'S KNIFE.

RECOMMENDED BY A PHILADELPHIA SPECIALIST.

John J. Neill Related How a Simple Remedy Restored Him to Health—Horrible Operation Avoided.

Philadelphia, Pa. Item.

A healthier, heartier, happier man than John J. Neill, of 2437 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, could not be found in a day's search. Among those who knew him formerly, the fact that he is still alive is a constant wonder.

In the fall of 1889 he began to suffer from stone in the bladder, and his myseries were indescribable. Consulting an eminent physician in Philadelphia, he was told that he would have to submit to a surgical operation. So much did he dread the result, for if unsuccessful it meant death, that he put off the evil day as long as possible. While in this frame of mind he chanced to see a notice of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Although disheartened with his many futile attempts with medicine, he was induced to make one more trial.

On July 1, 1893, he bought the first bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and within a month had experienced beneficial results, and before he had finished the third bottle the gravel was completely dissolved and his sufferings at an end.

Mr. Neill feels that he owes a lasting debt of gratitude to Dr. Kennedy's Favorte Remedy He never fails to recommend it for disorders of the bladder and urinary organs and says "it will effect a cure if one be possible!"

The great value of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy lies in the fact that it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood. Many of the ailments people suffer from—for instance, rheumatism, nervousness, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, and the sickness peculiar to women, all come from this one cause

Favorite Remedy dissolves this acid and expels it from the system, thus curing the disease. In cares of scrofula, diabetes, Bright's disease, and stone in the bladder, it never fails.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is for sale by all druggists, at one dollar a bottle, or six for $5, which brings a treatment within the reach of all.

Talk on Missions.

The regular monthly meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church was held last evening in the lecture room of that church. The subject of the meeting was the work of Carey and Thomas in Serampore and British India, and that of Judson and Rece in British Burmah.

Interesting papers were read by Miss Grace Lewis, Miss Ernestine Smith, Miss Eveline Lewis, Mrs. T. C. Smith, Miss Ruth Maxson, D. E. Titsworth, Miss Louise Lewis and Miss Elizabeth Allis.

After the reading of the papers, H. M. Maxson, the leader of the meeting, made a few remarks on the topic.

—John Huyler of the street railway is off duty on account of illness.

—Three tramps fought so viciously at the tanks this morning that they had to have their wounds dressed at Muhlenberg Hospital.

—Special Officer Corsa of the Jersey Central arrested two suspicious characters on the track just below the station this noon, who may have had something to do with the robberies early this morning at Fanwood and Netherwood stations.

On Saturday, Dec. 22, The Daily Press will begin the publication of a Christmas drama in two acts by Mrs Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward It is entitled "The Veteran", and tells in simplest, yet most pathetic fashion of the sorrows of a hero of the war, wounded by a bursting shell, blind, forgotten by his country, and reduced to singing in the streets for a livelihood until rescued from poverty by a friendly hand. It is a story of Christmas time, touching the heart and triumphing in justice. It is an appeal to sentiment, but the tears it starts are tears of joy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward is one of the foremost figures in American literary life, and has been regarded for years as our strongest woman writer This study in the dramatic form is almost unique; it is probably her masterpiece in its direct appeal to the emotions and in its terse strength.

may lie in paying too much for a thing or in paying too little. If you pay less than we ask for dolls, you'll not get as good quality—that's poor economy. If you pay more, you pay too much, for we sell the best there are. There may be others in town of whom you can buy Games and Toys as good as ours, but that isn't the fact with dolls. We cannot excel in everything, no one can, but we do in dolls, and we set the standard in a number of others. Some of them for instance are books, Christmas cards, pocketbooks and celluloid cases.

A SUGGESTION.

Why not make some poor family happy with a Christmas present of a ton or half ton of coal?

Thorpe & Ivins,

301-311 Watchung ave.

Coal delivered in bags.

BY R. K. MUNKITTRICK.

Draw up the chair about the logs
That sparkle bright and gay;
That in quaint flowers on the wall
In madcap frolic play.
Oh, toss all sorrow to the winds,
For this is Christmas day.

What if the chilly winds without
About the chimney blow
And high against the frosted panes
Make minarets of snow
When Christmas cheer this cozy nest
With comfort sets aglow!

The happy child upon the floor,
With feelings luscious ripe,
Plays with the red toy animal
Of curious spot or stripe
While deep within his little heart
The birds of springtime pipe.

He roams beneath his loaded tree
Beside the inglenook,
Alive with candies, blocks and drums

From dear old Santa Claus, who came
Last night—but hush—oh, look!

Here comes the plump and luscious goose
So savory and brown,
A golden promise on a dish,
Our cares and fears to drown,
And place on our triumphant brows
A rich though fleeting crown.

Come, let us carve him while he's hot
And breathing fumes of spice,
And pile the pungent stuffing high
Upon each juicy slice,
And in dream shallops lightly drift
Through flowery paradise.

And afterward we'll light our pipes
While twilight shades appear,
And when we break the wishbone frail,
Amid the blazing cheer,
Let him who wins wish for us all
A happy, glad New Year.

THE GAME OF SNAPDRAGON.

Players Must Be Quick and Not Mind Burned Fingers.

Few "Christmas gambols" exist in their original form. But the old games modified to suit modern taste as well as the new ones are just as full of fun and are entered into by the young folks nowadays with as much zest as were the rougher gambols over which in old England the "Lord of Misrule" presided. Although the authority of this lord was generally acknowledged at Christmas merrymakings 200 or 300 years ago, and he made things very lively, such disorders finally crept into his brief burlesque reign that he was suppressed.

One of the most quiet and genial of the gambols over which he was master has been handed down under the name of "Snapdragon." Raisins are put into a large bowl, covered with spirit, which is ignited. Lights in the room are extinguished, and each one attempts in turn to grasp a raisin, a feat requiring some skill and courage. Meanwhile an appropriate accompaniment is the "Song of the Snapdragon," beginning thus:

Here he comes with flaming bowl.
Don't he mean to take his toll?
Snip! Snap! Dragon!

Take care you don't take too much,
Be not greedy in your clutch,
Snip! Snap! Dragon!

With his blue and lapping tongue
Many of you will be stung.
Snip! Snap! Dragon!

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS.

Like small curled feathers, white and soft,
The little clouds went by,
Across the moon, and past the stars,
And down the western sky.
In upland pastures, where the grass
With frosted dew was white,
Like snowy clouds, the young sheep lay
That first blest Christmas night.

The shepherds slept, and glimmering faint,
With twist of thin blue smoke,
Only their fire's crackling flames
The tender silence broke,
Save when a young lamb raised his head,
Or, when the night wind blew,
A nestling bird would softly stir,
Where dusky olives grew!

With finger on her solemn lip
Night hushed the shady earth,
And only stars and angels saw
The little Saviour's birth.
Then came such flash of silver light
Across the bending skies
The wondering shepherds woke and hid
Their frightened, dazzled eyes.

But all their gentle, sleepy flock
Looked up, then slept again,
Nor knew the light that dimmed the stars
Brought endless peace to men,
Nor even heard the gracious words
That down the ages ring:
"The Christ is born, the Lord has come,
Good will on earth to bring!"

Then o'er the moonlit, misty fields,
Dumb with the world's great joy,
The shepherds sought the white walled town
Where lay the baby boy.
And, oh, the gladness of the world,
The glory of the skies,
Because the longed for Christ had smiled
In Mary's happy eyes!

—Margaret Deland.

Pythians District Meeting.

A largely attended district meeting of Knights of Pythias was held in Perseverance Lodge room last night. District Deputy Grand Chancellor Sears presided, and in well chosen words expressed the sympathies of the meeting in the affliction that had befallen Past Grand Chancellor Ulrich, and hoped that a few weeks would restore him to his former health.

Reports were then read showing that the lodges in this district were in good shape considering the depressed times and other causes. Grand Vice-Chancellor Donath, Grand Prelate Hitchcock, Grand Master at Arms Rockafeller, and other grand officers, spoke on the state of the order generally in New Jersey, and their remarks were well received.

Past Chancellor James Patterson of Perseverance Lodge was unanimously selected to be recommended to the Grand Chancellor for the position of District Deputy Grand Chancellor for the ensuing year. He briefly returned thanks for the honor.

After several other brethren had spoken, the lodge adjourned to the banquet room, where a bountiful collation was served. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in song and sentiment.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—"Carmen" was well produced in Music Hall last night, at a loss of $135 to Manager Varian.

—The work is about completed on the scales which C. Frank French is having erected on Somerset street.

—Go to Reform Hall tonight if you want to enjoy an evening of wonder and pleasure. You will see what you never saw before.

—This morning Captain Grant sent Henry Pendleton, a demented West Third street colored man, to Morris Plains. Officer Frederickson accompanied him.

—George J. Tobin has been putting in the latest style of hot-water heating, gas-plant, etc., at the home of the son of ex-Mayor Lang of Newark, at Gilette.

—There is no more acceptable present at this season than a beautiful picture; it is both useful and ornamental; and at Swain's on East Front street our readers will find an ample stock to choose from.

—A very successful children's fair was held at 315 East Second street yesterday, with the proceeds of which the big-hearted little people will purchase a ton of coal as a Christmas gift to a worthy woman of their acquaintance.

—A new double wagon will soon be shipped to Manager Mills of the United States Express Company, in order that the office will not be cramped in handling the increasing Christmas business. This morning four wagon loads of goods arrived to be used at the various receptions given this afternoon and evening.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at L. W. Randolph's Drug store.

—The fire department horses are being clipped.

Love In the Oil Regions.

Years ago a mushroom oil town called Sawyer City sprang up in a few weeks during the petroleum excitement in the Bradford oil region.

One day a barb peeler and his bride from the backwoods were taking a twenty mile wedding journey on the railroad that traversed that section of the country. They were very happy, and caressed each other freely, unmindful of the smiles of their fellow passengers.

As the train pulled into Sawyer City, and the bridegroom imprinted his one hundred and ninety-ninth kiss upon the fair one's lips, a brakeman opened the car door and shouted, "Sawyer."

"Don't care ef ye did!" retorted the happy groom.

Then turning triumphantly to his bride, he made it an even two hundred.

Hoped So For His Sake.

"I understand," said Miss Fledgling, "that the Baron de Faigue has lost his reputation."

"Indeed!" replied Miss Ohiburd. "Well for his sake I sincerely hope so."—Dallas Times-Herald.

The Crucial Test Had Been Omitted.

"Your Highness," said the menial, "the man with a bullet-proof shirt is in waiting in the anteroom."

"Show him in."

Meekly the inventor entered.

"Has this garment been subjected to every possible test?" inquired the potentate.

"It has, please Your Majesty."

"Er—has it been to the steam laundry?"

The inventor fell to the floor in a swoon. "Foiled again," said he as he fell.

The Envious Sex.

One night at a court ball in the Tuileries, Napoleon III. was so attentive to a beautiful young woman as to excite comment among the other women. At last, in response to a direct tribute to her beauty, she said: "Ah, but your majesty compliments me too much." "How remarkable," he replied, with a twinkle in his eye, "that you should say just what every other woman here is thinking."—Detroit Free Press.

VACATION IS NEAR.

TEACHIHG SCHOOL IS A WEARY, TEDIOUS LOT.

Pupils Drain Teachers of Nervous Energy—There Must Be No Delay in Keeping Brain and Nerves Well Fed.

It is a fearful trade—this teaching school.

A horde of restless, growing boys and girls—no wonder every day slowly brings down the strength and nervous power of the hard-working school teacher.

"Tired as a school teacher" would express the utter languor and collapse that so few escape before the long weeks are over.

Of all the work open to girls and women, school teaching seems to wear hardest on brain and nerves. Each day is not able to make up for the nervous expenditure of the day before, and so there come the usual result of nerves hard worked but badly nourished; the frequent sick headache, loss of strength, no color in the lips or cheeks, low spirits, nervousness, and a distate for work.

What is needed is at once plain to every physician's eye. He says at a glance: "Your nerves want more food." Get some red corpuscles into your thin blood—the red corpuscles means health.

Paine's celery compound will cause fresh, ruddy blood to circulate through the veins, and will give an impetus to the weakened digestion. Thin people with depleted or impure blood, who are easily attacked by lung disease and chronic ailments, get strength and an increase of solid, healthy flesh from Paine's celery compound. It gives vigor to weak mothers and makes growing children robust and hearty. Nervous women, not actually sick, but never really well, who are a burden to themselves as well as others, find just the help their system craves to restore them to sound health and a happy frame of mind.

Healthy color, animation, clear eyes and a well filled out frame, the signs of health that never fail, come from the reasonable use of Paine's celery compound. It is peculiarly adapted to correcting the depressing effect on the system of long hours of hard, trying work in the school room, behind the store counter, in the office and wherver there is a constant strain on the nervous and physical system.

PASSED PENSION BILLS

Veterans Finally Provided for by the House.

The Appropriations for Next Year Made After Much Debate in Which Several Members Became Involved in Vivid Personalities—Other Business Disposed of Promptly.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Four hours were spent in a house discussion on the pension appropriation bill. The resolution introduced by Mr. Hitt (rep., Ill.) asking the secretary of state for all particulars relating to the payment of $425,000 to Great Britain on the Canadian sealer's claims was adopted. A recess until evening was then taken, at which time private pension bills were discussed. The house then ended the second week of this session by adjourning until Monday.

In that time there have been passed three general appropriation bills for the year ending June 30, 1896, carrying a total of $143,716,204, nearly one-half of the annual expenditures of the government, aside from the permanent appropriations.

Besides these, an urgent deficiency bill for the current year has been passed, carrying a total of $2,0006,595, making a grand total of $145,724,799.16 appropriated thus far at this session.

During the debate on the pension bill Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.) said he complained particularly of the management of the bureau because it suspended and dropped enough pensioners to create a fund sufficient to pay the claims due on account of new certificates issued.

Most, if not all these were dropped without notice and in defiance of every rule of justice.

The debate was further continued by Messrs. Morse (rep., Mass.), Lacey (rep., Ia.), Baker (rep., N. H.) and Sickles (dem., N. Y.) The last evoked a round of applause from the republicans by saying in conclusion:

"I want to say right here, for it may be the last opportunity I shall have to say it here, in vindication of my comrades, that that roll of a million names, with so few instances of fraud, is a monument of honor to American soldiers only less worthy, only less admirable than the heroic services they performed in the preservation of this union, for which services their pensions are awarded."

Mr. Mahon (rep., Pa.) said that the board of revision established by Commissioner Loichren had suspended thousands of pensioners; some had been restored to the roll, and of these some had not yet received the money due for the time they were suspended. This statement was denied by Mr. Dunn (dem., N. J.), and other democrats, and Mr. Mahon promised to produce proof of the fact. Mr. Pickler (rep., S. D.) said that with all the bluster made by Commissioner Lochren only 39 men had been convicted of pension frauds. Mr. Dunn (dem., N. J.) asked Mr. Pickler if he thought the government ought to be precluded from examining into even 39 cases of fraud.

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Pickler.

"What are you talking about then?" asked Mr. Dunn amid laughter.

"To show that the pension roll is a roll of honor," shouted Mr. Pickler.

"Oh yes," answered Mr. Dunn, "yours is the talk of a demagogue."

"The commissioner of pensions is a demagogue," screamed Mr. Pickler excitedly, "and his report shows that the president of the United States is the chief demagogue."

A few more similar pleasantries were indulged in and then the bill was passed. Mr. Outhwaite (dem., O.), chairman of the committee on military affairs, reported the bill making appropriations for the military establishment for the year ending June 30, 1896 and the house committee on post-offices and post roads reported the post office appropriation bill for the coming fiscal year. The bill, as agreed upon, carries an appropriation of $89,442,997, being $2,206,395 above the allowance for the current year and $1,616,724 below the estimates.

Smuggled Goods in a Balloon.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 15.—Senobia Garcia is under arrest at Laredo for smuggling goods from Mexico. Garcia had constructed a small but powerful balloon in which to transfer the goods. When a contract was secured, his sulp was inflated and then loaded to its full capacity, the operator by means of a cord would fasten the balloon to his body and then swim across the river with his merchandise high and dry.

Suicide of a Forger.

Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 15.—Charles Young, who was wanted by Dover, N. H., officers for forgery, shot himself in a hotel here and died later in the hospital. He obtained small amounts on two checks from the Strafford bank at Dover.

The Waziris Will Fight.

Bombay, Dec. 15.—A dispatch from Kajurikuch says that the Mansud Waziris have finally refused the terms of the Indian government, and that an expedition against them is inevitable.

A Stage Robber's Rich Haul.

Tucson, Ari., Dec. 15.—A lone highwayman held up the Fort Nimas stage and secured $17,000.

JEWETT WILL NOT GO.

The Sultan Objected to an American Inquiry in Armenia.

Constantinople, Dec. 15.—It is believed that the question of sending Mile A. Jewett, the United States consul at Sivas, into Asiatic Turkey to investigate the stories of Turkish atrocities in Armenia, has collapsed, as the Porte objected to the American proposal of an independent inquiry.

The Porte has consented that the consuls of Great Britain, Russia and France shall sit with the Armenian commission.

This decision is regarded as a triumph for British diplomacy, and it is also significant as indicating that an Anglo-Russo-Franco entente actually exists.

London, Dec. 15.—An Odessa correspondent says:

"A Tiflis telegram says that Turkey has arrested the Bishop of Moosh and the members of the church council because they reported the Turkish massacres to the British vice consul.

Hundreds of Armenians are emigrating to Russia. It is stated that Mgr. Khrimian, the Catholicos, already has appealed to the czar who also gave an audience to the archbishop of Georgia."

GOMPERS GAVE THE LIE.

He Resents an Attack from Delegate John F. Tobin.

Denver, Dec. 15.—A red hot fight broke out in the convention hall of the American Federation of Labor during the session there.

John F. Tobin, of the Boot and Shoe workers, asserted that presidents, secretaries and other officers of labor organizations used their positions to secure political election and appointment.

Objection came at once from a dozen men, including President Gompers and Secretary Evans. Mr. Tobin remarked that such a show of feeling was all the proof he wanted, that his shot had hit the mark.

President Gompers announced as a lie the general charge which had included him, and defied Mr. Tobin or any other delegate to point out to a vulnerable place in his career as to honesty.

HOHENLOHE'S CHRISTMAS.

Emperor William Has Raised His Salary $20,000 a Year.

London, Dec. 15.—A dispatch from Berlin says it is stated that Emperor William has granted Chancellor von Hohenlohe the sum of 100,000 marks yearly as extra compensation for the loss of salary he sustained by accepting the chancellorship.

Prior to his becoming Chancellor Prince von Hohenlohe was stadthalter of Alsace-Lorraine, a position to which attaches a salary of $45,000 per annum The salary of the chancellor is only $12,500 per year. The salary question is, however, of little consequence to Prince von Hohenlohe, for he is very wealthy.

DIED HEAD DOWNWARD.

Ghastly Spectacle from a Second-Story Window in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—The body of Charles Miller, hanging head downward from a second-story window with blood dripping from a wound over the heart, collected a crowd which blocked State street traffic for half an hour.

Miller had been shot by Maggie Tiller, who claimed he robbed her, and that she did the shooting in self-defence. In attempting to jump from the window after he was wounded, Miller's foot caught, and he hung dying until the police arrived. He died before he could be removed.

HARD FOR ANARCHISTS.

Amendments in Congress Which Will Keep Them Out.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The judiciary committee of the house has agreed on numerous amendments to the anarchist bill as passed by the senate.

The main amendment gives the foreign inspection of immigrants to United States consuls under the direction of the state department, instead of treasury inspectors, as proposed by the senate bill.

Another amendment requires every immigrant to have a certificate from the United States consul from the port at which the immigrant embarks.

Seely Arrives in New York.

LABOR LEADERS GUILTY

Debs and Others Convicted by Judge Woods.

The Pre-ident of the American Railway Union and Subordinate Officials of the Order Are Sentenced to Prison for Violating the Strike Injunctions—Scenes in Court.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Judge Woods has rendered his decision in the case of Eugene Debs, charged with contempt of court in violating injunctions against interference with interstate commerce during last summer's strike in Chicago.

The finding of the court was that Debs and the other defendants, were in contempt of court, but that the punishment inflicted would not be cumulative. In other words there were two cases before the court, one for contempt and the other for violation of the federal statute. The latter cause was merged into the former.

Judge Woods, after announcing that the defendants were found guilty as charged, said that it was not in accordance with procedure in such cases to permit the defendants to say why sentence should not be passed, but in this case the court would allow it.

Attorney Darrow, representing the defendants, asked that his clients might retire for a consultation regarding what they should say, and after a brief recess the strike leaders filed back into court, ranging themselves before the bench. Attorney Darrow, speaking for them, said that they had no wish to make seperate speeches, but felt that they had done no wrong.

The attorney advised the court that Director MacVean, one of the defendants, was out of the city during the strike. A lengthy argument between attorneys followed over the proposition to discriminate in MacVean's favor, which the court terminated by suspending sentence on MacVean.

Judge Woods said punishment should be neither vindictive nor trivial. These men were in wilful contempt. These men, he said, were the leaders of law breakers, and are responsible as leaders. Ignorant men who followed them have been punished. Debs, he said, was more responsible than any other.

"He is a man of marked ability and power over men," said Judge Woods. "I feel restrained to discriminate between him and the others. The punishment against all the defendants except Debs is three months in jail, and against Debs six months."

Debs bowed his tall, gaunt form and whispered to his sister, and they both laughed heartily. Howard and Hogan exchanged smiling glances, and Keliher grasped his attorney's hand and appeared to offer congratulations. It was evident that all had expected more severe sentences, and all wore a look of relief.

After the murmur of excitement over the sentence had subsided the court announced that the punishment was not to take effect for ten days, in which time the defendant's attorneys will prepare an appeal.

The defendants, with their official positions in the American Railway union, are: President Debs, Vice-President Howard, Secretary Keliher, Treasurer Rogers and Directors Burns, Elliott, MacVean, Hogan and Goodwin.

Judge Woods' decision is a long one, and deals with the question of jurisdiction in great detail.

Later the convicted leaders held a conference with Attorney Darrow. Debs remarked that they ought to have their choice of jails.

Mr. Darrow assured him that they would, as the sentence says, "In the county jail." President Debs will go to jail at Terre Haute, his home. A majority of the others prefer Chicago. James Hogan will select Ogden, Utah, as a spot to spend his captivity.

Judge Woods Denounced.

Denver, Dec. 15.—President Gompers said, regarding the decision of Judge Woods in the Debs case:

"I think it contemptible for any judge to take from a citizen of the United States the right of trial by jury. If Debs is guilty of any criminal act a jury of his peers should be allowed to say so. I denounce the action of any judge who shows himself so eager to do the bidding of the corporations."

They Uphold Debs.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 15.—The following telegram was sent to President Debs at Chicago by American Railway union men of this city: "Don't let the unjust decision of the court worry you. Milwaukee men are with you and will help you to their fullest capacity in securing ultimate justice if possible. Keep a stiff upper lip. A day of reckoning will come."

Draining the Treasury Gold.

New York, Dec. 15.—Two millions in gold has been withdrawn from the treasury for shipment to Europe. This reduces the gold reserve again to $99,000,000.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—One million in gold will be shipped to Europe from here.

Accepted a Reduction in Wages.

Pittsburg, Dec. 15.—The coal miners employed by Henry Floersheim, at his Nottingham works, on the Wheeling division of the Baltimore & Ohio railway, have accepted the proposed reduction of nine cents a ton in wages.

Will Hang a Train Robber.

Prescott, Ari., Dec. 15.—The new United States law inflicting the death penalty for train robbing will apply to Oscar Rogers, who held up a Southern Pacific train two weeks ago. He will be hung February 8.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

SERENA ANN. HER FIRST CHRISTMAS KEEPING.

By MARY E. WILKINS.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

Fifty years ago Serena Ann lived in Braintree, and Christmas-keeping was not yet much the fashion in New England. Serena Ann was ten years old, and she had never seen a Christmas-tree, hung up her stocking, or had a Christmas present even.

Serena Ann's father was a farmer; she had a mother, and an Aunt Love, her mother's sister, who lived with them, and was to be married in February, and a brother Ebenezer.

Ebenezer was two years older than Serena Ann, and went to the district school winters. Serena Ann herself went to school only in the summer. She was a delicate little girl, and the schoolhouse was too far away for her to walk in cold weather. So she stayed at home, and her mother heard her spell every day, and she did sums on a piece of old slate, and was reading the Bible through, a chapter every morning. So her education was not neglected.

One night in the first week in December, Serena Ann was sitting beside the fire, with the piece of broken slate on her lap, trying to do a sum about ten grayhounds running a race, and how long it would take for one to catch up with the other, when Ebenezer came home from school. There was a light snow falling, and Ebenezer was powdered with it. He came in stamping his cowhide shoes and shaking himself like a dog. Aunt Love was sewing green velvet on her wedding pelisse, and Mrs. Bagley was paring apples for sauce. "Don't stamp so, Ebenezer," said she. "And don't shake the snow on my pelisse," cried Aunt Love. Aunt Love was very pretty, with smooth brown hair, and pink cheeks.

"You ought to get it off in the shed, then," said his mother.

"Oh, mother!"

"And not shake it all over the clean floor, and your aunt's pelisse."

"Oh, mother, Sammy Morse says he's going to hang up his stocking the night before Christmas!"

Then Serena Ann looked up from her piece of slate and her grayhounds.

"I don't want to hear any such nonsense," said Mrs. Bagley.

"He says his folks are going to put something in it for him."

"If they want to be so silly they can."

"Mother, can't I hang up my stocking?"

"Yes," said his mother, "you can hang it up all you want to, but you won't get anything in it. You have all the presents your father can afford to give you, right along. Now go out in the shed and bring in an armful of that apple-tree wood for the fire."

And Ebenezer went out disconsolately.

Serena Ann pulled her mother's apron. "Mother, can't I hang up my stocking?" she whispered.

"You can hang it up, but I shall tell you what I did Ebenezer. You won't get anything in it. I shan't treat one of you any better than I do the other."

"I never hung up my stocking since I was born," said Serena Ann, plaintively.

"Neither did I," said her mother. "I never thought of such a thing when I was a little girl. Now, 'tend to your sum."

And Serena Ann attended to her sum; but the thought of Christmas seemed to gain upon her childish mind much faster than one grayhound upon the other. She could not quite give up the hope that possibly, if she did hang up her stocking, somebody might put something in it. If not her mother, Aunt Love, or her father might, or even Joshua Simmons, the young man whom Aunt Love was going to marry; he sometimes gave her a peppermint. And after all her mother was a pretty tender one, and she might relent. So Serena Ann hung up her stocking the night before Christmas.

It is quite possible if Mrs. Bagley had seen that poor little blue yarn stocking hanging in the chimney corner she might have slipped at least a bunch of raisins, and a cinnamon stick or two, into it, and Aunt Love might have tucked in a bit of blue ribbon. But nobody saw it, for Serena Ann, with the want of calculation of her innocent heart, slipped out after everybody was in bed and hung it up.

At breakfast the next morning Serena Ann's mouth drooped pitifully at the corners, and she did not eat much.

"You are a silly girl to act so," said her mother. "You knew what I told you."

"I s'pose Sammy Morse has got his stocking chuck full," said Ebenezer. He felt Serena Ann's injury to be his own.

"Go out in the shed and bring in some more of that apple-tree wood, if you've finished your breakfast," said his mother, and then she sent Serena Ann upstairs to make her bed.

As soon as the door closed, Aunt Love turned to her sister. "Suppose Joshua and I take Serena Ann to Boston with us," said she.

Mrs. Bagley looked at her doubtfully. "I'm afraid she'll be in your way," she said.

"No, she won't, and it will make up to her for not having anything in her stocking. I felt sorry for her. Serena Ann is a good little girl."

"Well, I felt sorry she took it so to heart," said Serena Ann's mother, "but it's a silly custom, and I don't know how to begin it. I suppose she would be tickled to death to go with you and Joshua. She never went to Boston but once; Ebenezer's been twice."

"She must come right down and get ready if she's going," said Aunt Love, "for Joshua will be here with the chaise."

And Serena Ann was called and told, to her joy and wonder, that she was to go to Boston with Aunt Love and Joshua Simmons. "But you must be a good girl and not make any trouble," said her mother, "for your Aunt Love has a great deal to do. She is going to buy some of her furniture, and her wedding bonnet and shoes, and she is very kind to take you."

And Serena Ann promised beamingly. She had never felt so happy in her life as she did that Christmas morning, when she set forth to visit Boston, tucked in between Aunt Love and Joshua Simmons in the chaise. It was very pleasant, but cold; there was a slight rime of snow on the ground, which shone like silver. Serena Ann wore her thick wadded coat, her lambswool tippet and her wadded brown silk hood with cherry strings. She was quite warm, and her face was so pink and radiant with bliss that Aunt Love and Joshua looked at her, and smiled at each other above her head.

Serena Ann, moreover, had, tightly grasped in one red-mittened hand, her mother's silk purse, and it contained two ninepences, one of which she was to spend for herself, and the other for a jack-knife for Ebenezer. Her father had given them to her when she started. She made up her mind, as they jogged along over the frozen road, that she would spend her ninepence for an apron for her mother instead of anything for herself, because she could not go to Boston in a chaise.

When they reached the city they stopped at the Sign of the Lamb, where Joshua Simmons put up his team; then they all went shopping down Hanover street, where the fashionable stores were at that time.

Serena Ann enjoyed buying Aunt Love's and Joshua Simmons' wedding furniture quite as much as they did. She thought there was never anything quite so handsome as their haircloth sofa, and mahogany card-table, and looking glass, and she trudged after them to all the shops where they priced articles and then back to the one where they found them cheapest and best, and never thought of being tired.

But she was glad at noon to go back to the Sign of the Lamb, and have some baked beans and a piece of pumpkin pie. They seemed to her far superior to the baked beans and pie at home.

After dinner Joshua Simmons left them. He had to go a little farther to see about his own wedding suit, and Aunt Love meanwhile was to buy her wedding bonnet and shoes, and Serena Ann make her purchases. Then they were to meet at the Sign of the Lamb, and go home.

Serena Ann went with her aunt from shop to shop, and watched her try on bonnets until she finally bought a beautiful one of green uncut velvet trimmed with white plumes and white lutestring ribbon. Then they started to buy the shoes, Aunt Love carrying the bonnet in a large green bandbox.

There was quite a crowd in Hanover street that afternoon. A great many ladies were out shopping. Serena Ann could not walk beside her aunt very well, she was so jostled, so she fell behind. Now and then she took hold of the skirt of her aunt's blue delaine gown, so as not to lose her.

Nobody ever knew how it happened, but suddenly, after she had been pushed by the hurrying people and had caught hold of the blue delaine gown, the lady who wore it looked around and she was not Aunt Love. She was very pretty, but her hair was black and fell in bunches of curls, instead of smooth braids, over her red cheeks, and her eyes were black instead of blue. Moreover, she was very finely dressed, wearing a velvet pelisse and a rich fur tippet, and bearing before her a great fur muff. The blue delaine gown was the only thing about this strange young lady that in the least resembled Aunt Love. She stood looking with great surprise at Serena Ann, who looked up at her quite pale with fright, still keeping fast hold of the blue delaine.

Finally the young lady laughed, and then her face, which had appeared rather haughty, looked very sweet. "What is the matter," said she, "and why are you holding to my gown?"

"I—thought you were Aunt Love," faltered Serena Ann, and the tears began to come.

"Were you holding to your aunt's gown?"

"Yes, ma'am."

The young lady laughed again. "My name is Miss Pamela Soley," said she. "Take hold of my hand, and don't cry, and we'll go find your aunt."

So Serena Ann curled her red mittened hand timidly around the kid gloved fingers of the young lady, and they went back down Hanover street. They walked on both sides, they looked in every shop, but all in vain.

The truth was that poor Aunt Love had missed Serena Ann much sooner, and had started off on a wrong tack in search.

When she had discovered that her little niece was not behind her and looked around in dismay and lost the color out of her pretty pink cheeks, several sympathizing ladies had gathered around her, and one had been quite sure she had seen a little girl just like Serena Ann in a lambswool tippet and brown silk hood, run down a side street a little way back. So Aunt Love went down the side street, looking and inquiring of everybody.

She almost cried as she went along, carrying her big green bandbox, looking in vain for Serena Ann. She did not know what to do, but finally it occurred to her that it was nearly the time for her to meet Joshua Simmons at the Sign of the Lamb, and that in all probability some benevolent person would have taken Serena Ann thither. So Aunt Love hastened to the Sign of the Lamb, but it took her some time, for she had wandered quite a distance.

But Miss Pamela Soley was not wise enough to think that the best plan was to take Serena Ann to the Sign of the Lamb at once, since they could not find her Aunt Love on Hanover street. She was quite a young lady, in spite of her stately manners, and had not had much experience in rescuing lost little girls. She stood still for some time in Hanover street, holding Serena Ann's hand, deliberating what to do. But finally a bright thought struck Miss Pamela Soley: "My brother Solomon is coming for me in our chaise to take me home to Jamaica Plain, where we live," said she. "He is going to meet me at the corner just below here in about half an hour. We will make your purchases and then we will ask him what to do. My brother Solomon always knows what is best to do. He is older than I, and carried off many honors at Harvard college. Don't cry, Serena Ann. He'll be sure to find your aunt for you."

Serena Ann was somewhat comforted, for the young lady had a way at once sweet and commanding, and she went hand in hand with her and purchased a beautiful jackknife for Ebenezer, with one ninepence, and a piece of white nainsook for her mother's apron with the other. Miss Pamela Soley herself made two purchases—a little rosewood workbox, with scissors, and thimble, and ivory bodkin, all complete, and a doll in a very handsome spangled dress like a princess. The last purchase rather surprised Serena Ann, for she had thought the young lady too old to play with dolls, but she eyed it admiringly. She had never had a doll herself, except one which Aunt Love made for her out of a corncob. She sighed when Miss Pamela Soley tucked the doll with the rosewood workbox out of sight in her great muff.

Mr. Solomon Soley was waiting in the chaise on the corner when his sister appeared with Serena Ann and told her story. He was a handsome young man, in a very fine mulberry colored cloak.

"We must take her to the Sign of the Lamb at once," Mr. Solomon Soley said, decidedly, and Miss Pamela and Serena Ann got promptly into the chaise and they made haste to the Sign of the Lamb. However, just before they reached the tavern, Miss Pamela remembered an errand which her mother had begged her to do at Mr. Thomas Whitcomb's store, and had her brother leave her there, saying she would join them in a few minutes.

But when Mr. Solomon Soley inquired at the Sign of the Lamb, he found that Joshua Simmons and Aunt Love had driven away in their chaise some half an hour before, and the hostler, who had been told, did not remember that they had merely gone to look about the city a little for the missing child, and were then coming back to the tavern to see if she had in the meantime been brought there. However, another hostler remembered that the lady carried a large green bandbox and was crying.

"That was Aunt Love," said Serena Ann, and she began to cry, too.

Then he turned the chaise around, and drove back to the store, where his sister had stopped, and before Serena Ann fairly knew it they were on the road to Braintree.

It had grown very cold, and the wind blew. Mr. Solomon got out a great plaid camlet cloak from under the chaise seat, and put it on over his mulberry-colored one. Then presently, because Serena Ann began to shiver a little, tucked in between the two as she was, he threw an end of the camlet cloak around her, over her brown silk hood. She was quite warm under that, and also quite hidden from sight. Nobody meeting them would have dreamed that there was a little girl in the chaise.

In the meantime, Aunt Love and Joshua Simmons returned to the Sign of the Lamb, and the hostler, who had forgotten they were coming, told her that a gentleman in a chaise had been there with the little girl and said he was going to take her home to Braintree. "Guess you'll overtake 'em," said he. "Gentleman was alone in the chaise with the little girl, wore a mulberry-colored cloak."

Aunt Love fairly wept for joy. "Oh! Joshua, I am so thankful," she cried. "I never could have told Sarah I'd lost Serena Ann. And I haven't got my shoes, but I don't care. I'll get married in my old ones. Let's start right away, so we'll overtake them."

Joshua Simmons started up the horse, and the chaise rattled out the tavern yard and down the road toward Braintree.

But their chapter of accidents was not quite finished, for as they were crossing Neponset bridge, peering ahead to see if they could catch a glimpse of the other chaise, a gust of wind took off Joshua Simmons' hat and tossed it into the river. He had a cold in his head, too. Aunt Love pulled off her hood promptly. "Put this on," said she. "Don't say a word. If you don't you'll be laid up with influenza, and the wedding will have to be postponed, and that's a very bad sign."

"What'll you do?" asked Joshua Simmons, hesitatingly.

Aunt Love untied the green bandbox. "Put on this bonnet," said she. "It'll be so dark when we get home that the neighbors can't see it."

So Joshua put on the hood and Aunt Love the wedding bonnet, and it happened that when they finally overtook Solomon Soley, who had not much the start, and whose horse had got a stone in his shoe once and made a delay, that the occupants of the two chaises looked hard at each other and saw nothing that they were looking for.

For Joshua Simmons, who was naturally somewhat ashamed of his woman's headgear, kept his face turned well away, and both Solomon Soley and his sister, Pamela, thought there were two ladies in the chaise, and not the aunt and the young man for whom they were looking.

As for Serena Ann, she was fast asleep under the camlet cloak and saw nobody, and her Aunt Love and Joshua never dreamed she was there. Moreover, they were looking for one gentleman in the chaise with her, and here was a young lady also. He wore a camlet cloak, too, instead of a mulberry cloak, as they had been told.

So the two chaises rattled on almost abreast for quite a stretch on the turnpike, but finally Solomon Soley's forged ahead a little, for his horse was fresher.

They reached Braintree and when they were within a half mile of the Bagley farmhouse, Joshua Simmons turned into another road, which was a little shorter cut. Aunt Love was impatient to see if Serena Ann had reached home. And so it happened, since Solomon Soley's horse was a little faster, that both chaises turned into the Bagley yard at the same time, and Serena returned from her Christmas outing with something more exciting than a flourish of trumpets.

Serena Ann herself was so tired and sleepy that she could not fairly realize anything. It seemed to her like a dream; the chorus of surprise and delight, Mr. Solomon's and Miss Pamela's coming into the house and getting warm, and eating supper, and borrowing a footstóve before they started on their homeward journey, and everything. She scarcely even grasped in its full measure of delight the fact that Miss Pamela presented her with the rosewood workbox and the doll when she kissed her good-by, but Serena Ann had gotten one of the pleasantest memories of her life, and had her first Christmas keeping. [THE END.]

"WE MUST TAKE HER TO THE SIGN OF THE LAMB."

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

To THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

To THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

The Pink Tea Given by Mrs. Mayer a Most Graceful and Charming Event.

The reception and tea given at the home of Mrs. Gifford Mayer, 1023 Park avenue, Saturday afternoon from 4 to 7, was a particularly charming affair.

It was the second anniversary of the marriage of her daughter Mrs. Thomas Sherman Wheeler, and was as far as possible a counterpart of that notable event.

The decorations were pink throughout, and the prevalence of that beautiful shade in flowers and gowns was exquisite in effect.

Mrs. Wheeler wore her wedding gown, and was attended by her maid of honor, Miss May Holly. Those who assisted her in receiving were Mrs. George Chapman, Mrs. Wilkinson and Miss Anna Murphy; and Mrs. Mayer was assisted by Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mrs. Dumont, Mrs. F. O. Herring, and Mrs. Theodore Wheeler of New York. At the table were Mrs. Langworthy and Miss Florence Marsh, who alternated with Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Fleming. Others in the dining room were Mrs. F. A. Pollock, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss L. Underwood, Miss Mabel Potter, Miss Margaret Holly and Miss Minnie Marsh.

The guests numbered about 175, who alternated between the various teas given at that time.

Magnificent Holiday Stock.

Present-making at Christmas tide grows more popular with each passing year, and to meet the great demand for suitable articles for present-giving gives employment to hundreds of thousands of people in all quarters of the globe. This is without counting the vast army who are employed to sell the finished product. Unusually great preparations have been made by the large dry-goods establishments, and it is expected that the Christmas trade of this year will be the largest ever known. That progressive Newark firm, L. Bamberger & Co., 147-149 Market street, have laid in the most bewilderingly large assortment of useful, ornamental and amusing Christmas gifts ever collected by a Newark retail store. It includes toys, dolls, games, and juvenile books, manicure and toilet sets, encased in beautiful plush, celluloid and leather boxes, solid gold and silver, and also plated jewelry of every description, handkerchiefs in silk and linen, gloves,—in fact, a practically countless number of articles, to enumerate all of which would occupy almost this entire paper. Contrary to the usual custom which prevails elsewhere, L. Bamberger & Co. are selling these holiday articles at very low prices, and not charging the exorbitant rates which some storekeepers do at this time of the year. If you want the best value and the biggest assortment, you should certainly see Bamberger's stock before making your selection. They are open evenings until Christmas.

Plainfield's Government.

The December meeting of the study class of the Plainfield Branch Alliance will be held in the lecture room of All Souls Church tomorrow afternoon, Dec. 18, at 3. The subject to be considered is "The Present Government of Plainfield", and papers will be read on the following sub-topics:

Appointment of Officers and Functions of the Same.

General Conduct of Elections.

Relation of Our City to County and State.

Taxation and Public Expenditure.

All women interested are cordially invited to attend.

Plainfield Stands 13.

The report of the Postal Auditor gives Plainfield's postoffice record as follows: Receipts, $27,115.09; expenses, $15,472.61; net revenue, $11,642.48. Plainfield stands 13 in point of net revenue of the postoffices of the State, being exceeded by Atlantic City, Camden, East Orange, Hoboken, Jersey City, Montclair, Morristown, Newark, New Brunswick, Orange, Passaic and Paterson.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Church of Christ will meet in their new quarters, 204 West Front street, tomorrow evening at 7:45, and every Tuesday and Sunday evening hereafter. (Third floor.) The Sunday-school children will practice Saturday evening for the Christmas festival.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. At L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00, our price 45c and 90c.

THE SATURDAY SOCIAL.

Plainfield Voices Delight the Park Club Gathering.

A NIGHT OF MIRTH AND MUSIC.

Local Artists Received with Great Applause by the Washington Avenue Happy Family—President McCutchen Forced to Make a Speech—Coming Club Events.

The fourth of the series of informal Saturday socials inaugurated by the Park Club called together fully 150 members and guests at the clubhouse Saturday evening.

A most enjoyable entertainment was rendered by Mrs. Edwin T. Douglas, Arthur Freeman, and Walter M. McGee.

Master of Ceremonies B. A. Hegeman, Jr., was received with loud and continued applause when he stepped forward to make the announcements.

Arthur Freeman, whose finely modulated bass voice would place him in the front rank of professionals, rendered a song which was so well received that he was forced to respond to a hearty encore, and this was followed by Mrs. Douglas in a beautiful melody which held the audience spellbound. Mrs. Douglas also was recalled by long-continued rounds of applause which showed the appreciation of her auditors.

Walter M. McGee sang a rollicking college glee, full of expression and movement, and after the laughter and applause had somewhat abated he gave a side-splitting recitation in the German dialect.

Mr. Freeman again favored, and responded to the encore which followed, with "Swim Out, O'Grady", almost convulsing the audience, who, when they had sufficiently recovered to use their hands, demanded more in such a hearty and unmistakable manner that Mr. Freeman was forced once more to appear, rendering in a rich falsetto voice the pathetic (?) solo "And Willie Said—"

Mrs. Douglas was obliged to stand waiting a moment, while the audience demonstrated their pleasure at her reappearance, and she was not permitted to retire at the close of the song until she had again given her hearers the pleasure of listening to her charming voice.

The topical song "He Did n't Split the Wood", sung by Mr. McGee, in which he cleverly introduced Counselor Charles A. Reed, the popular legal light, was an instant hit, and the hilarious excitement knew no bounds when allusion was made to President Samuel St. J. McCutchen's infant son Roy, the verse ending:

"It 's for Yale that he will yell!—
And I guess he 's yelling now!"

Cries of "Speech! Speech!" rang through the hall, and President McCutchen, much against his will, was escorted forward by Mr. Hegeman, Jr., appropriately closing thes part of the evening's entertainment with facetious and felicitous remarks.

Dancing, bowling and billiards, lively repartee and pleasant chat, rounded out the evening's pleasure, and the affair was pronounced by all the most enjoyable social thus far given by the club.

Tomorrow evening, Dec. 18, there will be a match game on the club alleys between the New Jersey Athletic Club bowlers and the home team. A close and exciting contest is anticipated, as the Athletic Club players have recently been rolling up some surprisingly large scores.

On the coming Saturday evenings, Dec. 22 and 29, games will be called between the Bachelors and Benedicks of the club.

An informal dance will be given in the club-house Christmas Eve, Dec. 24, under the auspices of the Junior Entertainment Committee.

Glaringly Untrue.

Janitor Peter P. Robinson of the Park Avenue Baptist Church called on The Daily Press Saturday afternoon and asked The Press to deny the statement made by another paper that a police officer, finding the church lighted and unlocked, and for hours at the mercy of trespassers, put out the lights and locked it up at 2 a. m.

The facts in the case he states to be as follows: On the evening in question a choir rehearsal was held in the church, and as Janitor Robinson had other matters to look after, he asked the leader of the choir to favor him by locking the door and putting out the lights when rehearsal was over. The door was locked when the time arrived, but a few lights in the parlor escaped the notice of the chorister, and were burning until morning, when Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the church, entered and extinguished them. Janitor Robinson wishes it further known that he makes this statement with the knowledge and consent of Pastor Richardson.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

FAIR PROFITS, $4,661.81.

GRATIFYING FINANCIAL RESULT OF THE FESTIVAL OF NATIONS.

The Drills of Course Brought in the Most Money, But Every Department Did Well.

A check for $100 was given by a member of the association to defray the expenses of Miss Egar, who gave her services for this nominally small sum on this occasion.

Contemplating the final account, and realizing anew the kindness of many persons who have helped to make the fair the success it was, the Executive Committee desires to reiterate its thanks for all the aid received from every source. It would be a pleasant thing to make personal acknowledgements of many donations and help received, but time would fail to enumerate the large number. The members of the committee can only thank all who have aided in any capacity, knowing that the furnished Y. M. C. A. Building in our town, for the town's enjoyment and well being, will be in itself a reward for all donations and services contributed.

Would-Be Riders Disappointed.

Much disappointment has been expressed by those who were interested in organizing the riding class, that was spoken of in these columns last week, at the action of the Riding Club in refusing the use of the academy to non-members except in the afternoons. Arrangements for making up the class were going merrily on with the sanction and approval of several influential members of the club, and a sufficient number of names had been secured to warrant a meeting, when on the night set for the first ride the Riding Club sent word through one of its members that they had decided not to allow the use of the academy to that particular class, the supposed reason being that several men had joined the class that did not belong to the club, either because they did not feel sufficient confidence in their horsemanship, or because they preferred to ride with fewer in the ring.

Many people think that the club was shortsighted in its action, as the class would undoubtedly have furnished recruits for the club in time, but the most unfortunate part of the affair is the probable departure of Mr. Stephenson, the instructor, who, had the class continued, would probably have found his position sufficiently lucrative to warrant his remaining. But it cannot be expected that he will neglect opportunities elsewhere to stay in Plainfield in the present state of the riding academy.

Concert, and Maybe Dance.

Through the efforts of Frank A. Cokefair of Crescent avenue, who has been identified with the Columbia Glee Club for several years, that organization will appear in the Casino, Friday evening, Dec. 21. The singers will be assisted by the Mandolin and Banjo clubs. A long list of patronesses has been secured, containing the names of many women prominent in society, and there is some talk of a dance afterward.

—Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., will hold its annual election of officers tomorrow evening at 8. A large attendance is requested.

Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. MISS ABBOTT'S DEBUT.

Her Entry in Society Made in a Burst of Golden Glory.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Abbott, Central avenue, Saturday afternoon, a delightful reception and tea was given in honor of Miss Florence Abbott, debutante.

Between 300 and 400 guests were present.

Those who assisted in receiving were Miss Warner of New York; Miss Graham of Brooklyn; Miss Anna Stewart, Miss Carrie Vail, Miss Maud Middledith, and Miss Nellie Whiton.

In the dining room Mrs. Irving Brown and Mrs. Fred Andrews were at the table.

The decorations, which were entirely of golden, were beautiful, and the lovely home of the Abbotts held a profusion of charms for the large number present.

The Lecture on Fenelon.

The first entertainment in the course to be given by the Watchung Avenue Friends was a lecture on "Fenelon", by Prof. Magill of Swarthmore College, delivered in the meeting-house Saturday evening.

The lecture was an extremely interesting one, and when, at its close, A. M. Powell, in voicing the appreciation of the audience, moved a vote of thanks to Prof. Magill, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis warmly seconded the motion, expressing his gratitude for the more intimate acquaintance he had gained with the distinguished subject of the lecture.

A correspondent of The Press, who was present, suggests the thought that although Fenelon lived two hundred years before our present "advanced and liberal" age, the recent unfortunate sectarian controversy carried on in another paper shows that we have still room for improvement in liberality and Christian charity. He sincerely regrets that such a controversy should have occurred, or at least the kindly spirit shown by Fenelon in his arguments, might have inspired our friends in this city.

We are proud, and justly so, of the very cordial relations existing between the different denominations represented here; but the reader referred to thinks that we should not rest satisfied until all who love the one God as revealed by Jesus Christ, while retaining their individual beliefs and preferred forms of worship, shall be united in a friendly confederation for mutual support and united effort against every form of wrong and in aid of every good-cause.

OVATION TO THE MAYOR

Brilliant Social Assemblage at His Elegant Home.

GUESTS NUMBERED FIVE HUNDRED.

They Greeted One and All with the Season's Best Wishes, and Feasted from a Mirror Lake on Which Floated Illuminated Pink Pond Lilies—Elaborate Dinner Follows for the Entertainers.

The reception given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Alexander Gilbert and her sister Miss Alice Randolph, at Mayor Gilbert's beautiful residence, 318 West Eighth street, was a most elaborate and largely attended affair. The house was a blaze of light, and a perfect bower of beauty, in which "fair women and brave men" to the number of five hundred or more assembled to honor their charming hostesses.

Mrs. Gilbert and Miss Randolph, assisted by Mrs. Col. Tyler, Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. J. K. Myers, and Mrs. O. B. Leonard, received under a canopy of trailing asparagus, banked by a profusion of magnificent roses.

The first floor was beautifully adorned with Catherine Mermets and garlands of green, with the exception of the library, which was enshrined in a mass of yellow chrysanthemums, and on the floor above exquisite "American Beauties" in rare abundance were artistically arranged. In the banquet room, which was a vision in pink and white, refreshments were served by Miss Sally Morse of Brooklyn, Miss Emily B. Tracy, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, and Miss Florence Huntington. The beauty and novelty of the table decorations, and the excellence of the banquet, were remarked by all. A large mirror ran the full length of the table, giving the effect of a miniature lake, on whose placid surface floated a profusion of lovely pink pond lilies, from the centre of which protruded delicate little candles. The beauty of the decorations was second only to the beauty of the exquisitely gowned entertainers and their fair guests, whose presence filled the house with living splendor.

An unusually large number of men was present, and the affair seemed almost an ovation to the Mayor, attesting as it did the high regard in which he is held by his large and steadily growing circle of friends.

The reception was held at an early hour for the accommodation of the guests from New York, Brooklyn, Newark and Elizabeth, who were present in considerable numbers.

The leaders of Plainfield's society, wealth and culture, were in attendance, but so large was the list that it is impossible to attempt even a partial enumeration of those who graced the occasion.

After the departure of the mass of guests, an elaborate dinner was served, at which all the elegance of dinner service was most artistically displayed. Nineteen covers were laid, and around the festive board, presided over by Mayor Gilbert and his charming wife and sister, were seated the women who assisted in receiving, together with their husbands and the fair maidens who shortly before had held sway over the banquet table.

And so, with merry jest and pealing laughter, the moments passed unheeded.

The function was in every way a grand success; and the fair faces, the gorgeous decorations, and the large assembly, serve but to emphasize the long established fact that Mrs. Gilbert is a hostess par excellence.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL NOTES.

The graduating class met Thursday to decide on class colors, and after some discussion selected bronze and blue.

The Junior class held a class meeting for the same purpose. Maroon and cream were suggested, but it was decided to wait awhile before choosing.

The Eighth grade have taken up the study of physiology.

The members of the Seventh grade recited short quotations from various authors before their own classmates, Friday afternoon.

Special Christmas exercises are in preparation, and the carols are being practiced daily.

FREED FROM DEBT.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH HAS A GALA SUNDAY.

Pastor Barnes and His Helpers Speedily Raise the Funds to Begin the New Year Aright.

The good people of the Methodist Church have good reason to congratulate themselves upon the history they made yesterday. They have felt restive for some time under their debt, and determined to make the effort to pay it off.

Yesterday the matter was presented to the congregation. Dr. C. R. Barnes, the pastor, made a brief address upon the offerings made for the building of the Tabernacle. Then Henry A. McGee made the financial statement, and was followed by James McGee who made a stirring appeal. The following were the solicitors: J. W. Jackson, H. A. McGee, G. R. Cornwell, G. Q. Packer, J. R. Joy, G. M. Rittenhouse and John McNaughton. The willing responses of the people kept the efficient secretaries, Daniel E. Davis and J. C. Peck, very busy. In an hour over $9,000 was pledged. The effort was renewed in the evening, and before 9 the congregation sang the doxology after the entire amount had been realized.

Moving to the Park.

William H. Shotwell of Emily street, ex-collector of North Plainfield, will soon be regretfully missed by his highly esteeming neighbors from the section where for 24 years he has been a familiar figure. He has decided to move into the new and growing Watchung Park, having purchased of F. S. Runyon the elegant home built by Mr. Runyon on the south side of Fairview avenue, near Somerset street. In the deal Mr. Runyon becomes the owner of Mr. Shotwell's property, 62 Duer street, now occupied by Justice T. R. Crosley. Mr. Shotwell's new home is a model modern property containing 10 rooms, with every improvement, including city water, gas, and electric lights. A barn will be built at once on the rear of the lot, and soon after New Year's Day Mr. Shotwell and family will take possession and be "at home" to their friends and neighbors.

L. B. Woolston has purchased the lot adjoining Mr. Shotwell's property, on the north, and will immediately build a fine residence for himself and family.

Talking for Temperance.

Col. Hadley addressed a very large audience in Music Hall yesterday afternoon on the subject of temperance.

His words were strong and impressive, as usual, and very interesting.

The reason, he said, there are saloons in Plainfield today is because the Christian people want them. Christian people talk temperance and advocate its principles, and at the same time have wine on their buffets and tables.

Mr. Hadley said the cause of temperance and prohibition would never succeed, as long as the Christian people were so indifferent to these vital matters.

Baby's Escape.

This morning a baby carriage, which was left with its tiny occupant in front of Laing's furnishing goods store on Park avenue, was blown across the sidewalk, and in turning over at the curbstone threw the little one directly under the heels of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes's horse. Fortunately the street was filled with vehicles and the horse which was walking slowly was instantly brought to a full stop by the driver. The child although thoroughly frightened seemed to be uninjured.

Assembly Tonight.

All eyes are turned toward the Assembly tonight which bids fair to eclipse any first Assembly held in many years. The subscription list has already passed the expected limits, and is at present larger than at any time since 1892. An elaborate supper will be served by Max Wiertz, who has given such universal satisfaction in his catering for the last year. After tonight the season may fairly be said to have opened.

—An accurate report of Pastor Richardson's sermon on "Marriage" is crowded out of this issue to appear tomorrow.

—While a team belonging to Calvin Rugg, the coal dealer, were standing on Fourth street near Park avenue this morning, they started to run away. They collided with the board fence opposite and were caught before any damage was done.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. BUSINESS OF THE WEEK

Congress Is Ready To Pass the Currency Bill.

Senator Morgan Intends To Demand a Vote on the Nicaragua Canal Measure and When That Is Disposed of Army Appropriations Will Be Considered—Currency Is Next.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The Nicaragua canal bill holds its place as the unfinished business on the senate calendar. Mr. Morgan said this morning that he intended, if possible, to have the final vote taken before the holiday recess comes. If this bill should be disposed of before the holiday recess the bankruptcy bill will probably be given the right of way, until the appropriation bills begin to come over from the house.

The prompt consideration of these bills will not be interfered with by the republicans who assume the attitude of favoring their early consideration, but permitting no serious discussion of any of the other subjects that have been endorsed by the democratic caucus, save, perhaps, the Nicaragua canal bill.

The routine proceedings of the week will be broken on Thursday by the ceremonies attending the presentation to the United States by the state of New Hampshire, of the statutes of Daniel Webster and John Stark—both of which will be unveiled in Statuary hall.

Mr. Hoar (rep., Mass.) will deliver a speech on this occasion and other members from New England will also participate.

Appropriations and currency promise to exhaust what time remains of the house prior to the holiday recess. Mr. Outhwaite, chairman of the committee on military affairs, will demand consideration of the army appropriation bill, which will shut out the district committee. There are several propositions of new legislation in this which will probably draw out consderable discussion.

It is believed, however, that the bill can be disposed of at one sitting of the house.

The military bill out of the way it is expected that the rest of the week will be devoted to the discussion of the bill to provide a new system of currency, to be reported by the committee on banking and currency. The desire of the advocates of the measure is to bring the bill to a vote this week and it is believed the managers of the house are inclined to aid them in reaching that consummation of their work.

There will be, it is announced, opposition to the adoption of a rule closing debate this week, but it is understood that the influence of the administration will be exerted to this end, and the apparent probabilities are that a rule to that effect will be adopted if reported.

It is announced that an understanding has been reached by the leaders of the two houses of congress that the holiday recess should begin with the adjournment on Friday next and expire on the third of January, Thursday.

CRISIS IN ITALY.

Protest To Be Sent to the King Against the Prorogation.

Rome, Dec. 17.—All the opposition groups in the chamber met to formulate a protest against the prorogation of parliament. The Marquis di Rudini, ex-premier presided.

He, Guiseppe Zanardelli, Admiral Brin and Felice Cavallotti were appointed to draw up the protest and send it to the king. All the speakers denounced the government's course violently.

The keenest excitement pervades all political circles. The feeling against Ex-Premier Giolitti is intense, and he left Rome last night for an indefinite period. Everybody is talking of a dissolution. The rumors of the cabinet's resignation are unfounded.

The government maintains that the prorogation of the chamber is well received in the provinces, where it is regarded as a necessity.

Five battalions of infantry have been brought to Rome in the last two days to guard against riots.

Murderer To Hang Himself.

Weathersfield, Conn., Dec. 17.—The automatic gallows is in readiness at the state prison for the execution of Jack Cronin, the South Windsor murderer, early to-morrow morning. The new gallows is so arranged that the condemned man, stepping upon the drop, puts in motion a water apparatus that springs the trap. It was invented and built by a convict, James H. Babbett, who was recently set free by the state board of pardons.

Killed a Playmate in Fun.

Elizabeth, N. J., Dec. 17.—Thomas Lilly, seventeen years of age, was shot and killed during a scuffle by John Long, a playmate, fifteen years old. The boys had been examining a revolver when an explosion occurred and a bullet crashed into Lilly's head. The injured boy died in the general hospital. Long was arrested.

Dedicated Their Church.

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 17.—The Swedes of this city who bought last week the chapel on John street from the Memorial church for church purposes dedicated their new house of worship with appropriate exercises.

Death of a Centenarian

Quincy, Mass., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Ann Adams, the oldest person in Quincy, died of old age, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Newcomb. Mrs. Adams was born in Quincy, March 4, 1797.

VICTORY IS WITH THEM

Japanese Soldiers Win One More Bloody Battle.

Col. Tomoyasu's Garrison at Feng-Huang Attacked Over 4,000 Kerin Troops and Dispersed Them After Killing 250—Another Peace Commissioner Appointed by China.

London, Dec. 17.—A correspondent in Antong telegraphs:

"In accordance with Gen. Nodzu's instructions, the Feng-Huang garrison, which was confronted on Dec. 12 by 4,000 Chinese, began the attack on the enemy at daybreak.

"The garrison was 1,000 strong and was commanded by Col. Tomoyasu. The main battle took place at Yih-Min-Shan, five miles from Feng-Huang.

"The Japanese attacked with spirit and defeated the Chinese, driving them to Timatsch. The Japanese loss was three officers killed and seventy privates killed and wounded; the Chinese, 250 killed and wounded and thirty prisoners. The Japanese captured four field guns. The Chinese prisoners say that General Iuo had under him more than 4,000 Kerin troops, who are in every way superior to the Chinese soldiers.

"General Tachimi's brigade is now moving southward to turn back the Kerin fugitives. No news is obtainable from the left division of the first army, owing to the interruption of telegraphic communication."

Shanghai, Dec. 17.—The first and second Japanese armies are reported to be suffering greatly from the cold. Chang Yiu Kung, president of the board of revenue, is said by native newspapers to have been appointed ambassador to Japan with instructions to negotiate peace.

A telegram from Pekin says that two Japanese armies are concentrating preparatory to attacks on Tien Tsin and New Chwang.

Washington, Dec. 17.—All reliable information from Japan indicates that the Japanese soldiers are observing the recent notification issued to the land forces by Count Oyama Iwao, minister of state for war, which states:

"Operations being properly confined to the military and naval forces actually engaged, and there being no reason whatever for enmity between individuals because their countries are at war, the common principles of humanity dictate that succor should be extended even to the enemy's forces who are disabled either by wounds or disease."

The recent report that the Japanese had acted with ferocious atrocity towards the garrison and people of Port Arthur after that Chinese stronghold had fallen, are at variance with the disposition of the Japanese officers who would be doubly inclined to act with humanity on account of Count Oyama's order.

Mr. Kurine, the Japanese minister in Washington has seen fit to make a public statement giving his reasons for believing that the stories concerning cruelty are untrue.

In his order, Count Oyama calls attention to the Red Cross association which has its attendants in the field with the belligerents.

Japan became a party to Red Cross principles in 1886 through her adhesion to the Geneva treaty, and in 1889, the Japanese emperor was tendered and accepted the presidency of the Japanese Cross association.

INDIANS GETTING RESTLESS.

Settlers in South Dakota Fearful of Another Outbreak.

Pine Ridge, S. D., Dec. 17.—The Indians on the reservations are getting restless, and the settlers are fearful of another outbreak.

The Sioux have never been peaceful since the Pine Ridge incident. On account of the dry weather, that has made them poor and unable to care for stock, they are fast becoming turbulent.

It is believed that evtreme measures will be necessary to prevent trouble this winter, as the approach of cold weather is making the situation more critical.

The Cushing's Dangerous Cruise.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 17.—Torpedo boat Cushing has started on an outside trip to Washington. Her officers have laid out a straight course from Brenton's Reef lightship to Cape Charles. Some of the time she will be upwards of 100 miles from shore. She will be pushed to high speed under both boilers. Under such conditions accidents are not unlikely to occur.

The Suspicion Was Verified.

Provincetown, Mass., Dec. 17.—Mary M. Seely and Jason Hodges, of this place, were engaged to be married for forty-three years. The engagement was broken last Thursday because Jason pulled a corkscrew out of his pocket along with his handkerchief. Miss Seely says she is glad the discovery was made, because she had had her suspicion for thirty-five years.

Peruvian Rebels Bound for Lima.

Guayquil, Ecuador, Dec. 17.—Peruvian rebels are concentrating their forces in the north under command of Oswaldo Seminiro, near Guanaco, with an advanced force of mountaineers near Cerro Del Pasco, whence they claim descent on Lima will be easy.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25c. per box. For sale by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

BATTLES FOR TAXES.

Roughs Hired To Fight Outside the Tax Collector's Office.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 17.—The most unique, the most disorderly and generally accepted as the most disgraceful period of politics in the history of this city has come to a breathing pause.

Two factional democratic candidates are in the field for the mayoralty, the election taking place in January.

The two factions hired two gangs of toughs, each numbering about one hundred, including the most desperate whites and negroes of the city.

To each was given a list of six names and the money to pay their taxes with. Each morning for ten days past the two armies have slugged each other in front and inside the court house, hundreds of citizens gathering from all parts of the city daily to witness the fights.

For two weeks at least, no citizen paid taxes for himself, all entrusting their names and money to the hired heelers.

It is calculated that the cost of keeping up the two armies which in the last few days had been increased to about three hundred to fight for poll tax receipts, was over $10,000. They were disbanded early this morning.

TWO DISASTROUS WRECKS.

Thirty-eight Cars Destroyed by Fire and Collisions.

Norristown, Pa., Dec. 17.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the main line of the Reading railroad at Marion station, two miles above Bridgeport. A freight was standing on a siding, when a through freight dashed into the rear end. Thirty cars in all were wrecked. Several of them contained Chicago beef, while the remainder carried oats and coal.

The wreck took fire and the broken cars burned all day. Much of the dressed meat was taken away by the farmers in the vicinity.

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 17.—Two freight trains on the Pennsylvania railroad collided at Mill Creek, and thirteen cars an engine and caboose were wrecked.

The wreck took fire and was completely destroyed together with a large amount of merchandise.

CLEVELAND GOES HUNTING.

The President and Party Leave for a Week's Shooting in the South.

Washington, Dec. 17.—President Cleveland accompanied by Dr. O'Reilly, Captain Robley D. Evans and Mr. Charles Jefferson has left Washington for the coast of South Carolina for a hunting trip.

The trip has been in contemplation since early fall and is taken at this time in the hope that the outing will benefit the president in eradicating a remnant of the rheumatism which still lingers about him. It is expected that the party will return in about a week.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 17.—President Cleveland passed through this city on his way to Georgestown, S. C. There was quite a large crowd assembled to meet the train and cheer him.

His car was the rear one and while the train was in the depot about a hundred persons passed over the platform and shook hands with him.

WITH A FEDERAL COUNCIL.

Deputies Say the Kaiser Wants To Govern That Way.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The governor of the Zwickau district has dissolved the social democratic organization within his jurisdiction, on the ground that it is a society without the rights of a corporation. Wilhelm Stolle is the social democrat who sits in the reichstag for the constituency.

This summary action together with Minister Koeller's defiant utterances in the reichstag, are taken by many radicals and social democrats to indicate that the government is steering straight for a parliamentary conflict.

Several opposition deputies say that the emperor evidently seeks to govern with a federal council, as suggested by Counsellor Roessler in a recent pamphlet, but without a reichstag.

M'KENZIE IS DEFIANT.

Refuses To Turn Over the Office and Papers to His Successor.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 17.—The postmaster at Adrian, Minn., believes he is greater in authority than the president of the United States or the postmaster general. His name is S. J. McKenzie, and he refused to turn over the office and papers to John T. King, who has been appointed to succeed him.

Orders came direct to turn over everything to King, but, in the face of this, McKenzie refused to yield, and does not recognize King's commission as sufficient. If he holds the fort until Monday he will probably be evicted by force.

They Walked from Texas.

Newark, N. J., Charles N. Roberts, with his wife and five children have arrived here, having walked, they allege, from Browning, Texas. Roberts says he had a farm there, but that drought ruined his crops for four years and he decided to come here and find his brother, a bookbinder. They left Browning in September and have been tramping ever since.

Tried To Wreck the Limited.

Upper Sandusky, O., Dec. 17.—An attempt was made early this morning to wreck the New York & Chicago limited on the Pennsylvania railroad. The train runs fifty miles an hour through this section. Spikes were pulled from the switch and the lights blown out. The work of the wreckers was discovered just five minutes before the train arrived.

Alleged White Caps Acquitted.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 17.—The trial of the white cappers in the United State court here ended in an acquital. The jury refused to believe the testimony of the witness Ogles who swore that Paul Trammell, collector of internal revenue for Georgia, and other prominent citizens of Whitfield county were members of the gang.

Editor Shipley Dead.

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 17.—Joseph L. Shipley, ex-editor of the Union and ex-president of the New England Associated press, died here of heart failure.

Justice Gilfallin Dead.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 17.—James Gilfallin, chief justice of Minnesota, died at his residence here from a complication of kidney and liver troubles.

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirtyfifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

IT'S EASY TO GET IN,

where there's a sluggish liver, for any of the germs of disease that surround you. If your liver were active and healthy, it would keep them out of your blood. You'll have to watch your liver for self-protection.

Just as soon as you see the first symptoms that it's wrong (eruptions on the skin, or a dull and worn-out feeling) you ought to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That will start your liver into a healthy, natural action, purify your blood, too; it will brace up your whole system, and give you strength and color, and put on needed flesh—not fat, but wholesome, necessary flesh.

Milford Centre, O.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I heartily recommend your "Discovery" to any person suffering from general debility as the best thing they can take for it. After taking the "Discovery" I am happy to say I never felt better in my life than I do now.

MASO NAPONE.

A CHRISTMAS TALE BY J. COLOMB.

It had been snowing all day. Intense cold had succeeded, and the stars, shining brightly, looked down on the good old town of Nuremberg.

The people were coming out of their dwellings and walking slowly but cheerfully along the streets, not seeming to mind the crisp cold nor the deep snow under their feet. There was a murmur of voices, a rustling of garments, the sounds of doors opening and shutting, mingled with laughter and merry shouting.

The throng of people had passed on, and the voices of the bells had become mere reverberations, when a little girl about 8 years old appeared in the principal street, which was now silent and deserted. She was alone and looked so small as she walked fearlessly along, taking short steps, so as not to slip on the hard, glistening snow, and singing in a soft voice an old Christmas hymn about the angels, Bethlehem and a child asleep in a manger.

Suddenly she stopped, uttered a cry of dismay, and, falling on her knees began searching for something in the snow. She was evidently unsuccessful, however, for her sighs changed to tears, and her grief increased until it found vent in sobs.

"My money!" she cried. "My poor groschen! Oh, dear infant Jesus, bring me back my groschen!"

Like an answer to her prayer, there sounded not far off a strange, sweet melody, and she dried her eyes suddenly and looked about, half expecting to see an angel, for she thought the music must have come from heaven, so beautiful it was.

But soon she perceived a figure without wings, harp or halo, a lad about 15 years old, dressed unlike any one in Nuremberg, with dark blue breeches, a short cloak on his shoulders and a little red cap on his black hair. He carried a musical instrument and touched the strings as he glanced up at a house where a light was gleaming. The child did not understand the singer's words, and feeling sure that he was using the language of heaven she threw herself at his feet, clasped her hands and raised her eyes entreatingly to his face.

"Good angel, I pray thee," she cried, "help me to find my groschen!"

"Thy groschen, little one? What sayst thou?" he answered, speaking with a strange accent. "Why dost thou call me thy good angel—me, a poor Italian singer?"

"Is that true?" asked the child, still in doubt.

"Indeed, yes," he answered. "I saw a light in this fine house and thought that if I sang I might be offered a night's shelter, but all seems to be silent."

"Every one but the sick lady and her servant has gone to church," explained the little girl, and her hearer added:

"Then I shall go there too. And what wilt thou do?"

At this question the child, remembering her loss, began to cry again, and the lad took her hand in his, and stroking it asked gently:

"What is the trouble, little one? Tell me, and if I can help you I will." He smiled cheerily as he spoke, and the child answered:

"I have lost my money, my groschen. We never have anything nice for supper, but because it is Christmas time my mother gave me the money to buy a sausage and an apple pie, but I have dropped my groschen in the snow. We have no more, and now we can have no Christmas supper."

"Where did you drop it?" asked her listener, and when she pointed to the spot he knelt down and began turning over the snow, when he gave a cry of triumph and held up a coin in his fingers.

"Oh, you must be an angel!" cried the little girl joyfully, and he added, with a smile:

"A Florentine angel, then. My name is Maso Napone—remember it. Now, good-by. Go buy your supper."

"Not until I have been to the midnight mass," replied the girl. "My mother is ill, so I must go and pray for her."

"Then I will go with you," said Maso, taking her hand. "What is your name?"

"Christine Dachs. My mother is the Widow Gudule."

"Poor little thing! Do you remember your father?"

"Perfectly. He used to hush me to sleep by the fire every night, and sometimes I seem to feel his arms round me still. Ah, how well he loved me!"

"Your mother has to work?"

"Yes; she does beautiful embroidery. I do a little of it, but I have not learned to work very well yet. Pretty soon I shall do it better, and then mamma can rest."

"I am all alone in the world," said the youth when Christine stopped speaking. "I have no parents, no money, no home. My father's creditors took everything except my lute, so I left Florence, and now I earn a little money by singing in the streets, but I often have to sleep in the open air and without supper, but I am very strong, so I do not mind it, and I have many happy hours. Beautiful ladies call me into their houses to sing to their guests, and then I am well treated and well fed."

The little girl nodded approvingly, as if such conduct were the most natural in the world, and at that moment she and her companion reached the door of the church.

As they entered Maso doffed his hat reverentially, dipped his fingers into the holy water fount and touched them to Christine's. Then the two children knelt down in the shadow of a great pillar which rose to the high arched roof. The whole congregation joined in singing the carols, and the weak, broken voices of the aged, the silvery ones of the children, the sweet tones of the maidens, the clear high notes of the young men and the strong, deep ones of their elders combined to produce harmonies both powerful and sweet. Maso could not keep silence. Suddenly his voice rose above the rest, and it was so full, so clear and so sweet that every one near turned to look at him. A tall man wrapped in a great cloak left his place, and coming nearer to the lad listened attentively, with his eyes fixed upon Maso's face as long as he continued to sing. Neither of the children noticed the stranger.

"Poor me!" Maso thought. "No one on earth loves me; no one cares what becomes of me. If I should die tonight, there would be not one to shed a tear for me. I am all alone. This little girl who mistook me for an angel will return to her home and receive her mother's kiss, but I do not know what a mother is. I would give anything to have one kiss me."

Tears filled his eyes without his knowing it, and Christine, seeing them, said to herself:

"He is crying. Then he is not an angel. Poor boy, how I pity him! He is so lonely!"

A few moments later the boy and the girl were outside the church again.

"Why were you crying?" asked Christine, and the lad replied:

"I was thinking how sad it was to have no mother. God grant you may long have yours, little one! Do not look so sorry, but come and let us buy your supper in one of these shops. See, I am not sad now!" He led her into a provision shop, and not allowing her to spend her only coin purchased ham, fruit and pastry for her, and then, seeing that she shivered in the cold night air, he took off his own cloak and put it round her shoulders. "Now I will take you home," he said, and when they reached her door she asked wistfully: "Will you not come in and have supper with us, as if you were my brother? Mamma will be so glad!"

Maso followed her in and was welcomed by the Widow Gudule. While they sat at supper Maso told them of his childhood's home in Italy, which had been opulent, but sad, because motherless, of his father's ruin and death and of his own wanderings.

"And so, mother, he sings. You should hear him! The angels in heaven have not sweeter voices," exclaimed Christine, and the lad, taking up his lute, struck the chords lightly, then began to sing, while the mother and daughter listened with clasped hands and tearful eyes. As soon as he stopped there was a knock at the door. Christine opened it fearlessly, for there was nothing in that poor home for robbers. Outside stood the tall man who had been in church. He recognized the child and smiled as he said:

"My dear, I want to speak to your brother, who has just been singing."

"He is not my brother," said Christine, surprised.

"No? Well, it does not matter. I want to see the lad who was in church with you. Tell him Master Kriegwinckel wants him a minute."

This man was one of the most celebrated musicians of that time, not only in Munich, where he lived, but throughout the music loving world. Little Christine, however, knew nothing about him, and thinking that the stranger merely wished to compliment Maso upon his singing she bade him enter. He bowed politely to the widow and then addressed Maso, saying:

"You have a beautiful voice, my lad, an unusually fine one. I am an old man, but I have seldom heard such a voice as yours. You understand what you sing, too, and you love music. You have all the makings of a great artist, but—you do not know how to sing!"

"That is because I have never been taught," said Maso sadly and humbly.

"I observed that. It is not your fault, and it can be remedied. How old are you?"

"Fifteen on Candlemas day."

"Very good. I have a proposition to make you. Have you relatives?"

"None. I am all alone."

"Better still. I will take charge of you. I will take you back to Munich with me. I will teach you music and singing, and in three or four years—you will see! Kings and princes will invite you to come to court and sing for them, and I shall have the honor of giving the world another great musician. Perhaps you have heard of me. I am Kriegwinckel, leader of the choir in Munich."

Maso bowed low, for having always been interested in musical matters, and ever on the watch for new songs, he had heard of Master Kriegwinckel and had often sung his compositions.

"I would be only too happy, master," he stammered, "but I am obliged to earn my living. I have nothing"—

"You will not need money. I will treat you as my own son, and you will earn a great deal more than your living when I have taught you music. It is agreed, is it not? Ah, it was not for nothing that I watched you in the church, followed you out, and after losing sight of you in the crowd searched for you until I heard your voice through that window, but I must leave Nuremberg tonight. Come."

The boy took up his cloak and lute, saying: "Goodby, Christine! I will come back some day. Do not forget me."

The girl clung to his arm and whispered: "I shall never forget you. I thought at first that you were an angel, because you sang like one and were as good as one. I will love you all my life."

Eight years passed.

The Christmas bells were ringing merrily, and the people, coming out of their houses to attend the midnight mass, greeted each other with Christmas wishes. Among the throng there was none who received more salutes and friendly smiles than an elderly woman who leaned upon the arm of a beautiful young girl, tall and slender as a reed. By the light of the torch she carried the girl's bright blue eyes, rosy cheeks and golden hair were seen, and every passer looked at her with admiration.

Young girls nodded with a friendly air; apprentices, students and more than one young gentleman in velvet cap and embroidered doublet bowed respectfully to the mother and daughter.

These two were but simple working people, yet all Nuremberg honored them. Every one knew that Dame Gudule Dachs, when left a widow with her child to bring up and her husband's debts to pay, had set about bravely to perform the task, and become the most successful embroiderer in the town, her daughter had soon grown celebrated for her taste in designing new patterns, and now the widow owed nothing and could hardly fill all the orders she received from the richest ladies in the land. The poor and the suffering well knew the way to Widow Gudule's door, and the fair Christine was never happier than when attending to their wants. It was thought that Christine had dedicated herself to God and would soon take the veil, for if she did not mean to be a nun why was she so indifferent to the tender glances, sighs and words of the young men?

As the people entered the church the organ's peals rose to the vaulted roof, and Widow Gudule, kneeling at Christine's side, heard her murmured prayer: "Sweet Saviour Jesus, protect him! Bring him back to us that I may tell him I have not forgotten him!"

The mother smiled sadly, for she had had experience of the world, and she knew that, with young persons, remembrance often fades.

Suddenly, just as the priest turned round to administer communion to the faithful, a voice in the choir rose above the organ's strains, and Christine's face was transfigured as she whispered, "It is he!"

Oh, that beautiful voice, powerful, impassioned, yet as sweet as if it came straight from heaven!

"Glory to God in the highest and peace on earth," it sang, and Christine, carried out of herself as she listened, wept softly and wondered whether it were not indeed an angel's voice. With a saddened look in her soft eyes she followed her mother out of the church, casting a wistful, timid glance up the dark winding staircase which led to the choir, and the widow, who also had recognized the voice, hurried her daughter away. When they reached the street, no strange figure was to be seen, except a tall man wrapped in a handsome cloak and wearing a gold embroidered cap which glistened in the moonlight. When the two women arrived at their home, this person stepped quickly up, and with a bow said:

"Merry Christmas to you, Dame Gudule! Merry Christmas, Miss Christine! Will you let the Florentine singer share your supper once again?"

"I knew he would come, mother!" cried Christine, and the widow, in spite of her misgivings, almost against her will added:

"He is welcome, as before."

They all entered the house, and when the girl had lighted the candles on the supper table she was astonished to see that the slender stripling had become a strong, handsome man, who looked at her with smiling admiration. Her simple yet well fitting gown showed off her graceful figure to advantage. While she filled his glass Maso said to her, "One might take you for an angel now."

Then he related how Master Kriegwinckel had brought him up and taught him and been a father to him. The old man was dead now, and Maso once more traveled about to earn his living by singing. But he went as a great artist, not a poor vagabond. Kings and princes wrote asking him to come and sing to them, just as the master had predicted. He was rich and honored, and yet he was not happy, for he was alone.

"Dame Gudule," he added after a pause, "you once gave me a mother's kiss. Will you now accept me as your son? Will you let me ask Christine if she remembers her promise?"

"I remember," murmured the girl, while her mother smiled and nodded.

"You promised not to forget me and to love me all your life," he said, taking her hand. "I have always thought of you, and I love you, Christine, my little Christmas rose! Sweetheart, will you be my wife?"

"I knew you would come back," was all her answer.—Short Stories.

A. M. ROSS DEAD.

SUDDENLY EXPIRES AT HIS HOME ON GRANT AVENUE.

Apoplexy the Cause of Death—Universal Regret Throughout the City.

A shock was caused to all Plainfield this afternoon by the distressing news that Alexander M. Ross had suddenly died at his home on Grant avenue.

Mr. Ross had not been feeling well the past week, and this morning he kept to his bed. About noon he was seized with apoplexy, and passed quickly away.

He leaves a wife, daughter of Charles Potter, Jr., and an infant son. His mother is still living at a ripe old age at West 52d street, New York, and he leavee two sisters, Miss Carrie and Mrs. Hill.

He was a most popular young man, and wisely used the large wealth of which he was possessed. He was a most substantial citizen whose untimely death is deplored by all.

Mr. Ross had just passed his birthday anniversary celebration last Sabbath.

Fire in Battle Row.

The alarm at 9:40 this morning called the department to a blaze in the tenement house on West Fourth street near Plainfield avenue, known as Battle Row (owned by A. W. Haviland), which caught in the floor under a stove on the second story. The centre portion of the structure was thoroughly flooded, but compartively little damage was done. Several poor families (all uninsured) living in the block were thoroughly washed out. One of the fire horses broke his bit while tearing down Park avenue in answer to the call, but he was caught by Mr. Gunther of VanZandt's feed store, the bit adjusted, and galloped to the scene of action. Once more the impossibility of getting the hook and ladder truck through the streets left in such execrable condition by the Sewer company, was demonstrated. The Truck was stuck fast in Sixth street and had to pull over to Seventh street in order to proceed, thereby losing valuable time. Should a fire occur in any of the streets operated by the contractors this condition of things might be brought home to our citizens in a most unpleasant manner.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

BY LEETA SMYTH.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

From a window of a crowded apartment house situated in the business district of a great city a woman with a pale, wistful face was looking down into the street below.

In spite of her shabby black dress, there was an aristocratic air about the tall figure which impressed one that she was a lady born, and in the face now worn with years of sorrow could be detected traces of what must once have been a radiant beauty.

It was Christmas eve, and the street was filled with persons hurrying to their various homes after the last day of holiday shopping. Heavily laden express carts were rattling noisily over the cobblestones, and groups of small urchins were adding to the festive din by tooting lustily on their ear splitting Christmas horns.

But the pale woman at the window neither saw nor heard all this confusion. Her thoughts were in the faraway past, when Christmas eve in the luxurious home of her childhood used to be the gladdest time of all the year. But now she glanced hastily around the small bare room and shuddered to think of the terrible change. If only she could have bought a few trifling gifts for the children! But she had not been able to spare a penny from her small earnings, and this year dear, faithful Tony must go unrewarded and 6-year-old Kathie's strong confidence in Santa Claus be shaken forever.

Just then the door was pushed open, and her sad reverie was interrupted by the entrance of two children, a tiny girl with a mass of golden hair framing a very excited little face and a dark eyed boy about 2 years her senior.

"Mamma, mamma," the fairy cried, rushing to her mother and throwing both arms about her neck, "Tony and me have a be-yu-ti-ful plan, just be-yu-ti-ful! Tony read about it in a book, and we want to do it—to sing carols tonight under people's windows."

The mother drew a quick breath.

"And then when they open the door to find us we'll run away, just like the children in the story."

Ah, then her children had not yet thought of begging at strange doors, and they wanted to follow out the beautiful old English custom simply for the fun and novelty!

"And, mother," Tony was saying in his grave way, "perhaps they'll think it's an angel when Kathie sings, she can make her voice so soft."

The mother smiled. Her little daughter's truly wonderful voice was a great delight to her, and she hoped some day to have it carefully trained.

Yes, she would give her consent to the frolic, and all through the scanty evening meal the children chatted like veritable magpies. Then, clad in their plain, warm wraps, they set out after bidding their mother a merry goodby.

Hand in hand they hurried through the crowded streets, past the rows of brilliantly lighted shops, gay with holly and evergreens, not making a stop until they reached a wide avenue, where the shops gave way to handsome private houses.

"Now, Kathie," Tony whispered by way of a signal, "'While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks.'" And a moment later the childish voices were ringing on the frosty air in clear, sweet treble. Before they could run away, as the story had said was the proper thing to be done, a group of children appeared at one of the richly curtained windows, and catching sight of the little singers out in the snow beckoned to them to come in. Tony shook his head and called out gayly that they were Christmas children and didn't mind the cold. Then, clasping hands more tightly, they ran on.

House after house was roused by the clear little voices, and coins were offered, but Tony always refused the money, saying that they were Christmas children, and that seemed to explain their situation perfectly, for no one pressed them further.

"Let's don't sing any more after this one," Kathie said as they paused before a large, imposing house of somber brownstone, "'cause I'm very tired."

"All right, Kit, so brace up for the last and do your best. Let's sing 'Hark, the Herald Angels!"

"You begin it, you know." And Tony, who acted in the double capacity of business manager and choir master, gave the note, and Kathie began.

In the handsomely furnished library of the house before which the children stood an old man was sitting alone before a great open fire. He knew that it was Christmas eve, but the fact did not seem to make him particularly happy, for his face was drawn and haggard, as though he were being tormented by his own thoughts. Some one had wished him a "merry Christmas" that evening, and the old man laughed bitterly.

"Merry Christmas," he half muttered. "When have I seen a Christmas that was anything but a torment since"— And his mind went back to a Christmas eve just ten years ago. Ah, those were merry Christmases in the old years when Katherine was a child with long golden hair! What was it that she sang every time before she explored the mysterious stocking? Oh, yes, he remembered it well—

"Hark, the herald angels sing!"

Was he dreaming, or was it really his darling's voice that broke the stillness of the winter night? He listened intently. Faintly the air of the old anthem came to him. Then, as his ear grew accustomed to the voice, he caught each word distinctly, "'Glory to the newborn King.'" The sound came from the street, and the old man rose from his armchair and walked noiselessly to the window. Hiding himself among the heavy folds of the hangings, he gazed eagerly out into the snowy avenue.

Two tots of children were standing directly in front of the house. One, the smaller of the two, a girl with bright curls, as he saw by the friendly light of the street lamp, was singing with all her small might. And such a voice! It made him think of the "herald angels," about whom she sang, or, better still, of Katherine.

He waited until the carol was ended, and then raising the sash called out in a persuasive tone, "Little ones, will you come here," and as the children hesitated he added: "Don't be afraid. I only want to speak to you a moment." And a little later Tony and his sister were standing before the old man in the great wide hall.

"I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed the anthem that you have been singing out there in the cold and to ask you if you won't come tomorrow and sing it for me again. I used to have a little girl like you," touching Kathie's hair softly as he spoke, "who sang it every Christmas day."

"Did she?" Kathie asked, looking up at the grim old man with a genuine interest in her big blue eyes. "Why, that's just what my mamma used to do when she was a little girl, isn't it, Tony?"

Tony, who, unlike his sister, disliked to speak of what he termed family "'fairs" before strangers, simply nodded and was about to say that they would be very glad to come in the morning when their host of five minutes, leaning eagerly forward, exclaimed in a hoarse voice: "Your mother, children? Who is she? Who are you?"

Half frightened by the change that had come over the old man's face, Tony answered wonderingly, "We are mamma's children, Kathie and Tony, and mamma is Mrs. Anthony Girvin." The suddenness of the discovery was too great to be borne calmly, and the old man trembled like a palsied person as he rang the bell for a servant. "Tell John," he said when the domestic appeared, "to have the carriage ready immediately." Then, turning to the puzzled children, he said in a voice that he tried in vain to steady: "Little ones, your mother was the little girl who used to sing for me years ago. Will you take me to her, for I want to go tonight?"

It was years before that his daughter Katherine had come up behind him one evening, and putting her arms about his neck told him with an unwonted shyness that she had that day promised to be Anthony Girvin's wife, and he, enraged that his idol should be willing to marry a poor musician, who, though good and talented, was guilty of being in moderate circumstances—he, the fond, affectionate father—had broken from the soft embrace and commanded her—yes, he had used that very word—to break her promise or to leave his house forever. And how proudly she had towered above him in her tall beauty as she utterly refused to comply with his commands, because—and the words were galling to the father—because she loved Anthony Girvin more than the whole world. "Then show your devotion to this pauper and go!" he had shouted, little dreaming that he would be so promptly obeyed, for, with a slight bending of the beautiful head, she had gone from the room, and when with a half formed fear he went to find her a note on her dressing table told him that "her 'devotion to this pauper' was proved, for she had left her father's house forever." The torturing remorse that followed almost drove him insane, and when he was convinced that all search for his daughter's whereabouts was vain he had settled down to an almost entirely secluded life, which was in its very nature a living death.

* * * * * * *

Tony always persists that they owe their present happy life to Kathie's fondness for discussing family matters, but Kathie herself and Kathie's idolizing grandfather lay it all to the old Christmas carol.

MERRY XMAS.

Tuesday Is Unpropitious.

Tuesday is an unlucky day for Christmas, which fact interests us this year sufficiently to reproduce this verse:

If Christmas day on Tuesday be,
That year shall many women die,
And that winter grow great marvels;
Ships shall be in great perils;
That year shall kings and lords be slain,
And many other people near them;
A dry summer that year shall be
As all that are born therein may see;
They shall be strong and covetous.
If thou steal aught, thou losest thy life,
For thou shalt die through sword or knife,
But if thou fall sick 'tis certain
Thou shalt turn to life again.

Great honors are great burthens, but on whom
They are cast with envy he doth bear two loads.
His cares must still be double to his joys
In any dignity.
—Ben Jonson.

Mr. Gladstone's formal denial of the report that he is about to take holy orders seems to indicate that the Grand Old Man isn't very busy nowadays.—Boston Herald.

Mr. Gladstone denies the story that he is to take holy orders. It is sufficient for him that he should be known as the Grand Old Man without the additional distinction of Good Old Man.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Messina was the first to bring the secrets of the oil painting of the Netherlands to Italy. He studied with the Eycks about the middle of the fifteenth century, and after returning to Italy introduced the improved methods in the use of oils.

The first Christmas carol, as Milton and Jeremy Taylor have said, was sung by the angels on the plains of Bethlehem. This custom has prevailed in most Christian countries and is perpetuated in England and on the continent. Calabrian minstrels still leave their mountains during the last days preceding Christmas for Naples or Rome, saluting with their wild music the shrines of the Virgin Mother, to cheer her until the birth hour of the infant Jesus, now near at hand. The first Christmas carols were hymns in honor of the nativity. They afterward assumed a more secular character, many of them being songs of revelry accompanying the festivities of the season.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at L. W. Randolph's Drug store.

How It Impressed Him.

The man from the west who had made his pile rapidly in mining was making a tour of the country, and in New York one of his bankers entertained him at dinner at the club with several other guests. It was shortly after Paderewski's latest appearance and the conversation went that way for a short time.

"Did you ever hear Paderewski?" inquired the banker of his guest.

"Is he the one that thumps the piano forty?" replied the guest.

"Yes."

"You bet I heard him. I put up ten dollars for two tickets on that occasion."

"He's a great artist," said the banker in a matter-of-course tone of voice.

"So the man told me that sold me the tickets."

"And what did you think of him?"

"Well," and the westerner was very confident, "I heard him do everything that was on the bill of fare, and after he got done I thought he ought to have his hair cut."—Detroit Free Press.

Sunshine.

Whenever the soul grows weary,
And the world seems full of sin,
Just open the casement window,
And let the sunshine in.

The beautiful, laughing sunshine,
Dancing o'er land and sea,
Filling the earth with gladness,
God's rarest gift to thee.

Then keep the heart filled with sunshine
'Twill drive out malice and strife,
'Twill soften and lighten each sorrow,
'Twill sweeten and purify life.

A POVERTY SOCIABLE.

Fines Imposed for Wearing Linen Collars and Polished Shoes.

A "poverty sociable" was held recently in Montclair, N. J., at the residence of E. B. Colby.

The originators were the young people of the First Baptist Church. The ladies wore plain garments, and many young men wore bicycle suits or other athletic costumes. There were cast iron rules, and they were rigidly enforced by the judges.

At about 9 o'clock the Rev. W. N. Hubbell, the pastor of the church, entered, and the judges promptly fined him five cents for wearing a linen collar. The pastor, however, turned the collar up, and there, written in ink, were the words, "Borrowed from Mr. Colby." The fine was remitted. Then he was fined two cents for his linen cuffs, whereupon the cuffs were turned and these words appeared, "Borrowed from Mr. Kairns.

A dispute arose, however, whether the it was a case of true "borrowment" or a gift, and finally the pastor was fined ten cents, presumably for false pretences.

The Judges fined Harding Benedict ten cents for wearing a linen shirt.

"I deny the allegation," said Mr. Harding, and upon investigation the supposed linen bosom was found to be cardboard, and then the judges fined him fifty cents for deception.

While Gifford Sutton was being examined by the judges as a suspect he bolted to the garret, but was brought down and fined fifty cents, levied for contumaciousness.

One lady who appeared at the sociable in full dress was fined $10. Another lady was fined for wearing diamonds. Two young men were fined for flirting. For wearing polished shoes many fines were collected. The sum of the fines collected was $75, which went to the church.

GEN. BOOTH AND THE CZAR.

Leaders of the Salvation Army Look for Permission to Enter Russia.

The members of the Salvation Army here are very highly pleased with the courteous and kindly reply which the new Czar of Russia has made to the telegraphic dispatch of congratulation send to him from London by Gen. Booth.

Some of them take this unexpected reply as an indication that Nicholas II. will be more favorable to the salvationists than his father was. They even think that the Salvation Army may hereafter be allowed to organize and operate in the great northern empire. Up to this time it has not been permitted to enter Russia, and even the name of Booth has been interdicted by the press censor.

The sanguine opinions entertained by many Salvationists here are wholly discredited by an officer of the Army who is well acquainted with the Russian system. He says that the new Czar's reply to Gen. Booth was merely of a perfunctory nature, resembling hundreds of other acknowledgements made in his name of the congratulations which he had received. The Salvation officer adds that it would be impossible for bodies of uniformed religionists to march up and down Russia blowing trumpets, singing hymns, holding mass meetings, and preaching in the streets. It would be in violation of established Russian law, the authority of the Greek Church, the police methods, the customs of the people and the peace of the country.

It is probable, however, that some of the English members of the Salvation Army will soon petition the new Czar for permission to enter Russia, in order to render service in the line of "rescue work" such as is not performed by the Orthodox Church, and has never been attempted by the ecclesiastical authorities.

THIS MONDAY EVENING.

Vano the medical wonder-worker will address ladies only on a subject of vast importance and illustrate his remarks with beautiful stereopticon pictures. Every lady who can possibly do so, should attend this lecture, as they will see and hear things entirely new to them.

Tuesday evening, address to men only, when matters of great interest and value to all men, old and young, will be presented. Vano and company will continue their lectures, entertainments and marvellous cures of rheumatic cripples, and those afflicted with chronic diseases of any nature, all this week, and give everybody an opportunity to test their treatment and wonderful remedies.

The following letter was received today from a clergyman at Philadelphia, Pa., and is only one of a thousand of like nature now in possession of Prof. Vano.

"Enclose please find express money order $30, send this amount of your remedies for two members of our church, suffering as I was before I met you a month ago. You will remember my case, as I told you I had been unable to attend to my pastoral duties for two months, being broken down in health and spirits from overwork. I was in about the last stage of nervous exhaustion. Had been under medical treatment for months, but continued to get steadily worse. I met you, you assured me you could cure me, and as a last hope I took your remedies, followed your advice, and to my surprise and gratification began to improve at once, and today am practically well and able to resume my duties. The whole world should know of you and your treatment. Our church consists of nearly one thousand members many of whom are greatly in need of your treatment, and I am sure I can influence them to try your remedies and obtain the same benefit I have."

Yours faithfully

GENERAL GRANT.

How Near His Personal Memoirs Came to be Lost.

A Valuable History Written by a Dying Man.—Proper Nourishment Enabled the Author to Live Until the Completion of His Book.

The fortitude shown by General Grant in writing the second volume of his personal memoirs while he was literally on his deathbed, excels even the remarkable courage exhibited by this famous soldier in his many achievements on the field of battle.

Col. Fred Grant, speaking of his father's last illness, says:—

"During the last four months of his sickness, the principal food of my father, Gen. Grant, was Bovinine and milk; and it was the use of this incomparable food alone that enabled him to finish the second volume of his personal memoirs."

Dr. T. H. Douglas, Gen. Grant's physician and friend, cordially indorsed the above statement.

What Bovinine did for Gen. Grant it has done, and is now doing, for thousands every day. It is the most wonderful concentration into a small bulk of all the life-giving, muscle, flesh, and blood-making elements of lean, raw meat ever produced.

It is in no way a medicine, simply a food invigorant, that by its strengthening qualities gives the worn-out or disordered vital centres of the body an impetus that again starts them performing their natural functions.

It is indorsed by eminent physicians everywhere, and blessed by thousands whose lives it has actually saved.

To neglect to use this wonderful food in all cases of debility, wasting diseases, overwork, stomach and nerve diseases, or for weak infants, chronic invalids, loss of vitality in old age, is to throw away one of the greatest chances of saving life.

CONFIRM THE HORRORS

Missionaries Also Tell of the Armenian Massacre.

Employes of the American Board of Foreign Missions State That Between Six and Ten Thousand Native Christians Were Killed—Presents to the Slaughterers.

Boston, Dec. 17.—Further advices are received confirming stories of the massacre of Christian Armenians in the Sassoun district. These latest tales come to the American board of foreign missions, which has missionaries on the ground. The board has issued a statement concerning the massacre, which is in part as follows:

"In the Sassoun region, south of the Moush plain, there are, or recently were, many villages inhabited by Armenians. These people were systematically robbed of their flocks by Koords, and in the latter part of the summer the Armenians pursued the robbers in the endeavor to recover their property.

"In the fight which ensued a dozen of these Koords were killed, among whom were some enrolled as Turkish soldiers. When information was given that the Armenians had killed some of the sultan's troops, the charge of rebellion was made and orders were sent to put down the insurrection.

"The result was that these lawless and uncontrollable soldiers made indiscriminate slaughter of the people who had sought to defend their property. In the horrible massacre which followed, thousands were slain, some state 6,000 others 10,000. The details of this wretched affair are not obtainable even by those near the scene. The people are in terror and dare not state the truth unless under protection.

"A document has been prepared near the scene of the carnage, purporting to give the judgment of the people that the thousand slain in Tulvereag met their just deserts, and expressing regret that it has been thought best to send consuls to investigate since there was no need for their coming. The value of such a document will be understood when the methods for securing signatures are known.

"But such investigations should be made vigorously either to relieve the government from unjust charges, if the statements are incorrect, or, if they should be proven, to bring about the condign punishment of the guilty parties.

"Papers from Constantinople, printed in that city and entirely under the control of the Turkish censors of the press, announce that the sultan has sent one of his imperial guards to the city of Erzingan, in eastern Turkey, to carry a decoration to Zeki Pasha, the commander of the fourth army corps which is located there. Zeki Pasha is the military commander who led the troops against the defenceless villagers of the Sassoun region at the time of the massacre.

"Another envoy carries also four banners from the sultan to the four leading Koordish chiefs who were associated with the military commander in the massacre and who probably were the instigators of it. By this act the sultan seems to assume all the responsibility of what has been done.

"We cannot doubt that the European powers will attend to their duty, but the winter is not a favorable time for visiting eastern Turkey where the snows are often from eight to twelve feet deep. Time and patience will be required."

THE TEST THAT FAILED.

Carnegie Armor Plate Not Up to the Government Standard.

Washington, Dec. 17.—All of the members of the senate naval committee were very chary to-day of expressing an opinion on the Carnegie armor plate test at the Indian Head proving grounds. The test resulted in cracking the plate and, according to inspector of ordnance courtis, it showed the plate to be the weakest of the lot cast for the Oregon.

A rigid interpretation of the armor specifications would require the rejection of this plate and necessitate the successful trial of another plate before the $275,000 worth of armor could be accepted. As Secretary Herbert agreed to waive any cracks that appeared in the recent test of a Bethelehem plate, provided these cracks did not originate in flaws or other imperfections of the plate and the shot were kept out, it is thought probable that he may, after all, except the Carnegie plate.

A Battle with Tramps.

Passaic, N. J., 17.—While Policemen Flynn and Lockwood were chasing a gang of ten tramps out of the city, along the Susquehanna railroad, one of them fired a revolver at Flynn. The bullet passed through Flynn's helmet an inch above his head. The policemen fired at the tramps and wounded two of them. One of them, George Woodland of Scranton, Pa., was captured and sent to jail.

Parliament Not To Dissolve.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 17.—The report that there would be a dissolution of parliament after the cabinet was reorganized, is altogether premateur. Until Mr. Bowell has formed his cabinet nothing can be done in this connection. The chances are that if he succeeds he will call a session before parliament dissolves.

Killed in Buenos Ayres.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Information has been received here that David McKee Russell, of this city, who went to Buenos Ayres four years ago under contract with the principal bank note engraving company of South America, died in that city recently from injuries received by falling under a train of cars.

Burned an Egg Warehouse.

Jarvis, Ont., Dec. 17.—Fire last night destroyed Wills & Jones' cold storage warehouse, which was filled with eggs, and also the adjoining building. Loss $115,000.

Will Contest Rusk's Seat.

Baltimore, Dec. 1.—Dr. William Booke has retained counsel and will contest the election of Harry Welles Rusk to the house of representatives.

DEBT CAUSED HER DEED.

Mrs. Ida Notsen, Who Killed Herself and Children, Left a Letter.

New York, Dec. 17.—A special from Omaha, Neb., says: The work of dragging the river for the bodies of Mrs. Ida Notsen and her two children, who disappeared Dec. 8, was given up last night. No trace of them was found.

The following letter, dated the day before the disappearance, was made public by John Rush, president of the Nebraska Savings bank:

"Before leaving the world and taking my children with me I want to make this statement, in justice to my friends. I leave the world so that my oldest life insurance, which has become nonforfeitable, may be collected and pay my debts. John Rush is my executor.

"After he has discharged his duties in paying every cent I owe, the remainder is to be applied to the mortgage on my mother's home. My mother has done everything for me, and this is my last chance to do something for her.

"I am glad to go. I have tried for three years and a half to get out of debt. This fall I have made some serious miscauculations, having left my school work to combine publishing work and political work. I risked all that I had and lost. I have meant to wrong no one. Will God forgive me this dreadful step? I will take my children with me. In a short time my family will be happier than if I remained."

Mrs. Notsen's insurance was for $6,000. Her will leaves everything to her husband, including the life insurance policy for $6,000.

SAVED BY A HERO.

Engineer Lloyd Stood at His Post Until Every Man Was Rescued.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 17.—The Stevens colliery in west Pittston, operated by Jenkins & Co., was the scene of considerable excitement here. The engineer, Thomas Lloyd, discovered that the engine house was on fire. He ran to the telephone and gave the alarm in the mine. The footman at the bottom of the shoft told the miners. By this time the flames had surrounded the engineer on all sides. He patiently awaited the signal to hoist the men to the surface. At last he got the signal, and brought up the cage with lightnig speed. Eighteen men were aboard. The carriage was then returned to the mine. On this trip ten men were brought up. The side of the building now collapsed and the burning timber fell all around the brave engineer, who still held the lever. At last the remaining men got on the cage and in a few minutes all were brought to the suraface safely. The engineer fainted but was quickly rescued. He was badly burned about the face and hands, but will recover.

STEVENSON IS DEAD.

The Great Novelist at Rest in a Mountain Tomb.

Auckland, New Zealand, Dec. 17.—Advices from Apia, Samoa, of the date of Dec. 8, are to the effect that the well-known nevelist, Robert Louis Stevenson, had died suddenly from apoplexy.

His remains were interred on the summit of Pala mountain, 1,300 feet high. At the time of his death Mr. Stevenson had half completed the writing of a new novel.

Robert Louis Balfour Stevenson was born in Edinburgh, Nov. 13, 1850. He was educated at private schools and at the University of Edinburgh, and was called to the Scottish bar, but traveled and devoted himself to literature.

POISONED 150 PERSONS.

Arsenic Was in the Rolls and Those Who Ate Them Were Stricken.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—Great excitement has been caused at Freiberg, Saxony, by what appears on its face to be either criminal negligence or a wholesale attempt at poisoning. One hundred and fifty persons were suddenly stricken with all the symptoms attending poisoning.

An investigation showed that all had partaken of rolls from a certain bake shop, and an analysis revealed that the rolls contained arsenic. One child has died from the effects of the poison. The family of the baker who sold the rolls did not ecape, some of the members being quite ill. An inquiry has been opened.

Killed the Girl's Brother.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 17.—At Pearce's Mills, Marion county, a difficulty occurred between Ben Howell and Ed Cochran at the house of Miss Rawles. They had gone to call on the young woman and had a falling out. They met upon the porch of the house and a fight with knives ensued. Will Rawles, brother of the girl, rushed out and stepped between the combatants just in time to receive a deadly wound, a knife being plunged into his heart. Each combatant charges the other with the act.

Thieves Robbed the Miser.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 17.—A robbery with most sensational details is reported, from the town of Edinboro, to have taken place within two miles of that place, in Washington township. David Slocum and his wife have a reputation of being miserly. About midnight four men heavily armed entered the house and demanded their money. The old couple refused to reveal its hiding place. After a long search the robbers discovered the money in an old trunk. They secured nearly $10,000.

Spain's Ministry One Short.

London, Dec. 17.—A dispatch from Madrid says that as a result of an interview Prime Minister Sagasta had with the queen regent the resignation of Senor Salvador, minister of finance, was accepted. Her majesty would accept no other changes in the ministry.

Cousin of Webster Kills Himself.

Piano, Ill., Dec. 17.—Ex-Mayor D. W. Webster shot and killed himself here. His body was found eight hours afterward. He lived alone. He was a cousin of Daniel Webster. No cause can be given for the act.

Hayti's Orders Dishonored.

New York, Dec. 17.—A special cable from Port au Prince, Hayti, says: The banks refused to pay orders of the government. French gunboats have arrived here.

Will Have a Garden.

REPLIED WITH BULLETS

Bank Officials Shot by an Accused Employe.

Clerk Huntington Was Charged with the Theft of a $500 Check When He Drew a Revolver and Began Firing—Two Officials Shot—Suicide of the Embezzler.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Dec. 17.—John Huntington, remittance clerk in the Citizens state bank of this city has shot and seriously wounded F. N. Hayden, of Chicago and A. Cromwell of Minneapolis, respectively superintendent and inspector of the Fidelity and Casualty company of New York, and then committed suicide, shooting himself through the head in the private office of the bank.

There was a shortage in the bank accounts of $500, and this caused the act. The shortage dates from last July. On the 19th of that month four $500 checks passed into the Citizens bank. Only three of those checks have ever been accounted for. The first the cashier of the bank, a C. R. Hannon, knew of the matter was about the 15th to the 20th of August, when his book-keeper, Mr. Roff, called his attention to the fact that there was a difference of $400 between the statements of the Citizens and the Union Stock Yards bank of South Omaha.

Written and telephone correspondence with the South Omaha bank followed, developing the statement from the latter bank that it had never been advised of the receipt of this item. Huntington's records showed this item as a cashier's check.

The discount clerk, Mr. Buckman, was sent to Omaha to ascertain from the First National bank whether a cashier's check had been issued by the Union Stock Yards bank at the date of the check in question, July 12 and not returned. The record of the South Omaha bank showed three items of $500 issued on the date mentioned and still out. All these were traced and were found not to come near Council Bluffs.

A further delay was made in the hope that the item might have been missent in the mail and might have been received by some of the correspondent banks of the Citizens bank throughout the country. When the reports from these banks were all in no information had been received to throw light on the shortage. No trace of the missing item could be found.

A constant investigation was kept up, and finally when the directors met Cashier Hannon reported the matter to them. Every employe of the bank was under bond signed by the Fidelity & Casualty company, and by instruction of the directors, information of the shortage was sent to the company, which sent to this city F. N. Hayden, of Chicaga, and A. Cromwell, of Minneapolis, to ascertain the truth. They arrived here Friday and began the investigation. The circumstantial evidence was naturally largely against Huntington, and he was the first subject of inquiry. He was called into private interview with the officials of the bank and the representatives of the company. It happened that the shortage occurred the day before Huntington left for a vacation last summer, and he was questioned as to the money he spent at the time and where he got it. He stated Saturday that he borrowed from his sister, but could not remember the amount.

He stated that while in New York, he gave his brother, whom he was visiting, a check on the Citizens bank for $40 or $45.

Huntington met the representatives of the bonding company and Messrs. Edmundson and Hannon at the bank building, he was there when the gentlemen came in. He was sitting at his desk talking with another clerk who was at work.

Huntington walked to the front of the bank from behind the wire screen, and went into the back room. It transpired that he first went to a drawer of one of the receiving tellers, Mr. Spooner, and took from a drawer a 44-calibre Colt's revolver, which it is customary to have handy.

He went with the other gentlemen into the rear office and the inquiry which had been begun the previous day was resumed. It had been continued about fifteen minutes, when without warning Huntington drew his revolver and began firing.

The first three shots were fired at Cromwell, who had taken the lead in the interrogation, and all three took effect.

The fourth struck Hayden, and then Huntington raised the weapon to his own head and fired. He fell to the floor unconscious and so remained until his death.

The two wounded men ran out of the bank, down First avenue, and in the Grand hotel, blood dripping from them at every step. Cromwell will probably lose the use of his right hand, on account of a stiffening of the wrist joint as a result of the fracture of the bones.

Hayden's wound is not considered dangerous, but a variation of half an inch would have killed him. The bullet that took Huntington's life entered the skull just behind the ear and lodged back of the right eye.

Eloped with White Girls.

Winfield, Kan., Dec. 17.—Two Osage Indian boys, Hank and Charles Mashaw, attending the business college here, eloped with two white girls who are sisters. They were headed for the Osage nation, and expected to get annual payments. They were stopped at Dexter, twenty miles from here, and brought back. They say they will marry the girls.

Debs Will Appeal.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Eugene Debs and his associates on the board of directors of the railway union will take an appeal from the jail sentence of Judge Woods early next week. This was decided upon last night at a meeting of their counsel.

Ready for Morton.

Albany, Dec. 17.—All the arrangements for the inauguration of Governor-elect Morton have been completed and the affair promises to be one of the simplest of its kind ever witnessed.

A CHILD'S CHRISTMAS DAY.

SIX A. M.

He opens his eyes, with a cry of delight.
There's a toyshop all round him, a wonderful sight!
The fairies have certainly called in the night.

EIGHT A. M.

They are quiet at first—both the girls and the boys,
Too happy to make any riot or noise,
And they mentally show to each other their toys.

SIX P. M.

But see! In the nursery a terrible racket!
The dolls lose their heads, there are rents in each jacket,
And if you've a toy it's the fashion to crack it.

EIGHT P. M.

The floor is all littered with signs of the fray.
He is sulky and tired with much eating and play,
And nurse, too, is cross as she bears him away.

MERRY XMAS

A Bit of Pathos at Christmastide.

There is a little girl of 6 who has proved herself one of the ministering children not in name only. A few weeks ago the baby of the family died. The children as well as the mother had looked forward to hanging up the baby's stocking at Christmas with a great deal of pleasure. But the loss of the baby brought such anguish to the mother that she decided to have no Christmas celebration of any kind. Last Sunday evening, as the family sat in partial darkness, recounting their loss with all its sad circumstances, a tender little voice pierced the gloom:

"Mamma, isn't there any Christmas in heaven?"

"Yes, darling," answered the weeping mother. "It is always Christmas there."

"Then why don't you keep it here?" persisted the little girl. "Jus' make b'lieve baby isn't dead, an hang up her little stockin, mamma, an le's all have Christmas jus' the same an be happy, like she is."

The child's wisdom prevailed against the unreasoning sorrow of the mother, and the little ones are happy and busy filling the stocking of the baby who will keep Christmas in heaven.

THE FATAL LOSS OF A NEGATIVE

By Mrs. ALEXANDER

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

"All I can say is, it's a deuce of a bore!" exclaimed Philip Blount, a smart, good-looking lawyer, who was on very good terms with himself, whose age might be six or seven and twenty, to his particular chum, Tom Marling, a stout, rubicund, horsey stock broker, perhaps a few years older.

"Well, it is rather hard lines," returned Marling, sympathetically.

"If they had given me timely notice, I might have managed to get down to the Grange, but such an abrupt invite looks as if Gwen Dashwood did not want me down there."

This dialogue was going on in the private office of Mr. Marling, where the two men were discussing a light luncheon of oysters and stout, having a little time to spare at the general refreshment hour.

Blount was yet only a clerk in the old established firm of Ardell & Son; but that firm was now reduced to the surviving son, who was Blount's maternal uncle, and a childless widower.

Marling was a very well off bachelor, much given to the good things of this life and Blount's special friend.

"Down there" indicated a picturesque old place called Varley Grange, near

"MY DEAR NEPHEW, I AM DELIGHTED TO SEE YOU."

Maidenhead, at present tenanted by a charming widow, whose charms were enhanced by the possession of an income which enabled her to rent such a residence. Here she gave delightful "Friday to Monday" parties, invitations to which people fished for eagerly.

Gwendoline Dashwood was the daughter of Mr. Ardell's deceased wife's sister, his ward, and the mistress of his house. Blount rather imagined his uncle wished to make a match between his nephew and niece, and was quite sure of his own wishes on the subject; for Gwen Dashwood was a bright, attractive brunette, with big, brown eyes that could say a great deal—and he paid assiduous court to the young lady.

"Were you asked?" continued Blount.

"Lord, no! I'm not at all up to the mark of Mrs. Cholmondely Morton's parties, not elegant enough by long chalks."

"Better ask you than that beast Everard. I hate the fellow."

"Blount, you're a fool!"

"No more than my neighbors."

"Rather less, in a general way; but you are a fool about that cousin of yours."

"She isn't a cousin; she is no relation at all."

"Well, whether she is or not, you'll lose your game if you lose your balance about her. From what I have seen, I am inclined to think you stand very well with her, and Everard is much too grim and sour and black browed to be a dangerous rival. Besides, that Indian forestry appointment of his is no great thing. And then Miss Dashwood is not the girl to think of a man who is obliged to live in the wilds."

"I'm not so sure, Marling. Everard has an infernal cool air of command and superiority that imposes on women, and Gwen has a dash of romance in her. I fancy she thinks or suspects that I am what she would call 'low-minded' because I have the sense to have an eye to the main chance; but I flatter myself I've been making way with her lately. There's nothing goes down with that sort of girl like an air of being hopelessly gone upon her, and, in fact, I am—rather! It's such uncommon luck to have a fancy for the right young woman."

"Is she the right one?"

"She is. You see my uncle is deuced fond of her, and pretty sure to leave her the bigger half of his worldly goods, though he likes me, but if we marry, we'll have the whole."

"Admirable reasoning! But if you are making way, you may snap your fingers at Everard."

"I don't know. I got away early last week and found him at tea with Gwen, tete-a-tete — and after 'sitting out' with him for an hour in the conservatory at Lady Dalrymple's ball, when I went to claim my waltz, he said, as she took my arm: 'You must be sure to write at once, remember,' in a dictatorial tone, as if she were his wife, by Jove!"

Marling laughed. "Well, I know he isn't one of the Grange party."

"How?" ejaculated Blount.

Instead of replying, Marling rummaged among some papers which lay in a square wicker receptacle on his knee-hole table, and tossed over a note to his guest. It was dated the previous Saturday from the "East India Club," and ran thus:

"DEAR MARLING: I am not going down to the Grange, nevertheless, I cannot keep my appointment on Monday. I have other and better fish to fry, and am obliged to run over to the continent on Monday night. Shall write when I know time of my return. Yours truly,

"HUGH EVERARD."

"Ah, then he could not have gone to Mrs. Morton's," said Blount, with a sigh of relief. "I can't think how Gwen puts up with his overbearing swagger."

"Come now, Blount, he doesn't swagger."

"I suppose Gwen will be home to dinner at seven. I think I'll go and dine with my uncle in case he feels lonely. He was not at the office to-day, and I'm not supposed to know that his darling will return to cheer him."

"Prudent young chap, you are! Go on and prosper, Blount, my boy."

The aspiring young lawyer carried out his intention and presented himself to his uncle a few minutes before seven in accurate evening dress, a dainty flower in his buttonhole and a smile upon his lips. Altogether a handsome, gentleman-like looking young fellow, and steady, decidedly steady, thought Mr. Ardell, who was spelling over an evening paper somewhat disconsolately in his big and bounteously ornamented drawing-room.

Mr. Ardell was a well-preserved man of perhaps sixty-five—very precise and a little exacting, with severe notions as regarded conduct, principle, integrity and such like old-fashioned laws of life.

"Ah, Philip! This is an unexpected pleasure. Glad to see you."

"Thank you, sir. Thought you might like my company, as probably Gwen may not return—and—"

"Or possibly that you might find her here? Eh, Philip? Very natural, my dear boy. Very natural. Still your impulse is somewhat prophetic."

Mr. Ardell stretched out his hand for a yellow envelope which lay on a small table beside him. "I fully expected Gwendoline to luncheon, and not feeling quite the thing, a little liverish in fact, I had ordered James to meet the 12:30 train from R—— to look after her luggage and find her a cab, when, about 11:45, I received this," handing a telegram to Blount, who read: "Shall be home to-night. G. D."

"That means by the last train, I suppose," said Blount.

"No doubt. Very thoughtful of her, knowing she was expected and that I should send to meet every train till she arrived. She sends this to keep my mind at rest."

"When is the last train due?"

"About 10:20," returned Mr. Ardell.

"Then I shall go and meet her and bring her back. I need not leave you till 9:50. A hansom will rattle across the park to the Great Western in twenty minutes."

"Yes, do, Philip. Gwendoline will be glad to see you. There is a Bradshaw in the dining-room. We'll make a note of the time."

"Dinner is on the table," said James, the solemn man out of livery, who ruled the lower regions.

Philip Blount followed Mr. Ardell down stairs contentedly enough, though, being somewhat given to suspicion and self-tormenting, he debated that telegram in his own mind. Why did she not say "shall return by such or such a train?" Why did she leave things in such a vague condition? James might have been dancing attendance at Paddington from 6:30 on, leaving his functions to be indifferently performed by the housemaid and reducing Mr. Ardell to the inconvenience of a female waiter.

Dinner was, as usual in Lonsdale Gardens, remarkably good—a matter of no small importance in Blount's eyes—and Mr. Ardell was exceedingly conversational in a careful and didactic manner throughout it.

When dessert was put on the table and James departed a short pause ensued; then Mr. Ardell said: "I think you will find a fresh Bradshaw on the writing table in the window. Let us make sure of the train before you start."

Philip rose and went to the table whence he returned with Bradshaw and another book, handsomely bound in deep red with gold letters and decorations.

"You are right," he said, "the R—— train is due at 10:20." He handed Bradshaw to his uncle and continued: "I see you have Everard's book here. 'Life in the Wild Woods.' I don't fancy him in print—doesn't give me the idea of a writing man."

"I have not read the work," returned his uncle, with a tinge of disdain in his tone. "That copy was presented to Gwendoline. I was rather annoyed at her accepting it, though I do not very well see how she could have refused it. But Mr. Everard is not a man I like. He is pretentious and dictatorial, in fact, inclined to take liberties, or, I should say, he presumes on come connection with old friends of Gwendoline's to come here much oftener than I like, and assume a familiar tone with my niece of which I totally disapprove."

"Yes, my dear uncle, I have noticed it also, and it makes me indignant. However, he has gone to the continent and—"

"Why, yes, I know. He wrote to Gwendoline explaining why he could not go to this party and mentioned that he was going abroad, a very unnecessary proceeding, as I told my niece."

"And what did she say?"

"Well, she laughed and said that for all I knew, it might be very necessary."

"A curious answer," said Blount uneasily. "What do you make of it?"

"What I? Oh, nothing. It is really unimportant, only I fancy that Mr. Everard aspires to a matrimonial alliance with us, rather an audacious project on his part."

"I should think it was!" cried Blount. "He tries to seem on confidential terms with Gwen, but—"

"She has too much sense to heed him. In fact, she would not offend me by entertaining any proposal from Mr. Everard," interrupted Ardell. "I fancy you are aware, my dear Philip, that my great wish is to see my nephew and niece united before I die—not only because I am attached to you, but both and each would then be benefited equally by what I may be enabled to bequeath."

"And I desire nothing so ardently," cried Philip, "as to call her my wife. In fact, I have loved her ever since she came from school to reside here."

"I have suspected it, Philip. I have suspected it," returned his uncle, playing with the double eyeglass which hung from his neck. "But, my dear boy, I am not so sure of her."

"I am not without hope, if only no one comes between us." There was a long pause, each being occupied with his own hopes and fears for the future. Suddenly Blount exclaimed: "Could one drive from Paddington to Charing Cross in half an hour, with a minute or two to spare?"

"Yes, if the streets were not crowded, and the horse a good one. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, ah, I only wanted your opinion. That is, my dear uncle, I have an awful dread of that fellow Everard, and it's curious, but this morning I saw a note from him saying he was going to start for the continent this evening, or some time to-day. Could it be—" he stopped abruptly.

"Be what?" asked Mr. Ardell, putting on his glasses to gaze at the speaker.

On Saturday, Dec. 22, The Daily Press will begin the publication of a Christmas drama in two acts by Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward It is entitled "The Veteran" and tells in simplest, yet most pathetic fashion of the sorrows of a hero of the war, wounded by a bursting shell, blind, forgotten by his country, and reduced to singing in the streets for a livelihood until rescued from poverty by a friendly hand. It is a story of Christmas time, touching the heart and triumphing in justice. It is an appeal to sentiment, but the tears it starts are tears of joy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward is one of the foremost figures in American literary life, and has been regarded for years as our strongest woman writer. This study in the dramatic form is almost unique; it is probably her masterpiece in its direct appeal to the emotions and in its terse strength.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recen Date

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,

OUR GREAT DEFICIENCY.

The One Thing Needful to Bring Prosperity.

The prosperity of this town very largely depends upon its army of commuters. If the Central Railroad would publish month by month the number of commutation tickets sold, it would be an unfailing measure of prosperity, or the reverse, here. This proposition is certainly beyond dispute. We have a city of homes, good comfortable homes—not palaces—and it is, we trust, our civic ambition to increase the number.

And it must be conceded that in many respects we have built wisely and well—in our schools, and numerous churches, and new drainage system, and water supply, and public library, well-equipped markets and stores, and fire apparatus, postal facilities, and admirable clubs—all these comforts and conveniences of life we posses; in fact, we lack only one thing in order to render the lot of the commuter a happy one, and that missing link is a comfortable car at the station when he arrives, and at his home next morning when he is ready to depart. When we remember that every section of Brooklyn, of the Oranges, of Elizabeth, of Passaic, of Hackensack and Englewood, of New Brunswick and Rahway, and of many other rival towns, are equipped with the best facilities of inter-communication, we see at once how heavily we are handicapped. To enjoy our advantages, we compel the commuter to pay a heavy private-conveyance tax. Some commuters can stand the tax; but nineteen out of every twenty cannot, and they go elsewhere—go to the lesser towns in which they can live near the station, or to one of the larger towns that have secured the up-to-date trolley.

In a word, we are losing the benefits of our conveniences and improvements through the want of transit accommodations. No other convenience appeals to the commuter as does the trolley. No other attracts him in equal degree. It gives him time in which to leisurely eat his breakfast; it greets him when he returns, full of fatigue, and downright hungry. It is his carriage, and its cost is within his means. Men and brethren, shall the commuter find here what he needs, or shall we continue to repel him when he prefers to come to us?

Dr. Raymond on College Athletics.

The seventh annual dinner of the Union College Alumni of New York, held in the ball-room of the Hotel Waldorf last night, was attended by Craig A. Marsh, B. Fosgate and J. Oakley Nodyne of Plainfield. About 150 persons were present. Gen. Butterfield presided. President Rev. Dr. Andrew V. V. Raymond, formerly pastor of the Trinity Reformed Church of this city, spoke at length on college athletics, saying that in his opinion the intercollegiate games should be confined to the campus, and should not be allowed to take place in any of the large cities.

Speeches were made by Gen Miles, Gen Horace Porter, E Howland, representing the Yale alumni; Charles Emory Smith, William H McElroy, and Rev Dr Charles D Nott. The Union College quartette sang several times.

A feature of the gathering was a large model of the college grounds and buildings, which stood on a raised platform at one end of the room. Among those present were ex-Gov Cornell, ex-Senator Warner Miller, Andrew Carnegie, Samuel R Thayer, James W Alexander, and Wallace T. Foote.

Higher Insurance Rates With Gasolene Stoves.

The Suburban Underwriters Association of 44 Pine street, New York, has disturbed the folks living in Westchester and neighboring counties, and also in the pleasant counties of New Jersey close to the river front. Yesterday it advanced its rates for insurance one-third on all houses using gasolene stoves. The association declares that it represents all of the fire insurance companies of importance outside of the Continental, and that it has particular sway in Westchester, Rockland, Putnam, Suffolk, Queens, (except Long Island City), Kings, (except Brooklyn proper), and in Morris, Passaic, Sussex, Warren, Middlesex, Somerset, and other counties of New Jersey. The advanced rates of the company will go into effect January 1.

"There's a Time for Disappearing."

Two of "The Finest" were bowling along Front street, the admiration of the small boy and the envy of all the heavyweights who saw them. One of the riders, mindful of his family even in the midst of his pleasures, stopped to make a few necessary purchases, and, returning to his wheel, fastened the package to the handle-bar and mounted hastily in order to catch his friend who had continued up the street. But, alas!—he had not figured on his Christmas box being in his way until his knee came bang against it, and he was spilled over the handle-bar. When he found out "where he was at", the audience were treated to—— but then of course it was his treat anyway, and it would n't be square to give him away.

THE MARRIAGE RING.

PASTOR RICHARDSON STATES ONE LAW FOR HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Matrimony Honorable in All, But There Are People Who Are Not Desirable Mates—Personal Beauty No Reason to Wed—Beware the Wild-Oats Sower, the Flirt, and the Disrespectful Daughter.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, preached on "Marriage", to a very large congregation Sunday night. The text was Hebrews XIII: 4, "Marriage is honorable in all". He said in part:

History teaches with terrible distinctness that when the morals of a community become corrupt, when the laws of marriage are annuled, virtue becomes corrupt, and the state reels upon its throne. A low conception of the marriage covenant will lead into irregularities, and eventually develop into actual unchastity. A high conception: that marriage is God's ordinance, which must be entered into reverently and discreetly, will produce morality and resistance to lewdness.

How to marry? I answer, never seek matrimony because infatuated with personal beauty. Never, never think of matrimony because of the impulse of an impure passion. Shipwreck and broken hearts will follow such an alliance. It is a sin to enter the marriage contract as one would go to a picnic, full of mirth and glee. I would say to every young woman, look over the young man's character before you form an attachment for him. If he has formed habits of drunkenness, don't be foolish enough to marry him thinking you will reform him—your heart will be broken before the reformation. If he has been licentious, and a sower of wild oats, don't marry him—the fever spots will return—the harvest will be gathered after marriage. I say to you parents, it is an awful policy, that would sacrifice upon the altar a pure young girl, in the wicked experiment of trying to sober down some scapegrace son. The same law for both parties—a chaste man for a chaste woman.

To the young man I would say, don't run after a butterfly thinking it a singing lark. Don't be deceived by coquettish glances and elegant trimmings. You will need a wife, not a doll; a helpmeet, not a discouragement. The desideratum for you, is a sensible young woman, not clean gone on the subject of stylish living. If you value your future happiness, avoid the young woman flirt—she will flirt after marriage and put daggers in your heart. Habits formed before marriage will not be broken by a wedding ceremony. Don't marry a girl who treats her parents with disrespect; in time she will treat you with disrespect. You need not look for perfection, young man; but true, refined, pure young womanhood, may be easily found by any wise fellow. In choosing a wife look for the quiet woman—she who is not bold on the street, nor pert in the parlor. It is still true, that modesty is a jewel. It is thetquiet, sensible young woman, who makes the best wife—the heroic wife in times of sickness, trouble, and death. She fills the place which the brilliant, effervescent society girl cannot touch.

People who intend to marry should know what it really means. They say "love is blind". True, honest, chaste love, is not blind. Too often, that poetical sentimentalism is mistaken for love. The consequence is, in many homes anarchy, and a sensation in the divorce court. It is folly to marry under the impulse of an emotion which has not been analyzed and reduced to its real elements. Less "blind love" means fewer unhappy homes. Do I take sentiment all out of the subject? O men and women, if there is nothing but sentiment in courtship and marriage, you will experience hard times, when you come to those tearful places where life is stripped to the bone, and you struggle for a place among men.

Baptist Jubilee.

The Mt. Olive Baptist Church commenced Sunday the celebration of its twenty-third anniversary. There was excellent preaching both morning and evening, and interesting exercises were held in the afternoon at the session of the Sunday-school.

Rev. F. G. Warnick, a former pastor of the church, preached an effective sermon last evening, and tonight Rev. A. G. Young of New Brunswick will preach.

The music is a strong feature of these meetings.

Limited Tickets.

The sale of tickets for the masquerade ball to be given in The Casino on the evening of Dec. 27, will be discontinued Saturday. The advance sale has already been so large that the committee feel compelled to make this announcement, in order that The Casino may not be overcrowded.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds a Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE NEW PARISH ORGANIZED.

St. Stephen's Meets and Elects Officers.

Pursuant to notice, the members of the Church of Our Saviour met last evening to organize the new parish to be called St. Stephen's Church in the city of Plainfield. Quite a large attendance manifested their interest in the occasion. Rev. S. P. Simpson was called to the chair, and N. P. T. Finch appointed secretary. An election for wardens and vestrymen was held, with the following result:

Wardens—Wm. Palmer Smith, S. Seabury Guion.

Vestrymen—N. P. T. Finch, C. P. Ralli, E. J. Phillips, A. J. Beal, Hugh R. Knox, W. G. Leake, Charles A. Sturtevant.

The newly elected vestry retired for organization, and on their return reported the election of N. P. T. Finch as clerk, and S. Seabury Guion as treasurer. They also announced their intention of inviting Rev. S. P. Simpson to accept the rectorship of the new parish.

Later on, the parish will take action to file the necessary letters of incorporation.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Gray Jerry of the Plainfield Fire Department equines, chews tobacco.

—The Camera Club will meet this evening, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

—The Christmas entertainment of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school will be held Thursday evening, Dec. 27.

—The Sunday-schools of the First Baptist Church meet this evening in the lecture room of the church to rehearse Christmas music.

—A meeting of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2, in the lecture room.

—The boy blowing bubbles in Rand's window is a source of much entertainment to the people. The blowers are great toys, and Rand sells them at 10 cents.

—A Christmas entertainment with Punch and Judy show will be given by the primary department of the First Baptist Sunday-school, Friday afternoon, Dec. 28.

—At L. W. Randolph's pharmacy you will find a complete line of the finest toilet articles, and an elegant supply of Bicksecker's perfumes which received such high commendation at the World's Fair.

—Prominent among this evening's events will be the bowling contest between the Park Club bowlers and the New Jersey Athletic Club team from Bergen Point, to be begun on the Park Club alleys at 8.

—A fixed fact in the holiday trade for 1894 is that Peck's store is the place of all others to buy nice, appropriate presents and get them reasonable. Peck has a splendid variety of gift novelties in all styles and grades, and offers the best opportunity to select a suitable gift at such a price as you feel willing to pay. "Prices to suit your purse" is no idle boast with him, but a positive everyday fact and we hope you will be among the many who will take advantage of his generous trade inducements this year.

—Life is full of mysteries. Not the least of them is that people prefer being almost trodden down in the large New York stores looking for Christmas presents when they can do better by going to Love's, corner of North and Watchung avenues. Love is ready to sell hundreds of dollars worth of goods at about cost to lower his immense stock, and makes this offer to Plainfield. If you want a bicycle, a rug, a box of paints, fine stationery, a beautiful wall-paper for a room, or a box of fine cigars, go to Love's and you can do better than joining in the mad rush to New York. The store is open till 9 every night this week.

—The Seymour-Stratton Company opened a week's engagement in Music Hall last night. Miss Lizzie Seymour, the star actress of the company, made a great hit. She is a graceful figure on the stage and strikes a popular chord with the audience. Popular prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents prevail throughout the week. A good audience was in attendance at the opening night. "Lights and Shadows" was well received. Tonight "Our Strategists" is announced, and "East Lynne" will be the attraction at the Wednesday matinee. Prices for the matinee only will be 10 and 20 cents for the entire house.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manage

THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

At the coroner's inquest held yesterday over the body of the child found in Scotch Plains, Monday, Dec. 10, nine witnesses were examined, and after being out nine minutes the jury returned the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find that the unknown female infant was born alive and is fully developed, established by evidence to be the child of the woman 'Anna', a servant in the employ of one Sieser, then proprietor of the hotel, back of, and on the premises of which, was the manure heap from which was carted the dead body of the infant aforesaid on Monday, Dec. 10, 1894, came to her death in the manner following: Evidence of witnesses establishes the fact in the minds of the jury that infant aforesaid came to its death through criminal carelessness, neglect and exposure, at the hand of person or persons, to us unknown, aforesaid death being hastened bp the concealment of birth on the part of before-mentioned 'Anna', mother of infant."

DAUGHTERS OF POCOHONTAS.

Iona Council Has a Delightful Anniversary.

At the second anniversary and reception of Iona Council, No. 14, D. of P., at Red Men's Hall last evening, the rooms were tastefully decorated with a profusion of flags, bunting and Japanese lanterns. Guttman's orchestra discoursed sweet music, with which the prettily-gowned women and their partners kept time as they floated around the hall in the mazy dance. It was one of the largest parties ever assembled in Red Men's Hall, over 250 being present.

The guests from out of town, of which an unusually large number were present, included delegations from Menemoocka Council of Elizabeth, Pocohontas Council of New Brunswick, Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, 193, and Miantonomoah Tribe, both of this city. Dancing began at 9 and continued until a late hour. Refreshments were served during the intermission.

The affair was in every way a decided success, and reflects great credit on the committee of arrangements, which consisted of Miss Ella Sebring, Mrs. C. L. Holstein, Mrs. James Badden, Mrs. David C. Allen and J. C. Wyckoff.

Next Wednesday evening the semi-annual election of officers will take place during the regular council sleep.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

There was a recitation yesterday morning by Miss Firstbrook, '96.

The Class of '97 held their first regular class meeting of the year. Miss Ada Clark presided and Miss Mandane Hyde was secretary. It was decided to hold class meetings on the first Monday of every month. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Ernest Rapalje; vice-president, Miss Mabel Smith; secretary, Miss Mandane Hyde; treasurer, Sydney Titsworth; critic, J. V. Rittenhouse. A committee composed of Arthur B. Crane, Miss Mabel Smith and J. V. Rittenhouse was appointed to confer with committees from the other classes to select school colors and a school yell. Miss Euphemia Johnston was appointed a committee to secure cheesecloth for Christmas decorations. Miss Ada Clark was commissioned to buy class colors. A. B. Crane was appointed to obtain designs for a class pin from the various manufacturers and report at the next meeting when definite action would be taken.

No Leader, But a Profitable Time.

A novel feature was inaugurated at the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in Trinity Reformed Church last evening. The meeting was held without a leader. President Fred E Smith said it was a suggestion of Father Endeavor Clark. Such a meeting, he held, could be made a success if all present would feel their personal responsibility in the matter, and all did, and a good meeting was the result. Next Monday evening the society are promised a talk on "The Christian Life" by Secretary J. H. Manning of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Not in His Grave.

Dr. Herbert had another feather stuck in his cap lately by curing a horse whose owner (D. Hand) thought the chance for recovery so small that he had caused a grave to be dug for the animal. Doubtless could the horse speak he would join his owner in wishing the doctor a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE OPENING ASSEMBLY.

WELL ATTENDED AND THOROUGHLY A SUCCESS.

Not a Flaw in the Arrangements, and Everybody Pronounced the Event a Great Delight.

The first Assembly of the season was held last night at the Casino and it was the universal verdict that it was the best first Assembly that there has been for several years. Certainly it would have been hard for even the most captious critic to find anything last night toward which he could turn his corrective eye, and the dance went off from beginning to end with a spirit and enthusiasm such as has not been seen for a long time. Many were the congratulations received by the new patronesses, and they deserved them all.

There could hardly have been a more fortunate list of names chosen for the patronesses, and the results of their energy and judgment were plainly seen, not only in the number of people present, which was larger than at any previous December dance, but in the decorations of the Casino, which though simple could not have been in better taste.

The electric lights throughout the room were discreetly swathed in pink gauze and the light filtering through was softened and warmed. The stage was set in the garden scene, and palm and other plants were ranged along the footlight board and at the sides of the improvised steps leading up to the musicians. From the railings of the gallery hung many rugs in true oriental style, while two large screens served the double purpose of an excellent background for the rugs and a partition to hide the mysteries of the women's dressing room. Two large candelabre of wrought iron work were placed on either side of the chimney on the balcony rail. The fireplace with its settees and the chairs on the sides were made comfortable and cosy with fur rugs and sofa cushions galore. At the other end of the room two double rocking chairs commanding a view of the floor proved extremely popular. The window seats and many of the benches were relieved by a multitude of sofa cushions.

As to the floor and the music those two important factors were as good as could be. Elliott played with his old-time spirit and the dancers showed their appreciation and enthusiasm by demanding a repetition of nearly every number. This band is growing to have the popularity it deserves as shown by its numerous engagements in Plainfield for the remainder of the season.

There were many dinners given before the dance and people were generally late. The floor was not well filled until after 10, but from that time on the room contained all it comfortably could without crowding. The supper provided by Max Wiertz was simple but excellent, and was served about 11:30.

People began to go at 1, but dancing was continued until nearly 2 and even the "Home, Sweet Home" was encored, so thoroughly were people in the spirit for dancing.

If the other three dances prove proportionally good we may expect by far the best Assemblies we have had for a long time.

Those to whom the credit of the dance is due are the patronesses, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. Benj. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. Marion Ackerman and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, and to the treasurer, John N. Moore.

Among the subscribers and their guests were:

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Washingtonville.

Miss Nettie Beeching entertains her friends with pleasant stories of her visit to friends in Brooklyn.

Miss Carrie Bullman has been visiting friends in New York city, and enjoying the sights of the metropolis.

The many friends of Francis Bartells will be pleased to learn of his recovery to the extent that he is now in the convalescent ward, and in regular correspondence with his folks at home.

William Demler has recovered from the accident to his eye. A cartridge in his gun burst and blew out the hammer. A piece of the cartridge struck him in the eye.

Mrs. Chapot and sons, the tanners and oil refiners who bought the mill, find it is not large enough for their growing business, and contemplate erecting another large building in order that they may put on more men and facilitate manufacturing.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

L. A. Goodenough of Jersey City spent Sunday with friends in town. Mr. Goodenough has charge of a school with over 700 pupils.

Mrs. Cornelius Meeler is very ill at her home on Bartle avenue with heart trouble.

Fanwood Council, R. A., will hold a public installation, followed by an entertainment and reception, Jan. 8. Admission will be by invitation.

There will be special revival meetings Wednesday and Friday evenings of this week at the Baptist Church.

The Executive Committee of the Young People's Association of the Baptist Church will hold a business meeting at the "manse" Thursday evening.

Manning Frazier of Stoney Hill has returned to his old position at Seeley's Mills.

The town should repair the crossings on Park avenue in front of John R. Marsh's and John Cook's stores. During the last rain the mud was ankle deep at both crossings. Not very pleasant for pedestrians using them.

The Town Committee meet this evening to grant the franchise to the Philadelphia and New York Traction Company. The committee have acted with great care and caution in the matter and deserve credit for so doing.

The churches are all hard at work preparing for their Christmas entertainments.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith of New Market spent Sunday with Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark of Front street.

Examination at the Public School has ended and the scholars are all happy once more.

The Choral Union held a meeting in the chapel last evening to see whether the Union should be made a permanent one or not. It was unanimously decided it should be permanent. The secretary was instructed to communicate with Prof. Fitzhugh, regarding terms and etc. A vote of thanks was extended to the soloists who so kindly assisted the Union in rendering the Cantata of "Daniel". The holidays being so near at hand, it was decided to hold the next meeting Jan. 3, 1895, when the work will be taken up again.

The Fanwood Firemen's Relief Association held its annual meeting in Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company rooms last evening. Routine business and election of officers for ensuing year.

Henry Guerrier of Fanwood has settled in his new home on Cook avenue.

A. Frentz and family expect to return home the latter part of this month from Murray Hill, where Mr. Frentz has been doing a large contract for Carl Schultz, the millionaire soda water manufacturer of New York.

Milkman Coles has improved his delivery wagon by the addition of a coat of paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grant of Plainfield spent Sunday with Mrs. Grant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Paff, Sr.

A dance will be given at "The Van" this evening. Admission will be by invitation.

Robert Jahn has lost quite a number of his chickens by chicken thieves. Others in town make the same report. What are we going to do?

The Sons of Temperance meet at their room in the hall tonight.

Tax Collector Terry met at Excelsior yesterday and today. Tomorrow he will be at C. A. Smith's office at Fanwood. If you have not paid your taxes you would better attend to it.

Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company met at their rooms last evening. Routine business was transacted.

Scotch Plains is becoming quite noted with its robberies, dead baby case and other crimes too numerous to mention.

Next Sunday evening there will be union service at the Baptist Church. Rev. Mr. Marriod of the M. E. Church will be the preacher.

Contractor Bowman has completed the barn for Louis Moore, the plumber, and William McNair is giving it a coat of paint.

—Louis J. Coombs has purchased an elegant piano.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

BURIED WITH HONORS.

Senator Smith's Father Laid To Rest in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 18.—The funeral services over the body of James Smith, sr., father of United States Senator Smith, were held in St. Patrick's cathedral. They were of a most impressive character. Solemn high requiem mass was sung, the cathedral choir being assisted by soloists from the various Catholic churches of the city.

Bishop Wigger sat on the right side of the altar, and Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, attended by Chancellor Brennan, occupied a seat to the left. Monsignor Seton, of Jersey City, and a number of local and visiting priests also sat within the chancel rail.

Monsignor Doane, an old friend of the deceased, delivered the funeral sermon.

Prominent among the mourners were Governor Werts, United States Senator Murphy of New York; Congressman Cadmus, ex-Mayors Haynes, Grant, of New York city, and Cleveland, of Jersey City, and Judges Inglis, Kirkpatrick, Ledwith and Krueger. The funeral took place in the cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre.

GIOLITTI A FUGITIVE.

The Ex-Premier of Italy Runs Away To Avoid Arrest

London, Dec. 18.—A correspondent at Vienna telegraphs that Signor Giolitti, ex-premier of Italy, passed through that city on his way to Berlin. It is reported that he fled from Rome to avoid being arrested.

A gathering of 300 socialists attempted to hold an anti-Crispi demonstration in Milan, but the attempt failed to arouse public interest. There was no disturbance. The Marquis di Rudini, formerly premier, has written a letter to his electors in which he accuses Premier Crispi of having purposely avoided a debate in the chamber of deputies by forcing a prorogation.

Premier Crispi lacked the authority to settle the moral questions, and the actions which he has instituted in the courts will only augment the scandal.

The marquis says he has placed reliance upon the wisdom of King Humbert to cause the chamber to resume its session, that business may proceed without interruption.

GAVE UP THEIR RIGHTS.

The Mosquito Indians' Territory Now Incorporated with Nicaragua.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The department of state has received a dispatch from Minister Baker at Managua, stating that the Mosquito Indians have surrendered their rights under the treaty of Managua, and have become incorporated with Nicaragua.

This surrender, disposes of the last vestige of the claim of sovereignty by the Mosquito Indians over the Mosquito reserve, set apart by the Managua treaty of 1860.

It also terminates any ground for continued pretext of British "protectorate" over the Mosquito reservation, and greatly simplifies the right of transit across the isthmus.

Ex-Gov. Foraker Defeated.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Ex-Governor Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio was party to a case decided by the supreme court of the United States against him. Foraker brought suit against George F. Dick, a citizen of Illinois in the United States court for the eastern district of Arkansas to remove a cloud from a title held by him to a tract of several thousand acres of land in that state. Dick had claimed the land.

Victim of Hypnotism.

Munich, Dec. 18.—A sensational trial is taking place here. A teacher of languages, Czestans Czynfki, is charged with hypnotizing a lady of title in order to obtain her fortune. She was induced, it is alleged, to go through a mock marriage ceremony performed by a friend of the teacher, who impersonated a priest. Several specialists in hypnotism have been summoned as witnesses.

Dedicated a Lutheran Church.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 18.—A new German Lutheran church on School street, Bristol, was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies. There was a sermon by Rev. C. Buehn, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and dedicatory exercises conducted by Rev. William Brend, pastor of the society. Rev. M. E. Prince, pastor of the Prospect church, preached a sermon in English.

Guilty of Election Violations.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 18.—In the court of sessions James Scully, an inspector of election indicted for violation of the election laws pleaded guilty. He was fined $300. Joint indictments against Felix Brennan, and Alexander Vosburg were dismissed. At the September term the three defendants were tried and the jury disagreed.

Miners' New Wage Scale.

Pittsburg, Dec. 18.—The railroad coal operators of the Pittsburg district have adopted a wage scale of 55 cents per ton. The operators also passed resolutions setting forth the necessity for a reduction and exherting the miners to accept the same.

Diphtheria in a Jail.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—Diphtheria has broken out in the Sangamon county jail. William Lumm, a federal prisoner from Enfield, this state, has it in the most malignant form. The jail has been quarantined.

A Crank Writes Gov. Pattison.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 18.—A crank in Washington, D. C., has written Governor Pattison that Harrisburg and other cities will be utterly destroyed within two years.

Bulgaria's Cabinet Resigns.

Sofia, Dec. 18.—Premier Stolloff has announced that the resignations of the whole cabinet had been accepted by Prince Ferdinand.

GOMPERS WAS BEATEN

McBryde Is Elected President of the Order.

The Members of the American Federation of Labor Believed That the Leader Made Too Much of Politics.

Other Officers Chosen—The Next Convention To Be in New York.

Denver, Dec. 18.—Gompers was defeated by the Federation of Labor convention, John McBryde was his only opponent and the Columbus man was elected president of the federation for 1895 by the vote of 1,162 to 957.

McBryde who is also president of the United Mine workers, was ill at his home in Columbus, and as soon as the vote was counted President Gompers moved to make the selection unanimous, but objection was made. Gompers then dispatched this message:

"To John McBryde, Columbus, Ohio: Congratulations; elected president federation. None will be more loyal than I to aid and make your administration successful."

For first vice-president Mr. T. J. Morgan, of Chicago, and Mr. McGuire, of Philadelphia, were nominated, the vote being 1,865 for McGuire, 226 for Mr. Morgan. The election was made unanimous.

James Duncan of Baltimore, was made second vice-president by a vote of 2,135 to 60 for Charles Reichtold of St. Louis, who was said to be connected with the Knights of Labor.

It was noticeable that there was little excitement during the balloting, which resulted in Gomper's defeat. A majority evidently understood that the New Yorker would have to go out of office, the first time since he was elected in 1882.

There was a feeling that Gompers sought to introduce politics too prominently in all his dealings with and for the federation.

Sections of the west and northwest represented in the convention had determined to prevent a similar scandal to that which arose in the Knights of Labor when Powderly was forced out and Sovereign elected in his place. They wanted a change of administration.

In this instance the west easily prevailed, for there was scarcely the semblance of a contest for the presidency. McBryde carried the election because his friends were opposed to the experiment of using the organization as a political entirety.

Gompers became president in 1882 as a member of the Cigar Makers' union. From then until 1886 there was no salary attached to the office. That year it was decided to make the office a permanent one and the salary was fixed at $1,200.

The mine workers, with 320 votes, were for McBryde chiefly for personal reasons; the radical socialist members felt that Gompers was very strongly opposed to them, and the president's own action during the convention has done much to defeat him.

He was ill when he came here, and his rulings have been noticeably arbitrary and erratic. More than once he has lost his temper, and occasionally he has reversed his own rulings. The feeling generally is friendly to Gompers, but the election of McBryde is regarded as a good choice.

The next convention of the federation will be held in New York.

German Socialist Abuse.

London, Dec. 18.—A dispatch from Berlin states that the Vorwaerts, the socialist organ, says that only those members of the reichstag who, heart and soul, stood up for the government in its attempt to punish the socialists are high descendants and heirs of those robber knights, by whose subjugation the Hohenzollern dynasty gained the right of existence four centuries and a half ago.

Hohenlohe Declines More Salary.

London, Dec. 18.—A dispatch from Berlin says that Chancellor von Hohenlohe has gratefully declined Emperor William's offer to give him extra emolument, to the amount of 100,000 marks annually to compensate him for the loss in salary he sustained by giving up the stadhaltership of Alsace-Lorraine to accept the chancellorship.

Dr. Smith Not in Want.

Davenport, Ia., Dec. 18.—The dispatch from Boston saying Rev. Samuel F. Smith, author of the hymn "America" was in want in that city is branded as a falsehood by his son, S. F. Smith, of this city. Mr. Smith says his father has a homestead valued at $10,000 in Boston and an income sufficient for all needs.

German Officers Jailed.

London, Dec. 18.—A dispatch from Berlin says a Madgeburg paper states that 183 of the non-commissioned officers of the gunnery school, who were tried by courtlmartial on charges of insubordination, have been found guilty and sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from eight days to nine months.

Connecticut's Private Schools.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 18.—The state board of education has made a report showing that there are in Connecticut 195 private schools, including parochial schools, with 860 teachers and 25,965 enrolled scholars. About one child out of six of school age in the state attends a private school.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25c. per box. For sale by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

BUTCHERED FOR GOLD.

Light on the Murder of the Shearman Women.

Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 18.—The mystery surrounding the double murder of Mrs. Shearman and her daughter is but partly solved, though suspicion points to a former employe, no arrest has been made. The motive for the crime was doubtless robbery, and the perpetrator very likely knew that old amn Shearman had the miserly habit of keeping gold tied up in a handkerchief in his secretary, and that the family would be absent from home at he funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Shearman, on Saturday afternoon.

Surprised at finding two women in the house, the robbers slew them to avoid exposure and capture. The hidden money was taken from the secretary, despite the old miser's contention to the contrary, the secretary having been opened with a hatchet, the same instrument with which the brains of Mrs. Shearman and her daughter were spilled. The hatchet is missing. Footsteps have been traced to a clump of woods bordering on a road leading to this city.

WILL PROTECT THE TOMB.

Efforts Being Made To Have the State Control Lincoln's Monument.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—At a meeting of delegates from clubs and other organizations interested, held in this city, a resolution was adopted that the delegates pledge themselves to induce the state to take the Lincoln monument out of the hands of the monument association.

The resolution which was offered by C. L. Hammond also contemplates making admission to the monument free and getting an appropriation from the next legislature of from $50,000 to $100,000 to repair the monument.

The monument, beneath which rests the remains of Lincoln, has been mutilated by vandals and injured by the weather. It was decided to call a mass meeting some time before Jan. 1 in this city to demand that the appropriation be made at once.

Many assembly candidates were elected on this pledge and the feeling in the state is intense. Although the Garfield monument cost $20,000 less it is much better kept than that of Lincoln.

SEELY WON'T FIGHT.

The Defaulting Shoe and Leather Bank Clerk Pleaded Guilty.

New York, Dec. 18.—Samuel Seely, the $354,000 National Shoe and Leather bank defaulter, will make no legal fight. He resignedly pleaded guilty before Judge Benedict to the crimes charged in the indictment, and was remanded until Friday for sentence.

The plea was entered in the United States district court, and in the presence of as many persons as could be conveniently crowded into the room.

SMITH PLEADED GUILTY.

The Ex-Collector of South Orange Says That He Took $15,000.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 18.—Moses F. Smith, ex-collector of South Orange township, pleaded guilty without intent to a charge of embezzling $15,000 of the township's funds in the supreme court here.

Referee Adams was instructed by Judge Depue to take the report of the experts and Smith's admission into consideration and make a report. Sentence will then be pronounced.

Jewelry Swindlers Stopped.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The postmaster general has issued orders to postmasters throughout the country to seize all cheap jewelry sent out by a certain firm. The latter are swindlers. Their scheme is to send a box of jewelry to a person, who naturally returns it to the postmaster, believing a mistake is made. The company then accuses him of retaining part of the jewelry, and the victim is usually compelled to pay a couple of dollars to avoid annoyance.

Coal Mines Will Close.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 18.—On Saturday next all the mines now in operation in the Wyoming and Lackawanna regions will shut down work for the balance of this year. A prominent official speaking of the shut down said: "It cannot fail to have a good effect upon the market. By the first of next year, the stock on hand will be nearly exhausted and there will be a brisk deamnd for all sizes of coal by that time."

More Gold Shipments.

New York, Dec. 18.—The shipments of gold to Europe to-day amount to $1,750,000 and of this Lazard Freres ship $750,000 and Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., $1,000,000. These two firms withdrew $2,000,000 from the sub-treasury and the balance will go forward later in the week. There was $500,000 withdrawn in addition from the sub-treasury by banks. The actual gold balance is now about $94,000,000.

Kent Club Officers.

New Haven, Dec. 18.—The annual meeting of the Kent club, the debating society of the Yale law school, was held to elect officers. They are: president, Robin Adair, Wilmington, Del.; vice-president, H. H. Kellogg, Carthage, Mo.; treasurer, James A. Veech, New Haven; and secretary, J. H. Rector, New York.

Cleveland on a Tender.

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 18.—President Cleveland and party on their arrival boarded the lighthouse tender Wistaria and went down to the marshes hunting. The Wistaria is under command of Commander M. S. S. Mackenzie, in charge of the sixth lighthouse district, with headquarters at Charleston.

Thought To Be Suicide.

Elizabeth, N. J., Dec. 18.—The dead body of a man was found in the woods at Springfield, near here. The body is supposed to be that of a man named Noonan of Elm street, Newark. It is thought to be a suicide.

A Breakfast to Cardinal Gibbons.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Ambassador and Mrs. Patenotre gave a breakfast to Cardinal Gibbons. The cardinal will visit Washington again when he will dine with Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court.

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—The Philadelphia board of trade has passed resolutions condemning Secretary Carlisle's currency plan.

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark, of 14 N. Twenty-fourth St., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the righ shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night. Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress, the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25 cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoepathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

A CHRISTMAS QUEEN.

BY MARTHA M'CULLOCH WILLIAMS.

[Copyright, 1894, by the Author.]

Aunt Charlotte came sturdily across the Lee plantation. The fields were all sere, as became mid-December. Yet in the flower garden roses, pansies and chrysanthemums were rapidly unfolding in the warm, slow rain, rather ragged and discolored, to be sure, but flowers for all that.

"Dem's de ve'y tings fer dressin up de table," Aunt Charlotte muttered to herself as she scudded betwixt the borders and on to the back porch. Before she could knock, the hall door opened, and Mrs. Lee called out:

"Howd'y, Aunt Charlotte? Come right in my room to the fire. You'll catch your death yet, running about so in bad weather. Sit down and dry your feet while you tell me all the news."

Aunt Charlotte stuck her torn, muddy shoes toward the blazing logs, fetched a sort of groaning sigh and said: "La, Miss Ma'y, you know I never hears no news, but dey nor'ated it at church meeting 'istiddy dat ole lady Brantley wus metty low wid de brownskeeters, an ole Miss Calishaw's Flo'ence had done runned off an married dat Dodd boy."

"Well, well, she has driven her ducks to a bad market. Girls are so foolish. Oh, did you hear from old Mr. Pegram? I am told he was badly hurt last week."

"Yessum; he clumb up de stable lof', huntin fer de boyses jug er licker, an fell through on dat young mule, an de critter kicked him. So de doctor say de spine er he back is querrelized."

"Dear me! You don't say so!" Mrs. Lee returned.

For an hour the talk slipped along the channels of local gossip. Aunt Charlotte knew there was nothing like tidbits of news to put Miss Ma'y in good humor. Whatever happened in ten miles around was reported, with enlargement and variations, at the colored church. Besides Aunt Charlotte herself was outdoor laundress for some half dozen families, so of course knew all about them. When her feet were dry, she got up, picked her sunbonnet from the floor and said, balancing herself on one foot:

"Well, I mus' be goin., Miss Ma'y, is you got any gole paper?"

"Let me see. Yes, I think—I know I have. Do you want some? Are they going to have another Christmas tree at the church?"

"Yessum—no'm. I does wants some, but 'tain't fer no Chrismus tree. Dey done had so many er dem, an fesservuls, an May suppers, an so on, de folks is tired on um. Mist' Pasco, de teacher at de free schqol, is metty high larnt. He been one session ter de Frisk nuniversity, up hat Nashville, so de church call on him ter pervent um somp'n new. An he tole um dey mus' have er queen er Chrismus."

"Indeed? That is something new. Tell me all about it."

"I ain't zactly got de whole thing straight yit, but fur es I kin make out my Meely—dey choosed her fer queen—is gwine be dressed up in white, wid er crown on, an red shoes, an set up on er cheer on top de teacher's table, wid er big stripe-ed shawl all hangin down ter de flo', an de schoolchilluns is ter come up 'fore her an say dey speeches—'bout de boy stood on de burnin deck, an twinkle, twinkle, little stars, an de reaper whose name is debt, an all dem yothers. Den dey gwine have di-logs fer the big chilluns, an arter dat all de young men will march an sing around her, an she ha' ter choose one on 'em fer king. Dat's whut gits Meely whar de wool's short. You know she ain't forard lek de yother gals."

"No; Meely's a good girl—the best I know. Is that all?"

"Oh, no'm. Dey gwine have er supper, sot in de schoolhouse eend er de church. Dat'll be 50 cents an eat all you wants er barbecue an pie. De church don't git none er dat; hit all goes ter dem wha' 'vides de vittels. But the side table whar dey gwine sell cake an candy an reasons an oringes an seegyars will be all fer de paschure sal'ry. 'Sides dat he git de dime at de do' too. De church owes him $40, an dey had ter promus ter git up somp'n would make it fer him Chrismus, 'fore he'd 'gree ter baptize any er dem las' converts. He 'lowed his body wns des as well wuth savin as dey souls, an he wasn't gwine ruint his las' suit er clothes in de water 'dout he had de inshorance er gittin money ter buy mo'."

"I see. Does it come off Christmas eve?"

"Oh, no'm. Hit's gwine be Saddy night in Chrismus. De yother churches an school 'tainments will be through by den, so we git er big crowd. De s'ciety from town—de Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise, say dey comin out ter see how us country niggers does, an I wants ter 'stonish um good one time sho."

"You want me to help you?"

"Yessum; I be metty proud ef you will. I got three dozen eggs. Ef you des let me heve de sugar an butter an flour, I'll make two cakes fer de side table an bake um in yonr big rosepans. An I thought maybe you'd len me de money ter git Meely's dress an shoes, an make de crown fer her, an len me you buggy blankit ter go over de cheer. Ef you will, hit'll be er mighty big 'commerdation."

"Has Meely outgrown the white dress I made her last summer?"

"No'm, but hit's been washed. 'Sides hit nuver wus nothin but swiss muslin. Now she got ter have tarlton. Teacher say queens don't nuver w'ar nothin else, an nuver puts one on dey back but des de one time. Hit's boun ter be right new."

"You had better get her yellow shoes. She can wear them afterward."

"Teacher say dey mus' be red—dat's what de town niggers will be spectin, an dey shan't have no scuse ter laugh ef I can help it."

"You want me to make the dress?"

"Yessum, ef you will."

"And the crown?"

"Ain't nobody but you would do it fer me."

"Do you want it like this?" showing a picture of a royal diadem.

"No'm," said Aunt Charlotte. "De chilluns is gwine w'ar silver ones when dey say dey speeches an Mist' Pasco he made um one fer er pattern. Hit's des er ban big 'nough to go on de head, wid sharp p'ints stannin up around de top. Meely's mus' be dat way, too, only gole an bigger."

"H-m-m! Is that all you want?"

"Yessnm—'ceptin 'tis dem flowers out yonder in de gyarden. An I'll sweep de yard, an make your soap in de springtime, an iron all Miss Lucy's nice clothes next summer."

"I know you will, you blessed Aunt Charlotte," said Miss Lucy Lee, running in with her arms full of finery. "And Meely shall be as fine as Friday in this tarlatan dress of mine—I've only worn it once—and a red sash and stockings as well as the shoes. And her crown shall have 17 tiny sharp points to it, one for each year of her life and mine. You know we were born the same day, and have grown up just the same size."

"IS YOU GOT ANY GOLE PAPER?"

Aunt Charlotte beamed all over.

"God love you, Miss Lucy! You is one good child. I wus thinkin 'bout dat dress all de way ober here—studyin up how I could git it. If your foots des wan't so little dat Meely couldn't git mo'n her big toe in your shoes, I'd ax you fer dem white slippers and let de red stockin's do."

"Oh, she shall have shoes—never fear!" Lucy said, holding the sash to the light. "But how will she get to church without spoiling them? It's a mile from your house, and the mud will be knee deep. You know it always rains a week when the wind is in the south."

"Yessum, hit's gwine be bad. Dey done 'cided at church meetin dat Meely mus' dress in de closes' house dar an den come out, an be sot up in er no top buggy, an have eight er de big boys pull her up ter de church do'. Den Mist' Pasco, he gwine take her outen hit an tote her up de aisle an set her in de cheer on de table."

Lucy laughed aloud. Her mother frowned and said, a trifle sharply:

"I would not allow that, Charlotte. Meely is no child."

Aunt Charlotte looked at the floor in meek obstinacy.

"Dey tells me queens don't walk none 'tall," she said, "an de buggy cain't git no nigher 'an de do'."

"Then let two of the big girls make a bee saddle and tote her. That won't look half so bad as to see Pasco lugging her like an old cat does her kitten," Mrs. Lee said, still sharply.

"It's the lugging, not the lugging, ma objects to," Lucy said through her laughing, "but that does not matter. I believe Mr. Pasco wants to marry Meely."

"He do," said Meely's mother, "but she done sot her min on dat ar' owdacious Pete Meacham, who've got no 'ligion 'tall, is des always whistlin reels an potillions an singin 'bout

"Oh, Master Rabbit, yo' years mighty long.
Yes, my dear, dey are sot on wrong.

Dat's what make me try so hard ter git her fix up nice fer dis yere time. I'm gwine git all de things an den tell 'er she cain't chave pps 'dout she'll 'gree ter take Mist' Pasco."

Lucy's eyes flashed, but before she could speak her mother said:

"Well, I hope you'll succeed, but it does seem to me that when a girl sets her heart on a trifling, no account fellow there is no use trying to change it. I didn't know Meely was like the rest, but I'll help you all I can."

"So will I," said Lucy, running away, with scarlet cheeks. Meely's case was her own. Bert Wilmer had her heart and her troth plight; rich Dave Allen, the backing of her parents. Possibly it was this fellow feeling that made her so wondrous kind to Meely. Possibly also the fact that Pete had been postman for the lovers ever since Bert was forbidden the Lee house had something to do with the case.

Then, too, the Lees were a habitual providence to the poor blacks about them. Love for the merry, careless, simple-shrewd race was in their blood, comprehension likewise. They saw under the grotesque extravagance of the "queen of Christmas" a germ of self reliance and furthered it accordingly.

When at last it came to pass, Lucy, with her brother and a dozen more young folks, stood outside and looked on through the window back of the pulpit. The church was a big log structure, lit with kerosene lamps in flaring tin reflectors, and fairly crammed with dark humanity.

Besides the country negroes for miles around the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise were out in full regalia, a hundred strong. Each brother wore a red sash crossing his breast, with a tin star over the heart, a green apron turned up with yellow, and a blue and white rosette upon the left lapel. Each sister was gorgeous in a purple cape, a long white, freely ruffled apron, deep red sash about the waist and orange turban with green plumes. They marched to their allotted places, droning out a weird, wordless chant, and vainly tried to maintain an attitude of solemn criticism. The crowd was dotted with smiling familiar faces, the savory scent of barbecue was in the air, and Brudder Paschure, otherwise the Rev. Mr. Barker, shook hands up and down the benches with a fervor that almost set them shouting.

Presently the deacons hustled and squeezed the crowd back from the aisle, and Mr. Pasco came through with Meely in his arms. She was a slim slip of a girl, but he staggered under her weight and would have fallen when mounting to her chair throne if Pete Meacham had not sprung forward and relieved him of his burden.

"Umph! My Lord! I wouldn't have dat nigger fer soap grease ef he cain't tote no better'n dat!" exclaimed the foremost Daughter of I Will Arise, while one of the country lads murmured: "Lordy! Wouldn't I des lek ter see 'im put 'ginst Pete at er log rollin! He done stay dar in dat school'ouse twell he ain't no stronger'n er skeeter."

Meely reached her throne about equally crumpled in clothes and feelings. While the speeches and dialogues went on she sat trembling and half blind, only kept from running incontinently away by the knowledge that her mother's eye was on her. She knew what was expected of her—that she would choose Mr. Pasco as king—and she hated him so! If only she might choose Pete! But he would not be in the line. Aunt Charlotte had managed to have him left out. After he put her in the chair he sat down on the pulpit floor back of it, where the drapery hid him from the crowd, but let him look his fill at her. That was her only consolation. If they tried to make her bodily over to Mr. Pasco, he was close at hand, and Miss Lucy and Marse Bert looking in at the window, ready to give him countenance for her protection.

SENT HIM SPRAWLING TO THE FLOOR.

At last the march began. Two by two, a man and woman, they came into the small clear space before her and moved around singing:

My Lord called Sister Marthy.
Sister Marthy would not answer.
Sister Marthy's into de gyarden,
Talkin erbout my Lord.

Five minutes of slow, heavy stamping; then came a wild whirl to

Dar war ban's o' music,
Dar war ban's o' music,
Dar war ban's o' music
Rumblin fro' de sky.

Then the words died away to a wild groaning shriek, with a tempest of footfalls under it. The marchers formed a wheel with the women in the center and whirled at top speed in front of and up to the poor distracted queen. The pastor came, too, with an oily smile, and put his buggy whip in her hand, saying: "Now, Miss Permeely, hit your king and lemme set him down up yere 'side you. Hit is not good fer 'ooman ter be erlone, de Scripture says. Now, shet your eyes an hit de nex' who'er passes." With that he seemed to release the whip, yet adroitly flung the lash around Pasco's neck. Instantly there went up a great laughing shout, and by the time Meely had drawn one sobbing breath the teacher was beside her, holding her hand. The preacher had drawn a book and a folded paper from his pocket and was beginning to read that the document authorized him to solemnize matrimony betwixt Cæsar Augustus Pasco and Pamela Mills.

Out from the wonder stricken crowd came a shrill cry: "O-o-o! you vilyun! I hain't dead yet!"

The next minute a small and vicious looking Daughter of I Will Arise streamed up to the throne, clutched the royal bridegroom and shaking him till his teeth chattered cried out: "I married dis yere slab sided, low down, no 'count trifflin fly up de creek two years ergo, up to Nashville, an took in washin ter spote 'im so he might go ter school an git book sense ernough ter be er preacher. An dis is what I gits fer it. Fine um yere tryin ter marry er gal 'at don' 'ant um an does 'ant somebody else. I been knowin ever sence he runned away he was mean as gar broth thickened wid tadpoles, but I never did thought he'd come quite ter sech er pass as dis."

Mr. Barker put on his most judicial aspect. Pasco's countenance betrayed his guilt. Nevertheless the minister asked:

"Is this woman your wife, Brother Pasco?"

"I married her once, but I was a minor then, and I propose to get me a divorce next spring—as soon, in fact, as school is out," Mr. Pasco said, calling all his grammar to his aid.

"Den you better wait till you git it 'fore you try ter marry agin," Pete Meacham said, catching his rival round the waist and sending him sprawling on the floor. Then he gathered the sobbing Meely in his arms and turned to face the preacher, saying: "Mr. Paschure, my boss is got license for me ter marry dis same little gal. Git um from him, please, an tie de knot right yere. I wus gwine steal her as we went home, but I don't wanter take no mo' risks er losin 'er."

Then a wonderful thing happened. The party outside came in and stood in a half circle, back of Pete and Meely, until they were made one, when a grave gentleman, whom nobody quite knew, stepped in front of Bert Wilmer and Lucy Lee, and in less time than it takes to write it they had likewise entered the holy estate of matrimony. Pete and his boss, it seemed, had planned a double runaway. The happenings of the evening only precipitated the crisis.

Aunt Charlotte and Mrs. Lee in time became reconciled to their sons-in-law, but the church meeting has never yet ventured upon another queen of Christmas.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Arrangements are being completed this afternoon for the funeral of A. M. Ross. The death of Mr. Ross occurred while his wife was at her mother's. His aged mother was immediately summoned, and for hours sat inconsolable by his silent form.

Owing to lack of time in which to make the proper arrangements for the concert, the visit of the Columbia Glee and Banjo Clubs has been deferred until the middle of January. Mr. Cokefair hopes by that time to have his list of patronesses complete, and a dance will undoubtedly follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Whiting Tyler of West Seventh street have sent out invitations for their friends to meet Mr. and Mrs. William George Wright on Monday, December 31, from 4 to 7. Special preparations are made for the pleasure of the young people, who are recipients of an enclosed card announcing dancing from 9 to 12.

To Meet Every Week.

It was decided at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, last evening, that after January 1 the meeting nights will be held the first and third Tuesdays in each month. This is done to increase the attendance at the meeting. This, together with the drills, will bring the members together every week. The officers will confer with those of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and the Women's Relief Corps, as to the advisability of holding all of the installations on the same night. The new rituals are expected this week. George Whitley resigned as a member of the Camp Council, and Charles Graves, Jr., was elected in his place.

—At the regular meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., last evening, several interesting addresses were delivered by the members. The annual election of officers for the ensuing year takes place Dec. 31.

—The last remaining lot on Sandford avenue, formerly owned by Mrs. Truell, is to contain an elegant house for Samuel Williams and family, who now reside at 60 Sandford avenue. He has given the contract for building to his neighbor, Seaman Williams. Ground was broken this morning, and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

—The members of the German Reformed Sunday-school will enjoy their Christmas entertainment next Tuesday evening at 7. An excellent programme has been arranged consisting of recitations and singing by the school, and three tableaux, "Birth of Christ", "Holy Night", and "Christ Blessing the Children". At the conclusion, handsome presents will be given the members of the school.

Carriage Collision.

Harry Roberts was driving along Second street east of Madison avenue this morning, when his horse became frightened. Just ahead of him was D. N. Groendyke's team and carriage. The two wagons collided, and resulted in all of the spokes in the rear right wheel being broken and part of the leather covering being torn.

It was a very narrow escape for the occupants as they might have been seriously injured.

ADVISED HIS CLIENT TO ABSCOND.

Though Wanting Business Badly this Lawyer was Honest.

The young man had been admitted to practice at the bar. He sat within the bar inclosure, speculating upon the chances of clients coming to him, by mistake or otherwise. He heard his name spoken and started to his feet.

"Mr. De Novo, the prisoner at the bar is unable to employ counsel. Will you defend him?"

"Certainly, your Honor. May I go with him to the bar office for a few moment's consultation?"

"Yes, sir: and give him your best advice."

A hardly perceptible sneer curled his Honor's lips as he uttered these last words, but the young man did not appear to notice it. Motioning for the prisoner to follow him, he passed into the other room. The door was closed, and for ten minutes the lively clatter of many conversations filled the court room. Then the young man strolled into the room and dropped into a chair. The crier proclaimed: "Silence in the court room!" His Honor gazed upon the young man, and said:

"Are you ready to proceed?"

"Yes, your Honor."

"Where's the prisoner?"

"I really don't know."

"What?"

"I'm sure I don't know."

"Mr. De Novo, will you explain what you mean by this most extraordinary conduct?"

"Your Honor told me to give him the best advice I could, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"May it please the Court, when I consulted him I found he was guilty and had really no defense whatever. So, in pursuance of your Honor's so kindly meant suggestion, I advised him to drop out of the window and make himself as scarce as possible. I presume—in fact, I know—that he followed the first part of my advice, and I believe he will also observe the rest of it."—Harper's Magazine.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

THE ROBBER BARON.

Does He Stand in that Relation or Should He be Idolized?

The question of labor and capital is ever a growing one in the United States, and both sides should be candidly presented to the thinking masses. One's standpoint has largely to do with the way he views the subject, and if the question is ever settled it must be by material and mutual concessions from the employer and employed.

The New York Advertiser says: The robber baron, so-called, Andrew Carnegie, is giving employment to 22,000 men, or in other words has organized and is maintaining useful manufacturing industries which give support to 110,000 people.

There are few employers of labor who do not make a profit of 50 cents per day upon the labor of the men they employ, whether they are builders, masons, woodworkers, wagonmakers, blacksmiths, plumbers, painters, printers, paperhangers, carpenters, bell hangers or barbers.

At the same rate of profit Mr. Carnegie should make $11,000 per day, or for a year of 300 days $3,300,000. In his armor plate mills alone $5,000,000 has been invested and his total sales to date of armor plate is less than that amount. He and his partners have tens of millions more invested in rolling mills, blast furnaces, iron mines, coal mines, limestone quarries, coke ovens and steel works. Their enormous investment is of no value unless they operate these great industries, and when they are worked to their full capacity they give employment to 30,000 men and support to 150,000 people. This is as many persons as the New York Central Railway employs with $200,000,000 of capital invested in stock and bonds.

It is a wise charity to provide employment for those who cannot create employment for themselves. Asylums for the poor, aged, infirm, blind, deaf, dumb, orphans and insane are noble monuments to Christianity, but better still is the organization of a great and beneficent industry which gives employment to 30,000 men and at the same time blesses humanity through the products which it supplies. It was estimated when the sugar refineries closed that 50,000 men would be thrown out of employment, that 250,000 people would lose their means of support. And yet Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Havemeyer are denounced by thousands who never give a dime to charities and have never organized a beneficent labor employing industry even upon a limited scale.

The industries which Mr. Carnegie has created and organized will continue long after he has passed away to give honorable and useful employment to tens of thousands of men and will continue to serve humanity through the products they create.

Her Answer to the Bishop.

The late Metropolitan of Canada, the venerable Bishop Medley, never wearied of telling the experience of his early years of service in that country. In those days the roads were in a very primitive condition and the country sparsely populaced, rendering the journey from one backwood settlement to another an unpleasant not to say a very dangerous undertaking.

The Bishop, however, made periodical visits to the most outlying parishes of his diocese in all seasons, and in the most inclement weather.

On one occasion a violent storm being in progress, he was compelled to halt for the night at a log cabin by the roadside.

A rough but hearty welcome was accorded him by the inhabitants, to whom he was unknown. The man of the house at once busied himself with the care of the horses, while the woman set about the preparation of the evening meal. As the Bishop sat comfortably by the fire, his first thoughts were of his mission to that lonely neighborhood.

"My good woman," said he, "are there any Episcopalians in this vicinity?"

"I hardly know, sir," she replied hesitatingly; "the men did kill something under the barn yesterday, but whether or not it was one those things I cannot say for certain."

Li's Long Head.

Li Hung Chang is playing his card with great cleverness. When he tried, years ago to improve the railroad system of China, he met with such fierce opposition from the Mandarins that he had to abandon his plan. Now he is able to point out to the Emperor the fatal effect that the want of proper communication has had on national defences,

Perhaps the great Viceroy will be able to play the role of Che Hwang Te when Japan insists on the opening up of the country to foreign intercourse. It was the Che Hwang Te who substituted Governors and Viceroys for the little corrupt Princes who ruled the separate States of the Middle Kingdom. He raised such a rumpus among the literati that to stop it he had to order their books to be burned, and also put some of the learned clerks in the bonfire, along with their cherished volumes. Li Hung has a great opportunity now to imitate his illustrious predecessor of a couple of thousand years ago.

In Line With His Ancestors.

The Count (showing visitor through his castle)—That first room was furnished with the spoils of a battle in Spain. The next with the booty secured after a siege in Flanders. Here is the Turkish room. One of my ancestors brought all these thing back after a campaign in the East.

Visitor—I notice that the furniture in this room is antique French.

Another ancestor obtained that. He sacked a palace in Normandy.

"You have, also, I see, a large amount of expensive furniture which is decidedly modern.

Yes. I bagged an American heiress.—Life.

One Better.

"Madam" briskly spoke up the gent in the check suit, when the lady of the house appeared at the door, "I have here an invaluable invention for daily domestic use; a combination of useful utensils no household should be without, combining as it does, in one compact tool, a cork screw, a paper knife, a can opener, a nut pick, a bodkin, a shoe buttoner, a ——"

"No, thank you," she answered curtly, "I have all the hat pins I need!"

The next moment the door was slammed in his face.—Puck.

Boston Envy.

The loan exhibition of women's portraits in New York has closed, and it is calculated that the receipts will amount to $40,000, which will go to charity. It is agreed that this showing is rather handsomer than the portraits.—Boston Herald.

Spartan Training.

A young man who rode horseback to perfection, was asked when and how he learned.

"Oh," said he, carelessly, "when I was a little fellow my father put me on a horse, and told me how to ride. I was afraid, and slid off; but every time I touched the ground he cuffed me and set me on again. So I found it cheaper to learn!"

A certain stern Greenlander, when the breakers were riding highest over the rocks, would place his young son in a kayak and throw him into the surf. The little fellow, with the double paddle in his hand, would watch his opportunity, right himself as he decended, and then triumphantly paddle through the boiling sea to the little haven where the canoes land.

"You will drown your boy!" people used to say to this Spartan father; but the sage hunter of seals and whales would reply:

"If the boy cannot right a kayak in a stormy sea, he cannot kill a seal; and if he cannot kill a seal, he cannot live in Greenland. And in that case he might as well die!"

How Gen. Butler Lost a Horse.

While in front of Petersburg the General received information that his favorite horse, Almond Lye, had been accidently killed by falling into a ravine. Upon the departure of his informant he ordered an Irish servant to go and skin him.

"What! is Almond Eye dead?" asked Pat.

"What's that to you? Do as I bid you, and ask no questions."

Pat went about his business, and in an hour or so returned.

"Well, Pat, where have you been all this time?" sternly demanded the General.

"Skinning the horse, yer honer."

"Does it take nearly two hours to perform such an operation?"

"No, yer honer, but then, you see, it tuck 'bout half au hour to catch him," replied Pat.—Boston Herald.

Not a Bit Rattled.

We went into a popular German beer garden, and my friend, who grows melodramatic when he is mellow, beckoned to a sleepy-looking German waiter, and with Shakespearean voice and gesture exclaimed:

"Landlord, come hither! Bring to us two flagons of that amber juice whose effervescent foam overflows the crystal rim. Away!"

The sleepy waiter stared an instant, then turning to me, inquired:

"You haf de same?"—St. Paul Daily Globe.

A MOTHER'S DUTY

TOWARDS HER DAUGHTERS.

Suggestions Which May Help to Avoid Many Dangers.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Less than twenty years ago even the medical profession scouted the idea that young girls could suffer from the misery of uterus troubles.

That form of disease, it was claimed, came only to married women. When Lydia E. Pinkham first sent out the news of her great discovery, there was no lack of harsh speech from those whose practice and opinions she set at defiance.

But when young girls by the hundreds were absolutely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then the tongues of the traducers were stilled, and faith was allowed to live in the hearts of the people.

Young girls are subject to this trouble. It robs them of the buoyancy of youth. It makes all effort distasteful.

It causes retention and suppression of menses, leucorrhœa, severe headache, waxy complexion, depression, weakness, loss of appetite and interest.

This being the condition of your daughter, what is your duty, loving mother?

Certainly you ought to know that these are all symptoms of the one cause of nearly all the suffering that comes to women; and to save your daughter you ought to begin that treatment at once, which for 20 years proved its power throughout the world.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and most natural remedy for women ever compounded. It will accomplish its work with certainty.

VANO

AT REFORM HALL

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18

Let All the Men in Plainfield Who Can Possibly Do So Attend This Lecture, as They Will See and Hear Things They Never Saw or Heard Before.

Vano the sensational healer of rheumatic cripples and all chronic diseases, will lecture to men only tonight on matters of vital interest to old and young—and show what causes unhappy marriages, elopement, suicides and insanity. This lecture is worth thousands of dollars to every man who respects himself and family, and will show the young men how to avoid the secret vices they are addicted to, and the private diseases, dangers and pitfalls that beset their path.

The following letter from a professor in the leading sanitarium in New York State was received yesterday.

"Your treatment of me and the remedies you supplied me with that I am now using has amazed me so much that I do not know what to think or say. The fact remains however that I am improving rapidly every day and it is not owing to any imagination or faith on my part, because I had none. I have helped others but never seemed to be able to help myself. I am satisfied however in your remedies I have found the right thing. Your Electric Fluid and remedy for nervous debility are the two grandest things I have ever met or heard of. Now I want to see you at once and if you will let me know where you are now I will come on as I want to see what arrangement I can make with you to use your remedies here, as I am certain they will do the same for nearly all our patients they have done for me, and as you know we have several hundred here all the time there are many needing just such extraordinary treatment as this."

I am yours faithfully
C. H. C.
Professor of Electricity and Systematics.

"Unc' Toby," a man for whom Bartlett's creek has more attractions than the hot and grassy cotton field, not long ago took a "day off" in pursuit of his favorite amusement. He baited his hook, and long and patiently sat upon the bank of the stream, vainly waiting for a bite. At last, under the combined influence of the warmth of the day and the sluggish movement of the stream, Unc' Toby fell asleep. Eternal vigilance is the price of trout, and while our weary angler slept an enormous fish took the bait and pulled him in the creek. Of course this awakened the old man, and he was overheard to inquire, as he floundered about in the water: "For de Lord's sake, Toby, am dis niggah a-fishin', or am dis fish a-niggerin'?"—Youth's Companion.

ADMITS THE TORTURES

Japan Says Chinese Soldiers Were Mutilated.

The Foreign Minister States That the Atrocities Committed upon the Japanese Prisoners at Port Arthur Drove Their Comrades to Acts of Violence—More Victories.

Yokohama, Dec. 18.—General Nodzu has telegraphed the following report to the minister of war:

"Gen. Oseko's brigade has defeated the Chinese in the vicinity of Hun Kaputz. The enemy fled toward Ying-Kow. The enemy has been driven from Chih-Mou-Chin by the third division, which is now combined with Oseko's brigade and advancing upon Hai-Ching.

"The Japanese losses on both days were seven killed. The Chinese lost 100. In the action at Yih-Min-Shan our loss was twelve killed and sixty one wounded. We buried over 120 Chinese. Gen Tomoyasu, with his brigade, is pursuing the Chinese army under Gen. I."

A dispatch from Tientsin says that the foreign sailors and marines who were summoned to Pekin to protect the legations of their respective countries could not get permission to travel through Chinese territory.

The foreign ministers combined to protect their legations, whereupon the emperor issued a new order and appointed officers and soldiers to afford the necessary protection to the legations.

Tokio, Dec. 18.—The following statement is authorized for publication by Mr. Mutsa, the Japanese minister of foreign affairs:

"The Japanese government desires no concealment of the events at Port Arthur. On the contrary, it is investigating rigidly for the purpose of fixing the exact responsibility and is taking measures essential to the reputation of the empire.

"From the beginning of the war every conceivable precaution has been taken to guard against excesses. The discovery that discipline was unavailing in this single instance shocks and grieves both the civil and military authorities. The facts thus far gathered show conclusively:

"First, that the Japanese troops, transported with rage at the mutilation of their comrades by the enemy, broke through all restraints.

"Second, that, further exasperated by the wholesale attempts at escape disguised as citizens, they inflicted vengeance without discrimination.

"Third, that the detection on successive days of repeated Chinese atrocities rekindled the fury and provoked fresh acts of violence.

"The Japanese government deplores as a national misfortune the unexpected transgression of the principles to which it was and always will be pledged. It feels bound, nevertheless, to protest against exaggerations calculated to present the affair in a distorted and misleading aspect.

"Proofs have already been received that the victims, almost without exception, were soldiers wearing the stolen clothes of citizens, who had fled in a body long before the assault and are now returning, trustful and contented.

"While offering no palliation of what actually occurred, the Japanese government holds to the conviction that there was absolutely no intention to molest non-combatants. The whole truth, shall be reported as soon as practicable. Meanwhile the government hopes that public opinion will be guarded against extreme recitals."

Coal and Bread War.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 18.—A bread and coal war is on in this city. Eight of the twelve large bakeries are selling bread at the rate of two loaves for five cents. This is to meet a cut made by the others. Hard coal in stove size is selling at $3.50 per ton. A short time ago the local dealers tried to raise the price from $5.50 to $5.75 per ton. One dealer refused to raise and the cut was made to bring him into line. Coal will be down to $2 if the war is not settled soon.

HIS OWN EXECUTIONER

Murderer Cronin Compelled To Hang Himself.

The Slayer of Albert Skinner Set the Machinery in Motion, as Required by the New Law in Connecticut, That Broke His Neck—Last Moments of the Condemned Man.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 18.—The first man in the history of Connecticut, who has been compelled by law to kill himself, died here. He was John Cronin, "a worthless vagabond," who shot and killed Alfred Skinner, his employer on the morning of October 6, 1893. A self acting gallows, the machinery of which was started by Cronin stepping upon it, did the hanging.

It is a hydraulic, automatic affair, with wheels and cogs and springs and catches, and the whole sinister and stealthily working machinery is invisible, not only to the condemned man on the scaffold, but also to the officials and spectators.

Its operating machinery is so contrived that the murderer in stepping on the drop springs a catch that puts in motion a water power apparatus that, in a carefully regulated period of time, which may be lengthened or shortened, as the hangman desires, springs the trap and launches him into eternity, just as the old time gibbet was wont to do.

Thus the condemned man was marched up the gallows stairs and led upon the drop, his arms and legs strapped, the noose adjusted and the black cap drawn over his face.

In an instant, then, without warning, without a signal on the part of anybody, without an aggressive movement from the hangman or others, without any preliminary noise whatever on the part of the concealed machinery, the body of the criminal was shot into the air.

He had been hired man for Albert Skinner, a lean, lank, thrifty South Windsor farmer for several months and did good service for him.

On the morning of Oct. 6, 1893, Skinner was sitting in the kitchen of the one-story wooden house eating breakfast with his 5 year old daughter Irene. Suddenly "Jack" Cronin entered the room, drew a six-shooter from his pocket and discharged five of its chambers. One shot took effect in the back of Skinner, who arose from the table, placed his hand to his side, exclaiming "Oh mother, I'm shot," and started to go through a small hallway to the room where his wife was busy. He turned to come back to the kitchen and fell to the floor, unconscious. Mrs. Skinner rushed into the kitchen and seeing her husband upon the floor ran out into the yard screaming for help. C. C. Vinton and Arthur Gowdy, teamsters, were passing by and Mrs. Skinner called to Mr. Vinton to come in.

Cronin was found hanging about the road near by, and with great ugliness of speech and apparently in sullen temper said in reply to a question: "I shot the dog and I want to go in and finish him." Being told he would very likely have to stretch hemp for the deed, he said, "I don't care if I do. There are two or three more I would like to fix. One I would like to give two pills and another three."

Afterwards he attempted to get into the Skinner house and force his way to the bedroom where he could finish his victim, but was thrown down and secured.

The bullet entered the left side of Skinner's back just below the armpit, passing through a rib, the left lung, stomach and pleen into the diaphragm.

Typhoid Fever Almost Epidemic.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 18.—Typhoid fever is quite prevalent in this part of the state. There have been over 50 cases taken to the Hartford hospital since fall. At Bristol there have been two deaths in the family of Thomas O'Sullivan within two weeks and there are several other cases of a mild form. In the adjoining town of Plainfield there are six persons in one family down with the disease. There has been one death in another family, where other members are ill.

Will Appoint No Judges.

Albany, Dec. 18.—Gov.-elect Morton has issued a statement regarding the appointment of the twelve additional judges of the supreme court. He says that he has obtained the opinions of the most prominent legal authorities of the state, and that as they are adverse to the appointments, he will make none, but will wait and let the people elect them.

PUT BEFORE THE HOUSE

Springer Introduces Carlisle's Currency Bill.

The Chairman of the Finance Committee Makes His Report and Asks for the Immediate Consideration of the Measure—Action Is Taken To Protect the Forests.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The senate spent most of the day in a debate on the Nicaragua canal bill. In the house the army appropriation bill was called up and a measure to protect forests was passed. Carlisle's currency bill was introduced. The debate in the senate was of an interesting character.

Mr. Peffer (pop., Kan.) declared himself in favor of the enterprise, but opposed to the financial features of the bill. He questioned the ability of the government to pay in gold the bonds provided for in the bill, and asked, in a despairing tone, what the government was to do, when the day of the final payment of its outstanding bonds should arrive.

He foresaw financial difficulties in which domestic insurrection, or foreign war, or both, were the logical possibility. If silver coinage were restored, or a fresh issue of paper currency made, in which to pay the expenses of the construction of the canal, he would be in favor of the bill; but he was opposed to the further issue and sale of bonds for any purpose.

Mr. Squires (rep., Wash.) put forward no such conditions, but advocated the bill unqualifiedly, declaring that the work would be an enduring monument to the civilization of the age, and of more importance to the commerce of the west than the Suez canal was to the east.

But the pending measure was handled by Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) with vehement severity. While declaring himself in favor of an isthmian canal, he did not regard the pending measure as furnishing a means for its accomplishment.

He regarded it as one of those measures that would certainly lead to another failure (the 51st he thought) of a similar concession. Besides, he had grave doubts of its constitutionality, holding, as he did, that the government had no right to subsidize or to guarantee the paper of any corporation.

The only precendent that could be found for it was the case of the Pacific railroads, and he said that the government security for the repayment of the immense sum due by those companies was ample. Compared with the security which it would have from the Nicaraguan company—all of whose assets had been sold two years ago in New York, under a decree of the United States court for $287,000, and would not fetch fifty dollars to-day in London or Amsterdam.

He had not completed his speech when the senate adjourned.

It was suspension day, under the rules of the house, and before the army appropriation bill was called up by Chairman Outhwaite of the committee on military affairs, Mr. McRae (dem., Ark.), chairman of the committee on public lands, succeeded in passing the bill to protect public forest reservations, by a vote of 159 to 53.

The bill as reported from the committee was amended so as to give free timber to miners and settlers on public lands.

Mr. Springer (dem., Ill.) reported from the committee on banking and currency the Carlisle bill providing a new system of currency, and gave notice that he would ask the house to begin general debate upon it to-day. The bill was accompanied by the views of the majority prepared by Mr. Springer, and of the minority prepared by Mr. Walker (rep., Mass.)

The army appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1896, was passed, carrying a total of $23,259,808.09; also, an urgent deficiency bill of $100,000, to continue the operations of the government printing office.

The republican members of the finance committee have made a minority report, in which they denounce the currency scheme in unmeasured terms. They find serious fault with nearly all its provisions, and advise a strong opposition to the passage of the bill.

This opposition, when taken with that of a number of democrats, and the populists, is quite strong enough to kill the measure in the house, if such action is decided upon.

Killed Herself and Children.

Seligman, Mo., Dec. 18.—Mrs. Maggie Jones, living a few miles north of this place, procured a razor and cut the throats of her two children, Roy, aged 9, and Lulu, aged 8 years. Both children died immediately. Mrs. Jones then drew the knife across her own throat and inflicted a wound which caused almost instant death.

Train Wreckers Foiled.

Lynnfield, Mass., Dec. 18.—James Ramsdell, owner of a granite quarry near here found a number of iron plates wedged in the track of the Boston & Maine railroad. He removed them just in time to prevent the wreck of a train containing several hundred passengers.

The Sultan Reported Ill.

London, Dec. 18.—A correspondent in Vienna says: "Trusty private advices from Constantinople are to the effect that the sultan who has been ailing for some time, has acute neuralgia and is utterly prostrated."

Two Train Victims.

Ashland, Mass., Dec. 18.—A two-horse milk wagon in which were a man and boy, was struck by a Boston & Albany train at the Cordaville crossing. The man and horses were killed and the boy fatally injured.

LEARNED FRENCH DOGS.

Extraordinary Reasoning Powers of a Noble Animal Taught to Run Errands.

My hero is not a mutilated ram nor a "spy," in the technical terms of the police, but a large, robust, magnificent dog, whose beautiful white and curly fleece, like that of a sheep, was the cause of his being named Mouton (sheep.) His eye is mild and intelligent, and at times, when he is in good humor, one would say that he laughs, so animated his eye becomes and his jaws wriggle so drolly.

Mouton belongs to Duke J——, who resides in Charolais. When I say that he belongs to the duke I'm mistaken, for he is the property of the adopted son, the friend and the porter of John, his keeper.

John has brought him up carefully; he has taught him to perform tricks, but he has specially trained him to do his errands. The village from which the supplies are obtained is nearly two miles distant from the homestead, and when John has not time to go there he writes an order of what he needs on a piece of paper, puts the paper in a basket, and the handle of the basket in the dog's mouth, then pointing in the direction of the village, he says to him: "Run quick to Coulomier's." Coulomier is the grocer who has John's patronage.

Mouton trots off, and trots along without stopping, even though he meet a well-beloved female friend. Arriving at the village he deposits his basket in Coulomier's store. If by chance there is no one in the store he barks two or three times to call attention. When he sees the paper in the grocer's hands he goes out to reconnoiter; he drinks at the fountain, holding a smelling conversation with the dogs stretched out in the sun, like lizards, but he calculates his time so well that his loafing never exceeds a quarter of an hour, when he returns to the grocer. Coulomier has placed what is ordered in the basket, gives it to Mouton, who seizes it with his strong jaws and runs off with it homeward bound.

But one day the basket contained live eels, wrapped in a napkin. The route was along near a canal, and follows it for a long distance. Mouton, with the basket in his mouth, was trotting along, when suddenly the child of the lock-keeper, a baby two years old, fell into the canal. The dog hears the cries of the infant and the sound of splashing in the water; he sets down his basket, leaps into the canal, seizes the baby by its clothing and brings it to terra firma. The child does not move, and Mouton, who had laid it on the ground, takes it up again by its garments, and bears it to the lock-keeper's house. The mother was seated in the kitchen paring potatoes. Mouton enters at one bound and places the child upon her lap, and then hurries off to get his basket. But he finds that those rascally eels, perceiving that they were near the water, have wriggled and struggled in such a way that they have succeeded in escaping from their cloth prison. They were squirming in the dust, and aiming for the canal. Mouton, instead of seizing them by the tail or the middle of the body, grasped them by their heads and wrung their necks. After having thus laid them all out he placed their bodies in the basket again and took them to his master.

To go and carry that basket to the place where he had been taught to put it might, if necessary, be attributed to instinct merely, but nobody had taught him to save a child from drowning, and then, seeing the child inanimate, to take it up again and carry it to its mother, shows not only intelligence but goodness of heart.

Many a man, less intelligent than Mouton, would not have reasoned so well as this: "In order to take to my master what has been intrusted to my care I must kill these eels, for living I cannot get them back into the napkin, as while I am picking up one the others will get away." And notice that the seven eels were killed in the same way.

This brave dog is, according to my idea, more intelligent and has more mind than a good number of fresh young men of my acquaintance, who little suspect that they are far from being of as much value as the good Mouton.

The scene of saving the child and that of recapturing the eels was witnessed by two peasants who were on the other side of the canal.

This story, one year old, is absolutely true.—Paris Revue Spirite.

One Use for Wealth.

Lord Aberdeen is reported as telling the following story of himself: He left London at midnight in a sleeping car for the north. In the morning when he was awakened he saw a stranger opposite him.

"Excuse me," said the stranger; "may I ask if you are rich?"

Somewhat surprised, his lordship replied that he was tolerably well to do.

"May I ask," continued the stranger, "how rich you are?"

"Well, if it will do you any good to know," was the reply, "I suppose I have several hundred thousand pounds."

"Well," went on the stranger, "if I were as rich as you, and snored as loudly as you, I should take a whole car so as not to interrupt the sleep of others."

THE VETERAN

BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

On Saturday, Dec. 22, The Daily Press will begin the publication of a Christmas drama in two acts by Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward It is entitled "The Veteran", and tells in simplest, yet most pathetic fashion of the sorrows of a hero of the war, wounded by a bursting shell, blind, forgotten by his country, and reduced to singing in the streets for a livelihood until rescued from poverty by a friendly hand. It is a story of Christmas time, touching the heart and triumphing in justice. It is an appeal to sentiment, but the tears it starts are tears of joy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward is one of the foremost figures in American literary life, and has been regarded for years as our strongest woman writer. This study in the dramatic form is almost unique; it is probably her masterpiece in its direct appeal to the emotions and in its terse strength.

THE FATAL LOSS OF A NEGATIVE

By Mrs. ALEXANDER

for so feverishly. His keen eyes searched every carriage and scanned each group. Soon they were dispersed like grains of pepper thrown on water, while he was alone and despairing. Certainly Gwen Dashwood was not coming home to-night. He left the station and drove back to Lonsdale Gardens as fast as he could.

"No sign of her!" he exclaimed, rushing into the dining-room, where Mr. Ardell, thoroughly infected by his nephew's fears, was pacing to and fro.

"Not come!" cried the old man aghast. "Why, what—what can be the meaning of this—this extraordinary disappearance! Something unexpected has occurred. She has missed her train. She has been over-persuaded to stay the night—many things might have happened, but your—your unwarrantable surmise is—too—too preposterous. If Gwen were guilty of deceiving me, I'd—I'd—renounce her forever."

"You must not be too hard. If we can only prevent scandal. I should still be ready to carry out your wishes. I—"

"What is to be done next, Philip?" resumed his uncle as if he had not heard him.

"I'm sure I hardly know, sir. Shall I call at Everard's club to-morrow and ascertain if possible when he returns? But of course he will leave little or no trace of his movements."

"I am quite certain you do Gwen the greatest injustice, but, my dear boy, come to me to-morrow morning early, as early as you can. There is not much doing to-morrow, that case is not on till—till Wednesday, and young Pounceby can manage very well, at least for a few hours, and we must know something certain by the afternoon. No use in expecting her to-night, Philip. Take some brandy and soda before you go. I want some myself."

Both felt a little more hopeful after partaking of this refreshment, when they parted with some solemnity, and Blount made his way to his own place, where he passed a wretched night, harassed by frightful dreams, in which he found himself minus both the "beauz yeux" and the "cassette," of which he hoped to possess himself.

After a hasty visit to the office, for he never neglected business, Blount hurried to Lonsdale Gardens.

"Well, Philip, have you telegraphed?" was Mr. Ardell's salutation.

"No, sir, I thought you would, and two wires would seem ridiculous and suspicious."

"What matter, so long as we get information?" cried his uncle testily.

"I will go and telegraph myself," said Blount, anxious to be up and doing, and bent his steps to a central office at some distance, fancying it would be more rapidly dispatched than from the little local post office in a baker's shop. Returning, a runaway horse and a smashed vehicle impeded his progress, and on his arrival James received him with smiles. "Miss Dashwood is upstairs, sir—arrived just after you went out!"

Blount rushed upstairs, two steps at a time, flung open the door and beheld his uncle standing on the hearth-rug, playing nervously with his "pince-nez;" while, still in her hat—a very becoming one—an open telegram in her hand, Gwen was walking up and down in (not to put too fine a point upon it) a towering rage.

"To make all this fuss about nothing!" she was saying. "To insult me with such suspicions, and you, uncle, to believe them! Ah, Philip, I wonder you dare to look me in the face! I know it is all your doing. You have upset Uncle Ardell frightfully, he is quite ill. How dare you accuse me of such baseness! Yes, uncle has told me everything, and I see that you are a low-minded, disagreeable creature, and I was beginning to think better of you. The whole mystery has arisen from a mistake, either of mine or the telegraph clerk at R——. The telegram I thought I sent—that I intended to send—was: 'Shall not be home to-night.' Either he or I omitted the negative!"

"My dear Gwen," began Blount, imploringly.

"Don't 'dear' me!" she interrupted.

"HOW DARE YOU ACCUSE ME OF SUCH BASENESS."

"Don't laugh at my jealous fancy, but—but suppose he persuaded Gwen to accompany him!"

"Impossible, sir!" was the indignant answer. "You show your ignorance of my niece by such a suspicion."

"But, uncle, women are so queer and flighty, and—and just see how this wire gives color to my idea! Why need she send it at all? It would have been no great matter if James had gone to meet several trains. Was it not calculated to keep the whole afternoon free? See, there are only three trains in the day from R——, and Everard could have met her and started by the mail train for Paris, or God knows where. He had some power over her. I heard him say—" and he repeated the story of the ball which he had told Marling in the morning.

At first Mr. Ardell was indignant and incredulous, but as Blount persisted and insisted on the weakness, gullibility and fancifulness of women, especially young ones, the elder man grew restless, irritable and blustering.

"Time will show, sir!" cried Blount at last, looking at the heavy classical bronze clock over the fireplace; "and I haven't left myself too much to get to the station by 10:20. God grant I may bring back Gwendoline safe and sound to you. I may exaggerate things, but I hardly hope to find her!"

"Nonsense, Philip. I believe you are out of your mind; but you have made me very uncomfortable," returned Mr. Ardell, ringing the bell. "Come back as fast as you can. Whistle a cab for Mr. Blount," he continued, as James appeared in answer to the bell.

"You must not agitate yourself too much, my dear uncle," said Blount, rising and feeling some compunction at having worked up his host to such a pitch of uneasiness, and he left the room.

A hansom already awaited him, and he was soon rattling towards Paddington.

By this time he had reached a condition of mind which induced him to seek comfort by recapitulating his uncle's arguments against himself.

Suppose his horrible suspicions proved true. Mr. Ardell would certainly cut off Gwen with a shilling—or, perhaps a farthing—possibly all his uncle's fortune might come to him. "But I want Gwen, too," he thought. "I have always been fond of her. There's such go and style about her, and just lately she has been so sweet and friendly. What bright, mischievous brown eyes she has. There's no girl in our set fit to tie her shoes. No, all the money wouldn't be worth much, at least not now, if Gwen slipped through my fingers. Hullo! the arrival platform. Cabby, mind what you are about. I want to meet the 10:20 from R——, and it's 10:17 now."

In a few seconds he had alighted and was pacing the platform.

The rush and bustle of the early evening trains were over. The [illegible] tion looked gloomy and deserted—very few porters were about and the 10:20 was evidently a thing of no importance.

Blount paced slowly up and down revolving the possibilities of his position.

Gwen was certainly what is called a girl of spirit, not to say slightly headstrong, and there was no saying what a young woman of that description might, could or would do. What motive had she in sending that mysterious telegram, if it were not to mask her movements? "Here, porter; isn't the 10:20 from R—— behind time?"

"Well, it often is—but it's signaled now, sir."

A few more uneasy, miserable minutes and the panting engine was alongside the platform, while the porters were opening and banging the doors. The train was fairly full of better class 'Arrys and 'Arriets who had been boating, plump mothers with numerous olive branches returning from excursions along the river, lover-like couples of a higher grade, eager to jump into hansoms as if fearful of being behind time; men in flannels, girls in muslins and shady hats, for it had been a glorious summer's day. But no sign of the tall distinguished figure he sought

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Dislocated His Elbow.

Saturday afternoon Howard, the young son of C. W. Ellis of South avenue, while riding his wheel on Woodland avenue, struck some obstruction in the road and was thrown over, striking on his hands. The force of the fall was severe enough to dislocate one elbow. The little fellow suffered considerable pain from his arm. A doctor being called, the arm was set in plaster, and it will be some time before he can regain its use.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY—Dear Sir—I am 60 years old and generally played out, or so I thought up to two weeks ago when I commenced to use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

For years I have suffered with inflammation of the bladder and kidneys, and have grown worse. Besides constant pain in the kidneys and bladder, I have had rheumatic pain in every muscle and joint, and have often remarked that there was not a man living that had suffered as much as I had, but I must say I have not for a single day in five years felt as well in every way as I do now. Have improved daily since I began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. About a week ago I gave a man afflicted with bladder trouble part of a bottle of Favorite Remedy and he said to me today, "that is a great medicine; I am better already," and he drove eight miles to a druggist to get a bottle. Respectfully yours, S. I. YOUNG, Hiram, O.

WONDERS OF NATURAL HISTORY.

Some of the Marvelous Common Things that Are Not Generally Known.

In the mountains of Sweden Norway and Lapland all vegetation would be destroyed by the Norway rats were it not for the white foxes that make special game of the rodents.

The horn of the rhinoceros does not grow from the bone, but it is a mere excrescence of the skin, like the hair and nails. It can be separated from the skin by the use of a sharp knife.

The chameleon's eyes are situated in bony sockets projecting from the head. By this contrivance the animal can see in any direction without the slightest motion save of the eye.

The habit of turning around three or four times before lying down has survived in the domestic dog from his savage ancestry. It then served to break down the grass and make a bed.

Were it not for the multitude of storks that throng to Egypt every winter, there would be no living in the country, for after every inundation frogs appear in most incredible numbers.

The blood flows almost as freely through the bones as through the flesh of very young children, but as age comes on, the blood vessels in the bones are almost filled with matter.

A curious partnership often exists between the sea anemone and the hermit crab. The latter always has an anemone fastened to his shell, and when he changes his quarters he takes his anemone along, provided he can detach it from the old shell.

The toad captures insects by darting out its tongue so rapidly that the eye can not follow. The tip is covered with a glutinous secretion, to which a fly or other insect adheres.

The land tortoises of many countries bury themselves in the mud at the bottoms of streams and marshes on the approach of winter, and also at the coming of a protracted drought.

The hedgehog, badger, squirrel, and some kinds of mice lay up a regular store of provisions for the winter. It is said that they eat only during mild weather, and in extreme cold remain torpid.

Animals that live in cold countries have a warm matting of wool or fine fur underneath their hairy coats, so that they are almost perfectly protected from the cold. This wool usually falls off in summer.

The whiskers of a cat are supposed by some naturalists to be provided with nerves down to the tip, while others believe that the base of the hair is better fitted out with nerves than most other parts of the skin.

The vital principle is strongest in the common tortoise. One of these animals has lived for six months after the removal of its brain, and the severed head has given signs of life three days after being cut off.

The stentor, or trumpet animalcule, is shaped exactly like a trumpet, save that at the small end there is a globe which seems to answer the purpose of heart, stomach, liver, lungs, and all other organs.

The beaver has more skill than a Government engineer. The dams constructed by beavers are never washed away, while every freshet witnesses the destruction of a portion at least of the Government works on the river.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile frequently travels long distances by sea. It has been seen 1,000 miles from land, and it is possible that these sea going crocodiles have given rise to sea serpent stories.

In a wild state the elephant is a nocturnal animal. When domesticated his size and dark color make him a great sufferer from the heat. To relieve himself he draws water from his stomach by means of his trunk and squirts it over his body.

Speed for Man.

There is a thrilling revelation in witnessing for the first time a flight of trained bicyclists whirling around a track at a rate of speed of which the ambition of old day athletes slept in peaceful ignorance. If a prophetic genius of thirty years ago had ventured the opinion that this generation would enjoy the use of a machine which man's own physical strength could drive 30 miles an hour or faster even, his incredulous hearer would have been likely to whisper "steam." Yet we have to-day such a machine, not only established in the favor of thousands of young men given naturally to activity, but rapidly capturing the respect and the fancy of people of all sexes, sizes, and pursuits, to whom the hitherto known forms of exercise have been difficult or impossible. The bicycle has created a sentiment for itself and for the outdoor customs it leads to, which amount to a genuine cult. The generic name of "wheelman" describes a wheelman indeed, in spirit and in habit both.

Two Famous Old Apple Trees.

The decayed stump is all that remains of the famous mother tree, the oldest known specimen of the Rhode Island Greening. A few rods southwest of the of the old limekiln or the northern verge of Fruit Hill, on Frederick W. Winsor's farm, stands a young tree. Mrs. Winsor's great-great-grandfather, Nehemiah Smith planted the mother tree, of which the other is a limb wrenched while loaded with fruit from the parent stock, during King George's reign, in 1784, and was therefore 141 years old when it was cut down in 1889, and its life from the seed must be nearly 150 years.

The present tree, the daughter tree, so called, is a limb of the mother trunk and was broken off in the September gale of 1815, and which, from an elbow thrust into the moist, rich soil, took root and became independent. The fruit of these trees are the finest of the Greening family and hundred of scions from the stock are introduce into New York and the Middle States.—Providence Journal.

THE PHILHARMONIC.

SECOND CONCERT OF THE SEASON IN THE CASINO.

Gratifying Repetition of Former Successes—Everybody Delighted with the Superb Singing and Faultless Orchestration.

The New York Philharmonic Club's second appearance in Plainfield this season was last night the occasion of unalloyed enjoyment for the music-loving coterie of the town. The two soloists who assisted at last night's entertainment cannot be regarded as being equal to those who appeared at the first Philharmonic, but the audience at the second seemed more enthusiastic than that of the first concert. Miss Clara C. Henley has a voice of a high grade, and she exercises its power to the fullest extent. She is making of her talent all that it is capable of producing. The gem of the evening was her song "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark". Eugene Weiner's flute obligato furnished the most satisfying of accompaniments, and his performance fully justified the request made by The Daily Press in its report of the first concert for a more prominent place for Mr. Weiner in the succeeding concert. None but a musician at heart and a student withal may obtain the command of the flute such as he holds.

The singing of Conrad Behrens was a novelty for this city in some degree, inasmuch as his voice is perhaps the fullest and most heavy of anyone appearing here for several seasons. That he was unused to such a small audience room seemed evident from his pronounced intonation and gestures, but he handled his voice most skilfully. His lower notes were particularly full and deep, but not always clear, and this marred somewhat the enjoyment of a voice that, with orchestral accompaniment, would have appeared to better advantage. He will be heard with excellent effect in "The Messiah" of the Choral Dec. 27.

The aria, "The Jewess" by Halevey, was his best selection, although after singing his last two songs by F. Abt he was accorded an encore, the rendition of which in return demanded his reappearance. Not a word may be said in unfavorable criticism of the society's orchestral work. It was as ever finished; perfect in harmony and shading. The selections which it was pleased to present were mostly familiar to all present, and therefore better enjoyed because of their familiarity. Schumann's "Traumerei" and Haydn's quartette variations of "God Save the Emperor" were enthusiastically received and heartily appreciated by everyone in the Casino, because that music which never dies was played with the perfection which adds to its intrinsic beauty.

H. Otis Newman ought to receive, undoubtedly is receiving, the acknowledgments of gratitude from Plainfielders for the splendid and elevating performances which the Philharmonic Society and the soloists he has selected are presenting this season.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

A declamation by Fred Coriell, '95, was a part of yesterday's opening exercises in Assembly Hall.

The stereopticon entertainment of the Kappa Delta Phi planned for Thursday evening has been given up on account of the too-short notice.

The joint committee from the classes to select school colors and a school yell met yesterday. The committee consists of the following: From the Senior class, Charles B. Morse, Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Franc Bailey; from the Junior class, Carlos C. Gallup, Miss Louise Bowman, Lambert Fish; from the Third class, Arthur B. Crane, Miss Mabel Smith, J. V. Rittenhouse; from the Fourth class, Geo P. Smith, Walter Serrell, Benj. O. Bowers, Jr. Charles B Morse, '95, was elected chairman; and C. C. Gallup, '96, Miss Franc Bailey, '95, and Miss Mabel Smith, '97, were appointed to propose colors G.P. Smith, '98, J. V. Rittenhouse, '97, and Lambert Fish were appointed to suggest several yells.

Decorating for Christmas will commence this afternoon. The regular Wednesday singing lesson of the High School was spent in practicing the Christmas carols for Friday.

Many of the college boys have returned and at morning exercises, we had the pleasure of seeing once more the familiar faces of Stephen Rushmore '93, John C. Whiting '93, and Fred W. Goddard '94, all now students of Amherst College.

Walter B. Rittenhouse, formerly a member of the class of '95, but at present a Freshman at Stevens Institute, has returned to his home on East Sixth street to spend his Christmas vacation.

—Iron and wood toys at Harper's, 411 Park avenue.

—Thatcher & Johnson's Minstrels are booked for Music Hall Feb. 4.

—An entertainment will be given in Hope Chapel Thursday evening at 8. The Willing Helpers will have charge. There will be no admission fee, but a silver collection will be taken after the entertainment.

PLAINFIELD AFFAIRS.

Women Meet to Talk Over the Municipal Doings of Men.

At the session of the Plainfield Branch Alliance held yesterday afternoon in All Souls Church, several very interesting papers were read on topics touching our present local government.

David Prescott Hall prepared a most interesting and instructive paper combining the topics "Relation of our City to County and State" and "Appointment of Officers and Functions of the Same". These subjects were handled in a most thorough, instructive and interesting manner, showing marked familiarity with the topics under discussion, and making clear many points heretofore not fully understood by the audience.

Mrs. David P. Hall read the papers, as also one by O. B. Leonard on "Taxation and Public Expenditure", which was concise, clear, interesting and to the point.

Miss Edith R. Leonard read a paper by George D. Patten which in a lucid and entertaining manner enlarged upon the "General Conduct of Elections", which was well received by the listeners.

Following the reading of the papers the women discussed the topic "Is Vote-Selling Prevalent", and Mrs. Hall read several pertinent extracts from "Brice's American Commonwealth". Extracts from the report of the Clerk of the Board of Education touching the matter of the recent decision of the Supreme Court in regard to women's voting also were read by Mrs. Hall.

From these extracts The Press quotes: "The new law seems to have affected them, (the women), as seriously as it has the men, but with the withdrawal of the franchise has come an almost utter cessation of women's interest in school affairs. It is possible that this will pass over, but at the best we are deprived of their assistance where it would do the most good namely, at the school meetings, and that at a time when we need them the most."

The women desire to return their hearty thanks to the men who so kindly prepared the papers cited above, for the clear, concise, and instructive manner in which the topics were handled, treating of what would naturally appear to be dry statistical matter in a manner interesting and thoroughly enjoyable to all assembled.

At the next meeting, January 22, the subject of "Local Charities" will be discussed.

Whist for Prizes.

Miss Ethel Green of East Fifth street entertained the whist club of which she is a member, at her home last evening, when another game of duplicate whist was played in the series. When the games are completed prizes will be awarded to those having the most points.

Those present were Miss Arleen Crane, Miss Patten, Miss Genevieve Daniels, Miss Swayze; the Misses Smith of South Plainfield; Miss Smith of New York; Fletcher Hallock, Volney Green, Arthur Freeman, Ted Freeman, Horace Moore, Harry Patten, Fred Smith, Gilmour Drayton; Mr. Brownell of New York; Clarence Cree of Elizabeth; Mr. Swayze, and F. L. C. Martin.

Christian Endeavor Progress.

A meeting of superintendents of Junior Christian Endeavor societies will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, this city, Thursday afternoon at 3:45, to discuss the advisability of forming a Junior C. E. Union of Union county. Mrs. W. T. Lowry, superintendent of Junior Work in the county, is leading in the movement.

A. B. Wilson of Rahway has just been appointed district secretary of C. E. for Union county, in the place of Miss Alice Spangenberg, who resigned owing to her acceptance of the superintendency of the State missionary department.

Conundrums.

Why is a hen a poor economist? Because for every grain she gives a peck. That 's easy. And here 's another that 's just as easy if you know how to solve it. Where can I get the best and most substantial Christmas presents? The answer of those who have successfully fathomed that query is, "At Collier's 103 Park avenue". Whatever you get there is attractive, cannot be surpassed in excess of value over price, and has the merit of durability.

Perhaps a Parsonage Next.

Now that the Plainfield Methodists are freed from debt through their own energy and enterprise, they have a clear field to accomplish another glory, and that is the completion of their corner by the erection of a handsome and convenient parsonage adjoining the church. The land is held by a leader of the flock, and is therefore easy of acquirement, and the benefit to the church property and to the church work would be great.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

QUESTION OF HAPPINESS.

EVONA DEBATERS TALK IT OVER AND LEAVE IT STILL UNSETTLED.

An Interesting Meeting of the Lyceum Society in Which Would-Be-Mayor Bell Is a Prominent Figure.

The Clinton Avenue Lyceum Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest held an adjourned meeting last evening in the parish house. The attendance of members was very fair, and a programme of much merit was presented and enjoyed.

President Edwin Bishop called the meeting to order, and Secretary H. Lewis read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved. He then made a motion that when they adjourned it be to meet Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, at which time a constitution will be adopted and bylaws be made to govern the workings of the society, which was carried.

A delightful instrumental duet was rendered by the Misses Graves, and appreciated exceedingly.

The debate of the evening was highly interesting, the subject being "Resolved, That the people of the United States were happier from 1800 to 1861 than from 1861 to the present time."

The affirmative side of the question was taken by Mr. Fosgate, and in the absence of Isaac Weston the negative was taken by George F. Koster.

Mr. Fosgate gave a very able address on the question, in which he cited the railroad strikes, the many inventions of the past few years, and the grabbing tendencies of monopolists and corporations, all of which he claimed made the people unhappy. He spoke of the good old times when strife was practically unknown, and everyone felt himself or herself to be on an equal basis.

For the negative Mr. Koster spoke very strongly, and gave many valuable illustrations of how happiness had been promoted since 1861. Education, he said, had been a prime factor in accomplishing this. In those former days, he said, it would take a person from a half hour to an hour to get a fire started in the morning which would prepare his breakfast, whereas now it took only a few minutes, all of which was brought about by inventions. He did not think the railroad strikes had any particular bearing on the question, and held that as a promoter of happiness the excellent facilities for crossing the continent by rail in a few days were a great boon.

An excellent paper was read by Mr Lewis, in support of the affirmative; and James Bell, ex-candidate for mayor made a few remarks in favor of the negative, all of which were full of interest.

There being several other numbers on the programme, a motion was made and carried that the continuation of the debate be laid over till the next regular meeting after January 8.

George F. Koster then pleased all with a baritone solo, "That Is Love", its rendition being very creditable. A paper on "Inventions" by Mr. Fosgate was read by the secretary, and its broadness of thought and well defined ideas made it one of deep interest. A tenor solo by Mr. Timmis, "In Days of Old", was given a hearty reception, being full of vigor and melody. Another paper was read by the secretary on "Corporations", which had been prepared by James Bell. It was one of much merit and full of interesting points. Mr. Lewis then sang that beautiful selection, "The Holy City", in an excellent manner.

Mrs. Lewis was the efficient accompanist of the evening.

The meeting was adjourned, all being highly pleased with the efforts of the members to entertain.

Merely a Technical Transfer.

The transfer of Y. M. C. A. property to be made the evening of Dec. 27 is considered a temporary matter to secure the syndicate of generous citizens who advanced the funds needed to complete the building. The land to be transferred is the strip which was to be yielded to the extension of Watchung avenue. As the advocates of the extension project hope that some day the extension will become a realization, the land will be kept vacant, and the contemplated transfer is merely a legal technicality.

—An attractive Christmas entertainment will be enjoyed at the Bryant School, East Sixth street, Friday afternoon at 2.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. A GREAT CHURCH.

IT IS THE CREATION OF A PLAINFIELDER'S GENIUS.

Cost $57,000, and Is Modeled Internally After the First Presbyterian Church of East Front Street.

The large and beautiful new church in Somerville, known as the Second Reformed Church, was dedicated yesterday before an audience of a thousand persons, who three times during the day and evening filled to overflowing the spacious edifice. The church is by far one of the largest and most elegant structures in the country; in fact, it is one of the prettiest in the State. It is, architecturally, the creation of our townsman, Oscar S. Teale, and reflects great credit on his discriminating judgement.

The church seats 900 people. Generally speaking, its interior arrangement resembles that of the First Presbyterian Church of Plainfield, though the interior is much more spacious. The front, which has two towers, is of stone; the remainder of the building is of brick. Every convenience known to the modern church is here, and is required, because the Sunday-school has about 350 regular attendants, the church membership exceeds 500, and the Christian Endeavor Society is much the largest in the county. The cost of the building was $57,000, and the mortgage indebtedness upon it will be only $12,000.

Dr. John Talmage and brother of Brooklyn, (cousins of the famous preacher), presented the church with a memorial east window, "Easter Morn", costing $3,500, in remembrance of their parents, Major and Mrs. Thomas Talmage, and the Christian Endeavor Society gave a south window, "The Good Shepherd", valued at $1,000. These two works of art have received high praise.

Among those who participated in the exercises were the pastor Rev. E. G Read, Rev. Dr. J. P. Searle, who preached the sermon, Revs. Deschambers, Elmendorf and Deury of New York city, Rev. Dr. Craven, Rev. Dr. Mesick, Revs. Messrs. Hart, Deolittle, LeFevre, Mets and others. The services are continued tonight and tomorrow night.

GOOD SPORT ON PARK ALLEYS.

Anybody's Game for Awhile, and Plenty of Excitement Throughout.

The bowling contest at the Park Club last evening between the club team and the New Jersey Athletic Club of Bergen Point, was interesting from start to finish. The teams and their enthusiastic friends fairly made "Rome howl" whenever a particularly brilliant play increased the prospect of their favorites being victorious.

The home team made several costly misplays in the first frame, and at one point in the game their opponents had piled up 96 pins to their credit above the score of the Parks, but the latter team got into their fighting clothes at once, and point by point pulled down the average so steadily that it was anybody's game up to the very last frame.

Smith of the Athletics steadily climbed to the 180 mark with G. C. Worth of the Parks following close on his heels with 175. The Athletic Club yell frequently resounded through the hall, and as frequently the walls re-echoed the uncontrolled pleasure of the Park Club and their rooters when their stock went higher as a particularly well-placed ball went spinning down the alley, taking everything before it.

Messrs. Reed and Pitcher scored respectively for the Parks and the Athletics, while Roger Erickson and Mr. Robertson acted as umpires.

The score:

N. J. A. C.		P. C.
Duryee	129	Sandford	143
Coles	165	Worth, G. C.	175
Wilmerding	167	Randolph	158

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bovey of Stone street are spending a month at the home of Mrs. Bovey's parents, Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn.

James Demarest and family of Brooklyn have rented the Gilbert cottage on Woodland avenue, Netherwood, for a term of years.

Monte Scott returned from Philadelphia yesterday, and today left for Providence, where he will spend Christmas with his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clark left today by the Big Four route for St. Louis, where they will spend the Christmas season at the home of their son.

Miss Blanche Jones of Westervelt avenue, who has been entertaining friends from Philadelphia, regretfully bade them adieu as they left for home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur and daughter Miss Louise, of East Third street, were the guests yesterday and last evening of ex-Chief William H. Voorhees and family in Brooklyn.

G. S. Whitlock, who has been engaged for three months past in constructing beef houses in Scranton for Swift & Co., returned to town Sunday. He reports business very brisk in that section, and is much surprised at the apparent lethargy which exists here in business circles.

Mrs. Michael O'Keeffe, who has been an inmate of Morris Plains Insane Asylum for the past three months, died at that place yesterday. Her body was taken to New York, and interment will be made in Calvary cemetery, Long Island. She leaves a husband and one son, age 10, of Plainfield.

Samuel Prescott Hall and Wesley Abbott of Plainfield, members of the football team of the Elizabeth Athletic Association, will attend a banquet given in honor of the team, which, by the way, was one of the most successful teams in the State in defending its standard during the season just closed. The banquet takes place at Hotel Netherland, New York, tomorrow evening.

—Wm. C. Kelly is building a two-story frame house on his property at Oak Tree.

—The semi-annual nomination of officers for the ensuing term will take place at the wigwam of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe this evening. Members are particularly requested to be present if possible as many candidates are in the field and a lively election will doubtless result. An enjoyable time is promised by the Entertainment Committee when the election is over.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. AGAINST THE COMPANY

Judge Carpenter Ends the Bell Telephone Suit.

His Decision Effects Patent Rights Estimated To Be Worth at Least $25,000,000 — Fourteen Years of Litigation Stopped Temporarily—Another Appeal May Be Taken.

Boston, Dec. 19.—The long contested patent suit of the United States vs. the American Bell Telephone company was ended when Judge Carpenter, of the United States circuit court, rendered a decision against the Telephone company.

This suit was a bill in equity praying for the repeal of letters patent issued to Emile Berliner, assignor of the American Bell Telephone company, for a combined telephone and telegraph system.

The case has been in the court for a number of years, and is already familiar to the public. The patents known as the Berliner patents were issued to the Telephone company, but never put into use by them on account, they claimed, of the expense of making changes in the telephone system, while other companies were prevented from using the system.

The first ground of the bill brought by the complainants in this suit is that the patent is void, as being beyond the power of the commissioners to issue.

On this point the decision of Judge Carpenter declares:

"It appears that one of the functions of the device shown in the patent of 1880, namely, the function of transmitting articulate speech, is identical with the sole object or function of the device covered by the patent of 1891, and that the device for effecting the transmission of sound is identical in both patents. The patent, therefore, seems to me to be void and beyond the power of the commissioners to issue."

The value of the patent involved is said to be $25,000,000.

The government's case against the Bell Telephone contained two counts, and the judge sustained the government in both. The first count was in effect that the issuance of the patent to Berliner was unnecessarily delayed, and the second count was in substance that a former patent issued to Berliner covered substantially the same claims as made in the patent issued in 1891.

The case was argued June 14, 16, 18, 19 and 20 before Judge Carpenter. The patent which has been declared void was issued by the United States patent office Nov. 17, 1891, to Emile Berliner, assignor to the American Bell Telephone company, and it was one of the schemes by which the Bell company hoped to extend its term of monopoly for seventeen years.

For fourteen years the Berliner application lay in the patent office, the centre of litigation. The same company owned two or more opposing apposing applications, and played them one against the other, in order to delay the granting of a patent.

When after fourteen years Commissioner Simonds granted the Berliner patent, the American Bell company believed that it covered features which were necessary to the practical use of telephones, and that by such it would bar out would-be competitors after the bell patents expired which they did in January last. The decision means that the field is now clear, and that cheaper telephones must necessarily follow.

DEBS WILL GO TO JAIL.

With His Colleagues, He Has Decided Not To Appeal.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway union, and his colleagues have decided to take the penalty imposed by Judge Woods for contempt of court, without appeal. They will go to the Cook county jail next Monday.

The officials reached this decision without the advice of their attorneys, and their decision is positive. Debs says an appeal would be probably of no avail. The worry and expense were also considerations.

New Jersey Baseball League.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 19.—A preliminary meeting of the men interested in the formation of a baseball league in this state was held here. It was decided that the league should be made up of the cities in New Jersey and should not be an interstate league as was proposed. When the league is formed there will be eight cities in it.

St. Johns' Bank Scandal.

DEBATED ON CURRENCY

Carlisle's Bill Finally Taken Up by the House.

Chairman Springer, Who Introduced the Measure, Spoke in Behalf of It as Did Other Members of the Committee on Banking—Mr. Hill Attacks the Senate Rules.

Wasington, Dec. 19.—Secretary Carlisle's currency plan was the subject of debate in the house. In the senate Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) made an attack upon the present rules governing debate in that body.

The house bill for the forfeiture of railroad lands in cases where the road was not built within the time fixed by the grant, although subsequently completed and accepted by the government, was reported back adversely from the committee on public lands and placed on the calendar.

It was stated by the chairman of the committee (Mr. Berry, dem., Ark.) that the members of that committee stood five for and five against the bill; but that one of the former had voted for an adverse report rather than have the bill die in committee and so that there might be a vote of the senate upon it.

A resolution in favor of the political union of Canada and the United States was offered by Mr. Gallinger (rep., N. H.), and referred to the chairman on foreign relations with the suggestion that this committee shall grant hearings on the subject.

An hour's speech was made by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) in favor of his proposed cloture rule. The keynote of his speech was that "an inability to stop debate is an inability to legislate at all." The resolution went over without action till this afternoon.

The Nicaraguan canal bill was then taken up and Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) continued his attack.

The debate upon the currency plan proposed in the Carlisle bill, reported from the committee on banking and currency, was begun in the house in the morning according to the notice given by Chairman Springer.

Objection was made to Mr. Springer's request for unanimous consent that general debate should be closed with the adjournment of the house with no agreement of limitation in for the holiday recess, and it began sight.

The first speakers were Mr. Springer (dem., Ill.), in favor of the bill, and Mr. Walker (rep., Mass.), who advocated the adoption of his bill which he said he would offer as a substitute for the Carlisle bill.

These gentlemen recognized as the leaders of the forces for and against the bill, spoke without limit, and were listened to attentively throughout by a large proportion of the members of the house.

The last of the session was occupied by Mr. Hall, (dem., Mo.), a member of the committee on banking and currency, who reviewed at length the objections to the Carlisle bill made in the report of the minority of the committee.

He declared them to be absurd, and said that the condition which confronted the house was that if any relief were desired from the inequalities and oppression of the present national banking law, the Carlisle bill must be passed.

The debate, in accordance with the present understanding, will continue the remainder of the week.

The bill to make a national park of the Gettysburg battle field was favorably reported.

In his speech on the cloture resolution Mr. Hill said that it was a significant fact that some method of closing debate existed in the principal legislative bodies of every civilized government in the world except in the English house of lords and the United States senate.

But the house of lords was surely not a body from which the United States senate should pattern, especially in view of its loss of public confidence, its defiance of public sentiment, and its well-known general antipathies to progressive legislation in the interest of the masses.

Its rules were a portion of its methods for obstructing popular reform. So far as the senate was concerned, parliamentary reform was the need of the hour. The present afforded an opportune time for the accomplishment of the proposed innovation. The course was open now as it ever would be for such a change.

No silly cry of "gag law," no false assertion of "suppressing debate," no idle clamor about "the tyranny of the majority," which always ignored the tyranny of the minority, should be permitted to deter senators from their plain duty in the premises. The continuation of "no cloture" meant compromise on every measure. Mr. Hill occupied about an hour in the delivery of his speech.

He was followed by Mr. Hoar (rep., Mass.), who expressed his full agreement with Mr. Hill's view. The best scheme which occurred to him (Mr. Hoar) was that, after a particular time, the senate should be authorized to order the previous question and that, after that, every member of the body should have an opportunity to address the senate for some fixed time, perhaps, at least, one hour. That would bring the debate to an end in one hundred hours, if there were one hundred senators and each wished to speak.

ROMANCE OF A GALLOWS.

A Murderer's Daughter Sues for a Letter and Property.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Dec. 19.—E. E. Mason, of West Charlton, Saratoga county, has commenced legal proceedings for the recovery of a large amount of money and property, to which, he claims, his wife, Jane Mason, is entitled.

Mrs. Mason was the daughter of Edward H. Poindexter, who was hanged under the alias of Edward Earle, for the murder at Sageville, Hamilton county, on Oct. 14, 1881, of his wife, the mother of Mrs. Mason. He was a member of a wealthy Virginia family.

He left a letter in charge of Alonzo Andrews, of Northville, Fulton county. He charged Andrews to deliver the letter to his daughter when she came of age, or when she married. In addition, the condemned man left considerable property, it is claimed, in charge of Andrews, under the same conditions. Mason says that Andrews now refuses to deliver over the letter or the property. He is of the opinion that the letter contains valuable information in regard to Poindexter's early life and his relatives in Virginia, where, he believes, a large estate is located to which his wife is entitled.

PARALYSIS OF THE BRAIN

Was the Cause of Death of Robert Louis Stevenson.

London, Dec. 19.—A dispatch from Auckland to the Star contains a few additional details of the death of Robert Louis Stevenson, brought by the Samoan mails.

On the evening of December 3 Mr. Stevenson remarked to his wife that he felt a strange pain in his head. Almost immediately he fell back senseless and never regained consciousness. He died two hours later.

The cause of his death was paralysis of the brain, accompanied by collapse of the lungs. He was buried on December 4. An obelisk will be erected over his grave, which, from its great height on Pala Hill, will be a conspicuous landmark from the sea.

Mr. Stevenson had recently suffered from exhaustion of the brain and had been haunted by the fear that his popularity was on the wane.

REJECTED THE OVERTURES.

Presbyterians Won't Give the Assembly Control of Seminaries.

Pittsburg, Dec. 19.—The Monongahela Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church met in the fifth church, Pittsburg, and after an animated debate, rejected by a vote of 38 to 10, an overture from the general assembly that the latter body should have power over all the seminaries instead of their being separately controlled by the different synods, as at present.

The Allegheny Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church held a session in Allegheny. By a vote of 36 to 1 it also negatived the overtures of the assembly.

At the quarterly meeting of the Westmoreland County Presbytery, by a majority vote, the proposition was adopted.

GIVEN UP BY THE SEA.

Captain Overgaard's Body Had Been Buried a Year in the Sand.

London, Dec. 19.—The body of Captain Overgaard, of the ship Don Juan, which was wrecked off Lemvig, Denmark, on December 5, 1893, has been washed ashore near the spot where the vessel was wrecked.

The body, which evidently had been buried deeply in the sand and had been uncovered by the recent storm, was well preserved.

Among the papers found in the clothing were $180,000 in bank notes and American securities, which the authorities are holding for the proper claimants. The Don Juan was on a voyage from New York to Gothenburg when she was wrecked.

Disarmed the School.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 19.—Grand Juror Crampton was called upon to disarm the Madison district school and his efforts put him in possession of a half dozen modern revolvers and a small store of ammunition, which as many youngsters had been carrying for some time past. The boys had been reading "Wild West" novels and incidentally terrorizing the female portion of the school to such an extent that the grand juror had to be called in. No further proceedings, except domestic discipline, are looked for.

McBryde May Resign.

Columbus, O., Dec. 19.—According to the statement of President McBryde, the United Mine workers will meet here early in January and issue a call for the annual meeting in February. Mr. McBryde says he will probably resign the presidency and that Vice-President Penna of Indiana, will be a candidate for the position.

Alleged Train Wrecker Jailed.

Great Barrington, Mass., Dec. 19.—David Cary, a young man of Chemfield, was arrested here for an alleged effort to derail the Wilson Point freight by changing a switch near that station. He was arraigned in the district court at Great Barrington and pleaded not guilty. Cary gave $500 bonds for trial.

Brisson Succeeds Burdeau.

Paris, Dec. 19.—M. Brisson, who was prime minister at the fall of M. Jules Ferry in 1885, was elected president of the chamber of deputies to succeed the late M. Burdeau, by a vote of 249 to 213. The other candidate was M. Meline the French protectionist leader.

Knights of Labor Troubles.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 19.—District assembly 16, Knights of Labor, with 350 members and six local assemblies in northeastern Pennsylvania, have decided to pay no more dues to the orders.

Wanamaker Offers a Denial.

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—Ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker has denied that he asked Henry Clews of New York to take the presidency of the Reading railroad.

New Pennsylvania Railroad.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 19.—A charter has been granted for the construction of the Pittsburg, Brady's Run & Lake Erie railroad.

Wilbur Elected President.

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—John R. Wilbur has been elected president of the Lehigh Valley railroad.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

CURES OTHERS

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. Cures morning sickness, weak stomach, indigestion or dyspepsia, "female weakness" and kindred ailments.

MRS. DEMBY.

MRS. MANIE DEMBY, of 1503 Saratoga Street, Baltimore, Md., writes: "For three years I suffered from what my doctor called womb trouble. I cannot find language to describe the tortures I suffered. Sixteen weeks ago, I began to use your medicine, and now feel better and stronger than I have felt for years, in fact, my health is thoroughly restored and there are no signs of any return of my former trouble. I owe it all to your wonderful 'Favorite Prescription' which I shall always praise wherever I go."

MEN OF THE SENATE.

SOME OF THE WITTICISMS OF THE AUGUST LAW MAKERS.

Ransom's Generosity and Suavity. A Lesson in Etiquette by Coke of Texas to Some of His Constituency. Higgins Poses With a Chip on Each Shoulder.

In the list of the twelve who will be Senators no longer when the gavel of Vice-President Stevenson falls on March 4 next, there is one who has been a picturesque and striking figure in the Senate for more than 23 years. This is Senator Matt W. Ransom of North Carolina, who took his seat April 24, 1872, and has remained on duty ever since. Mr. Ransom is one of the handsome men of the Senate, and at times an eloquent speaker. He was one of the conspicuous Generals of the Confederate army, and came to Washington with the reputation of a man of ability, honor and chivalry. One day last autumn, during the crisis in the Senate struggle over the Silver Repeal bill, a reporter approached Gen. Ransom as he paced the lobby, his hands behind his back and his head bowed, and said:

"Senator, what will be the outcome of the fight?"

Drawing his caller aside, Gen. Ransom said with great solemnity: "My friend, I cannot tell you now, but you may say to the country that we are thinking—deeply thinking."

It was a sad day for the North Carolina Senator when the investigation into the connection of Senators with the Sugar Trust speculation developed the fact that his son had been purchasing the stock. The testimony showed that young Mr. Ransom had simply bought a certificate or two on his own responsibility, and without the consent or knowledge of his father. The transaction was in every way legitimate and proper, but Gen. Ransom felt keenly the notoriety it caused. But in his hour of trial his native shrewdness did not desert him, and by a clever move he managed to outwit those who attacked him and break the force of the prearranged newspaper sensation. A few days before the fact that young Mr. Ransom had purchased sugar stock was brought to light, a correspondent of a newspaper called upon the Senator, having in his possession the fact that a Mr. Ransom had bought sugar stock. This knowledge had been obtained by the expenditure of considerable time and money and the employment of the services of a detective or two. The interviewer was accompanied by a stenographer. As soon as his visitors had departed, however, Gen. Ransom hastened to the room of the Senatorial Investigating Committee, had himself sworn as a witness, and testified to everything he had told the newspaper man. An abstract of his testimony was published the following morning, and the newspaper was thus prevented from producing its anticipated sensation. A very tame article was published instead. When it appeared, Senator Ransom met the man who had interviewed him, in the elevator, and going up to him, and holding out his hand, he said, with all that impressiveness and grace for which he was noted:

"My dear friend, permit me, sah, to thank you for the extreme courtesy, sah, with which you and your papah have treated me in this mattah. I am under deep obligations for your kindness, sah."

Mr. Ransom's lack of wealth and the generosity of his heart were both shown by an incident that happened one day several years ago. He walked into the Senate Post Office one morning, and holding up a ragged shirt cuff before the eyes of the Assistant Postmaster, he said:

"Kellog, won't you please trim off the edges of my cuff?" and as the official did so the Senator said partly to himself: "Ah! me, these poor North Carolinians who find their way to Washington looking for office and without money will drive me to the poorhouse yet."

One of the picturesque landmarks of the Senate chamber who will be seen there no more after March 4 is Richard Coke of Texas, the big-limbed, big-headed, hairy giant who in 1877 succeeded M. C. Hamilton, the only Republican who ever got into the United States Senate from the State of Texas. Mr. Coke is one of that colony of Southern statesmen who live at the Metropolitan Hotel, the great Southern headquarters in Washington, and who has never become reconciled to the ways of modern civilization or political reconstruction.

The bearded man was in his room at the Metropolitan Hotel one morning in undress uniform, and engaged in the not slight task of shaving his upper lip. Some Texans who had come to town on public business, following the custom of their section, walked up stairs without being announced, rapped on the door of the Senator's room and walked in. The old man was furious. He turned around with his face covered with lather, the razor in his hand, and his eyes flashing fire, and, drawing himself up to his six or seven feet without his stockings, he said to his astonished friends:

"Don't you know that in Washington it is not polite to enter a man's room without asking permission. I have lived here long enough to learn that, if you have not. You will all please go down to the office and send up your cards in the regular way, like gentlemen."

The crestfallen Texans withdrew and sent up a servant with the written card of each of them. A moment later the servant returned and paralyzed the callers by the announcement:

"Senator Coke is not in."

Some of the Senators who are being opposed, but who are all apt to win in the legislature fights, are Manderson of Nebraska, one of the most popular men who ever sat in the Senate, and whose abilities as an orator and legislator are above the average; Chandler, of New Hampshire whose persistent activity and biting sarcasm keep his Democratic colleagues in a state of constant but fruitless indignation; Patton of Michigan, who shocked the tradition of the Senate by delivering his maiden speech a few weeks after taking seat, and is opposed for reelection by several ambitious Michiganders, including Julius Cæsar Burrows, "the Calliope of Kalamazoo," as he is sometimes irreverently called; Perkins of California, who made his bow as a debater with even less timidity than Patton; Cullom, of Illinois who has long maintained a prominent place in politics, chiefly, his enemies say, on the strength of his supposed resemblance to Abraham Lincoln, and Higgins of Delaware, whose seat Addicks, the Gas Man, is trying to seize. Higgins is one of the brightest men on the Republican side of the chamber, and when he gets up to speak, as he frequently does, he suggests to everybody the typical Irishman with a chip on each shoulder just spoiling for a fight.

A TABLE OF 800,000 PIECES.

Mr. Adam Spent 3,364 Hours Making Patriotic Designs in Mosaic.

Charles F. Adam, who is employed at general carpenter work by the Waterbury Brass Company, has just completed a table containing 800,000 pieces of wood. He started it in 1891 and has worked on it at odd times, in all 3,364 hours. It is a yard square.

In the centre of the revolving top is a picture of the White House at Washington, surrounded by the stars and stripes. Along the sides are shown Washington's birthplace in Virginia, his familiar Mt. Vernon home, the birthplace of Grant in Ohio, and the house where he attended school as a boy. Interwoven with these are many quaint designs. The support consists of two pieces of oak placed together in the form of the letter X. On these oak supports are sixteen panels on which are shown trees, birds and leaves. On the lower part are shown the American eagle with spread wings and a cluster of arrows in its talons, a deer's head, a stork, a sparrow and two roosters, Washington's Valley Forge headquarters, the birthplace of Lincoln in Kentucky; Ford's Theatre where Lincoln was shot and the place nereby where he died, the birthplace of Columbus at Genoa, a cloister in Spain visited by Columbus, the ship Constitution, Libby prison, a cluster of daisies, Lillies, a Scotch Thistle, and 36 varieties of leaves, with ferns and fruits. The Masonic Temple at Waterbury is given, as are several private residences.

There is nothing in the nature of dye, paint or stain in the whole work. The various effects are brought out solely by the natural colors of the different woods, of which there are 73 varieties in the table.

THE WHITE HOUSE SENTRY-BOX.

A Refuge for Night Watchmen Erected Opposite the Main Door.

A new ornament has been placed in the White House grounds which attracted a great deal of attention. It is a delicately tinted sentry box, with an ornate roof and filagree work around the eaves, placed directly in front of the main door of the White House and on the opposite side of the driveway. There is about it a martial look, and the story spread that Mr. Cleveland purposed hereafter to be constantly under the watchful eye of a box full of sentries.

THE WHITE HOUSE AND SENTRY BOX.

Mr. Thurber put this story to sleep by declaring that the box is intended solely for the use on cold nights of the night watchmen, who complain that the box now used by them does not command a good view of the grounds, being on the east side and towards the rear of the White House.

ARIZONA'S QUAKER SHERIFF.

The Climate Not Suited to the Principles in Which He Was Brought Up.

Arizona possesses a Quaker Sheriff who is startlingly effective. He is Commodore Perry Owens, Sheriff of Apache county, formerly City Marshal of Winslow, and one of the guards of the Wells-Fargo Express across Arizona. He is an Indianian who went to Arizona fifteen years ago. His people are Quakers, and live near Cartersburg, Ind. When a friend asked him the other day if the report was true that he had removed from active life more men than any other man in Arizona, he looked pained for a moment. Then he answered:

"I was raised a Quaker; but out here, you see, a man can't work at that. It ain't suited to the Arizona climate. I have done a good deal of shooting, but it has all been necessary and in the line of my official duty. My good mother, back in Hendrick's county, every now and then writes me a letter. She sees newspaper stories about me and she misunderstands them. You ask if I've shot 100 men. Well, no, I haven't; that is, unless you want to count Mexicans. I've only killed fourteen white men and wounded fifty-three. Some of them died after they were wounded, but that was the fault of the doctor.

"Over in Winslow, several years ago, I was the Sheriff and had a warrant for a fellow's arrest. I wrote to him to come in and surrender. He didn't even answer my letter. So after a while I went after him. He was at his mother's house, a double log cabin built in L shape. I tied my horse and went to the house. As I knocked on the door I caught a glimpse of two faces at a window at my back The door opened about a foot and the man I was after stuck a gun out. I let drive with my Winchester, and as I heard him drop I fired over my shoulder through the window. The second load caught two, killing one and shattering the arm of a younger brother. I knew that there was still another man in the house, and that it was dangerous to remain on the porch. I jumped out into the open ground, and as I did so I saw a man sheltering himself behind a buckboard. I ran a few steps and uncovered him. When it was all over there were three killed and one wounded. The whole affair took place inside a minute.

"I don't drink, I don't gamble, and I haven't ever been a favorite with the women. Most of the fellows who are shot get it because they want some woman to think they are bad men. They put on Mexican spurs, sombreros, and a cutthroat outfit, and start in for trouble. The coroner finds them with their boots on."

George Attempted Too Much.

"So it's all over between us, is it, Laura?" asked George, fiercely.

"Yes, George, it is over," replied Laura. "I wouldn't have minded your flirting with all the girls some of the time, or with some of the girls all the time, but I object to your flirting with all the girls all the time. Here is your ring.—Chicago Tribune.

Couldn't Deceive It.

"You needn't try to deceive me," said the curtain to the window, "I can see through you."—Rogersville Review.

There's nothing SO GOOD AS Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household. It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement. It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing LIKE Cottolene

in composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy. Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling in the place and on the merits of Cottolene. Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell. Get the genuine COTTOLENE.

CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

THE SPOKESMAN OF THE PEOPLE

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Aden Smith of Putnam avenue leave Friday for a visit to relatives in New York

Arthur H Serrell has returned from Lehigh University to spend the Christmas holidays at his home on Plainfield avenue

Edwin Howell, who has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. F. D Whiting of East Sixth street, has returned to his home in Chester, Pa.

The Daily Press regrets to have been misinformed in the statement that Mrs A. M. Ross was not present at her lamented husband's death. She was by his side, faithful and unremitting in her wifely attentions. Through further misinformation it was stated that the mother of decedent was now at his bedside Instead, she has not yet been able to leave her home in New York.

BY THE WAY.

—Panels today. Grand Union Tea Co., 138 West Front street.

—The lot adjoining the Babcock Building on West Front street is offered for sale.

—The Congregational Church will hold its Christmas celebration Friday evening, Dec.

—The Crescent Avenue Sunday-school entertainment takes place Friday, Dec 28, instead of Dec 27.

—Eugene Kelly, the well-known banker, died this morning at his home, 33 West Fifty-first street, New York.

—Neuman Bros., the Watchung avenue grocers, have a splendid stock of holiday delicacies. Get them to supply your Christmas table.

—There will be no prayer-meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church next Sunday evening.

—The case of Sacher against McQuaide came up in Justice Newcorn's Court this morning, and after a hearing the Justice reserved his decision till tomorrow morning at 10.

—A much-needed flag walk was laid today on the east side of Central avenue near Front street, and the house in the rear of Manning's Marble Works is being very much improved.

—A review of the Sunday-school lessons for the last six months, illustrated by 50 pictures by stereopticon, will be given in the Crescent Avenue Church, Wednesday, Dec. 26, at 8. Admission is free.

—The organ recital given by William R. MacClymont in the First Presbyterian Church last evening was gratifyingly successful, and a large audience gave unstinted applause to the various selections. Mr. MacClymont was assisted by graceful and talented Miss Violet Truell and expert Charles Davis.

—The Sunday-schools of the First Baptist Church the Third Street Mission and Mount Olive Baptist Church met in the Sunday-school room of the First Baptist Church last evening to practice Christmas carols. After the singing a taste of the coming delights was given to those present in the shape of a barrel of apples.

FANWOOD IS FIRM.

She Insists on Having the Trolley Road Built As She Wants It.

The Fanwood citizens discussed the trolley matter last night before the Town Committee. The granting of the franchise was withheld until the company would agree to build a spur from the main line to the village. Chairman Downer appointed as a committee to secure consents and right of way John Robison, A. D. Shepard, A. McKeown, John Cook J. A. Baker and T. J. Nichol. When the consents are secured the company will make application and franchise will be granted Until then the matter rests.

Another Big Boom.

The Campbell estate in Washington Park, comprising eleven acres of the finest restricted building sites, with a beautiful view of the Watchung Mountains and the city of Plainfield has been sold through the agency of William A. Woodruff to the builder. John P Emmons, and ex Councilman Peter A. Emmons.

The land has a frontage of 1,200 feet on Rockview avenue; 900 on West End avenue; 2 2 on Maple avenue; 335 on Willow avenue and 249 on Cedar avenue.

W. J Buttfield has given contract to J. P. Emmons for the erection of $15,000 mansion opposite this tract, on Rockview avenue, near West End avenue. The cellar walls are already under way.

Rapid Transit Sure to Come.

Ex-Councilman Leonard Spangenberg, who, actuated solely by his public-spiritedness has been looking alive to the interests of the community, has found a capitalist to put in the necessary street railway extensions in Plainfield. He is having interviews with the Mayor and Street Committee with regard to it. This means business.

He Won the Bet.

Old John Langley, the veteran horseman, is better known to old Worcester sporting men than any man living. Stories of his eccentric career are innumerable. He often complained of being "done" in betting. As a matter of fact he "did" adversaries in the sporting world oftner than they did him.

One day he called at the store of a tailor and stated in his usual loud and emphatic way—for his conversation was always highly flavored with the tobasco of profanity—that he "wanted a pair of breeches. And I want the best stuff in the store, no matter what the —— color."

The tailor was somewhat bewildered, but finally showed Langley the most costly material in the shop, a deautiful silky broadcloth. That this was unsuitable for trousers made no difference to him.

"I want it," said he, "and I want it made wrong side out."

The tailor expostulated in vain, and the trousers were made and delivered.

A friend called on Langley and remarked on the trousers in uncomplimentary language.

Langely said he was satisfied. More guying resulted in the old man offering to bet $25 that the cloth cost more a yard than that in his friend's trousers. The bet was taken, and the tailor was to decide. He named the price. The friend would not believe that the rough goods could be so costly until he was shown the shiny, silky other side. Then he paid as did other men on similar bets. That was what the old man bought the trousers for.—Worcester Gazette.

Dress as Well as Your Means Allow.

If you want to succeed in life, dress well. A good appearance in these days means the battle half won. For a man is judged by his coat and a woman by her gown, proverbs and all the other old fancies to the contrary.

James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, says that he would be well dressed if he had to go hungry.

"If I arrived in a town with only 50 cents in my pocket," he said to me once as he was saying he considered good dressing indispensable to success, "and had to get work, I would go first to a barber shop, pay 25 cents for a shave and give the other quarter to the barber for a tip. Then I would start out, and I know I would get work, for wouldn't we rather give money to a clean beggar than a dirty one, and doesn't the signs of past respectability in a tramp arouse an interest we could never feel for a bum?"

Big.

Paddy has been telling the story of a big pike he caught—too big to get into the boat, so that he had to be towed behind (with the gaff in it, it must be understood). Then followed this dialogue:

"What weight, Paddy?"

"Divil a know I know, but he was an ojous baste."

"How big, Paddy?"

"Sure, I can't tell to a fut or two, but a man could walk down his throat."

On this incredulity; but Paddy clinched the matter and silenced all controversy by adding:

"Wid his hat on."

Electric Seal.

Among the new furs is what is called electric seal. The name is to an extent misleading, as the fur is merely a sheared coney, and while rather pretty looking at first does not wear in a satisfactory manner. Indeed, it will scarcely stand one season's use and look well. It is like many other things, a makeshift, and for that purpose may have a limited popularity.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

FANNY DAVENPORT'S VOLUPTUOUSNESS DISPLAYED IN GISMONDA.

A Play of the Character in Which Bernhardt Fits to a Nicity. Serious Questions as to its Adaptability to American Needs.

A masterpiece by Victorien Sardou, one of those powerful melodramas which he writes primarily for Sara Bernhardt, and of which Fanny Davenport has been the admirable heroine in the English versions, is being performed at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. As is usually the case, in these plays, Gismonda celebrates the acts of a sensuous, passionate, even wanton woman, whose caloric nature offers the only plea of excuse for her exploits of animal love. Having devised a story of romantic sweep and daring episodes, he endows the woman with engrossing powers of fascination, intellectual and physical, so that the man who falls under her spell may seem reasonable in becoming a very desperado in his deeds to possess her. This scheme has been worked out again in Gismonda with consummate art, fertile resort and command of theatrical expedient. Miss Davenport was quite equal to the large demand made upon her for the portrayal of Gismonda, a creature of the warmest ador or the coolest selfishness, of the bert or worst impulses, according to mood, whim, caprice or really deep emotion. The actress had never looked handsomer or acted more ably. No doubt there were many in the audience who compared all she did with what would be Bernhardt's way of doing it, and this to the disparagement of the American. The two actresses are unlike in manner, as they are in kind and degree of ability, and it was therefore all the more to Miss. Davenport's credit that she succeeded brilliantly—as she surely did—in a role designed and formulated for so peculiar an artist as the great French woman. The story of Gismonda has had a world wide reputation.

Mrs. Grannis has taken a new tack in reform methods, and one which has quite scandalized the swells of the aristocracy. As a crusader her attention was called to the living pictures now popular in so many New York theatres. She gave them a cursory glance, enough, however, to convince her that they were not only not immodest, but were truly artistic and beautiful. Her eyes, however, reverted to the boxes of the Metropolitan Opera House, and there among the ultra fashionables she saw nakedness not simulated, but actual, with bare backs and necks of every conceivable variety, "but withal thoroughly inartistic and suggestive. Few women are beautiful about the shoulders, and when ugliness is wantonly displayed, it takes on another character, and Mrs. Grannis frankly discusses the subject and gives her unbiased and untrammeled opinion of such displays in forcible and convincing language.

New Yorkers are apparently becoming indifferent to the cost of their amusements. A few years ago there was a perpetual outcry against speculators because they charged an advance of 50 cents a seat, and the theatres were periodically denounced because they asked $1.50 for seats in the orchestra. The old prices were $1.50 for a few choice seats in the parquet and $1 in the orchestra circle, which was the range of seats immediately back of those in the body of the house. Theatrical managers, however, have gradually advanced prices, and the public has ceased to grumble. There is no doubt that in a short time we shall be asked to pay the same price for parquet seats as they do for similar seats, called "stalls," in the London theatres, that is, $2.50 a seat. Augustin Daly started in to charge $2 a seat some time ago, and that price is now in vogue at the Empire, and will be in force at the Fifth Avenue Theatre during Fanny Davenport's season. Mr. French asked $2 a seat and got it while he was at the Garden Theatre, and it is likely that all the theatres will eventually adopt this price except those located in the cheaper sections of the town. Opera seats are $5 apiece and nobody murmurs about it, and people pay $10 and $15 a seat for football tickets and fight for the chance to buy. The price of boxes, by the way, has remained the same through all the fluctuations in the price of seats. This is because boxes are not popular among amusement seekers, either here or elsewhere, except when the entertainment is in the form of grand opera. The people have come to realize that the worst point of vantage possible in a theatre is in a private box.

Curious evolutions of the living picture craze are to be seen at Proctor's and at the Bijou Theatre. Mr. Hoey, who is known by the affectionate titles of "Old Bill" and "Old Hoss," gives living pictures in his show to which neither Mrs. Grannis, Lady Henry Somerset, nor Capt. Schmittberger would take exception. They are not new, but are entirely comic, and exhibit such episodes as those of a young woman falling from the limb of a tree and a tramp flirting with a lady on Broadway. At Proctor's Theatre Miss Susie Kirwin has developed a living picture fad in an altogether remarkable way. She began by giving pictures of the nude, but these have been abolished, and in their places are representations of celebrated paintings, which are given with remarkable fidelity. They are accompanied by instrumental music, and occasionally by songs behind the scenes, and the battle pieces are made more realistic by the roll of drums, the firing of musketry, and the boom of cannon. There is a great variety of subjects, and so perfect is the mounting, the staging, and the generally artistic effect of the background that the pictures are continuously applauded.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS.

This little girl is very poor;
She has troubles, she finds, she can scarce endure;
And yet, my dear, she has playthings plenty—
Dolls as many as two-and-twenty,
Houses and arks and picture books,
Something pretty wherever she looks.
But half the time she's puzzled to know
What to do with the wonderful show;
Tired of dollies two-and-twenty,
And bored with her various toys aplenty.

That little girl is very rich,
With an old doll like a perfect witch,
A broken chair and a bit of delf,
And a wee cracked cup on the closet shelf.
She can play with only a row of pins;
Houses and gardens, arks and inns,
She makes with her chubby fingers small,
And she never asks for a toy at all,
Unseen around the fairies stray,
Giving her bright thoughts every day.

Poor little girl and rich little girl,
How nice it would be if in Time's swift whirl
You could—perhaps not change your places,
But catch a glimpse of each other's faces;
For each to the other could something give,
Which would make the child life sweeter to live,
For both could give and both could share
Something the other had to spare.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

Russia and England Are To Move Against Japan.

An Agreement Alleged To Have Been Made Between Those Two Countries To Prevent the Capture of Nanking—Their Fleets Gathered at Chee-Foo and Chusan.

London, Dec. 19.—It is understood that the agreement between England and Russia in regard to the war in the east does not permit any warlike operations in the vicinity of or approaches to Shanghai. This includes prohibition of a hostile fleet passing up either the northern or southern entrance to the Yang-Tse-Kiang river.

Japan at first accepted the terms of the agreement, but has recently threatened to disregard them on the ground that the Shanghai arsenal is supplying the Chinese with arms, etc.

It is believed that the third Japanese army at Hiroshima is destined for Nanking. The English and Russian governments have intimated that they would prevent this movement, and the recent assembling of the British fleet, under Admiral Fremantle, at Chusan, and the gathering of the Russian fleet at Chee-Foo is thus accounted for. It is understood that England and Russia have decided to fight, if necessary, to prevent hostilities on the Yang-Tse-Kiang.

Tokio, Dec. 19.—The Japanese forces are quietly drawing around Wei-Hai-Wei and the fall of that place may be expected at any time. All of the Chinese navy is still in that harbor.

Several Japanese ships have been vainly essaying every conceivable form of challenge to draw the crafty Chinese from their place of refuge, and it now looks as though the services of the army will have to be enlisted to capture the forts and drive the ships into the jaws of the squadrons waiting outside.

Deprived of Port Arthur, the Chinese fleet dare not risk an engagement, since without a dockyard to effect repairs every ship injured would be eliminated finally from the field.

Deprived of Wei-Hai-Wei, as well as Port Arthur, the Chinese fleet would have to fight or else anchor in some roadstead or unprotected harbor where the Japanese might attack at leisure.

Admiral Ting has been dubbed a "miserable poltroon." Admiral Ting is the jovial ex-pirate of whom the British naval expert, Admiral Tracey, after years of intimate acquaintance, spoke of in terms of the highest eulogy.

It is now alleged that had Admiral Ting been given a free hand his squadron would have played in a very different role.

London, Dec. 19.—A dispatch from Tokio says: Lieut.-Gen. Katsira reports that he has attacked and captured Hai-Cheng.

The total numerical strength of the Chinese garrison was 5,000, while the attacking party consisted of only one brigade of 1,500 men, with four guns. The Chinese retreated by two roads toward Liao-Yang. The losses were trifling.

A correspondent in Hiroshima says that foreign correspondents in the Japanese army who have returned there agree that there were regrettable Japanese excesses at Port Arthur, but that the conduct of the Japanese was excusable, being paralelled in the best European armies. He positively denies that the reporters left the army in disgust. The Japanese civil executive at Port Arthur has issued stringent regulations for the protection of the inhabitants who are returning to their homes. Many are being fed by the Japanese. Admiral Ting was arrested for failing to defend the Port Arthur dockyard.

Will Crispi Have To Go?

London, Dec. 19.—A Vienna dispatch says it is stated in Rome that Prime Minister Crispi's resignation is expected at any moment. His standing with King Humbert has been entirely shaken. It is believed that he will not long survive his fall, being of an apoplectic nature. The pope views the situation gravely. His holiness has been heard to say that he fears the Giolitti scandals are only the forerunners of worse events.

Will Remove Their Names.

London, Dec. 19.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says that the French government has ordered the chancellor of the Legion of Honor to consider the cases referred to by the Socialist Deputy Rouanet in the chamber, when he demanded that the legion remove from its rolls the names of all who had been compromised by the Panama and other scandals.

Bandits Raid a Town.

Muskogee, I. T., Dec. 19.—James French, with three confederates, rode into Texarna, thirty miles south of Muskogee and robbed John Pierce's store and his clerks. Then French attempted to raid the town but was given such a warm reception that he and his men were forced to retreat. One of the robbers was wounded also one of the citizens.

Irwin Guilty of Contempt.

Pittsburg, Dec. 19.—Judge Thomas Ewing has handed down an opinion in which he adjudges George Irwin, the pool operator, guilty of contempt of court, but decided not to issue an attachment for him until he has another opportunity to give his books over to John D. Bailey, the temporary receiver.

Denies the Bishop's Arrest.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The Turkish legation has received a dispatch denying that the Armenian Bishop of Moush has been arrested.

Cashier Bielby a Defaulter.

Rome, N. Y., Dec. 19.—John E. Bielby, cashier of the Central National bank is short $27,000 in his accounts. He has confessed.

President Wilson Dying.

New York, Dec. 19.—President Chas. J. Wilson of the health department in this city is dying.

His Swindle Cost Him $5,000.

Dubuque, Ia., Dec. 19.—Dr. Kissel, the pension swindler, pleaded guilty. He was fined $5,000.

HIGHER OFFICIALS ACCUSED.

Inspectors Steers and McAvoy Now Charged with Bribery.

New York, Dec. 19.—Mr. Goff has got up to his first inspector. He made Sergeant Taylor, of the steamboat squad, testify that Henry V. Steers, now retired, took every month 80 per cent. of the blackmail collected from the officers on duty at the different piers.

Sergeant Taylor went further and said that the same proportion had gone since Steers' retirement to headquarters every month up to last June.

He could not be induced to tell to whom it now went, but was finally pinned down by Senator Lexow into acknowledging that if a month had been skipped he would have been "called down" by Steers' successor, Inspector McAvoy.

A dozen policemen of this squad testified flatly that they had been obliged for years to give up half of their "pier money" to the captain, and in Schmittberger's case all of it.

Ward Man Vail told how he delivered his collections straight into Schmittberger's hands, and Mr. Caufriend of Schmittberger's had offered chois, of the French line, told how a him $1,000 last September to hide the evidence about Mr. Forget's $500 check.

COKE REGION BATTLE.

Strikers Ambushed by Non-Union Men and One Shot.

Pittsburg, Dec. 19.—A dispatch from Uniontown tells of a fight between the coke strikers and the non-union men near the Valley works. The union men have driven their opponents from the public places repeatedly, and the latter decided to retaliate.

The non-union men armed themselves with revolvers and congregated at the store, half of their force being placed out of sight. When the strikers appeared they attempted to drive the non-union men away and a fight ensued.

The men in hiding appeared on the scene, and the strikers, finding themselves outnumbered, started to run.

At least 200 shots were fired, and it is known that a striker was shot and dangerously wounded. A number of others were more or less injured.

NEVER TOLD HER MOTHER.

Daughter of the Pullman Company's Vice-President Hastily Weds.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—Florence Lillian Wickes, daughter of T. H. Wickes, vice-president of the Pullman Car company, and George O. Ford, of Janesville, were married in Trinity church, Janesville, Wis. The marriage was hurriedly arranged, and an event unexpected by the friends, being a surprise to every one. The bride had been visiting the family of the bridegroom. Mrs. Wickes, mother of the bride, said:

"My daughter and I had just returned from the east, and she said she wished to go to Janesville to visit her friends. I allowed her to go, and that is all I know about it. The news of the marriage was unexpected."

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Five Young Men Lose Their Lives in a Box Factory Accident.

West Bay City, Mich., Dec. 19.—An explosion of a boiler in Russell Brothers' box factory here killed five men. Others were injured.

The dead are: John Calcutt, fireman, age twenty-one years; George Pfund, age seventeen years; Albert Rahn, age sixteen; John Brann, age fifteen; and Al Heavenbacher, age seventeen.

The explosion occurred while the mill was shut down for a few moments, the boys flocking to the engine-room to eat lunch.

All the bodies were terribly mutilated and almost unrecognizable. The cause of the explosion has not been ascertained.

AMERICANS PUT TO DEATH.

Rumors of Official Assassination Comes from Guatemala.

Guatemala, Dec. 19.—All foreign residents here are frightened since the official beating given the American, Argall, by consent of President Barrios, in spite of the protests of the American minister and consul.

It is rumored that this is not the only affair of this kind, but that several Americans have been murdered by the authorities on the Atlantic coast because they refused to work on the railroad out of Port Barrios, where they were not paid. These cases are not published, because even the witnesses were killed.

The Pope May Not Receive Them.

Rome, Dec. 19.—United States Ambassador Wayne MacVeagh gave a dinner to the officers of the United States cruiser Detroit, which brought home the Vatican relics that were exhibited at the Columbian exposition in Chicago last year. The solemn reception of the officers by the pope is now regarded as uncertain, though it is understood that such was the original intention. The relics will be received by Mgr. O'Connell, of the American college, on behalf of the pope.

Liebknecht To Be Prosecuted.

Berlin, Dec. 19.—The Prussian diet has been summoned to meet on Jan. 8. The government intends, after the close of the session, to prosecute Herr Liebknecht, the socialist member of the reichstag, who took such a prominent part in the demonstration against the emperor on Dec. 6, upon the occasion of the opening of the reichstag.

The Pope to the Sultan.

Rome, Dec. 19.—The pope, through the Patriarch Joussef, has forwarded an autograph letter to the sultan of Turkey, stating the decision of the recent conference and asking the sultan to favor a union of the churches.

Caught a Desperate Highwayman.

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 19.—James Hanley, has been arrested here for making a desperate attempt to rob two sisters named Doughterty on one of the main streets in broad daylight.

Boston Policemen Acquitted.

Boston, Dec. 19.—The police investigation has ended with the acquittal of Policemen Ryan and Smith, who were accused of accepting bribes.

Murdered for His Savings.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 19.—Joseph Sitkeski, a railroad laborer has been murdered at Parkview for $200, the savings of years.

Sir John Thompson's Body.

London, Dec. 19.—The cruiser Blenheim with Sir John Thompson's body on board leaves Portsmouth Saturday.

HARSH WORDS APPLIED

Delegates Embroiled at the Labor Convention.

Mr. Morgan Is Called a Scurrilous Whelp During the Debate—Gompers Accepts a Challenge—Positions of the Central Labor Union and the Federation of Labor Explained.

Denver, Dec. 19.—A resolution submitted by Henry Weissman, of New York, asking the labor convention to emphatically disapprove of the action of a number of unions of cigarmakers, mechanics and furniture workers in affiliating with and supporting the Central Labor federation in its open antagonism to the union of bakers and confectioners was debated at great length at the labor's session.

Delegate Morgan said: "There is war to the knife between Weissman and other leaders." Here he was again called down by the chair. Morgan complained of being abused.

President Gompers said: "If there ever was a man who has abused the privileges of the floor and attacked the personnel of members it has been this same man Morgan."

Delegate O'Sullivan, of Boston, arose to remark: "I enter my protest against the chair permitting that scurrilous whelp (pointing to Morgan) to attack delegates on this floor."

"Did you hear that?" shouted Morgan. "It came from cultured Boston. Another sample of my treatment here."

Several delegates said: "Take that back, O'Sullivan," but Delegate Lineham remarked: "Don't you do it, O'Sullivan, or I will repeat it."

Morgan arose again, and shaking his hand at Gompers, exclaimed: "Oh! How I would like to get you on a platform on equal terms. Then I would fix you!"

President Gompers retorted: "Any time you desire."

President Gompers stated in reply to a question that the Central Labor union of New York is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and is constantly at war with the federation. A charter was refused because of its connection with a political organization. A motion to refer to the executive council was lost, and the resolution was indorsed by a large majority vote.

The special committee to which was assigned the appeal of Eugene V. Debs for sympathy and financial aid in his present trouble in the courts reported a resolution sondemning certain actions of courts of equity and appealing to the public to secure legislation to check the encroachments of the courts upon the personal liberties of the people.

Also another resolution extending sympathy and commiseration to Debs and his associates and promising them moral and financial support in their struggle. Both resolutions were adopted.

A resolution against compulsory arbitration was adopted at the beginning of the morning session of the American Federation of Labor without discussion. A resolution to appropriate $1,000 to aid the families of strikers confined in prisons for alleged offenses was referred to the executive council for favorable consideration.

A proposed bill to be presented to congress, proposing to tax the sweating system out of existence, caused some discussion. It was referred for favorable action by the executive council.

A report indorsing the Phillips bill, now before congress, was taken up for debate. Delegate Pomeroy, of Chicago, offered a minority report that the bill be amended so as to incorporate the referendum principle. The majority vote was adopted. The convention then adjourned.

She Wants Part of His Fortune.

Toledo, O., Dec. 19.—Miss Lucile Gruber, a society young woman, has filed a suit for $75,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage against Roswell Messinger, a young man who recently fell heir to $100,000. Messinger is deputy county treasurer, a member of the Toledo cadets, and both parties are well known in the city.

Drowned in a Bathtub.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 19.—William A. Peelle, ex-chief of the bureau of statistics of Indiana, was found dead in a bathtub at the Visitors' home of St. Mary's institute. His death was caused by drowning, as he was lying in such a position that he could not extricate himself. Peelle's home is in Indianapolis.

Nine Burned by an Explosion.

Quebec, Dec. 19.—A boiler connected with an illicit still in the heart of the city blew up last night. The building was badly damaged by the explosion and nine persons were severely burned. A sergeant of the city police named Redmond owned the outfit, which has been seized by inland revenue officials.

Has Four Wives Too Many.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 19.—William Du Boise, a horse dealer who married Miss Alice Taylor, daughter of a wealthy farmer, has been arrested for bigamy. He is said to have four other wives.

Six Students Suspended.

Carlisle, Pa., Dec. 19.—After a full investigation of the alleged hazing at Dickinson college the faculty suspended six students for one month.

Samuel Welsh Appointed.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Samuel Welsh of Buffalo has been appointed district attorney for the northern district of New York.

Shot by Chicken Thieves.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Dr. Herbert A. Starkey was shot and seriously wounded here by chicken thieves.

AT WASHINGTON.

MAKING MILITARY PARKS OUT OF BATTLE FIELDS.

A Movement Championed by Legislators From the North and South. The Republicans Have Decided to Take No Part in Income Tax Arrangements.

Among the first bills passed by the House at the present session was one making an appropriation of $75,000 for establishing a national military park at Shiloh and another appropriating $30,000 for the dedication, next September, of the park already founded on the battlefield of Chickamauga and Chattanooga.

The promptness with which these measures were acted upon is significant. Four of the most famous fields of the civil war are now to be preserved for the wonder and study of future generations, and that, too, with the hearty co-operations and by the mutual desires of victors and vanquished on the fields. It is doubtful whether there is anything quite like this to be found in history.

The first field to be set apart was naturally Gettysburg, the place of the most tremendous battles ever fought on the American continent, one fraught with momentous consequences. A statement in Secretary Lamont's report of last year showed that besides the large sums expended on this field by the memorial association and other bodies and by individuals, no less than $863,017.82 had up to that time been contributed by States whose soldiers took part in the battle. Tracts of land have been bought, roads laid out, and mouments and tablets erected. In his present report, Mr. Lamont says that the movements undertaken by troops on both sides, as well as the lines which they held, have been in the main accurately established, and, after final verification, tablets will be placed at points on the flanks of each regiment in its various positions, while suplus cannon will in like manner identify the positions held by the batteries. When it is remembered that 256 Union regiments with 67 batteries, and 189 Confederate regiments with 70 batteries, took part at Gettysburg, it will be seen how great is the labor involved. The suggestion, however offers itself that care should be taken not to overdo the details, and so confuse by needless minutæ a study so impressive and instructive in its broader and more general aspects. It can also be understood from the figures just given why so large an expense has been laid out upon this field, and why so many monuments some of them costly and beautiful, mark this wonderful spot.

The Chickamauga and Chattanooga park is to the West what the Gettysburg is to the East. Chickamauga was the bloodiest of the Western battles, and if Chattanooga is added it towers up with a great strategic importance. When the bill to establishing this park was before Congress, the House Military Committee made an elaborate comparison, based on the losses of the combatants in Napoleon's great battles, such as Marengo, Austerlitz and Waterloo, and again on the losses at Sadowa in 1866 and at Gravelotte, Sedan, and other battles of the Franco-German war of 1870, so as to show the deadliness of the struggle at Chickamauga. The committee declared that the average losses on each side for the troops which fought through the two days were fully 33 per cent., while for many portions of each line the losses reached 50 per cent. and for some even 75 per cent. It concluded that such a field had an importance to the nation as an object lesson of what is possible in American fighting.

Republicans in Congress have decided to make the Democrats stand by their tariff act from beginning to end, and they will not therefore, as a party, lend any assistance to the opponents of the income tax in the coming fight for its repeal, or against the appropriation of the $50,000 recommended by Secretary Carlisle as necessary for putting it into operation. The Republicans think the tariff act with its income tax attachment, too good a campaign weapon to be ignored, and they are therefore anxious to use it until they get control of Congress, when the law, they say will be repealed. The Treasury Department still maintains great secrecy with regard to the regulations prepared by Secretary Carlisle under which the attempt to collect the tax will be made, but it is quite well understood that the inquisitorial features of the regulations will not be abandoned. The Treasury officials are not willing to trust to the honor of the American citizens who are to pay the tax, and the odious features of inquiry into private business affairs of the citizens, that were so distasteful during the war, will be maintained and enforced. The Treasury officials, indeed, are somewhat fearful that the terms of the law are not themselves strict and explicit enough to insure a complete and proper return of incomes, and contemplate making the bureau regulations even more stringent; but if this is done it is probably that Congress will abrogate them. Many Northern Democrats who have all along opposed the enactment of the Income Tax law are very much disturbed over the adoption of the rigid inquisitorial regulatians of the Treasury Department, and are anxious to have something done to curtail them or to repeal the law altogether; but if it is repealed or starved to death it will be necessary to have concerted action among the enemies of the law in all parties of both Houses, and as yet there appears to be no indication of the formation of such an aggressive combination.

ROGER LEWIS.

Indicted for Using Biblical Quotations.

An unusual thing in connection with the court is the holding by the United States Grand Jury that Scriptural quotations may be libelous. H. A. Busby of Means, Harrison county, Ohio, was indicted for writing letters and postal cards to David Handley of Columbus, Ohio. On the envelope of the letters were the quotations: "Owe No Man Anything," "Let Us Walk Honestly," and "Many Years Thou Shalt Be Troubled." He was indicted on four counts on the ground that the language used was libelous and calculated to injure the character of Mr. Handley.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Thought He Meant It.

An absent-minded preacher remarked in a eulogy from his pulpit lately:

"Death loves a mining shark."

Thereupon four stockbrokers and a man with a brother in Colorado got up and left the sacred building.—American Hebrew.

WHY JAPAN WINS.

The Patriotic Instincts of the Two Countries Contrasted.

Events make the cause of Japan's success and China's failure in the pending war very plain. The Japanese have voluntarily contributed $15,000,000 toward the conduct of the war. The bank of the Nobles has given $1,000,000 of its funds, and loaned $15,000,000 more without interest. Individual nobleman and merchants have given $100,000 each, and the poorest citizens have contributed small sums. This conduct implies a spirit of patriotism that leads to self-sacrifice for the general interest in battle and otherwise.

China presents a contrast to all this. There is apparently no disposition on the part of individuals to forego any advantage for the public good. There is no willingness to give money or risk one's own life. On the contrary, Chinese officers steal the pay intended for their troops and thus force them to live by plundering the people among whom they are quartered. When a battle is eminent ingenuity is tasked to invent sulking. Seven ships remained in the rear and would not take part in the fight off the Yalu river. Capt. Fong fled with his ship before the firing began and got his head cut off in consequence. There is general indifference which finds expression in cowardice. Love of China does not seem to inspire Chinamen—or their officers, to be more exact—to bleed and die for the Flowery Land.

One is led to believe that China is not a nation in the ordinary sense of the word, but only a geographical expression. There is it appears, no sentiment of unity, no imperial instinct, to bind the provinces together in devotion to the Government. If this be the case, China is a ready prey for the European powers. The war, in revealing a want of coherence alters the situation in Eastern Asia. Russia or France could rule all China, if it is seized, as readily as England rules India.

Polar Bears.

The polar bear is not a social animal; the two cubs generally keep together for some time after they have left the mother, but in later life, as a rule, each travels by itself. About the subject of the polar bear's courage and ferocity, the author of "Polar Bear Shooting" says there is a great divergence of opinion, attributable to the different circumstances in which it has been met.

It happened several times during the German expedition to the east coast of Greenland, in 1869-70, that the crew were attacked by bears, and one of the men, Borgen by name, was once dragged a considerable distance.

He had been out in the evening to read the thermometer, which was placed on land, and while on his way back to the vessel was suddenly attacked by a bear. Having no time to aim, he tried to frighten it with the bull's-eye lantern which he carried; but without taking the slightest notice of this, the bear threw him down, bit him in the head, and then started to drag him away.

His cries were heard, and his friends hastened to his assistance. On hearing the shots which were fired with the intention of frightening it, the bear retired a few paces, but returned, and seizing the man again, dragged him with him at a gallop over the uneven ice. At last it ran away for good. Borgen was badly wounded, but thanks to his thick fur cap, his head escaped being crushed.

In other cases the polar bear has been known to be easily frightened.

One of Doctor Kane's followers, who was awakened by the growling of a bear which had put its head in at the tent door, resorted to the expedient of thrusting a box of lighted sulphur matches under its nose. The bear magnanimously forbore to avenge the insult, and took itself off.

The Test.

Papa—Arabella, do you really think you love this man whom you are to marry?

Arabella—Oh, yes, papa; he isn't at all rich and his name is Ezekiel.

Another Moon.

A city bred, tenement bred youngster took his first excursion in the country with a fresh air party, says the New York Tribune. It happened to be at the time of the full moon

Night after night the little fellow went out after supper and sat upon a stone behind the farmhouse, and watched the wondrous orb as it rose behind the trees. Then his week expired, and he went back to his tenement district.

A year passed, and as it happened the fresh air fund sent the same susceptible boy to the same farmhouse. Supper was eaten, and he slipped out behind the house and made straight for the stone in the back yard. But where was the moon? He looked and looked, till finally, not in the east, but in the west, he discovered a slim silver crescent.

The disappointment was too much for him, and he returned to the house, weeping.

"Oh, it isn't the same feller!" he said. "It isn't the same feller we had last year!"

Misery Shared.

The Parisian beggar is generally a person of wit. One of this fraternity met one evening, at eight o'clock, a gentleman who was on his way to a dinner party.

"Have pity, monsieur, and give me a sou," said the beggar, "for I have had no dinner to-day!"

"Get out!" exclaimed the gentleman. "I've had no dinner, either."

"Too bad!" answered the beggar. "Make it two sous, then, and we'll dine together!"

On Saturday, Dec. 22, The Daily Press will begin the publication of a Christmas drama in two acts by Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward It is entitled "The Veteran", and tells in simplest, yet most pathetic fashion of the sorrows of a hero of the war, wounded by a bursting shell, blind, forgotten by his country, and reduced to singing in the streets for a livelihood until rescued from poverty by a friendly hand. It is a story of Christmas time, touching the heart and triumphing in justice. It is an appeal to sentiment, but the tears it starts are tears of joy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward is one of the foremost figures in American literary life, and has been regarded for years as our strongest woman writer. This study in the dramatic form is almost unique; it is probably her masterpiece in its direct appeal to the emotions and in its terse strength.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

If anyone cares to buy the yawl Siren, he may have her for £300, or a trifle less than the worth of her ballast, as lead goes nowadays. For sufficient reasons—to be disclosed in the course of this narrative—I am unable to give her builder's name, and for reasons quite as sufficient I must admit the figures of her registered tonnage (29.56), cut on the beam of her forecastle, to be a fraud. I will be perfectly frank; there is a mystery about the yacht. But I gave £400 for her in the early summer of 1890, and thought her dirt cheap. She was built under the old "Thames rule," that is, somewhere between 1875 and 1880, and was, therefore, long and narrow to begin with. She has been lengthened since. Nevertheless, though nobody could call her a dry boat, she will behave herself in any ordinary sea, and come about quicker than most of her type. She is fast, has sound timbers and sheathing that fits her like a skin, and her mainmast and bowsprit are particularly fine spars of Oregon pine; her mizzen doesn't count for much. Let me add the newest of patent capstans—I put this into her myself—cabins paneled in teak and pitch pine and cushioned with crushed red morocco, two suits of sail, besides a big spinnaker that does not belong to her present rig, a serviceable dinghy—well, you can see for yourselves without my saying more that, even to break up, she is worth quite double the money.

In what follows I shall take leave here and there to offer a name or suppress it. With these exceptions you shall hear precisely how the Siren came into my hands.

Early in 1890 I determined—my health being in rather a poor way—to take a longer holiday than usual, and spend the months of July, August and September in a cruise about the channel. My notion was to cross over to the French coast, sail down as far as Cherbourg, recross to Salcombe, and thence idle westward to Sicily, and finish up, perhaps, with a run over to Ireland. This, I say, was my notion; you could not call it a plan, for it left me free to anchor in any port I chose, and to stay there just as long as it amused me. One fixed intention I had, and one only—to avoid the big regattas. Money had to be considered, and I thought at first of hiring. I wanted something between twenty-five and forty tons, small enough to be worked by myself and a crew of three, or at most three men and a boy, and large enough to keep us occupied while at sea.

Of course I studied the advertisement columns, and for some time found nothing that seemed even likely to suit. But at last in the Field, and in the left-hand bottom corner—where it had been squeezed by the lists of the usual world-known agencies—I came on the following coy announcement:

"Yawl, 35 tons. For immediate SALE that fast and comfortable cruiser Siren, lately refitted and now in perfect condition throughout. Rigging, etc., as good as new. Cabin appointments of unusual richness and taste. £400. Apply, Messrs. Dewy and Moss, Agents and Surveyors, Portside Street, F——."

On reading this I took down "Hunt, and Lloyd's Yacht Register," and hunted for further details. Siren crowd pretty thickly in the yachting list, only a little less thickly than Undines, and including Sirenes and Sirenas, I found some fourteen—and not a yawl amongst them, nor anything of her tonnage. There were two more in Lloyd's list of American yachts—one a center-board schooner, the other a center-board sloop; and in a further list I came upon a Siren that had changed her name to Mirage—a screw schooner of one hundred and ninety tons, owned by no less a man than the marquis of Ormonde. On the whole it seemed pretty clear that neither Lloyd nor Hunt knew of the existence of this "fast and comfortable cruiser" of thirty-five tons.

However, if half the promises of the advertisement were genuine, the chance ought not to be lost for lack of further inquiry. So I sat down there and then and wrote a letter to the poetically named Dewy and Moss, asking some questions in detail about the boat, and, in particular, where she was to be seen.

The answer came by return of post. The boat had been laid up since the autumn in a sheltered creek of the F—— river, about three-quarters of a mile up from the harbor side, where Messrs. Dewy and Moss transacted business. The keys lay at their office, and she could be inspected at any time. Her sails, gear and movable furniture were stored in a roomy loft at the back of Messrs. Dewy and Moss' own premises. Their client was a lady who wished to keep her name concealed—at any rate during the preliminaries; but they had full power to conduct the sale. The yacht was a bargain. The lady wished to get rid of it at once; but they might mention that she would not take a penny less than the quoted price of £400. They would be happy to deal with me in that or any other line of business; and they inclosed their card.

The card bore witness to the extraordinary versatility of Messrs. Dewy and Moss if to nothing else. It proclaimed them to be "Auctioneers; Practical Valuers; House and Estate Agents; Business Brokers; Ship Brokers; Accountants and Commission Merchants; Servants' Registry Office; Fire, Life, Accident, and Plate Glass Insurance Effected; Fire Claims prepared and adjusted; Live Stock Insured; Agents for Gibson's Non-Slipping Cycles; Agents for Packington's Manures, the best and cheapest for all crops; Valuations for Probate; Emigration Agents; Private Arrangements negotiated with Creditors; Old Violins cleaned and repaired; Vice-Consulate for Norway and Sweden."

I cannot say this card produced quite the impression which its composers no doubt desired. It seemed to me that Messrs. Dewy & Moss had altogether too many strings to their bow. And the railway journey to F—— was a long one. So I hesitated for two days, and on the late afternoon of the third found myself some three hundred miles from home, standing in a windy street full of the blown odors of shipping and pulling at a bell which sounded with terrifying alacrity just on the other side of the door. A window was thrown up, right above me, and a head appeared (of Dewy, as it turned out) and commanded me to walk in and come upstairs.

Mr. Dewy met me on the landing, introduced himself and led me into his office, where a fat young woman sat awkwardly upon a wooden chair several inches too high for her. Hastily reviewing the many professional capacities in which Mr. Dewy could serve her, I decided that she must be a cook in search of a place. The agent gave me the only other chair in the room—it was clear that in their various feats of commercial dexterity the firm depended very little upon furniture and "accessories"—and balanced himself on the edge of his knee-hole table. He was a little, round man, and his feet dangled three inches from the floor. He looked honest enough, and spoke straightforwardly.

"You have come about the yacht, sir. You would wish to inspect her at once. Dear, dear, it is most unfortunate! Your letter only reached us this afternoon. The fact is, my partner, Mr. Moss, has gone off for the day to N—— to attend a meeting of the Amateur Bee-Keepers' association—my partner is an enthusiast upon bee-culture."

The versatility of Moss began to grow bewildering.

"And will not be back until late to-night. As for me," he consulted his watch; "I am due in half an hour's time to conduct the rehearsal of a service of song at Lady Huntingdon's chapel, down the street, where I play the harmonium."

The diversity of Dewy dazed me completely.

"You are staying the night at F——?" he said.

I RESTED ON MY OARS AND DRIFTED TOWARD THEM.

"Why, yes. I sleep at the Ship inn, but hoped to leave early to-morrow."

"Of course you could inspect the sails and gear now at once; they are in the loft behind." He jerked a thumb over his left shoulder.

"So I understand; but it would be better to see the boat first."

"Naturally, naturally. I hope you see how I am placed. You would not desire me, I feel sure, to disappoint the members who will be waiting presently for their rehearsal. (I began to delight in Dewy). Stay, perhaps you would not greatly object to rowing up and inspecting the yacht by yourself? Here are the keys and my boat is at your disposal; or, if you prefer it, a waterman—"

"Nothing would suit me better, if you don't mind my using the boat."

"It will be a favor, sir, your using her, I assure you. This way, if you please."

He jumped from the table and led the way downstairs and through some very rickety back premises to the quay door, where his boat lay moored to a frape. As I climbed down and cast off Mr. Dewy pulled out his watch again.

"The evenings are lengthening, and you will have plenty of time. Half an hour to high water; you will have the tide with you each way. The keys will open everything on board. By the way, you can't miss her—black, with a tarnished gilt line, moored beside a large white schooner, just three-quarters of a mile up. You can moor the boat to the frape on your return; to-morrow will do for the keys; at your service any time after nine a. m. Good evening, sir."

Mr. Dewy turned and hurried back to his client, whose presence during our interview he had completely ignored.

The sun had dropped behind the tall hills that line the western shore of the F—— river; but a soft yellow light, too generously spread to dazzle, suffused the whole sky, and was reflected on the tide that stole up with scarcely a ripple. A sharp bend of the stream brought me in sight of the two yachts, not fifty yards away—their inverted reflections motionless as themselves. I rested on my oars and drifted up towards them, conning the black yawl carefully.

She struck me as too big for a thirty-five tonner, foreshortened though she lay—a wall-sided narrow boat, but a very pretty specimen of her type. Her dismantled masts were painted white, and her upper boards had been removed, of course.

Hullo!

There was a man standing on her deck.

She lay with her nose pointing up the river and her stern towards me.

The man stood by her wheel (for some idiotic reason best known to himself, her builder had given her a wheel instead of a tiller), which was covered up with tarpaulin. He stood with a hand on this tarpaulin case, and looked back over his shoulder towards me—a tall fellow with a reddish beard and a clean-shaven upper lip. I was drifting close by this time—he looking curiously at me—and must have been studying his features for half a minute before I hailed him.

"Hi!" I called out. "Is this the Siren?"

Getting no answer, I pulled the boat close under the yacht's side, made her fast and climbed on board by way of the channels.

"This is the Siren, eh?" I said, looking down her deck towards the wheel.

There was no man to be seen.

I stared around for a minute or so; ran to the opposite side and looked over; ran aft and leaned over her taffrail; ran forward and peered over her bows. Her counter was too short to conceal a man, and her stern had absolutely no overhang at all; yet no man was to be seen, nor boat, nor sign of a man. I tried the companion, it was covered and padlocked. The sail hatch and fore hatch were also fastened and padlocked, and the skylights covered with tarpaulin and screwed firmly down. A mouse could not have found its way below, except perhaps by the stove pipe or the pipe leading down to the chain locker.

I was no believer in ghosts, but I had to hit on some theory there and then. My nerves had been out of order for a month or two, and the long railway journey must have played havoc with them. The whole thing was an hallucination. So I told myself while getting the coverings off the skylights, but somehow got mighty little comfort out of it; and I will not deny that I fumbled a bit with the padlock on the main hatchway, or that I looked down a second time before setting foot on the companion ladder.

She was a sweet ship; and the air below, though stuffy, had no taste of bilge in it. I explored main cabin, sleeping cabin, forecastle. The movable furniture had been taken ashore, as I knew; but the fixtures were in good order, the decorations in good taste. Not a camel had shrunk or warped, nor could I find any leakage. At the same time I could find no evidences that she had been visited lately by man or ghost. The only thing that seemed queer was the inscription "29.56" on the beam in the forecastle. It certainly struck me that the surveyor must have under-registered her, but for the moment I thought little about it.

BURNS SEES THE SLUMS.

The English Labor Leader Says We Are Better Off than London.

John Burns, M. P., after the dinner tendered to him by the trade unions in Clarendon Hall, sauntered out to see what the slums of New York were like by night. "On our way to Chinatown," said he, we stopped at a concert hall on the Bowery. I saw nothing particularly vicious there. There were girls, but none of them sat beside me or tried to attract my attention. That may have been, however, because I do not look like a ladies' man. I was surprised to find that I could get ginger ale by asking for it, for you know I'm a total abstainer. You could not get such a drink in a London concert saloon.

"I went through Pell, Mott, Doyer and other streets in Chinatown, and saw the opium dens. Then I went into the Joss house at 16 Mott street. I felt there as if I were in a new world. It was unlike anything either American or English, with the clouds of incense floating around, the joss sticks burning, and the barbarous face of Joss looking out from a mass of rich carving. What surprised me greatly and made me sad was the number of white girls who live with Chinamen either as their mistresses or wives, and I was still greater surprised to learn that most of them are Irish-Americans.

"I went into the restaurant at 16 Mott street below the Joss house, but can't say I fancied the dishes. While I was there some white girls came in accompanied by white roughs. Among the girls was one who was not more than 15 years old. No restaurant of the kind in London at that hour, 2 A. M., would be open for men and women."

Mr. Burns was then told by his guide about the way the Chinese are converted, each Chinaman having a pretty white girl all to himself as teacher. He doesn't like the plan.

Mr. Burns inspected the cheap lodging houses of the Bowery. They were fairly clean, he said, but the odors were not agreeable. He thinks the municipal lodging houses of London better. In them for threepence a man can obtain a good room and a bath.

Mrs. Cleveland's New Portrait.

The new portrait of Mrs. Cleveland shows that lady to have become a matron of plump proportions. Her pretty coloring remains, but her face is losing its girlish contour, and has lost much of its charm. But the expression is gentle and kind as ever.

Mrs. Cleveland is much absorbed in caring for her two little girls, who are healthy and merry youngsters. Both of them are said to look like her. The portrait of the young mother, herewith presented, is from a coppright photograph by Bell, of Washington.

Miss Edith on Her Good Behavior.

There is one young matron living on the South Side who failed to enjoy her Thanksgiving turkey, though she added to it the cranberry of commerce and the toothsome pumpkin pie and invited her friends to share it with her. It happens that she is the mother of a small girl whose angelic appearance is constantly remarked, and who is invariably borrowed by an artist friend when he is commissioned to paint a cherub.

Handsome is, however, as handsome behaves itself, and those who know Miss Ethel best admire her least.

The guests had all assembled and the hostess, serene in the quality of the soup and Ethel's promise of good behavior, was all smiles.

Ethel had wedged herself between her young aunt and a potential admirer on the sofa.

"Well, Miss Ethel," said that unconscious youth, smiling at her over his chrysanthemum, "are you glad to see me?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. De Lay," was the smiling reply; "I'm glad mamma asked you; she said she hated to do it, for you were so fussy that she would be in agony lest anything go wrong, but she thought that maybe when you saw how happy and comfortable she and papa were, you might ask Aunt Edith—why, Aunt Edith, what is the matter?"

In the awful pause which followed dinner was announced.—Chicago Tribune.

Proposed for Burglars.

An embarrassing surprise awaits any unwary bank robber who may drop in any of the banks of Russell, Kan. There have been several daring hold-ups of cashiers in that neighborhood lately, and the citizens have clubbed together to protect their wealth on deposit in the local banks. The floor of each bank is studded with electric push buttons, any one of which will set a score or more gongs a-ringing on the streets and in public places, and a double-barelled shotgun has been placed in a handy spot in every prominent store. Should a would-be robber poke a gun in at the cash window the cashier will simply put up his hands, step on the button, and the citizens will do the rest.

She Surprised Him.

She was a dainty and beautiful thing as she tripped into the shoe store.

"I want a pair of shoes," she said to the clerk.

"For yourself?" inquired the smiling man.

"Yes."

"What number, please?"

"Four."

The clerk's eyes flew open.

"I beg your pardon?" he gasped.

"I said No. 4," she repeated in a tone of slight annoyance.

"For yourself?" still queried the astounded clerk.

"Certainly. Is it such a surprising thing that a woman should wear a No. 4?"

"N-n-no, miss," stammered the clerk, "but it is that she should say so."

FOUND HIS WIFE DEAD.

AGONIZING HOME-COMING FOR FRANK AUGUSTINO.

The Woman Had Evidently Arisen from Her Sickbed to Get Medicine, and Had Fallen in a Fatal Hemorrhage to the Floor.

Last evening about 9:30, when Frank Augustino, an Italian tailor employed by George Bremmer of Somerset street, reached his home, 244 East Third street, he was much surprised to find the door locked and the lights out.

Prying open a window, he climbed in, and, striking a match, fell back with a cry of honor at the sickening sight before him. There on the floor at his feet lay the partially undressed body of his wife, face downward, in a pool of blood.

Drs. Probasco and Simpson were at once summoned, and County Physician O'Reilly was notified. The examination revealed the fact that the woman had died from hemorrhage of the stomach, and as Dr. Probasco issued the burial permit the county physician did not deem it necessary that he should view the body.

Mrs. Augustino was last seen alive at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, by a neighbor to whom she complained of having severe pains in her stomach. In fact, she had been ailing for over two weeks.

As Augustino leaves home after dinner and does not return until his work is done, between 9 and 10, the body may have been on the floor several hours before being found.

It was evident that Mrs. Augustino had been in bed, and, feeling the pain coming on more severely, had arisen with the intention of getting some medicine, when the fatal hemorrhage overtook her.

Poor Augustino is distracted with grief, for his home though humble had always been a happy one.

The Bitterness of Politics.

Speaking of the illness of ex-Assemblyman John Ulrich of Plainfield, the Newark Sunday Call very wisely attributes the cause to politics and the financial embarrassments arising from disappointed hopes:

"The attractions of political life to young men who have a certain smoothness of address and some personal popularity are very great, and they lead to ruin so often that the warning which Ulrich's case affords may be regarded as a mere repetition of an almost daily lesson. Let it not be supposed, however, that political activity need result thus. Interest or, indeed, devotion to politics may exist without disaster, only the test is more severe than any ordinary business or professional employment requires. The man who succeeds in politics and keeps his hands clean and holds the personal respect of those who know him, would win greater success in other lines of effort, and spare himself much anxiety and weariness of soul."

An Acceptable Christmas Gift.

A membership in the Y. M. C. A. would be greatly appreciated as a Christmas present by young men, and a membership in the junior department would delight the boys. A full membership ticket entitles to the following among other privileges:

Physical department, including full use of a well-equipped gymnasium, free use of bowling alleys, shower baths and swimming pool, all under the direction of a competent physical instructor who will make examinations and prescribe exercises for those who enter his classes.

The boys have separate rooms set apart for their use and have special hours and classes in the gymnasium.

The gymnasium will be under the constant supervision of D. A. MacPhie, who is a graduate of the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. Training School in Springfield, Mass., and one who has had years of experience in systematic body-building work.

Nimble Fingers and a Generous Heart.

William Howatt, of West Second street, who has passed by six years the allotted portion of three score and ten, was eager to give a Christmas gift to the Children's Home, but felt that he could not afford to give money. Therefore he took a lot of yarn he brought from Scotland two years ago, and in the old-fashioned way knitted twelve pair of woolen mittens of varying colors, which he will give to the Home children. In spite of his 76 years, Mr. Howatt's fingers are nimble, and his eyesight is so good that he was able to accomplish the trying work without the use of glasses.

North Plainfield Capital Invested.

The People's Store Company filed articles of incorporation in Elizabeth yesterday. It will do business in Tacoma, Washington, with a paid-up captical of $125,000. The chief stockholder is George D. Mumford of New York. Others are William Barton Goodwin of New York and Augustus J. Brunson of North Plainfield.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., will nominate officers this evening, to be elected next Thursday evening.

PLAINFIELD A LEADER.

In Percentage of Postoffice Profits She Sets the Pace for New Jersey.

Plainfield's postoffice though rated 13 in the comparison of net profits in the State, is in reality one of the best paying offices of its class.

No one in town knows as well by practical experience what a "city of magnificent distances" Plainfield is, as do the carriers who serve the districts which extend outside the business portion of the city. Few people, except those directly served, realize that each day deliveries are made way below Evona station on Dunellen avenue, on Netherwood Heights, beyond the hotel, and almost to the mountains. It will at once be seen that covering this enormous territory requires a much larger force than is necessary for a town like Elizabeth, which, though larger in population, is much more compactly built. The percentage of expense to gross receipts in the office so efficiently managed by Postmaster Hetfield is the largest in the State for an office of the second class.

The following table, which is full of interest in regard to the matter, is copied from the Government report of 1893:

PLAINFIELD.

Gross receipts	$26,867.76
Salary	2,700 00
Clerk hire	3,200 00
Rent, light and fuel	1,510.00
Other incidentals	167.73
Free delivery	7,816 32
Total	$15,394.05
Net revenue	11,473.71
Per cent, expense to gross receipts	.57

"Sunshine Will Come Again".

Charles T. Ellis will introduce that wonderfully popular ballad, "Sunshine Will Come Again", in his revival of his pretty play, "Casper the Yodler", which will be seen in Music Hall, Christmas night. Sweet memories of the past come to us at the very mention of its name.

The scenery in "Casper the Yodler" is beautiful. The first act represents a country home on the picturesque Hudson River. It is an exact reproduction of the Summer home of one of our most noted millionaires, and makes indeed a very pretty picture. The second act shows the interior of a yacht at sea. During the action of this scene, there is a vivid presentation of a storm at sea accompanied with wonderful effects; this is a very effective as well as realistic scene. The third act introduces us to a spot that is well-known to the entire English-speaking world, a place that is revered by those that come from the land that holds it, romantic "Blarney Castle", one of the prettiest spots on the face of the globe, and one whose tradition will live forever. This scene is delightfully painted, the set is from the brush of Frank Dodge, the well-known artist of Harrigan's Theatre, New York city, and is a beauty, so natural that one can almost imagine himself in the old "dart" and climbing up the rocky sides of the Castle to kiss the "Blarney Stone".

The Chamber of Horrors.

Underneath the Winter Garden and the main halls of the Eden Musee, with their kings, queens and princes, and hundreds of historic groups in wax, is a series of rooms and corridors filled with a collection that has no counterpart in the world. The place is called the Chamber of Horrors because are there represented crimes and criminals of all ages. War, murder and death are depicted on every side. But the object of the Chamber of Horrors is not to satisfy morbid curiosity but to teach in almost living pictures the results certain to follow a career of crime. The stone walls and in some cases prison bars add to the force of the lesson In the other portions of the Musee every figure and group has been thoroughly cleaned and remodeled. For a long time it was a question with Manager Crane whether the Chamber of Horrors should be molested. Finally the artists were ordered to work among the scenes of crime, and the result shows a wonderful improvement. The figures have all been recast and colored.

The Parks Are Great Whisters.

The Park Club whist players covered themselves with glory last night in defeating the Elizabeth Whist Club by the greatest number of points won in any game of the New Jersey Whist League tournament thus far, the next highest being the game at Newark last week, when the Parks won by 25. The Park Club won at all three tables by the following scores:

J. M. Leonard and John B. Drayton against E. McConnell and Robert Thomas; 12 points.

Samuel Townsend and S. St.J. McCutchen against J. C. Kellogg and Bradford Darrach; 11 points.

George T. Rogers and J. H. Howell against W. P. Taler and George C. Thomas; 7 points.

Total for Parks, 30.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

OFF THE TRACK.

The Corduroy Road Did Not Stop the Train.

"Hello!"—said Conductor Berkheiser yesterday morning as train No. 5 stopped at Raritan—"that blame engine is off the track"—and so it was.

Upon investigation it was found that the locomotive had been running over the cross-ties for a distance of about half a mile, the engineer not noticing the derailment as he had shut off steam and applied the brakes just before reaching the frog which caused it.

A delay of twenty minutes was the most serious result of the mishap and the train proceeded with a full crew minus the rear brakeman who did not respond to the signal of the engineer to return.

"All 's well what ends well"—calmly remarked the smiling Berkheiser as he lifted the tickets with his customary dexterity.

English as She Is Wrote.

The following sublime specimen of imagery and poesy is rescued from the oblivion of the columns in which it originally appeared. It is a part of our esteemed contemporary's report of the opening Assembly:

"The Casino looked very pretty with its decorations of palms, flags and bunting. The incandescent side lights were shaded with pink paper, which lent just the mellow light to set off the different costumes and give an inkling of the diamonds which sparked here and yon as the dancers paced their figures. Then the floor, nothing much need be said of that because it is always good, unless it might be stated that last night it was even better than usual. There was more than the usual attendance of debutantes of the season who then started off in the whirl of fashion for the first and found it all that their hopeful anticipations had fancied. Handsome ladies in handsome gowns, in colors which set off the beauties of the complexion and grace of figure to advantage, answered the figures in the soft music and found pleasure therein. Well formed gallants in the prime of figure and strength played devoted to pleasure inspired by the charm of the time and place and found a diversion from thoughts of business, and were oblivious to thoughts of the morning train. Little groups wearied with the dance chatted happily in the cosy nooks, and watched the rest enjoy themselves, and made pilgrimages to the promenade where the ample lemonade bowl was not allowed to go dry."

A Change of Front.

The capitalist who, as stated exclusively in The Daily Press of yesterday, is ready to build the street railway extensions wanted in Plainfield, reaching to Dunellen, New Market, Hillside Cemetery and Netherwood, only asks as a condition for his bringing this great public improvement and property-developer, that he be given an exclusive franchise. This the authorities are not so willing to grant, holding that it is better to leave the way open for a competitive company. Their line of policy in this respect is different from that pursued when they granted the Plainfield Electric Light Company exclusive franchise for the use of the streets for electric-light poles and wires, thereby shutting out the beneficial competition of the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield.

Werner's Wonderful Store.

The carefully selected and greatly enlarged stock now on exhibition at Werner's clothing establishment is attracting universal attention. Many novelties in overcoats and Winter suits are shown, and the furnishing department contains a profusion of pretty and unique designs in neckwear, scarf pins, cuff buttons, and a large variety of Christmas specialties too numerous to mention. A glance at the attractively trimmed windows will give one an almost uncontrollable desire to enter the store. Mr. Werner and his courteous assistants are pleased at all times to receive old friends and make new ones.

Schweinfurth Held.

The examination in the case of M. Schweinfurth on two charges of keeping a disorderly house at Fanwood was held yesterday by Judge Moore.

Craig A. Marsh appeared for the defendant and succeeded in convincing the court of his client's innocence upon the second charge, which was dismissed.

Schweinfurth was held upon the first charge to appear at the January term, William S. Clark being his bondsman.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manage

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Wm. Coriell of Clinton avenue is reported as being very ill.

Hiram Hornish, who has been seriously ill, is slightly improved today.

Marion S. Ackerman has bought the property of George Watson on Crescent avenue.

Chas. Ammerman and family of Union street moved yesterday into their new house on Stone street.

Mrs. Rickert and family of West Front street will move into their new house on Fairview avenue next week.

Mrs. C. W. Ellis and daughter of Ravine road, Netherwood, are visiting Mrs. Wm. Claflin in Boston.

Millie Spicer, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Spicer of New street, is quite ill at her home.

Levi Hetfield, father of Postmaster Hetfield, is ill at his home, corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street.

The sprained arm from which Theodore Kurzhals has been suffering is improving rapidly, and its use will soon be restored.

Master Howard Ellis, who fell from his safety and dislocated his arm a few days ago, is still confined to his homo on South avenue, Netherwood.

Miss Shreve of Grove street and Miss Martha Tracy of West Eighth street are home from Bryn Mawr College for the Christmas holidays.

Clarence L. Murphy of Washington avenue, accompanied by his sister, Miss Annie Murphy, left yesterday for a short visit at Washington.

Wm. Howatt of West Second street will join Rev. A. Armstrong at Avon by the Sea, Saturday, to spend Christmas and New Year's Day.

Miss Mary B. Wells of Washington avenue and Miss Viola Conklin of First place are home from Smith College for the Christmas vacation.

Mrs. Jas. Ludlow returned to her home in Philadelphia yesterday after a two-months visit with her daughter, Mrs. J. H. VanDeventer of Woodland avenue.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Simpson Thompson to Meyers M. Hodge takes place this afternoon at 5:30 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D Thompson, Farragut avenue.

George W. Morrison has resigned his position with the New York Herald to accept the art superintendency of the New York World. Henry D. Morrison has joined the staff of The Tribune.

Miss Katie Sutterlein of Greenbrook road received a handsome clock yesterday from Baden, Germany. The clock is a Christmas gift from Miss Sutterlein's aunt. It not only tells the time of day but has a music box which plays a different tune after striking each hour.

William S. Sieger was a welcome caller at many Plainfield business houses today, distributing the famous calendars of Weston Dodson & Co., the still more famous miners and shippers of anthracite coal, of Bethlehem, Pa. The Dodson calendars are the best counting-room calendars in America.

John W. Murray, who by his devotion to the interests of the concern has injured his health, has been urged so strongly and continuously by his friends to give up the strain that yesterday he resigned the vice-presidency of the German-American Fire Insurance Company, and will go South for a month to recuperate. He is an irreparable loss to the German-American.

Among the social events of last evening was a surprise to Miss Belle Vail and Miss Kate Randolph of West Second street. While they welcomed guests at their front door some of the light-footed and deft-fingered of the party stole round the back way to the kitchen, where they lighted a handsome new lamp, a second surprise to the hostesses. Games were indulged in, and at a late hour refreshments were served. A very enjoyable time was had. Among those who graced the occasion with their presence were Miss Catharine Webster, the families of Messrs. Charles and Adelbert Vail, Henry G. Adams, and others.

—The report published elsewhere that the Arlington has changed hands is untrue.

—William Wilson, the new private night-watchman in the borough, was last night sworn in as a special marshal by Mayor Needham until the Council meets, when he will be formally appointed special marshal.

—The entertainment in Bethel Chapel Thursday, Dec. 27, in which R. Henri Strange gives dramatic, humorous and song recitals, promises to be a success. The Washington Post says of Mr. Strange: "His rendition of the 'Death of King John' was a masterpiece, and he was recalled again and again".

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HAYMAKERS NIGHT.

PAUGH-CAUGH-NAUGH-SINQUE HAS A LIVELY NIGHT.

Officers and Companions Raised Up, and a Big Time Prevails Among the Redskins.

A Haymakers lodge was successfully instituted last evening at Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque wigwam after the regular council sleep of the tribe and many members participated in the pleasing ceremonies of the degree. The little men were not slighted, and met with an enthusiastic reception. The candidates seemed very much moved and all were touched to the soul at the solemnity of the occasion. The following officers and companions performed the ceremonies in a most satisfactory manner.

E. J. Lake P. S., President of the State Haymakers Association; District Deputy R. H. Kerr P. S., and Companions A. B. Craig and H. A. Helland all of Jersey City, Companions Peter C. Gillispee, John Newstead, Robert Marley and Thomas Butler of Elizabeth.

The officers-elect of the new Association are:

Chief Haymaker—Charles I Young.
Assistant Chief Haymaker—E H Neal.
Overseer—Asa D Pope.
C of S—J William Klein.
K of R—E W Titsworth.
Past Chief Haymaker—John H Carney.
B D—William Young.
H B—E E Wilson.
G of B—William Allen.
G of H L—C R Conover.
Stewards—P A VanFleet, L K Clark and William S Bullock.

After the meeting a collation was served and the visiting companions departed at 2:14 this morning for their respective haylofts.

They Will Soon Be Centenarians.

A remarkable sight arrested the gaze of the man about town as he was walking down Somerset street the other day. Across the way marching along with an axe in his hand was "Uncle Peter" Wooden, and by his side, equipped in like manner, walked Alfred Bonnell, with a step almost as light and quick as though the frosts of 90 years had not whitened his hair nor bent his sturdy frame. "Uncle Peter", who by the way is only 95 and quite a lively boy at that, was going along just to show Mr. Bonnell how to chop wood; and show him he did—in fact they showed each other, handling their axes with a dexterity which would put to shame many a man fifty years their junior. Then shouldering their axes the "Two old cronies" trudged contentedly homeward chatting of things that happened years before some of our fathers were born.

Real Estate Transfers.

Daniel O'Conner to Dency C. Horton, $150.

Silas D. Pound to David Lowrey, $100.

Plainfield Building and Loan Association to Josephine S. Perrin, $2,000.

Freight Wreck at Glen Gardner.

Last night Engine 313, bound east, pulling a heavy coal train, was wrecked by a broken axle near Glen Gardner, Somerset County, just above High Bridge. Five cars rolled down the bank and thirteen were scattered along the track or piled together in confusion. Wreck trains were at once ordered to the scene and their crews were busily engaged in removing the debris from the tracks until this noon. Fortunately no one was injured.

Don't!

Don't forget that Christmas is the day sacred to tributes of affection. Don't forget that these tributes can be made enduring by the character of the remembrance. Don't forget that at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, may be found souvenirs that are not for a day nor a week, but that have lasting value—elegant Christmas tokens in gold and silverware and of innumerable variety being found here at prices within the reach of everyone.

—The electric lamp at the corner of East Front street and Westervelt avenue went off duty last night.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—If you have friends you will do them a favor to send them to Peck's store.

—The case of Sebring against Moore is returnable in Justice Nash's Court December 27.

—Frank Hand has taken possession of his new house on Fairview avenue, which he purchased from Charles Hand.

—The anniversary sermon of Mt. Olive Baptist Church will be preached tonight by Rev. Dr. B L. Perry of Brooklyn.

—Music Hall has been leased by the Third Regiment Cadet Corps for Jan. 17, for the production of "The Provost Guard".

—An unusually interesting meeting is promised this evening at the East Third Street Mission. Wm. Perrine will have charge.

—Boehm gives thanks to Plainfield people for the holiday patronage he has received. He has a mammoth bazar, brimful of bargains.

—25 cents for a child's pair of knickerbockers is all that is asked at Schepflin, Schultz & Co's till Jan 1. This firm offers other goods in proportion.

—The teachers of the Fryant School are utilizing a great deal of their spare time in decorating for the entertainment to be given Friday afternoon.

—On application of Lawyer Powers the case of Dunham against Coddington, which came up in Justice Nash's Court yesterday, was adjourned one week.

—The monthly consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist Church will be held tomorrow evening. A violin will help the singing.

—This is the last week of Vano and company at Reform Hall. Admission tonight is free. Extraordinary wonders will be performed by Miss Agramonte Saturday night.

—Christmas is not complete without a generous supply of apples and oranges, and the place to secure the best quality of the fruits is at the Watchung Avenue grocery of Neuman Bros.

—In connection with the probable sale of Julian Scott's painting "General Sedgwick's Death", there is a full and complete history of the famous picture, which it took Mr. Scott eight years to compile.

—Residents on Short Second street complain a great deal about the condition of the road. They say that in the past 10 years there has not been $5 worth of work put on the street, and they have to pay taxes just the same.

—For Christmas presents go to E. Love's, corner of North and Watchung avenues. Bicycles at cost, rugs from 75 cents apiece up, artist materials, stationery, wall paper, gold paints, bronzes, brushes, etc., are in stock.

—A remarkable game was bowled in Newark last evening between the Americas and Atalantas five men teams. The Americas made the score of 1,025 to the Atalantas 842. It is the highest score for five men yet rolled in the series.

—Colyer & Co., the popular Newark clothiers, are always trying to please the many customers they have, and they succeed. During the holidays they will give a real live turkey to every purchaser of a suit of clothes or an overcoat. Their ad tells of bargains.

—The Allen-Foise Manufacturing Company of Plainfield has been granted trademark on its Royal Talcum dentifrice, which is already so famous that it is in demand all over the world. A large order has been shipped to Belgium, the general salesagent writing "It is the best we have ever handled".

—Justice Newcorn rendered judgment in the case of Sacher against McQuaide this morning in favor of the plaintiff for $25 and costs. In the cases of E. W. Hedges against P. McDonough, and E. W. Hedges against Babbett, judgment was rendered in favor of plaintiff, for the full amounts claimed.

—"Gold King", the play presented in Music Hall last night, was a great improvement over the previous productions of the Seymour-Stratton Company, and the audience was highly pleased. The balance of the week will be filled out with popular productions. "His Lordship", a delightful farce-comedy, will be the bill tonight.

—The admiration of the fair sex, the delight of the little ones, and the wonder of the men, are the three elegant dressed dolls exhibited in the window of Mrs. L. Adams. They are styled "Continental", "American Beauty" and "Bedouin", and are examples of the perfection of the art of feminine adornment of which Mrs. Adams and her efficient corps have such superb control.

—Thomas Doud, the contractor who put in the water mains in this city and the borough, is one of sixty bidders for a like plant in the town of Newton, Sussex county. Mr. Doud did an excellent job for the company in this place, and his work was satisfactorily done to all concerned. Should Mr. Doud receive the contract in the town of Newton, the citizens will see a progressive man managing personally all the details of the undertaking, and the work will be expedited in as short a time as is possible for first-class work.

CANAL AND A CURRENCY

They Were Discussed in the House and Senate.

Provisions of Secretary Carlisle's Bill Are Debated—Congressman Bland Offers a Substitute—Senator Voorhees Continues His Attack Upon the Nicaragua Canal.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The session of the house was taken up by the members in discussing Secretary Carlisle's currency bill. In the senate most of the day was devoted to a debate on the Nicaragua canal bill.

The attack upon the bill which was opened by Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) on Monday and continued on Tuesday, was concluded by him, when he offered a substitute for the bill providing for a board of three civil engineers to make a survey and estimate, declaring that that was as far as the senate should go at this session.

Some of his strictures and censures on the bill were resented by Mr. Morgan(dem., Ala.), who is in charge of it, but this did not restrain the Indiana senator from declaring that if ever the work was completed, it would be an incident, and that there was no certainty, and no provision for a certainty, that it ever would be finished.

He argued that the reason why the was not to be constructed and paid for in sections, was that the first section for dredging of the harbor at Greytown, and of the two miles sea channel in it, would cost over one fourth of the $70,000,000; and that as soon as that section was undertaken, the bubble would burst and the scheme would be abandoned.

Speeches in suport of the bill were made by Senators Cullen (rep., Ill.), and Perkins (rep., Cal.), and without action on the measure, the senate adjourned.

The speakers in the second day's discussion of the currency bill in the house were Messrs. Johnson (rep., Ind.), Warner dem., N. Y.), and Ellis (dem., Ky.), all members of the committee on banking and currency.

Mr. Warner advocated the passage of the bill because of the proposed rehabilitation of state banks and because of the fact that it took the government out of the business of issuing currency.

Mr. Johnson opposed it, because he believed it vicious and because of the indecent haste that was exhibited in presenting it to the house.

Mr. Ellis' opposition was largely based upon the fact that the bill provided for a re-organization and extension of the national banking system, when every state and national convention of the democratic party for years had declared against it, and this at a time when the necessity for their services as fiscal agents, if it ever existed, had absolutely passed.

Mr. Bland gave notice that he would move the amendment by substituting for the bill his free coinage of silver and coin note scheme.

Mr. McRae (dem., Ark.) asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of one or two bridge bills, but Mr. English (dem., N. J.), whose bill appropriating $200,000 for the extension of the Newark custom house has not yet been acted upon, objected.

Cronin Stood Twenty Seconds.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 20.—Dr. A. W. Tracy, president of the state board of charities has publicly criticised the hanging of Cronin by Warden Woodbridge. He asserts that Cronin stood on the plate forty seconds after being tied, and was hanged by his own weight operating the machinery. All spectators of the hanging agree that from the time Cronin stepped on the plate until his body flew upwards, was but twenty seconds which was occupied in putting on the black cap, pinioning Cronins legs and adjusting the rope. At the expiration of twenty seconds from the time Cronin stepped on the plate, Warden Woodbridge pressed the lever which caused the shot to drop out of the cylinder, and the weight to fall.

Kentucky Lad Disembowled.

Owensburg, Ky., Dec. 20.—An outrage was perpetrated here on Will Girvin, a boy, by two tramps. The boy was seized in the railroad yards and a coat thrown over his head. He was carried into a car and chloroformed. The villains used a knife, cutting into the bowels. He was found by his brother. If caught, the villains will be lynched. One man was arrested on suspicion.

Judge Gilbert Hanged.

Friars Point, Miss., Dec. 20.—Judge Gilbert who murdered his wife in Coahoma county last May by shooting has been hanged here, the supreme court having affirmed the sentence of the lower court. Infidelity was the motive for the killing.

ENGLISH PLANS SPOILED

Admiral Walker Reports on the Hawaiian Matter.

Writing Upon the Revolution in That Country He Tells How British Officials Were Scheming To End Our Influence—Were Ready To Land Marines But Were Thwarted.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Admiral Walker has finally made public his report on the happenings at Honolulu when Queen Lilioukalani was dethroned. The facts he gives, have up to the present time been carefully guarded from becoming public property. The action of our representatives, he first states, was taken to prevent the English from obtaining control of the government by landing their marines and keeping the queen upon the throne. He learned that the English consul, Major Woodhouse, intended to take such measures.

"This," wrote Admiral Walker, "with the co-operation evinced by the commanding officer of the warship Champion, put the matter in a different light." He believed that the British minister would have seized upon any pretext to use the forces on the Champion to encourage the royalists and embarass the existing government. "Should such action result in the restoration of the monarchy," he said, "English influence would henceforth control with Liluokalani."

By such a scheme, Admiral Walker intimates, Great Britain would gain a site for a cable to the Pacific colonies. He also points out that Pearl Harbor offers fine advantages for a naval and coaling station.

Continuing the report reads:

"Although I had full confidence in the republic's ability to preserve order and regarded the chance of an uprising of the royalists, even under the favorable circumstances mentioned above as very remote, I did not feel that even such a remote chance should be taken and I decided to postpone the Philadelphia's departure, at least until the arrival of the Australia's mail.

Before reaching this conclusion I consulted with the United States minister, whose views coincided with my own, and I was further confirmed in my own opinion by the receipt of a petition to keep the Philadelphia at Honolulu, signed by several prominent merchants and business men representing large American moneyed interests.

Before the arrival of the Australia Major Wodehouse had been relieved by Capt. A. G. S. Hawes, who came in the steamer Arawa, and who has the title of British commissioner and consul general. The advent of a new man who had no other policy than the policy of his government and was not involved in local politics, changed the situation again, and I left Honolulu."

In another paragraph Admiral Walker points out that English influence in the Hawaiian Islands is always opposed to American interests, principally by reason of trade jealousy.

The English and royalists, he said, were equally elated over the determination to keep the Champion in port after the Philadelphia's departure.

In conclusion the report lays stress on the importance of keeping a United States vessel at Honolulu, as an English warship is always in that port. This, he says, jeopardizes our influence there, and might lead to awkward complications.

The position of the United States, as defined in the senate resolution, is clearly understood by nations and foreigners in Hawaii, but, he argues, if we are not on hand to perform the duties of our virtual protectorate, no reproach can attach to another power which, in the event of disturbance, takes our place.

The British sentiment in the Pacific would eagerly embrace such opportunity and make the most of it.

Miners and Operatives Confer.

Pittsburg, Dec. 20.—A committee of miners called on a committee of operators here regarding the reduction of prices. The operators' committee said they would agree to nothing but a 55 cent rate, the same as paid by the New York & Cleveland Coal company. The members of the committee said they would abolish the company stores and pay semi-monthly in cash and thought all the operators in the district would do likewise. The miners committee will report to the convention.

Germany Asked To Participate.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Baron H. Von Saurma-Jeltsch, the German ambassador, has been invited to become the third member of the Venezuelan claims commission, the Netherlands government having declined to allow its minister, Mr. De Weckerlin, to serve on the commission.

UNDER CHURCH BANS.

The Pope Takes Action Against All Secret Societies in Existence.

New York, Dec. 20.—Bishop McDonnell had a surprise in store for the clergymen of the diocese when they assembled in the diocesan seminary to participate in the regular quarterly conference.

The bishop announced that he was in receipt of a communication from Mgr. Satolli which stated that the apostolic delegate had been instructed by Rome to notify the archbishops, bishops and priests of the United States that the action taken by the American archbishops relative to secret and semi-secret societies, at a meeting held by them in Chicago, has been ratified by the college of cardinals and by the pope.

The meeting in Chicago was held at the residence of Archbishop Feehan. The information was given out that the Knights of Pythias, the Odd Fellows and the Sons of Temperance are now under the ban of the Catholic church, and the Catholics who join any of these three societies will be excommunicated.

Those Catholics who are now members of one or more of these societies will be exhorted to sever their connections with them, and if they refuse they will from that moment and by their refusal cease to be Catholics.

WILL DENY HIS WORDS.

Murderer Blixt Claims He Was Tortured into Telling Untruths.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 20.—R. R. Odell, attorney for Claus Blixt, the Ging murderer, has declared that Blixt had never made a confession. When pressed for an explanation of this assertion, Mr. Odell added that when admissions were wrung from Blixt at the now famous inquisition the man was thrown into a condition of terror by constant threats of physical violence. The attorney states that Blixt made some admissions, because he was told that he would certainly be lynched if he did not confess and that all sorts of illegal and disreputable means were used to make him confess.

This attitude of the defence seems to indicate that when placed on trial the prisoner will entirely ignore his statements made in jail.

ONE MORE VICTIM.

Right Guard Young Dies from a Kick in the Head.

Philadelphia, Dec. 20.—George S. Young, who played right guard for the Frankford football eleven, and who was injured on Nov. 30 in a game with another local eleven, is dead.

At the time Young was injured he was given the ball to make a run, and was heavily thrown, fumbling the ball, while reaching for it he was accidentally kicked in the head by a runner who was close behind him at the time.

He was taken to his home and grew better, but later an abscess formed at the base of his brain, which resulted in his death.

Feast for Cleveland.

Georgetown, S. C., Dec. 20.—Captain M. R. S. Mackenzie, came up to the city on the Wistaria. The president and the others of the party were hunting. Captain Mackenzie met Mayor Morgan, the chairman of the citizen's committee, and they discussed the programme for the reception of President Cleveland next Saturday. The programme as adopted by the committee and approved and agreed to by President Cleveland is that the reception will last from 2 to 3 o'clock.

Farmers' Alliance Meeting.

Harrisburg, Dec. 20.—The state council of the Farmers' alliance devoted their session to a general discussion of matters which will be recommended as subjects for legislation. The revenue bill prepared by the state tax conference was approved and strong resolutions adopted opposing the repeal of the anti-oleomargarine law. Governor Pattison delivered an address. Officers will be elected this afternoon.

McBryde Not Liked by Knights.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—The election of John McBryde to the presidency of the American Federation of Labor has caused considerable stir among local labor men. Knights of Labor here are not satisfied with the treatment they have received from the present administration of the order.

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will begun in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895 Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recolections of Joan of Arc, by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

FREAKS OF WEALTH.

THE RICHEST WOMAN IN AMERICA SEEKS SECLUSION.

Mrs. Hetty Green Flits From Hotel to Boarding House Under Cover of Night so as to Allay Suspicion of Her Identity. Belongings Carried in a Paper Parcel.

Hetty Green, the richest woman in America, the itinerant multi-millionaire, has packed her duds, and is again wandering — where, nobody knows. Mrs. Green and her daughter, Miss Sevilla, for a few days have been guests at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn. They were registered under the names of Mrs. H. Gray and Miss Gray. They occupied two rooms, 1-4 and 5, on the sixth floor.

For her accommodations, Mrs. Green and her daughter paid $10 a week each. While this is a small amount for a woman worth over $30,000,000, it will be a surprise to Mrs. Green's friends to learn that she has become so extravagant in her old age.

The last time Mrs. Green lived in Brooklyn she took up her abode in a boarding house on the heights, where she occupied a hall bedroom on the top floor and paid 75 cents a week rent. She is also said to have taken her meals in the kitchen.

But now a fin de siecle change has come over the eccentric Hetty Green, and for the first time in a quarter of a century or more, she is beginning to live and dress like other people.

Recently Mrs. Green and her daughter called at the St. George Hotel. She had a private interview with Capt. Tumbridge, the proprietor. She said she had been hounded by newspaper reporters and wished in future to travel incognito. Capt. Tumbridge explained that it would be necessary for Mrs. Green to register, so she wrote her name upon the clerk's books as Mrs. Gray. She was assigned to the cheapest suit of rooms in the hotel.

When she arrived neither Mrs. Green nor her daughter had a trunk. Their clothes were in a few bandboxes, and two portmanteaus which they carried.

None of the guests at the hotel suspected that the tall, angular-looking woman was Hetty Green.

Mrs. Green and her daughter were the first to arrive in the dining-room, and so attracted little or no attention. During her stay at the hotel Mrs. Green had no callers, nor did she receive any letters.

She might have lived there indefinitely under the name of Mrs. Gray had not the matter leaked out eventually. When the guests entered the dining room one night, Mrs. Green noticed some of them stared at her during the meal. The servants became suspiciously attentive, and she concluded that some one had recognized her.

Later in the evening Mrs. Green called at the office and settled her bill, and, with her daughter, left on foot. No one knows where they have gone.

At the hotel the cashier said Mrs. Green left word to send her mail to the Hotel Albemarle, where her husband is living. She declared he would take care of it for her. Both Mrs. Green and her daughter were well dressed, though very plain in appearance. Previously Mrs. Green has worn old clothes and carried a newspaper bundle under her arm.

Before leaving the hotel Mrs. Green said she could not stay, as the newspapers would worry her almost to death. It is said, however, that Mrs. Green's real object in travelling about and keeping her whereabouts a secret is to escape personal taxes.

Queen Victoria Recognizes Hawaii.

Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India, &c., to the President of the Republic of Hawaii, sendeth greeting.

Our Good Friend: We have received the letter which you addressed to us on the 7th day of July last, in which you informed us that you have been elected President of the republic of Hawaii, in accordance with the Constitution which was proclaimed on the 4th of that month. We thank you for this communication, and we request you to accept our congratulations on this distinguished mark of the confidence of your fellow citizens; and we offer you our best wishes for your health and welfare and for the prosperity of the republic over which you preside.

And so we commend you to the protection of the Almighty.

Given at our court at Balmoral the nineteenth day of September, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, in the fifty-eighth year of our reign. Your good friend, VICTORIA.

Lucky Patient.

The Louisville Courier Journal tells "a true tale," with a moral—against making rash promises. The reader may believe it, or laugh at it, as he chooses.

A patient who had called to consult a physician asked how much he was to pay.

"Three dollars," said the doctor.

The patient drew out a ten dollar gold piece. The doctor looked annoyed.

"Havn't you anything smaller?" he asked.

"Not a thing," said the patient. "Nothing but this and two nickels."

"Well, give me the two nickels. If I take the gold piece I shall be out seven dollars."

Then he explained to his mystified customer that he had rashly promised his wife all the gold taken by him in the way of fees.

Poor Thing.

The New York Recorder has this to tell of a little girl who had learned very early of the inconvenience of wearing eyeglasses.

She was at Manhattan Beach, and seemed to be not more than three years old, but was near sighted and wore spectacles. She wanted to paddle in the water and spoil her russet shoes. Her nurse had been forbidden to let her go barefoot, and baby began to sob. Then she cried:

"Take 'em off, Mary! Take 'em off!"

The reporter thought she referred to her shoes; but she went on:

"Take off my spettatles, Mary, so I can cry!"

Big Gum Contract.

JES' 'FORE CHRISTMAS.

Father calls me William, sister calls me Will,
Mother calls me Willie—but the fellers call me Bill!
Mighty glad I ain't a girl—ruther be a boy
Without them sashes, curls an' things that's worn by Fauntleroy!
Love to chawnk green apples an' go swimmin' in the lake—
Hate to take the castor-ile they give f'r bellyache!
Most all the time the hull year roun' there ain't no flies on me,
But jes' 'fore Christmas I'm as good as I kin be!

Got a yaller dog named Sport—sick 'im on the cat;
Fust thing she knows she doesn't know where she is at!
Got a clipper sled, an' when us boys goes out to slide
'Long comes the grocery cart an' we all hook a ride!
But, sometimes, when the grocery man is worrited and cross,
He reaches at me with his whip and larrups up his hoss;
An' then I laugh an' holler: "Oh, you never teched me!"
But jes' 'fore Christmas I'm as good as I kin be!

Gran'ma says she hopes that when I git to be a man
I'll be a missionerer like her oldes' brother Dan,
As wuz et up by the cannib'ls that lives in Ceylon's isle,
Where every prospeck pleases an' only man is vile!
But gran'ma she had never been to see a Wild West show,
Or read the life uv Daniel Boone, or else I guess she'd know
That Buffalo Bill an' cowboys is good enough f'r me—
Excep' jes' 'fore Christmas, when I'm good as I kin be!

Then ol' Sport he hangs around, so sollum like and still—
His eyes they seem a-sayin': "What's er matter, little Bill?"
The cat she sneaks down off her perch, a-wonderin' what's become
Uv them two enemies uv hern that used te make things hum!
But I am so perlite and stick so earnest like to biz,
That mother sez to father: "How improved our Willie is!"
But father, havin' been a boy hisself, suspicions me,
When, jes' 'fore Christmas, I'm as good as I kin be!

For Christmas, with its lots an' lots uv candies, cakes an' toys,
Wuz made, they say, f'r proper kids, an' not f'r naughty boys!
So wash yer face, and bresh yer hair, and mind per p's an' q's,
An' don't bust out yer pantaloons, an' don't wear out yer shoes;
Say yessum to the ladies and yessir to the men,
An' when they's company don't pass yer plate f'r pie again;
But, thinkin' uv the things you'd like to see upon that tree,
Jes' 'fore Christmas be as good as you kin be!

Eugene Field in Ladies' Home Journal.

A MISFIT DINNER.

What can one say that's new about Christmas Day?
The mince pies are erected in the old, old-fashioned way.
The turkey's brown as ever, the pudding is the same.
Yet one who writes of things like these must add unto his fame.

I'll simply say Christmas, of holidays not least,
Adds to a starveling its most delightful feast,
Provided he can get it, and ah me, 'tis very nice;
Yet he sings without his dinner, for he did not have the price. —N. Y. World.

Driving a Horse.

In dealing with horses, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, there are two things to be done. First, to restrain and control them: secondly, to stimulate and encourage them to do their best. For a dozen men who can do the first, you will find only one who can do the second.

Sometimes this faculty crops out in unexpected places. I was once riding on the back seat of an open carriage drawn by two lazy horses. On the front seat, beside the driver, sat a Methodist minister, a solemn-faced person, with a long, and except that his upper lip was shaven, a full beard. He was dressed in black clothes, and altogether looked the very antipodes of a horsey man.

The team were plodding slowly along, with heads and tails down, when, at his request, the reins were handed over to the parson. As soon as he had taken them, and had uttered one quiet word of command, the nags seemed to be electrified; up went their heads and tails; ten years slipped off their backs; and away they started at an elastic twelve-miles-an-hour gait.

These horses not only obeyed the minister, they took pleasure in obeying him.

It would be hard to say what is the secret of this power, but I doubt if it is ever found in any man not possessed of both a strong will and a feeling for dumb animals.

One of the Details Wrong.

She had attended the ambulance classes and obtained the certificate. The street accident she had earnestly longed for took place. A man had broken his leg. She confiscated the walking stick of a passer-by and broke it in three pieces for splints. She tore up her skirt for bandages. When all was completed she summoned a cab and took her patient to the hospital.

"Who bandaged this limb so creditably?" inquired the surgeon.

"I did," she blushingly replied.

"Well, it is most beautifully — most beautifully done; but you have made, I find one little mistake. You have bandaged the wrong leg.—San Francisco Argonaut.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious — and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. IS STEVENSON DEAD?

His Uncle Thinks It Is Mrs. Stevenson Who Has Died.

Edinburgh, Dec. 20. — Dr. Balfour, uncle of Robert Louis Stevenson, has written a letter to The Scotsman, in which he says that the relatives of the novelist believe that Robert Louis Stevenson is not dead, but that his wife is.

Mrs. Stevenson, Dr. Balfour writes, had been treated for aneurism of the brain while in Scotland. Moreover, she said to relatives in Edinburgh last Spring: "Do not believe any report about Louis unless I write you". No message has been received, although there has been ample time since Mr. Steveneon was reported to have died.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular singing lesson of the Grammar School took place this morning and the carols for Friday were practiced.

The Third class spent yesterday afternoon in decorating their class-room for Christmas. The room looks very pretty in its new dress of evergreens and light blue and white bunting. From the gas fixture hangs a little doll dressed, or rather undressed, in the costume of a South African, above which is a card bearing the inscription "A Merry Xmas to the Children of '97 from Santa Claus".

The Fourth class did but little decorating yesterday while the Seniors and Juniors have done none at all, but everyone will be at work this afternoon and three very pretty class-rooms are expected. All classes will unite to decorate Assembly Hall with evergreens.

The usual custom of the Senior class giving a present to the Juniors will be continued this year and many surprises for the Juniors are in store.

NINETY-FIVE.

Iona's Officers.

Iona Council, No. 14, Degree of Pocohontas, elected the following officers last evening:

Prophetess—Mrs. Leitheusser.
Pocohontas—Mrs. J. Stiglitz.
Wenonah—Mrs. Eliza Raden.
Powhattan—J. Wyckoff.
Keeper of Records—Mrs. Canfield.
Collector of Wampum—Mrs. Kline.
Keeper of Wampum—Mrs. J. Allen.
Trustee—David C. Allen.

One candidate was adopted, after which refreshments were served.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. George Musgrave and mother, of Duer street, are confined to the house by illness.

Dr. and Mrs. Endicott entertain the Plainfield physicians tonight at their home, to introduce Mr. MacPhie, physical director of the Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Lincoln Goodrich of Bound Brook, formerly headmaster of the Plainfield High School, will deliver the address tomorrow in place of Rev. Dr A. H. Lewis, who is called away from town.

Are You Ever Annoyed

by a buzzing or roaring sound in your head? Have you difficulty in hearing distinctly? Are you troubled with a continual dropping of mucus, irritating the throat and causing you to cough? Is your breath unpleasantly affected and accompanied with bad taste? Is your hearing less acute? If so, you have catarrh and should at once procure a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, the best known remedy. The Balm will give instant relief.

—The Potter Press Works are closed this afternoon on account of the funeral of the late A. M. Rose.

—The Endowment Rank, K. of P., hold their yearly meeting at Woolston & Buckle's, this evening.

—Rev. Mr. Dixon of Brooklyn preached a very interesting sermon on "Church Government" at the Mt. Olive Baptist Church last evening.

—By failing to appear as scheduled last evening, the St. Joseph Bowling Club forfeit a game to the C. Y. M. L. bowlers. The first half of the series just completed shows four games won by the C. Y. M. L. to one game lost—a record to be proud of.

—Walter Binn, a hostler in the employ of Dr. Hedges, while driving at rapid gait on Putnam avenue last evening was unable to control the horse, which became frightened at the barking of a dog and broke his rein. The vehicle was overturned, throwing Binn to the ground. The horse and cart were caught by Policeman Hartpence, and taken to the Metropolitan stables, where Binn, who had fortunately escaped injury, found them later in the evening.

Fanwood Council, R. A's next meeting has been changed from Tuesday, Dec. 25, to Thursday, Dec. 27, on account of Christmas falling on the former date.

A daughter was born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark. Mother and child are doing well.

NAPOLEON IN CORSICA.

His Associates and Their Influence Upon His Life.

Bonaparte's natural associates were the younger men: Masseria, son of a patriot line, Posso di Borgo, Peraldi, Cuneo, Ramolini, and others less influential. The only Corsican, with French military training, he was, in view of uncertainties and probabilities already on the horizon, a person of considerable consequence. His contribution to the schemes of the young patriots, says Century, was insignificant; it consisted in a proposal to support the central committee which his friends so ardently desired by a body of local militia. The plan was promptly adopted by the associates, the radicals seeing in it a means to put arms once more into the hands of the people, the others having no doubt in mind the storming of the Bastile and the possibility of similar movements in Ajaccio and elsewhere. Bonaparte, the only trained officer among them, may have dreamed of abandoning the French service, and of a supreme command in Corsica. Many of the people who appeared well disposed toward France had from time to time received permission from the authorities to carry arms; many carried them secretly and without a license; but proportionately there were so few in both classes that vigorous or successful armed resistance was in most places impracticable. The attitude of the department of war at Paris was regulated by Buttafuoco, and was, of course, hostile to the insidious scheme of a local militia. The minister of war would do nothing but submit the suggestion to the body against whose influence it was aimed, the hated council of twelve nobles. The stupid sarcasm of such a step was well-nigh criminal.

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

The Patriarch's ball, which is an annual pow-wow indulged by New York's exclusive set with aristocratic desires, was largely attended, too much so, in fact, to be a success. A crowd is beastly common, but when every member of the society is privileged to invite a guest, the daughters usually have their way and the result is an attendance of a lot of sissy dudes whom the truly patriarchial papa's cannot tolerate. The lines will be more closely drawn hereafter. A society paper announces that as the Baroness Fava was the leading representative of royalty present, Ward McAllister, the President of the Patriarchs, paid the Baronness much attention. Giovanni del Drogo, who is a relative of the Infanta Eulalie, took the Countess de Brazza to supper. Sir Roderick Cameron offered his arm to the Marquise de Talleyrand Perigord. And yet this is America. From the chins up, every woman at the ball might have stepped from a picture of an early nineteenth century belle. All had their hair brushed back in front and up in the back, and then piled higher and higher, until the knot seemed to end in a point. Those church-steeple coiffures must be new.

It is not everybody who can go around among his friends and by a little persuasive argument induce them to form a syndicate which will pay out $50,000,000 in gold at the beck of his finger. But that is just what John Aikman Stewart did, and, although he is undoubtedly proud of his success in so deftly managing to secure the whole issue of government bonds, he does not exhibit the slightest sympton of what is generally termed the "big head."

But, then, John Aikman Stewart is accustomed to deal with immense sums of money, and while in this regard familiarity is not likely to breed contempt, it may bring down to the plane of the ordinary what might otherwise be a marvellous achievement. If, however, you had been at the head of the Sub-Treasury in this city, with its gold laden coffers, for years; if you had directed the affairs of a great trust company, with its hold on untold wealth; had you been accustomed to keep a watchful eye on millions of your own hard earned coin, you might eventually come to feel that a million, more or less, was not a matter of overwhelming moment.

And all this has been done by John A. Stewart, the organizer of the syndicate which has just won a financial victory which has set nearly the whole world talking about it and the man who manouvred it.—N. Y. Herald.

We are surprised to see that Dr. Parkhurst is unsparing in his denunciation of Mr. Thomas C. Platt as a wicked foe to municipal reform of the kind approved by the pulpit of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church.

Brother Platt has been an attendant at that sanctuary exemplary in his punctuality, and diligent as a listener to the spiritual and reformatory teachings and admonitions of its pastor. He is a Presbyterian in his religious proclivities, and hence presumably of a severely religious cast of mind. His choosing the Madison Square Church as his particular place of worship in town, and his prominence as the occupant of one of the best pews, would seem to indicate that he was edified by the outgivings of its pulpit. Not any of the veteran and stalwart Presbyterians sitting about him, the Hon Smith Ely, Jr., Mr. D. Willis James, Mr. John Crosby Brown, and Mr. William E. Dodge, for instance, have been more punctual in their attendance on the sanctuary, more earnest in their devotions, or apparently better satisfied with the spiritual food offered them by the pastor than Brother Platt, now scored as an abandoned political sinner by Dr. Parkhurst.—N. Y. Sun.

In spite of the apparent eagerness of Lord Dunraven to bring about a race for the America's Cup next fall, as matters stand at present it looks as if the extraordinary concessions demanded by the Royal Yacht Squadron would make it impossible to arrange a contest. The deed of gift under which the New York Yacht Club holds the cup is the principle obstacle in the way of an agreement. This document contains certain provisions which were inserted for the purpose of enabling the holders of the cup to prepare themselves to defend its possession. The English yachtsmen object most strongly to the clause compelling them to disclose the measurements of the boat with which they propose to race for the cup, the claim being made that this information gives the holder of the cup an unusual advantage in building a boat to defend possession of the trophy. To the lay mind, however, such a result would seem to be highly creditable to the skill of the designer of the American boat and no hardship whatever to the challenger.

Where Uncle Sam's Flags Are Made.

Before a man-o'-war is completely equipped she must be supplied with a varied assortment of the flags of all nations. The flag lockers of a cruiser like the New York will contain more than two hundred different designs.

All the flags for our navy are made in the equipment building at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The floor of the flag room is covered with lines representing the exact measurements of the various ensigns, and it is no easy matter to turn out a flag which will be exactly according to pattern, both as to design and measurement. There are eight colors used in flags—red, white, blue, orange, yellow, green, brown, black and canary yellow. The canary yellow is used instead of white in flags used for signalling. This is because it is found that, when signalling at a distance, a white flag or a device on a white ground blends with the horizon and becomes almost invisible. The largest American flag made is called No. 1. It measures 34.86 feet in length and 13.12 feet in breadth, and is very rarely used. The size called No. 2, which is considerably smaller, is the one generally used by war ships. Cruisers carry the Stars and Stripes in seven different sizes, but only the Minneapolis and the Detroit fly the gigantic No. 1 size.

The most difficult flag to make is that of San Salvador. This flag requires all the colors, and Costa Rica runs it close, requiring all but brown. Our own flag is by no means an easy one to make. The 44 stars in their blue field have to be accurately arranged, and the stripes mathematically exact according to the official pattern. The stars are made of muslin, folded 25 times and punched out by a steel punch, which cuts a dozen or more stars at each operation. There are used in the Navy Yard 50,000 yards of bunting annually, which is all made in the United States.

WOMAN AS A WOMAN SEES HER.

Masculine Aspirations and Slavish Imitations of the Other Sex.

Mrs. Edwin Knowles thus discourses upon the the twentieth century woman:

Will the coming woman, the woman of our dreams, the twentieth century woman, be the overwhelming success all so confidently expect? The picture is alluring as set forth by he voluble advance agents. But will she realize all they promise? I doubt it. It seems to me her masculine qualities will be too pronounced, that she will be badly dressed, smoke cigarettes and wheel around on our streets on that indecent abomination miscalled a safety. No one undervalues the progress a few years has accomplished, but has it always been for the best? Are we not ourselves doing the very things we have so railed at man for doing? Are we not being as selfish and exclusive as we have pictured man? What has been our complaint in the past? Is it that we were shut out from councils and the clubs of men? That we were denied opportunities they should have afforded us. But now, when the time has come that we can display the value of our own liberal education, we show that imitation is the sincerest flattery, and deliberately shut the door in the face of men, and forbid their presence in our clubs and councils. Man is a failure, says the progressive woman. That is the most ludicrous thing in the whole category of crime with which man is charged. To brand as a failure the object toward which she is bending every nerve.

Your reformer tells us our dress is bad. What does she offer in exchange? Why, man's dress of course. She has already absorbed his hats, his ties, collars, shirts, cuffs, even at times his coat, leaving as man's sole prerogative his trousers. Plainly does she hint at taking them also? Now, with very few exceptions, I have never seen women look well in these purloined garments. Nature herself evidently objected to such attire for women. Surely our clothes are pretty. Admitting that sometimes they are made grotesque when not suited to some particular woman, who insists on wearing a style not intended for her, why condemn the mass because a few burlesque the times?

The perfect twentieth century woman should be pretty still, as most women are loyal enough to themselves to think that they are so, perhaps we can waive that. She must be truthful and honest, faithful and loyal to her husband, her children and her home; brave enough to work if necessity compels her, capable of battling with the world and earning her own living, but content to let her husband do it while he can. She ought to know enough about the business that supports them, should accident or death overtake him, to be able to put her hand to the helm and guide the ship safely to port. She should be just to her friends, even to her enemies if she has them, also to her servants; strong enough to bear her burdens without growing fretful or peevish; strong to keep her trials and her griefs locked in her own bosom, and not make herself a perpetual nusiance with the constant telling of them. Be proud, happy and content, to be what you Creator made you, true, noble, helpful womanly woman.

Foot Binding in China.

Miss Adele Fielde, who during fifteen years residence in China, made a special study of the condition of the women of that country says:

"Foot binding has existed 900 years. There are numerous legends which are supposed to account for it, but nothing definite is known. The fashionable shoe is from 2 1-2 to 3 inches long. Though this process of foot binding is painful and injurious, it is less injurious than the waistbinding in this country. There are but few American women whose internal organs are not displaced by tight lacing.

THE RESULT OF AN AMERICAN WOMAN'S WORK.

Not An Assertion, But a Truth, Proven by the Accumulated Testimony of 20 Years.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

HERE'S a reason for it, when a special remedy for a special disease maintains the first place in the faith of the people for twenty years; when, year after year, the confidence given cautiously at first rolls into a tremendous volume; when one woman's name is known throughout the civilized world; when letters by the thousands come by every mail from all parts of the earth in gratitude and praise; when druggists place this remedy first on the list of standard remedies.

Then there is a reason for it. Lydia E. Pinkham and her wonderful Vegetable Compound, deserve the first place in the hearts of womankind.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured more women from all disease arising from irregularity and derangement of the uterus and womb than any remedy known to medical science.

Are you suffering? then profit by the experience of this thankful woman:—

Dear Mrs. Pinkham, — Last winter I did not think my little ones would have a mother long. I suffered terribly with female troubles.

I could keep nothing on my stomach, and got so "poor" my friends hardly knew me. I suffered with severe headaches, dizziness, faintness, backache, and the blues.

Thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am now as fat as ever, and have no female troubles.

If you use my letter I hope it may be the means of saving some other poor mother's life as it did mine.—MRS. ELLA VAN BUREN, St. David, Fulton Co., Ill.

THE GOVERNESS.

Bebe was growing big, Robert would soon be 7 years old and Capt. d'Eperval, a widower after two years' married life, and a man who had seen much hard service, had come to the conclusion that the short time he was able to devote to his boy's education was no longer sufficient.

It was necessary now to have a governess to continue the cultivation of his young intelligence till he should be ready and strong enough to go to a boarding school.

D'Eperval had written to his old aunt, the Marchioness of Champerel, who had written in reply:

"My Dear Nephew—The introduction of a governess into one's establishment is always a delicate matter, especially in your case, who are living practically as a bachelor.

"I send you two persons who have been very highly recommended to me—Mlle. Jeanne Ozy and Mlle. Virginie Brochard.

"One of the two, it seems, is pretty old, but I forget which, for I have mixed up the information that was given me about them. However, you may choose, and Providence, I am sure, will guide you in your selection. I embrace you. Your affectionate aunt.

"BUSAC-CHAMPEREL."

And the Captain, as soon as he returned from the maneuvres, had written in all haste to the two addresses indicated. He had just come in from a drill and was preparing to take off his uniform when his orderly informed him with a smile full of mystery that a young lady, Jeanne Ozy, wished to speak with him.

"Good," thought the Captain, "it is the governess, the young one or the old one, I don't know which, but at any rate, some ugly creature with a worn-out dress, faded black gloves and eyeglasses over her nose."

He hurriedly pulled on his tunic again and went down into the drawing room. A young girl of about 24 years of age was sitting on a chair, very simply dressed but very correctly in her blue skirt, with her pretty bonnet perched upon a pile of golden hair on the top of her head.

She was pale and very gentle in appearance, her face, as if illuminated by two wonderful eyes of a deep sea green with lids that seemed to palpitate on her cheeks when she dropped her eyelashes.

"Mademoiselle Jeanne Ozy, I believe, sent by the Marchioness of Champerel?"

"Oui, Monsieur."

"Be seated, pray, and let us have a chat. My aunt has told me the nicest possible things about you. You have already had some experience in teaching?"

"I hold all the qualifying papers of the university, monsieur," she said in a sweet voice.

"That is a great deal more than is necessary for a young lad like Robert. He can read, write passably and knows his figures. That is all I have been able to teach him; I am obliged to spend so much time in the garrison. But the child is very docile and obedient and is of a gentle disposition, which will make teaching him easier. What hours can you give him?"

"Oh! monsieur, whatever you wish. Choose those that will be most convenient for you."

"Do you not give any other lessons?" asked the Captain with surprise.

"Oh, yes, monsieur—that is to say—no," replied the young girl with a little embarrassment. "I had three other pupils, but they have just gone to school, and for the time being I am a little hard pressed. My mother is very old and accustomed to a certain degree of comfort, of which I do not wish she should be deprived. She has only myself to depend upon. In a word, I shall not be very exacting."

"Mademoiselle," cried d'Epeval with impulse, "so far as the question of money is concerned there will be no difficulty between us."

He pronounced this sentence in an eager voice, and he was himself surprised at the warmth that he had put into it. It was as if he had unconsciously made her an offer of service, affection and devotion. To escape from this feeling, which rose up in a confused sort of manner in his breast, he said more brusquely:

"You had better see Robert, and make the acquaintance of your pupil."

He rang the bell, and the child appeared with his nurse. He was a veritable Valasquez, with his curly light hair falling over a black velvet coat, topped with a Louis XIII. collar and old lace. At the door little Robert stopped, as if fascinated, smiling, amazed at what he saw before him. Then, clapping his hands together, he cried out:

"Oh, papa, papa, what lovely eyes she has! Do you see what lovely eyes they are!"

And spontaneously he rushed up to her and offered his lips to her to kiss, while she to conceal her trouble, hid her face in the child's golden hair.

There was a silence broken only by the sound of papers and copy books that Jeanne Ozy turned over to ascertain what her pupil could do.

A sense of awkwardness seemed to have arisen between the two. While the one examined the strokes and flourishes of the copy book sentences, the other came to the conclusion that the young girl pleased him very much, indeed—much more, in fact, than should have been the case.

Although not yet 40 years of age the Captain had already turned his house into a sort of cloister. No women, other than those of his own family, had ever crossed his threshold. Never had he received any one in his rooms but his own well-chosen friends, for he wished his boy to grow up among the very best surroundings.

And now, suddenly, the change of life compelled him to introduce into his house a woman, young, seductive and indisputably attractive.

Obviously, from the fact alone that she would be charged with the education of Robert, she would be sacred to him. But would he be able to conquer and control those beatings of his poor heart, a heart chastened by sorrow, but still young, ardent, and sending hot, passionate blood through his veins?

What would become of him in the daily meetings with her, in the conversations that would be necessary with her to ascertain the progress his son was making? In the frequent tete-a-tetes side by side, and at the same table day after day?

Was not his severe room, with the picture of his dead wife above the sofa, already illuminated, as it were, by this radiant apparition that seemed to spread around it an intoxicating odor of youth and freshness like a perfume of love itself?

The Captain foresaw the danger, and, as the governess raised her head after having examined the exercise books, their glances met, and d'Eperval looked into her big eyes—those deep green eyes that had pleased the child so—as into a vast abyss in which he might founder with his duty and his conscience.

"Mademoiselle," he said, brusquely, "forgive me if I cause you pain, and believe me there is nothing in my words that is meant to wound or to insult you. I am in despair. Nevertheless, after reflection, I see that it is quite impossible for you to come to us."

The governess stared at him with astonishment, at a loss to understand this sudden change.

But d'Eperval continued with an effort and in an altered voice:

"Listen to me well. If there were another woman here, a mother, I would say to you with genuine pleasure: 'Come and live in our house; take my son!' But I am a widower and live here all alone, and am compelled to an exaggerated severity of life. I am persuaded that you could bring up Robert to my utmost satisfaction, but you are not old enough, and you have not the external appearance which would be suitable, at any rate, for my own house."

The young girl had risen. She was paler even than when she came in. She kissed the boy once more. He clung to her blue skirt and tried to hold her by the strength of his little hands. But she bowed gravely and withdrew without a word, without a single gesture, without a complaint.

This had already happened to her several times before! Only when she was on the stairs and the door had closed behind her with a dull, heavy sound, she began to cry.

"And now," said Captain d'Eperval, on whose forehead stood great drops of perspiration, "and now to write to the other one, the old one!"—Translated from the French.

WATSON SUGGESTS DUCKING.

He Would Have Cruel Husbands Soused for Punishment.

Judge Watson of Brooklyn who recently suspended sentence in the case of a cruel husband so long as he attended prayer meetings with his wife, recently had another case of a wife beater before him.

Anton Tahner of 166 McKibben street nodded when the judge asked him if he hit his wife.

"You are candid," remarked the magistrate. "Do you hit her often?"

Tahner nodded and smiled.

"That is a very expressive nod of yours," said the judge.

"He didn't hit me hard," said Mrs. Tahner.

"There it is," said the judge. "The same old, old story. The wife sides with the husband as soon as it begins to look bad for him. I wonder if they have got that cage handy that they drown dogs in. The sheriff ought to put you fellows in it and take you down to the foot of South Sixth street and duck you in about three times. It would be a good thing until the whipping post is established, for if ever I go to the Legislature I'll introduce a bill providing for a whipping post for wife beaters. I'd like to send you to jail, Tahner, but if I did your wife would haunt my house until I let you out. I'll take chances, however, and send you down until next week, when we'll settle your case finally."

The Turning Down of Peffer.

A heart bowed down with weight of woe was Senator Peffer the other day. Through the tangled luxuriance of his whiskers swept a mournful wind; his noble brow was knit and wrinkled with the rough ridges which mark the troubled soul, and even Marius, admid the ruins of Carthage, could not have contemplated a ruin more profound than that upoh which the Senator from Kansas was forced to gaze.

Upon the clerk's desk lay a pile of bills. With a ruthless hand they had been deposited there by Senator Morrill of Vermont with the remark that the Finance Committee reported them all adversely and recommended their indefinite postponement.

At one fell swoop the noble monument of white paper which Mr. Peffer had erected at great expense to the Government and much labor at the printing office for the amelioration of all mankind and the angelic host besides was shattered. Bills, which would, if they had passed, have added the little mite of $92,000,000,000 to the circulation of the country were sentenced to a legislative tomb as cold and deathly as that in which the fair Juliet died by the side of Romeo.—Washington Post.

Work as a Refuge.

Walter Scott and Alexandre Dumas were alike in their power of industry. Scott used to say, when talking of his work, that he often wished he could cease thinking, just to see whether his pen would not finish the page of itself. The great French romancer's capacity for continuous labor was even more extraordinary. To him, indeed, as perhaps to all such men, work was a refuge from all the ills of life. For forty years he suffered from some internal disease which, when it was upon him, made it impossible for him to sleep.—Youth's Companion.

She Called Out the Department.

The Fire Department of Jacksonville, Fla., was turned out the other day to put out the burning pain in a woman's mashed finger. While cooking the woman mashed her finger, and ran out of the house shrieking "Fire!" "Murder!" and lots of other things. A man who happened to be by started off at her first yell and turned in an alarm of fire, which brought the engine and the hose wagons to the scene on the gallop. The firemen helped the woman swear some and went back to their quarters.

A FLIGHT FROM GLORY.

Once from the parapet of gems and glow,
An angel said; "O, God, the heart grows cold
On these eternal battlements of gold,
Where all is pure, but cold as Virgin snow.

Here sobs are never heard; no salt tears flow;
Here there are none to help—nor sick, nor old;
No wrong to fight, nor justice to uphold;
Grant me Thy leave to live man's life below."

"And then annihilation?" God replied.
"Yes," said the angel, "even that dread price;
For earthly tears are worth eternal night."

"Then go," said God. The Angel opened wide
His dazzling wings, gazed back on Heaven thrice,
And plunged forever from the walls of Light.

DIVORCE IN JAPAN.

Causes as Compared With Those of Other Countries.

Grounds for the divorce of wives in Japan are reduced to seven fixed causes, in which the most serious incentives are outbreaks of disobedience or temper against a father or mother-in-law; jealousy is next in importance; annoying in any wise the peace of the husband's kinsmen, gossip and over loud talking and quarreling at home, stealing and leprosy are mentioned also as just reasons for legal procedure agaidst a wife. Apparently no question of propriety on the wife's side or provision for her future support are considered and the father always takes the children, which is a plain injustice. On the whole, however, reasons for divorce in Japan are not more frivolous than in many other countries that esteem themselves vastly her superior in point of civilization. In Italy, and South Carolina only of all our States, is death alone the legal dissolution of marriage vows. Our common plea of incompatibility of temper is certainly synonymous with the first four Japanese causes.

In Massachusetts and Mississippi the habitual use of opium permits divorce. In France a wife who, for no apparently good reason, refuses to accompany her husband to the theatre can be brought to the divorce court. In Portugal a wife may not publish her literary work without her husband's consent, and both in France and Portugal a wife can be forced to accompany her husband on any and every journey he takes, provided he does not go beyond the boundaries of the country. Certainly, then, Japan can improve her divorce laws very slightly by studying those of her sister nations, and as a Japanese wife can in turn divorce the husband who thrusts an unpleasant mother-in-law on her there seems no need of deploring her condition.

DEAD BUT IS YET ALIVE

Peculiar Legal Status of Murderer Lambert.

His Lawyer, John L. Semple, Argues That Since the Execution Did Not Occur on the Date Specified, Lambert Is Legally Dead—His Counsel Demands His Release.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 20.—A peculiar legal move has been made by Lawyer John L. Semple before Judge Garrison in behalf of Theodore Lambert, who is under sentence to be hanged on Jan. 3. Lambert was convicted of murder on May 27 last and sentenced Oct. 13 to be hanged on Dec. 13. On Dec. 4 Lawyer Semple obtained from the governor a reprieve for Lambert until Jan. 3, pending application to the board of pardons for a commutation of sentence.

The board of pardons on Thursday last refused to commute the sentence. In court Mr. Semple declared that his client, although not having been executed on the day legally designated, Dec. 13, was legally dead. Being dead, the law had no more control over him or his body.

Such being the case, Lambert was now being illegally restrained of his liberty, and a writ of habeas corbus was therefore asked of the court to set him free.

"Humph," ejaculated Judge Garrison, as the application was made to him: "Legally dead and yet alive; got no life and yets wants his liberty—that's a series of anomalies."

Mr. Semple went on to argue that according to the laws of New Jersey the governor of the state possessed no prerogative to interfere to prevent an execution unless he exercised the same within ninety days from the date of conviction.

The ninety days had passed when Governor Werts granted the reprieve. The stay of executive being, therefore, invalid and the legal day of execution having passed, the law has no more control of Lambert.

In arguing with the governor for reprieve when the governor contended that the ninety days limit had expired, Mr. Semple claims that the conviction accompanied the sentence and not the verdict and that therefore it was then within the ninety days.

Judge Garrison set down next Saturday to hear and determine whether he would grant Lambert the writ asked for or not.

Lawyer Semple declares he has a federal supreme court decision as a precedent for his motion.

LANGLEY'S AERIAL MACHINE.

It Flops Down After Shooting from a Hill Top.

Quantico, Va., Dec. 20.—Professor Langley, of the Smithsonian institution, has been experimenting here for several days with the air-ship about which much has recently been wrtten by scientific men.

To the unscientific observer it appears that Professor Langley has not made a success of aerial navigation, although he is not discouraged over the results of his efforts so far. The machine was started from a side hill, moved through the air about one hundred yards and then fell.

Athletes to Visit Canada.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 20.—Malcolm G. Chace, organizer of the invitation college team which is to visit Canada the coming holidays, has announced the following players who will represent America in the contests in ice hockey in Canadian rinks: M. G. Chace, captain; F. A. Hovey, of Harvard; R. B. Wrenn, of Harvard; A. E. Foote, of Yale; Wm. E. Larned, of Brown, and G. B. Matteson, of Brown. All are well known in the tennis world.

New York State League.

Albany, Dec. 20.—The New York state league of professional baseball players was organized here. Those in attendance on the meeting at which the league was formed were: Troy, J. D. Maloney and O. Lobdell; Amsterdam, Dr. Peters and Frank Parmentier; Johnstown, C. H. Ball and A. Verleger; Gloversville, Louis Levi and George H. Geer. Dr. Peters was elected president.

Robbers Got His Gold.

Sioux, Ia., Dec. 20.—John Collins of this place, was robbed of $4,400 in gold in his house by two masked men. His wife, who has brought suit for divorce, had attached all the property of Collins which she knew of and he had kept the money in the house so that she could not get it. The robbers also took two horses and escaped, abandoning the horses a few miles away.

Tortured and Robbed by Thieves.

Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 20.—Information has been received here that masked burglars had secured several thousand dollars from Thomas and David Athold, residing in the backwoods near Bursonville, Bucks county. The burglars numbered six and received the plunder by torturing the men with hot pokers.

To Be Shot Without Trial.

Neuva Laredo, Mexico, Dec. 20.—Geraldo Saiz, the revolutionist extradited from San Antonio, has been brought here, and it is understood that he will be taken out and shot without the formality of a trial. It is claimed that his guilt was firmly established in the extradition proceedings.

Mammoth Skeleton Found.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 20.—The skeleton of a mammoth has been found near here by a farmer. It is over forty feet long and ten feet wide. One of the animal's teeth brought here is 11¼ inches long, 5 inches across, and 11 inches deep. The skeleton is only half uncovered yet.

Corporal Mauve Dead.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Corporal Mauve of Company "A", United States military post, Plattsburg, who took morphine last Saturday with suicidal intent is dead.

Lewis Declared a Murderer.

Gorham, Me., Dec. 20.—The coroners jury has decided that James Lewis murdered Coburn.

BARBOUR WAS ALIVE.

A Curious Case of Mistaken Identity Occurs at Pana, Ill.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—George H. Barbour, who was supposed to have been murdered near Pana, Ill., turns out to be alive. The body found near the railroad tracks at Pana several days ago was sent to this city and preparations were being made by the Barbour family for the funeral.

Mr. William H. Barbour, the father of George, was in the undertaking establishment where the body lay.

"There is no doubt," he said, "as to the identity of my son. There he lies, cold in death. I cannot be mistaken. The scar is on the back of his head, there is a vaccination mark on his arm that I knew well was there and everything else answers to his description.

"His hair may seem changed in death, and that face is too dear to me not to recognize it even though the lips cannot speak to me and the dear eyes cannot look into mine."

While he was speaking the boy who was supposed to have been murdered walked into the place. Father and son were clasped in each other's embrace.

One man has already narrowly escaped lynching on suspicion of being the murderer and several others are being closely watched. A dispatch from Pana says that Cummings, incarcerated in the county jail as the supposed murderer, has been released. The officers will not give out anything further than they will have the real murderer in 48 hours and a posse left for the southern portion of the county. The body of the boy was identified as that of Arthur L. Binnion, of Vernon, Ill.

ALLEGED DRUG SMUGGLER.

Pettingill's Arrest Believed To Be an Important One.

Philadelphia, Dec. 20.—W. B. Pettingill, the former Springfield, Mass., druggist, who was arrested in this city charged with smuggling phenacetine, is thought to be the principal and not the agent of a smuggling syndicate. Special treasury agents have in their possession affidavits of dealers in phenacetine at Montreal, who supplied the drug to Pettingill in 1,000 pound lots.

The agents claim that they also have affidavits of the persons who brought the drug to the frontier, near Malone, N. Y., whence it was shipped to both this city and New York.

When Pettingill was brought before United States Commissioner Bell in this city, he was accompanied by a man who was willing to give the necessary bail, $1,500 in cash, but this being against the law, the alleged smuggler was sent back to prison.

I LIVED LIKE GUERRILLAS.

Train Robbers Who Became Murderers To Escape Arrest.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 20.—The confession of Barney Boykin, one of the Panther Burn train robbers, implicating two other farmers of Sharkey county, Miss., was received by officials of the Illinois Central railroad here.

This gang undertook to hold up a train on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley road but succeeded only in wounding the engineer and fireman.

The men hid in the woods to escape arrest and resorted to guerrilla plundering in the surrounding country, killing Ben Brooks, seriously wounding Jim Lee and making raids on live stock and cotton fields of neighboring farmers.

DINED ON HORSE FLESH.

Peculiar Banquet Served to Prominent Newark Men by a Doctor.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 20.—Richard S. Hopkins entertained about one hundred of the most prominent residents of Newark at a banquet of horse flesh as an article of every day diet.

The attendance included nearly all of the leading physicians of the city. The meat was served in various forms and all pronounced it excellent. Dr. Chester Vandervorst stated that a horse flesh market would soon be opened in Newark.

Suing the Town of Bristol.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 20.—An important suit against the town of Bristol has begun in the superior court before Judge S. A. Robinson, on the question of damages. On May 18, 1894, in a runaway accident at Bristol, caused, it is alleged, by a defective highway, Nancy Bailey was killed and Maria Bailey and Frederick Bailey was seriously injured. Mrs. Nancy Bailey's administrator sues to recover $5,000 damages, Maria Bailey $5,000 and Frederick Bailey $2,500.

Arctic Explorers Return.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 20.—Capt. Wiggins, the Arctic explorer, and his party, who were lost to the world for several weeks last fall have arrived at Archangel. Five had been severely frostbitten and are in a hospital. All forty men suffered great hardships during their overland journey of thirty-two days from Chabalova to Pestozerek.

Carey Held for Trial.

Great Barrington, Mass., Dec. 20.—David Carey, who was arrested for attempting to wreck the Wilson Point freight Monday night, was given a hearing before the district court of Southern Berkshire here and was held for the grand jury in $800 bonds.

THEY HANGED A BISHOP

More Outrages on Christian Armenians Reported.

The Archbishop of Marash Taken from Jail and Executed by the Turks—The Archbishops of Hadjin and Zeitoun Condemned to Death. Priest Lodged in Jail.

Berlin, Dec. 20.—The Cologne Gazette here publishes a letter from Armenia telling of fresh horrors there.

The letter recites that the Turkish garrisons at Erzeroum, Irisa, Van, Tigranocerta, Babert and Moosh, altogether about 60,000 men, were sent against the Armenians.

The commanders of these troops announced to the inhabitants of the villages: "We are ordered to put you to the sword for openly defying the government."

The attack then began. The Turks were repulsed in the first instance.

Those Armenians who submitted unconditionally were bound to stakes and then their limbs were cut off with saws.

In other cases the victims were disemboweled and their eyes gouged out.

Children were thrown into burning oil and women were tortured and burned to death. The troops plundered and burned the churches.

Among those who fell victims to the savagery of the soldiery were forty priests, who were brutally massacred.

The British consul at Erzeroum was prevented from going to the scene of the atrocities on the ground that it was not safe for any Armenian, he being an Armenian, to approach the places where the troubles had occurred.

This did not deter him from making an attempt to learn the truth, but as he was trying to approach one of the devastated villiages he was arrested.

Among those who witnessed the atrocities was a Spaniard named Ximenes. The Turkish authorities approached him and offered him large large bribes to induce him to deny in the English papers the truth of the reports of the outrages.

They also sought to bribe him to go to England for the purpose of lecturing on Armenia, in which he was to dwell upon the contented condition of the Armenians. Senor Ximenes rejected the offers made to him.

London, Dec. 20.—Word has reached here through Armenian channels that the Archbishop of Marash has been removed from the jail in Aleppo, and has been hanged.

Enquirers at the British consulate are informed that the officials are not aware of the archbishop's whereabouts.

The Bishop of Hadjin and the Archbishop of Zeitoun, who have long been victims of insult and outrage, have been condemned to death, as also Father Gavork, of Marash.

Sister Elizabeth and twenty-three other Armenians of Zeitoun, whose terms of three years each have expired, are still detained in prison.

The government's declaration that the fires in Adana, Hadjin and Beylin were caused by Armenians has excited the Moslems, although all know that the buildings destroyed had beeen occupied by Armenians.

The church in Beylin has been closed and the priest and fifteen conspicuous members are in prison in Aleppo.

The convents at Hadjin, Zeitoun and Fournouz have been closed and the Bishop of Adana has been exiled to Jerusalem.

A Constantinople correspondent says that United States Consul Jewett insists upon accompanying the commission of inquiry, despite the unfavorable attitude of the Porte.

Constantinople, Dec. 20.—Mgr. Izmirhan has been elected Armenian patriarch.

Mgr. Achikian, the Armenian patriarch, resigned, and subsequently his locum tenens also tendered his resignation. The resignations were caused by the difficulties between the Porte and the patriarch in consequence of the death at Aleppo of Mgr. Mighirditch, Armenian Catholicos.

It is apparent from the election of the new patriarch that the difficulty was finally smoothed over to the satisfaction of both the Armenians and the Porte.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Letters from Armenian-born American citizens now abroad are filled with statements that United States Minister Terrell has refused to furnish them with protection.

Several cases of alleged flagrant outrages were perpetrated in the city of Constantinople.

Rev. Murgurlien, Grabelian, of this city, tells the story of one Hayrabred Jeknavorian, one of the best known Armenians in Boston, who returned to his native country last August.

He has resided in Boston nine years and had become an American citizen. When he left Boston he was armed with the necessary passports, but on arriving at Constantinople was arrested and thrown into jail. He appealed to the consul general, who said that he was powerless in the matter, and Minister Terrell tersely declared that he could do nothing for him, and advised him to go back to America at once.

A similar case is that of Paul Bedighian, who was arrested and subjected to the vilest indignities. He attempted to obtain redress for injuries suffered, but after four months of waiting he, too, was advised to go home.

Tin Workers Condemn Woods.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 20.—The convention of the state league of tin and sheet iron workers adopted a resolution condemning Judge Woods for sentencing Debs and his associates, and denying them a trial by jury.

Women Saw Him Hanged.

Greenville, Miss., Dec. 20.—Steve Adams was hanged in the jail yard here for the murder of James Iverson. Two thousand people, mostly colored, including hundreds of women and children, witnessed the hanging.

Publisher Beadle Dead.

New York, Dec. 20.—The death is announced of Erastus F. Beadle, the well known publisher, at his home in Cooperstown, N. Y. He was 74 years of age.

WHEELS IN HIS HEAD

FORTUNES THAT HAVE BEEN MADE BY INVENTIVE CRANKS.

Most of the Little Labor Saving Devices in Every Day Use are Protected by Patents and are Earning Fortunes for Some One.

Small ideas are sometimes worth fortunes. The Patent Office records are full of trifling suggestions that have won riches for lucky thinkers. More than half of them have been hit upon by accident. Most thoughts are blank in the lottery of the human mind, but now and then out pops a prize. Catch it on the fly, and you needn't do any more work.

For example, take a little metal paper fastener, used to keep the pages of documents or manuscrips together. Though but a trifle, it made wealth for Mr. J. W. McGill, who invented it in 1867. The rubber pencil tip was devised by a Philadelphia man, Hymen L. Lipman, in 1858. It earned $200,000 for him. It was in the same year that George A. Mitchell got a patent for the metallic shoe tip. His application for exclusive rights covered shoe tips of silver and all other metals, but copper was preferred. From that time on every bootmaker who sold shoes with copper toes had to pay a royalty, which enriched the originator of the idea. An immense amount of money was made by William D. Ewart, out of an improvised attachment for machine harvesters called a drive chain.

An improved pattern of thumb latch was produced by Philos Eli and John A. Blake of New Haven. Thirty thousand were sold during the first year, and the brothers reaped a small fortune. It is reckoned that $1,500,000 has been made out of the simple device of metal plates for protecting the heels and soles of boots. No less than 145,000,000 of them were manufactured in 1887. The notion of utilizing the feathers of chickens, turkeys, geese, and other domestic fowls as a subsitute for whalebone in women's corsets has been worth more than a fairly productive silver mine to its inventor. The quills are woven into strips, or what is called feather bone. A man named Canfield first conceived the notion of making armpit dress shields seamless with a sheet of cloth covered rubber. It brought him an income of many thousands a year.

Heaton, who hit upon the notion of a metal fastening for buttons, doing away with sewing, got a fortune by it. A wooden screw proved a mint for Thomas S. Sloan in 1846. The man who invented wooden pegs for shoes was B. F. Sturtevant. He lived near Boston and went mad later on. The barb wire fence was worth more than $1,250,000 in royalties to its originators. Formerly many eggs got broken on their way to market by rail. A countryman conceived the plan of packing them in trays of pasteboard, with a separate compartment in which each egg might stand upright. The happy though was worth a fortune.

There was a fortune in the inverted glass bell hung over a gas jet to prevent the ceiling from being blackened. Big money has been made out of a pen for shading in different colors, and a darning weaver, for repairing stockings has likewise been immensely profitable. The ball and socket glove fastener was patented in American by a Frenchman, named Raymond, whose idea has proven golden. Rogers got an independence for life out of his screw wire nail. A common needle threader has brought an income of $10,000 a year to its inventor. Patents for gold, silver, and copper tinsel yarns for upholstery, have fetched a profit of $45,000. Paul E. Wirt's fountain pen has made him rich. A peculiar crook in the wire of a recently patented hook and eye is producing hundreds of dollars a day. The roller skate earned a cool million for the person who caught the idea as it floated in his brain and put it into tangible shape.

A self-made millionaire was quoted a while ago as saying that one of the best ways for a young man to make money quickly was to rack his brain until he found something the public wanted and to supply it. Common sense may be more useful than a mechanical education. In using bath brick for cleaning knives, housewives formerly found that the most troublesome part of the job was scraping the powder from the brick. One day it occurred to somebody to sell the brick ready powdered in neat packages, and he got a fortune by it. Everybody knows how troublesome it is to pick coins off a smooth counter. A way to get over this difficulty suggested itself to a thoughtful person, who promptly devised a rubber mat, with rubber bristles standing all over it. From this the coins can be picked up as easily as if they stood on edge. Henceforth this thoughtful person will not be compelled to toil for his livelihood.

French Frugality.

"One cannot help but admire the thrift and frugality of the French people," said Dr. Charles W. Chancellor, United States Consul at Havre, to a Post man at the Biggs.

"Everybody in France saves up money, and nearly every peasant is a bond owner. Without calling for a dollar from the outside the enormous war indemnity due Germany was paid in a little while. The Government issued bonds of $10 and $20 value, the French people quickly took them, and, coming into the hands of the masses, they really became a source of national wealth. In addition it gave the people a vital interest in the preservation of the Government.

"Men do not want to overturn a government if their pocketbooks will suffer loss, and so I think financial considerations, as much as anything else, will keep down all danger of future revolutions in that republic. There is no complaint of lack of gold over there or any other form of money, and France has more bullion than England, Germany, Austria and Italy combined."—Washington Post.

Settling a Dead-lock in Kentucky.

An odd kind of settlement of an election deadlock has been made by the two candidates for Sheriff of Wolfe county, Ky. Both candidates received the same number of votes, and the most careful recount and inspection of the ballots failed to alter the result. The candidates wouldn't agree to another contest, and, as they were close friends, neither would accept the office at the hands of the other. It was finally agreed that they should divide equally the receipts of the office and draw lots to decide which should be sheriff. The Republican won the draw, and the Democrat will be chief deputy sheriff, but with an equal share in the spoils of office.

A NEW MEXICO BAD MAN.

Traits of the Real Article and Those of the Man Who Tries to be Bad.

"Sitting in Bob Young's saloon at Pueblo with that gigantic 'old-timer' Davenport, once of Cimarron," said the Western surveyor, "he entertained me with quaint and tragic episodes of New Mexico life and death in the seventies. One was about a Thanksgiving Day. In the afternoon the cowboy contingent came in to town to celebrate the day. They were showing the effects of the loads they had made it their first business to accumulate. One foolishly drunken fellow from the range, who had got separated from his gang, had strayed into this saloon and was bracing himself upright with his elbows upon the counter. None of the men playing cards or drinking quietly at the tables paid any attention to his vaporings. From time to time he jumped up and kicked his heels together to make his spurs rattle and announced in defiant tones that he was 'only a cowboy, but he was as good as any man living, and if any man didn't like his talk they might go to hades.

"'That fellow isn't a bit bad, though he tries to be,' remarked Davenport contemptuously. 'The real desperado doesn't behave in that sort of way. If you want to know how a genuine shooting man acts take Clay Allison of New Mexico. We'd been standing, for instance, in Lambert's barroom at Cimarron drinking. There were plenty of men in those days who would be too glad to take Allison's life if they could only get a sure drop on him, and he knew it; but he would stand there quietly talking with me, to all appearances as unconcerned as to danger as we are now. Only as he drank and talked you could see that, without turning his head, his eye—he had an eye like cold, chilled steel—was taking in the movements of everybody who went and came in the barroom. He had an old grudge against Reinhart the Sheriff, and it was commonly supposed that this feeling would lead to the death of one of them. At sight of Reinhart Allison's bad blood would get to working and he would say to me in an undertone, so full of intense hatred and purpose that it was appalling:

"'Do you see that man? I'm going to kill him to-day.'

"'Well, a man in my place needed only to say the wrong word to bring on an encounter then and there by which Reinhart would lose his life, for he was no match with Allison in a man to man pistol scrap. His only chance lay in having his Sheriff's posse about him. Allison liked me, and I knew that the only way to turn him from his purpose was to appeal to his better nature. So I would say to him:

"'That's all right, Clay, so far as you and Reinhart are concerned, but there's another thing to be thought of. Just look at those who are dependent on him. He's got a daughter 13 years old and two little children, a boy of five and a girl of seven, to whom she has to act as a mother. Think what will become of them if you kill their father.

"'Well, that view of the case would take the idea of killing Reinhart from Allison's mind for that time, and the day would go by without any trouble.

Missed Their Train After All.

The young Bittersweets were going away on a visit, and after many vissitudes they were in the street car on their way to the station.

"Now, Amelia," remarked her lord, "I hope you will learn a lesson in punctuality from all this. You nearly made us late by running upstairs again at the last moment."

"For the tickets which you had forgotten, dear.

"H'm. That was because you fancied you smelt gas and sent me to look for it in the vacant room where nobody has been for six weeks."

"Well, you said some one might have been hidden there for days for all I knew—and they might. I have been so busy all week making my own dress, because I couldn't afford a dressmaker, that——"

"Well, well, keep to the subject, Amelia. Now, we would have missed the train if my watch had not been in order—yours was at the jewellers, as usual."

"Because you tried to regulate it, dear, and put it out of order."

"Always some excuse. But, as I say, punctuality is a great virtue—now I never miss a train and never sit at the station half an hour or so. You are habitually late; you should make a habit of winding and setting your watch at a certain hour each day—say, when you go to bed."

"Yes, dear, I know. But sometimes I go to bed quite early and sometimes I sit up very late for you."

"H'm. Here we are at the station. Wait a minute, my dear while I buy a cigar. Now you will see that I have allowed just time to get comfortably into the train. Just give me the tickets, will you?"

"Why Chauncey, I—I must have forgotten, and left them on the bureau where they were lying. I remembered some chocolate creams in the upper drawer and I was afraid the mice would——"

"And for the sake of a few chocolate creams we shall loose our train. You will never learn——"

"What train did yez want?" queried the gatekeeper.

"The 3:30," snapped Mr. Bittersweet.

"Went ten minutes ago," was the cheery reply.

"But—but my watch says 3:28 now," faltered Mr. B.

"Watch is slow. Yez should wind and set it at a cer——"

But Mr. Bittersweet was out of hearing.—Chicago Tribune.

The "Grass Widow."

The phrase "grass widow," or rather "grace widow," for the first has no foundation in fact, is simply a barbarism, or fungus, which has attached itself to the English language. "Grace widow" is a term for one who becomes a widow by grace or favor, not of necessity, as by death, and originated in the earlier ages of European civilization, when divorces were granted but seldom, and wholly by authority of the Catholic Church. When such decree was granted to a woman the Papal rescript state. "Viduca de gratia," which interpreted is "widow of grace." In the laws of the French it would read "Veuve de grace," which, in England, gives "widow of grace," or "grace widow," veuve being translated as widow.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

Passing back through the main cabin I paused to examine one or two of the fittings—particularly a neat glass fronted bookcase, with a small sideboard below it, containing three drawers and a cellaret. The bookcase was empty and clean swept, as also were the drawers. At the bottom of the cellaret I found a couple of flags stowed—a tattered yellow quarantine signal tightly rolled into a bundle, and a red ensign neatly folded. As I lifted out the latter, there dropped from its folds and fell upon the cabin floor a book.

I picked it up—a thin quarto bound in black morocco, and rather the worse for wear. On its topside it bore the following inscription in dingy gilt letters: "Job's Hotel, Penleven. Visitors' Book. J. Job, Proprietor."

I PICKED IT UP.

Standing there beneath the skylight, I turned its pages over, wondering vaguely how the visitors' book of a small provincial hotel had found its way into that drawer. It contained the usual assortment of conventional praise and vulgar jocosity:

"Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Smith, of Huddersfield, cannot speak too highly of Mrs. Job's ham and eggs.—September 15th, 1881."

"Arrived wet through after a fifteen-mile tramp along the coast; but, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Job, was soon steaming over a comfortable fire.—John and Annie Watson, March, 1882."

Note appended by a humorist:

"Then you sat on the hob, I suppose."

There was the politely patronizing entry:

"Being accustomed to Wolverhampton, I am greatly pleased with this coast.—F. B. W."

The poetical effusion:

"Majestic spot! Say, doth the sun in Heaven
Behold aught to equal thee, wave-washed
Penleven?" etc.

Lighter verse:

"Here I came to take my ease."

(Old joke in margin by another hand: "Shall I not ache my knees at mine inn?")

"Agreeably disappointed to find no fi—
"Mrs. Job, you bread and butter—
"Is quite too utterly, utterly utter!
"J. Harper, June 3, 1883."

The contemplative man's ejaculation:

"It is impossible on viewing these cyclopean cliffs, to repress the thought, How great is nature, how little man!"

(Notes in various hands: "So it is, old chap! Try Hudson's Extract!" and a reproof: "Shut up! can't you see he's suffering!")

The last entry was a brief one:

"J. MacGuire, Liverpool; September 2, 1886."

Twilight forced me to close the book and put it back in its place. As I did so I glanced up involuntarily towards the skylight as if I half expected to find a pair of eyes staring down on me. Yet the book contained nothing but these mere trivialities. Whatever my apprehension, I was, as J. Harper would have said, agreeably disappointed. I climbed on deck again, relocked the hatch, replaced the tarpaulins, jumped into the boat and rowed homewards. Though the tide favored me it was dark before I reached Mr. Dewy's quay door. Having with some difficulty found the frape, I made the boat fast. I groped my way across his back premises and out into the gaslit streets and so to the Ship inn, a fair dinner and a sound night's sleep.

At ten o'clock next morning I called on Messrs. Dewy & Moss. Again Mr. Dewy received me, and again he apologized for the absence of his partner, who had caught an early train to attend a wrestling match at the far end of the county. (Moss was becoming immense.) Mr. Dewy showed me the sails, gear, cushions, etc., of the Siren. Everything was in surprising condition. I told him that I meant business, and added:

"I suppose you have all the yacht's papers?"

He stroked his chin, bent his head to one side and asked: "Shall you require them?"

"Of course," I said. "The transfer must be regular. We must have her certificate of registry at the very least."

"In that case I had better write and get them from my client."

"Is she not a resident here?"

"I don't know," he said, "that I ought to tell you. But I see no harm—you are evidently, sir, a bona fide purchaser. The lady's name is Carlingford—a widow—residing at present in Bristol."

"This is annoying," said I; "but if she lives somewhere near the Temple Mead station, I might skip a train there and call on her. She herself desired no delay, and I desire it just as little. But the papers are necessary."

After some little demur, he gave me the address and we parted. At the door I turned and asked: "By the way, who was the fellow on board the Siren last night as I rowed up to her?"

He gave me a stare of genuine surprise. "A man on board? Whoever he was, he had no business there. I look after the yacht myself."

Dewy's versatility was uncanny.

I fled to the railroad station. Soon after six that evening I knocked at Mrs. Carlingford's lodgings in an unattractive street of Bedminster, that unattractive suburb. A small maid opened the door, took my card, and showed me into a small sitting-room on the ground floor. I looked about me—a round table, a horsehair couch, a walnut sideboard with glass panels, a lithograph of John Wesley being rescued from the flames of his father's rectory, a colored photograph—

As the door opened behind me and a woman entered, I jumped back almost into her arms. The colored photograph staring at me from the opposite wall above the mantel-shelf, was a portrait—a portrait of the man I had seen on board the Siren!

"Who is that?" I demanded, wheeling round without ceremony.

But if I was startled, Mrs. Carlingford seemed ready to drop with fright. The little woman—she was a very small, shrinking creature, with a pallid face, and large, nervous eyes, like a hare's—put out a hand against the jamb of the door and gasped out:

"Why—why do you ask? What do you want?"

"I beg your pardon," I said; "it was merely curiosity. I thought I had seen the face somewhere."

"He was my husband."

"He is dead then?"

"Oh, why do you ask? Yes; he died abroad." She touched her widow's cap with her shaking finger, and then covered her face with her hands. "I was there—I saw it. Ah!" She drew back a sudden breath as if stabbed. "Why do you ask?" she repeated.

"I beg your pardon sincerely," I said; "it was only that the portrait reminded me—I thought—but my business here is quite different. I am come about the yacht Siren which you have advertised for sale."

She seemed more than ever inclined to run. Her voice scarcely rose above a whisper.

"My agents at F—— have full instructions about the sale."

"Yes, but they tell me you have the papers. I may say that I have seen the yacht and gear and am ready to pay the price you ask for immediate possession. I said as much to Mr. Dewy. But the papers, of course—"

"Are they necessary?"

"Certainly they are. At least the certificate of registry or, failing that, some reference to the port of registry, if the transfer is to be made. I should also like to see her warrant, if she has one, and her sail makers' certificate. Messrs. Dewy & Moss could draw up the inventory."

"WHO IS THAT?"

She still hesitated. At length she said: "I have the certificate; I will fetch it. The other papers, if she had any, have been lost or destroyed. She never had a warrant. I believe my husband belonged to no yacht club. I understand very little of these matters."

She left the room, and returned in five minutes or so with the open document in her hand.

"But," said I, looking over it, "this is a certificate of a vessel called the Wasp."

"Ah, I must explain that. I wished the boat to change her name with the new owner—her old name—it has associations—painful ones—I should not like anyone else to know her as the Wasp."

"Well," I admitted, "I can understand that. But, see here, she is entered as having one mast and carrying a cutter rig."

"She was a cutter originally. My husband had her lengthened in 1886, I think by five feet, and turned her into a yawl. It was abroad, at Malaga—"

"A curious port to choose."

"She was built, you see, as long ago as 1875. My husband used to say she was a broad boat for those days, and could be lengthened successfully and turned into quite a new-looking vessel. He gave an entirely new sheathing, too, and all her spars are new. She was not insured, and being in a foreign port, it was understood he would have her newly registered when he returned, which he fully intended. So no alterations were made in the certificate here, and, I believe, her old tonnage is still carved up somewhere inside her."

This was true enough. The figures on the certificate, 29.56, were those I had seen on the beam in the forecastle

"My husband never lived to reach England, and when she came back to F——, though she was visited, of course, by the custom house officer and coast guard, nobody asked for certificate, and so the alterations in her were never explained. She was laid up at once in the F—— river, and there she has remained."

Certain structural peculiarities in the main cabin—scarcely noted at the time, but now remembered—served to confirm Mrs. Carlingford's plainly-told story. On my return to London that night I hunted up some back volumes of Hunt, and satisfied myself on the matter of the Wasp and her owner, William Carlingford. And, to be short, the transfer was made on a fresh survey, the check sent to Mrs. Carlingford, and the yawl Siren passed into my hands.

All being settled, I wrote to my old acquaintance, Mr. Dewy, asking him to fit the vessel out, and find me a steady skipper and crew—not without some apprehensions of hearing by return of post that Dewy and Moss were ready and willing to sign articles with me to steer and sail the yacht in their spare moments. Perhaps the idea did not occur to them. At any rate they found me a crew, and a good one; and I spent a very comfortable three months cruising along the southwestern coast, across to Scilly, from Scilly to Cork and back to Southampton, where on September 29, 1891, I laid the yacht up for the winter.

Thrice since have I applied to Messrs. Dewy and Moss for a crew, and always with satisfactory results. But I must pass over 1892 and 1893 and come to this summer; or, to be precise, to Wednesday, the 11th of July. We had left Plymouth that morning for a run westward; but the wind falling light towards noon, we found ourselves drifting, or doing little more, off the entrance of the small fishing haven of Penleven. Though I had never visited Penleven I knew on the evidence of countless picture-shows that the place was well worth seeing. Besides, had I not the assurances of the visitors' book in my cabin? It occurred to me that I would anchor for an hour or two in the entrance of the haven, and eat my lunch ashore at Mr. Job's hotel. Mr. Job would doubtless be pleased to recover his long-lost volume, and I had no more wish than right to retain it.

Job's hotel was unpretending. Mrs. Job offered me ham and eggs and, as an alternative, a cut off a boiled silver side of beef, if I did not mind waiting for ten minutes or so, when her husband would be back to dinner. I said that I would wait, and added that I should be pleased to make Mr. Job's acquaintance on his return, as I had a trifling message for him.

About ten minutes later, while studying a series of German lithographs in the coffee room, I heard a heavy footstep in the passage and a knock at the door; and Mr. Job appeared, a giant of a man, with a giant's girth and red cheeks, which he appeared to inflate as a preliminary of speech.

"Good day, Mr. Job," said I briskly. "I won't keep you from your dinner, but the fact is, I am the unwilling guardian of a trifle belonging to you." And I showed him the visitors' book.

I thought the man would have had an apoplectic fit there on the spot. He rolled his eyes, dropped heavily upon a chair, and began to breathe hard and short.

"Where—where?" he gasped, and began to struggle for breath.

"Listen," I said; "for some reason or other the sight of this book distresses you, and I think you had better not try to speak for a bit. I will tell you exactly how the book came into my possession, and afterwards you can let me have your side of the story, if you choose." And I told him just what I have told the reader.

A McALL TEA.

NOTABLE GATHERING OF WOMEN AT THE HOME OF MRS. MYERS.

Large Assembly Most Interestingly Addressed by Mrs. L. S. Houghton, Who Describes the Grand Work Accomplished in France.

The spacious music room and parlors of the charming home of Mrs. Laetitia M Myers, East Front street, were filled with delighted guests yesterday afternoon The occasion was not one for merely social chat. Mrs. Louise L. Houghton, whom the guests were invited to meet, gave an address of great interest on the work of the McAll Mission in France.

Mrs. Houghton was the first American who became interested in the mission, after its organization in 1872. She gave a detailed account of the founding of the mission by Mr. McAll, an Englishman, who "builded more wisely than he knew" in the methods adopted, which have since been employed by successful city missions everywhere.

One of his ideas was not to spend money in building a large church, but to rent small but commodious halls in various parts of the city, whence a wide influence was exerted for elevating humanity and cheering the hearts of native pastors.

She mentioned a fact, of interest to American visitors, that for years the picture of Abraham Lincoln occupied a conspicuous position in each of their chapels. When she asked the explanation she was told that in seeking for a character which should symbolize the spirit of the mission, the founder could think of none which would convey so well the helpfulness the mission wished to exert, as that of Abraham Lincoln.

With much clearness and force, the speaker showed the great influence exerted by the McAll mission on the church, on individuals, and on the French nation.

Mrs. Houghton's personality is most pleasing, and her logical way of putting facts, with clear-cut statements and easy flow of language, could not fail to create and deepen interest in the McAll mission.

The members of the Plainfield auxiliary and others interested in the movement, were present to the number of 400, and they pronounced the talk most interesting and edifying.

Mrs. Houghton is also editor of The McAll Record, and author of many interesting tracts relating to the work. Her interesting resume of the religious history of France was largely from personal experience of the grand work accomplished by the McAll missions, which could never have met with such wonderful success had it not been for the broad platform established at first by Dr. McAll—Christianity, not sectarianism.

Religion is instilled into the minds of all, while creed is placed in the background. Dr. McAll loved and worked for all. He once said "We might compose a new church, in which all who love Christ, and take the Bible as their standard of living, shall be members."

Mrs. Houghton touchingly referred to Dr. McAll as "The providential at a providential time", and paid a high tribute to the memory of him whose efforts in the face of seemingly insurmountable difficulties had made possible the present grand results.

The lecturer related many interesting and remarkable conversions which had come under her personal observation while engaged in this noble work of uplifting souls which had been lost in the darkness of sin, and touched on the noble support given by the ever increasing number of auxiliaries throughout the United States.

A beautiful table in the dining room, from which dainty refreshments were served, completed an ideal entertainment, which long after social pleasure is forgotten will give food for pleasant recollection and inspiration. Mrs. Myers poured tea, assisted by Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Herring, Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Shepard, Miss Daisy Shepard, and Mrs. John Doull Miller.

Interested groups throughout the parlors engaged in discussing some of the points touched on by Mrs. Houghton, and she was several times asked to enlarge on some especial feature which lack of time had prevented during the discourse.

All who were fortunate enough to be present departed with a much clearer impression of the magnitude of the work already accomplished, and the imperative necessity that all good Christians, not of France only, but of all the world, should do all in their power to further the interests of the McAll Missions.

A NOBLE YOUNG WOMAN.

Tributes of Tender Affection to the Late Mrs. Siebrecht.

In the current issue of The Sabbath Recorder, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis pays the following pastorly tribute to the lamented young wife and mother who with her infant babe was recently laid to rest in Hillside Cemetery:

SIEBRECHT.—Suddenly, in New Rochelle, on December 8th, Florence May, (and her infant daughter), beloved wife of Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., and daughter of John D., and J. Elizabeth Titsworth.

The above notice from the New York Tribune of December 10th, suggests the story of a sorrow deep and crushing on the earthward side, but bright and comforting on the heavenly. Here is an outline of the story. Florence was born at Plainfield, N. J., April 5, 1870. She united with the Seventh-Day Baptist Church April 6, 1883. On the first day of June, 1893, she was married at the same church altar, and went to her new and happy home at New Rochelle. She was a charter member of the Christian Endeavor Society in her home church, and kept in close touch with the Society and its work. There are many evidences that as time approached for the fulfillment of her motherhood God gave her much of spiritual strengthening and ripening. Always sweetspirited and happy, and always bringing sunshine to others, her Christian faith found still fuller expression during the latter months of her life. Delaying writing her response to the "Consecration Meeting" of the Christian Endeavor Society for October, she telegraphed it, the 5th verse of the 27th Psalm.

"For in the time of trouble He shall hide me in His pavillion: in the secret of His tabernacle shall He hide me: He shall set me upon a rock."

For the November meeting she sent a letter and her response, the first verse of the same Psalm.

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

The December consecration meeting was held on the day of her death, about an hour after she had become unconscious, (Puerperal Eclampsia). When her name was called silence answered, but the next name was that of an absent member who had sent the same passage which she had sent for November. On the 8th of November, just one month before she was called home, she marked the 10th verse of 1 Cor. 15: "But by the grace of God I am what I am; and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain."

These facts are given to encourage the readers of this department, that they may be the more induced to emulate her example and seek after such faith. Such experiences add new lustre to the hopes of the gospel, they sanctify all life and soften sorrows which would otherwise crush us by their weight and bitterness. If this life were all, if the golden gates did not swing open at the touch of faith, existence would be a hollow mockery when the bridal robe of one Spring-time becomes the winding sheet of the second Autumn. But above the sound of our sobbing the words of Whittier rise like a song of victory:

"Yet love will dream, and faith will trust,
(Since He who knows our need is just),
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.
Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees!

Who, hopeless, lay his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play!
Who hath not learned in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That life is ever Lord of death,
And love can never lose its own."

This is her message to us, who wait beneath the cypress trees of our grief while the starlight of all redeemed life tells of the sorrowless home into which everlasting love waits to welcome all who will believe. Not lost, only gone before.

The New Rochelle papers also give tender tributes to the departed, as follows:

Mrs. Siebrecht was a most charming young woman and was thoroughly beloved and respected by all who knew her. There was not a thought entertained by her host of friends that her anticipated illness would be anything serious, and the sudden news of her death was a terrible shock to all. Mr. Siebrecht has the heartfelt sympathy of our entire community.—Tribune.

The sudden demise of Mrs. Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., at her residence, Home Park, Saturday evening, was one of those sad events the depth of which a pen is incapable of telling. Mrs. Siebrecht was an estimable young lady and soon made many friends in New Rochelle by whom her early demise is most keenly felt. To the grief-stricken husband, father and mother and relatives is extended the sincere condolence of their circle of friends in New Rochelle in this their affliction.—Pioneer.

By her loving disposition and beautiful Christian life she endeared herself to all who knew her. She was a member of the Plainfield Seventh Day Baptist Church and an active member of the Christian Endeavor Society. She was always very conscientious about sending a verse to be read in response to her name at roll call at the consecration service. At the funeral her pastor from Plainfield, Dr. Lewis, who had known her from a child, who baptized her, received her into the church and married her, officiated, assisted by Rev. B. D. Stelle of the Salem Baptist Church. In the same casket with the deceased was her infant son. All her bridemaids attended the funeral.—Paragraph.

FOUGHT AGINST HOPE.

Park Club Bowlers Defeated by a Dark Horse.

Last evening on the alleys of the Roselle Casino an interesting contest took place between the Parks and the Casino Club, in which the Casinoes came off victorious by the phenomenal bowling of Hope, a hitherto untried bowler who piled up in quick succession six strikes and three spares, with a total of 214 pins. The Parks beat the New Jersey's Tuesday evening by 17 pins. The game was a closely contested trial of skill from start to finish, and was full of excitement and interest. The score:

Raised the $50.

Another social in the season's series was given by the Christian Endeavor society of Warren Chapel last evening, the object being to raise $50 for a purpose to be made known at Christmas.

The chapel was well-filled with friends of the society. Miss Ida Dunham rendered two very pleasing vocal solos, and Miss Cooper of Westfield was given a hearty welcome, her recitations being, as usual, very good.

A feature was the vocal selections by a male quartette from the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, Harry Staats, Charles Bryant, Harry Pope, and George Conover, Jr. Their singing was heartily applauded.

An excellent auto-harp solo by William Martin concluded the programme, after which coffee and cake were served.

The $50 was more than realized by last evening's entertainment, and the society is duly gratified.

Gov. Werts's Good Move.

It is generally understood that Gov. Werts will recommend legislation this Winter looking to save the Palisades from further destruction. This is a most praiseworthy step. These grand rocks that line the Jersey shore along the beautiful Hudson should be owned by the State, and kept the thing of beauty and grandeur that they are. Let the press of our State raise its voice to this end.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. 23 YEARS OF GROWTH.

Mt. Olive Church Reviews the Record of Its Career.

The Mt. Olive Baptist Church was filled with worshipers last evening, the occasion being the anniversary sermon by Rev. Dr. Perry of New York, who has been a lifelong friend of the church.

After the hearty singing of several hymns, Rev. Mr. Alexander of Bethel Chapel offered prayer.

The pastor of the church, Rev. P. S Gibson, then introduced Dr. Perry, who among other things said: "I appreciate the honor you have given me in asking me to preach at this time, for I remember the formation of this church and took an active part. I remember to have been chosen to preach at the dedication of this church, and also that I urged unity with all."

The doctor then spoke from the text "What God hath wrought", and cited many instances where the colored people had been preserved and kept many years.

"Twenty-three years ago"—he said—"this church was first started, in a basement where we now stand, and John Carey was in charge. After a long consultation it was decided to recognize it as a church. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes assisted very much in accomplishing this. During the past twenty-three years, there have been seven pastors, as follows: Revs. Bagwell, Birch, Fairfax, Mitchell, Warnick and Gibson. To be sure, these seven changes denote an uneasiness which should not be, but the church has been steadily growing, and its history is not a bad one, for there are many bright spots in it. God hath wrought wonders for us."

Dr. Yerkes offered the closing prayer, and after singing and the benediction the meeting closed.

Franklin Nominates.

At the meeting of Franklin Council, No 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening, five members were initiated, and the following nominations were made for officers:

Councilor—Willard Sutton.

Vice Councilor—Daniel Dunavan, Harry Hartpence.

Recording Secretary—Harry Cook.

Assistant Recording Secretary—George Lewis, E. B. Pope, Jr.

Conductor—Wm. Young, David Dunavan, Wm. Kleiner, Fred Leland, Benjamin Webster.

Warden—Frank Jones.

Outside Sentinel—E. Compton, Benjamin Webster.

Trustee (18 months)—M. Lunger.

Representative to State Council—L. M. Dunavan, F. Long.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ARRESTED FOR FRAUD.

DETECTIVES COME TO PLAINFIELD FOR GILBRIDE & LODGE.

One of Them Arrested, the Other a Fugitive—The Charges Are Absconding and Embezzlement.

Benjamin Braham, a cigar manufacturer who recently located here under what is said to be the assumed name of Benjamin Gilbride, in the concern known as Gilbride & Lodge, on North avenue, was arrested at 7:15 last evening on a warrant sworn out by one Brown, Braham's former partner in Philadelphia. The warrant sets forth that Braham was a fugitive from justice, and had absconded with the stock of the former firm of Braham, Brown & Co. of Philadelphia.

Brown, accompanied by a Philadelphia detective, arrived in town early yesterday morning, and from McVey's Restaurant watched the cigar store all day for the appearance of Braham. Th warrant was served by Captain Grant, and Braham was taken before Justice Nash, who committed him to jail, pending the arrival of requisition papers from Philadelphia.

Brown states that during his absence Braham and Lodge fraudulently removed the $700 stock belonging to the firm and left no trace behind.

Braham sets forth that Lodge is the party properly chargeable with the crime; that he (Braham) followed him to this town and compelled him to make over the entire stock to him.

Lodge disappeared some time ago, but efforts are being made to apprehend him. Braham lays his present trouble entirely at Lodge's door, and feels confident that matters can be adjusted here without the necessity of going to Philadelphia.

If the matter is not adjusted today Braham will doubtless be removed to the county jail in Elizabeth, pending a settlement. He is of respectable family, his uncle having been court interpreter in Philadelphia, and much sympathy is expressed for his wife, who is almost prostrated at the unpleasant affair.

Walter L. Hetfield has been retained to look after Braham's interests.

HYMENEAL.

Hodge—Thompson.

The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Thompson on Farragut avenue was the scene of one of the prettiest of weddings, last evening, when their eldest daughter Miss Margaret Simpson Thompson became the wife of Myers Martin Hodge of Finderne.

A choice arrangement of palms and evergreens through the spacious hall and rooms, formed the principal decorations. The bride and groom entered the large parlor accompanied by Miss May Thompson as bridemaid and A. D. Thompson, Jr., as best man, while the sweet strains of the wedding march were wrought from the keys by Miss Mamie Groendyke of Finderne.

The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with lace, and carried a lovely bouquet of white coronation and tea roses, and the bridemaid wore a gown of light blue China silk.

Rev. John W. Richardson, pastor of the bride, performed the ceremony, after which a sumptuous supper was served by Stephenson.

Those present to witness the happy event were Mr and Mrs A D Thompson, father and mother of bride, Mrs Goyn Hodge of Finderne, mother of the groom, Rev and Mrs J W Richardson, Mr and Mrs Peter Hodge, Raymond Hodge, Mr and Mrs Hobart Ryder, Mr and Mrs Skaden, Mr and Mrs W R Codington, Miss Marion Nevius of Plainfield; Miss Grace Blackwell, Elmora; Chas Orth, Fred Perlee, Albert Perlee, Jersey City; John Robinson, Philadelphia; Miss Anna Thompson, Summit; Mr and Mrs Stelle, Millington; Miss Margaret Osmun, Mr and Mrs Chas Hodge, Mrs Smith, Finderne; Mr and Mrs Huff, Mr and Mrs Duning, the Misses Stelle, Bound Brook; Mr and Mrs Goyn Hodge, Jr, Mr and Mrs Henry Hodge, Miss Tenie Martin, Mr Martin, Somerville; Mr and Mrs P O Henry, Basking Ridge; Clare Henry, Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodge left on the 8:21 train for Philadelphia, where they will visit till next week, and on their return they will probably reside in Plainfield during the Winter. The large number of very handsome and useful gifts was evidence of the high esteem in which the happy young people are held by their many friends.

—Fulper is offering for Christmas trade groceries at extra-low prices. He sells granulated sugar at 4 cents, finest creamery butter at 25, and extra table butter at 21.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TO KILL THEIR TEACHER

Two Boy Scholars Planned To Wreck a Train.

Discovery of the Fish Plates They Had Fastened Upon the Track Made Just Five Minutes Before a Heavy Laden Express Train Dashed by—Arraigned in Court.

Peabody, Mass., Dec. 21.—Kenneth Belmer, 13 years old, and Chester Palmer, 10 years, were in court here, charged with attempting train wrecking at Lynnfield, on the Boston & Maine railroad.

Four fish plates were found tightly wedged into a switch in such a manner that, trackmen say, would have derailed a train if they had not been discovered in season. They were found and removed just before a train was due.

Young Belmer has confessed that he attempted to throw the train from the track and implicates the Palmer boy. He said that his object was to try and kill a lady school teacher of Lynnefield, who had assisted another teacher in whipping the boys, and who rides daily to her home in Wakefield by a train.

Belmer says he and the Palmer boy, after talking the matter over, went up the track and drove the fishplates between the rails. They then went to their homes near by and listened for the crash, which did not come. The teacher was not on the train that was endangered but in one following it ten minutes later.

Young Belmer came here with his parents from New Jersey about three months ago. He made a statement in court in corroboration of the above story, was adjudged guilty and turned over to the state board of charities and correction, and will be committed to a reform school. The Palmer boy was placed on probation.

Belmer, it is alleged, told a companion that when he lived in Trenton, N. J., he tried to wreck a pessenger train there by placing obstructions on the tracks, but they were discovered in time. The authorities there came to the conclusion that tramps were responsible for the work.

FOUND IN HER BLOOD.

A Teacher Fcully Murdered by Two Unknown Men.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 21.—The body of Mrs. A. D. Matson, at one time member of the city board of education, and a teacher in the public schools, stiff and cold and lying in a pool of her own blood has been discovered in her home.

It is undoubtedly a case of murder, with robbery as the incentive. Mrs. Matson lived alone, and it was generally supposed she had considerable money about the house. An assault had preceded the horrible murder.

The only person who seems to know anything about it is a deaf and dumb colored man named George Knight, who saw two men enter the window of the murdered woman's house and afterward come out and run away. The police are working hard on the mystery.

LINSON'S REPORT IS IN.

Gov. Flower Will Probably Decide Col. Fellow's Case To-Day.

Albany, Dec. 21.—Commissioner John J. Linson, who was appointed by Gov. Flower to take the testimony on the charges against District Attorney Fellows, of New York city, has filed his report and findings with Gov. Flower.

Mr. Linson refused to say anything as to the purport of his report.

Gov. Flower also refused to indicate the nature of the report, but said that he would give it careful consideration and would announce his decision in the matter before going to Watertown, if possible.

Mr. Linson said his report contained twenty-eight typewritten pages of about 8,000 words.

Nine Vessels Overdue.

San Francisco, Dec. 21.—There are now nine ships carrying nearly 300 people overdue on this coast. The vessels now numbered on the overdue list and which have been long enough out to warrant apprehensions for their safety are: steamer Montserrat, 14 days from Nanaimo; steamer Kowcenaw, 13 days from Nanaimo; bark Columbus, 14 days from Port Blakely; ship J. B. Brown, 17 days from Nanaimo; schooner Mary and Ida, 16 days from Shoal Water Bay; ship Red Rock, 14 days from Portland to San Francisco; ship Glenlui, 16 days from San Francisco to Portland and the bark Dominion, 15 days from San Francisco to Puget Sound.

American Cotton Not in Favor.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 21.—The Novosti says that the council of the empire has sanctioned an increase in the cotton import duty. Recent advices from Khokand (Ferghana), Asiatic Russia, stated that Turkey cotton was threatened by the low price of American cotton.

BOTH AFTER WARSHIPS

China and Japan Are Negotiating To Get Several.

Among the Vessels Selected Is the Dynamite Cruiser Nictheroy, Now in Brazil, Which Country Is Anxious To Sell Her—Wanted To Buy the Minneapolis—Other News.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The Chinese chase of the dynamite cruiser Nictheroy, of the Brazilian navy, and it is government is negotiating for the purreported that it also wishes to secure the Brazilian cruiser America. Both these vessels were formerly steamers of the Morgan line, and were purchased by Brazil and fitted as men-of-war in the recent revolution.

An agent of the Chinese government is negotiating with Senor Mendonca, the Brazilian minister here, for the two ships and it is likely they will be secured. This agent is said to be an American gentleman of distinguished service in diplomatic matters.

The Brazilian government has been anxious for some time to dispose of the Nictheroy and the America, and at the beginning of Japanese-Chinese war overtures were made to Japan for their sale. Japan, however, thought the vessels unsuitable, although the agents who acted for the imperial navy in the matter were much impressed with the Nictheroy.

China, it is understood, is anxious to obtain the Nictheroy, believing that her dynamite gun is capable of doing effective work.

In connection with the proposed sale of these two ships it was learned, through excellent authority, that the Japanese government had made overtures to the Cramps, of Philadelphia, for the purchase of ships under construction by that firm.

The United States cruiser Minneapolis was nearly completed at the Cramp ship-yard, and the Japanese agents were so pleased with the vessel that they expressed themselves as willing to pay a round price, stated as high as $1,000,000 over the contract price, for her, if the United States government would consent to her sale.

Mr. Charles Cramp came to Washington and saw Secretary Herbert on the subject, but the secretary would not consider such a proposition, claiming that he had no right to do so.

It is stated that no overtures were made by Japan to the United States in the matter, and that the talk between Secretary Herbert and Mr. Cramp was purely informal, and that no proposition was made in the name of the Japanese agents or the Japanese government.

London, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Tien-Tsin says that Prince Ching, president of the Tsungli-Yamen, is wholly to blame for the refusal of the government to issue passports to the foreign guards to proceed to Pekin to protect their respective legations. The protests of the various foreign representatives against this action have resulted in dissensions in the imperial council, and Prince Ching has been granted two days' leave of absence on the plea of ill health. It is probable that he will resign his office.

The Tsungli-Yamen has granted to the British legation passes for fifty men, and to the other foreign legations an average of from ten to twelve passes each have been issued.

A native newspaper published in Che-Feo, accuses the Japanese at Port Arthur of maltreating all the Chinese that have fallen into their hands. Chinese fishermen, the paper charges, have been met when nearing port and either killed or forced into hard labor.

Farmers' Alliance Officers.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 21.—The farmers alliance has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: president, Warren A. Gardner, Potter; vice-president, I. C. Snavely, Lebanon; secretary, Wm. P. Bricker, Lycoming; treasurer, J. F. Horst, Lebanon; executive committee, G. W. Kilmer, Bradford; J. S. Miller, Franklin; O. F. Berger, Berks, and J. L. Reilly, Mercer; delegate to national convention, Wm. P. Bricker, Lycoming; alternate, H. C. Snavely, Lebanon; committee on women's work, Mrs. Helen S. Johnson, Erie; Mrs. St. Clair Thompson, Indiana and Miss Quick, Susquehanna.

Resumed with Non-Union Men.

Ellwood City, Pa., Dec. 21.—The tin plate mill at this place has resumed operations with non-union men. The number was increased to 60 men and women. Anticipating trouble, Sheriff Douthett and five deputies are on guard. No outbreak has yet occurred, but threats are said to have been made to burn the hotel in which the non-unionists are quartered. Susie Weaver, an employe, was jeered by women sympathizers of the strikers. She drew a revolver and fired several shots in the air. Her tormentors hastily retired.

Suing for the Insurance.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 21.—Mrs. Alice Finnegan of Bridgeport has brought suit against the Prudential Life Insurance company of New Jersey which has an office in this city to recover the amount of a policy on her child, Alice. The child was insured Oct. 16 and died Nov. 13, 1894. The company refuses to pay the loss, alleging fraud in obtaining the insurance.

TWO BOLD KIDNAPPERS.

Three Attempts Made To Carry Off a Young Heiress.

Buffalo, Dec. 21.—A special dispatch from Erie, Pa., says: The bold an almost successful attempt to kidnap Mrs. Fred Baxter, of Girard, Tuesday evening, has created a great sensation here. Mrs. Baxter was found shortly after 8 o'clockfll „: -).'* 12345 in the garden near the entrance to the hotel barn, bound hand and foot and unconscious. She was attended by a physician who said that the loss of consciousness was due to the use of an ansaethetic.

Mrs. Baxter is 18 years old, and the daughter of the proprietor of the Rhodes hotel. Six months ago two men entered the bedroom of herself and her mother, and the elder woman opened fire, wounding both of the intruders, but they escaped.

A couple of months later two men entered the house at night, and by the use of a heavy cape and chloroform, succeeded in dragging the young woman out of the house into the yard, but before they could get her into a buggy they were discovered, but escaped.

Mrs. Baxter can give no account of the escapade more than to say that she was seized in the front hall of the house and overcome by something on a sponge which was held over her face. The entire proceeding is attributed to the fact that a bequest of $40,000 in Canada is her's at the age of 21, and in the event of her death it goes to another heir.

HAS BEEN FOUND AGAIN.

Sir Robert Tichborne Said To Be in an Asylum in New South Wales.

London, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Sydney, New South Wales, says it is stated there that the real Sir Roger Tichborne has been found in an insane asylum at Paramatta under the name of William Cresswell. This dispatch calls to mind one of the most famous cases before the English courts—that of Tichborne vs. Lashington, in which the plaintiff claimed the Tichborne baronetcy and estates, which were worth about $120,000 a year.

Roger Charles Tichborne, the rightful heir to the title and property, sailed from Havre for Valparaiso in 1853, and the following year sailed for Rio Janeiro in a vessel that foundered at sea. A chancery suit was instituted, and his death legally proved in 1865.

The claimant asserted before the courts that he and eight of the crew of the foundered ship were saved; that he went to Australia and lived there thirteen years under the name of Castle, but had married under the name of Tichborne.

He was accepted by the Dowager Lady Tichborne as her son, but the courts decided that he was an impostor.

Subsequently the claimant was indicted for perjury and forgery under the name of Arthur Orton.

In 1874 he was convicted and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment at hard labor, but in 1884 was released on ticket-of-leave. He subsequently resided for a time in New York.

GIGANTIC COAL COMBINE.

Negotiations in Progress To Control the East and South

Columbus, O., Dec. 21.—The rumor of a prospective gigantic coal combine is current anew, and it is claimed negotiations are now in progress between the coal operators of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia, to form a trust that would control the bituminous coal of the east and south as absolutely as the Standard Oil company does the oil product.

When W. B. Brooks was asked concerning the rumor he refused to make any statement for publication.

Will Have a Practice Vessel.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 21.—Lieut. E. G. Reynolds, commanding the Connecticut naval reserve, has returned from Washington. He announces that Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo has placed the monitor Wyandotte at the disposal of the reserve. The monitor is now at the Norfolk navy yard, and when trifling repairs have been made she will be towed to this port, by the cruiser Atlanta, it is believed. The Wyandotte is one of the single turreted vessels and was built about 30 years ago. She mounts two of the old 15-inch smoothbore guns and is very slow, but will serve as an excellent practice vessel for the New Haven division.

Observed a Meteor.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 21.—Prof. Hubert A. Newton, of Yale university, observed a brilliant meteor last Saturday evening and he says it was one of the most brilliant observed in a long time. It was probably visible over southern New England and eastern New York. Its track was a little to the left of Ursa Minor. The professor would like to hear anything of interest about this matter from other observers, giving its course and other data.

Their State Encampment.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 21.—The annual state encampment of the Connecticut G. A. R., will be held in Bridgeport Feb. 19 and 20. National Commander Thomas G. Lawler, of Rockford, Ill., is to be present. There has been no increase in the number of posts this year. The total membership is 6,509. The death rate for the year has exceeded that of any previous year.

Ducks Fat for Grover.

Georgetown, S. C., Dec. 21.—President Cleveland declares he has enjoyed his visit here, having been freer from interruption than ever before. Sport has been plentiful, weather excellent, the ducks fat and not too troublesome. The Palmetto club is extending courtesies to the visitors in a quiet way. The president and party will leave to-day for Washington.

Germany Wants Samoa.

Berlin, Dec. 21.—Twenty-one branches of the colonial society have signed a petition asking that Samoa be placed under the sole protection of Germany.

Doug'ass Putnam Dead.

Marietta, O., Dec. 21.—Douglass Putnam a great grandson of General Israel Putnam, of revolutionary fame, is dead here, aged 88 years.

Black Hills Cut Off.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 21.—Terrific snow and rain storm prevails in northwestern Nebraska and the Black Hill.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

In 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will begin in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

MODERN HYPNOTISM.

A LADY WRITES OF HER SENSATIONS AS A SUBJECT.

The Same as Mesmerism of Olden Times. A Kind of Nightmare in Which the Weaker Mind Battles with, and is in a Measure Overcome by the Stronger.

"And now for the experiment upon myself," I exclaimed. Like the Frenchman who longed "to create a new shudder" I longed to experience one.

I removed my hat and gloves and the professor laid a leaden disk about two inches in diameter within the palm of my hand. I was told to gaze fixedly at that object, while the doctor proceeded to make rapid passes before my face. The passes described a circle and were varied by others sweeping downward from head to foot. I began to grow dizzy, with something of the sensation of looking over a precipice. The doctor then pressed his thumb upon my forehead, and the disk appeared to increase in size until finally I lost all idea of its proportions. At the same time I began to breathe heavily and to inhale more deeply. The inspirations became more rapid. I could hear myself inhale and exhale.

"Sleep! Sleep!" repeated the doctor.

A strange semi-conscious condition ensued, in which the doctor's voice sounded miles away.

A rumbling sound was in my ears, accompanied by a gradual benumbing of my senses. My eyes closed. I endeavored to raise my eyelids and found it impossible to do so. I felt as though I were falling into a bottomless pit.

It was precisely the sensation one has in being etherized.

My respiration, heavy and labored at first, grew lighter. I breathed now more slowly; the action of the heart was lowered. There was just the faintest pulsation perceptible, and I grew afraid.

What if my heart should cease altogether? At intervals my head nodded upon my shoulder; finally it rested there. My hands hung limp at my sides, and my nerves and muscles were relaxed utterly.

I was conscious of the doctor's presence, I could even find myself exerting an effort to shake off the magnetic spell that held me. Whenever I made this struggle to regain control of my muscles, I felt a fresh wave of magnetism overcome me—a current that swirled me deeper and deeper in oblivion.

I desired to speak, but an all-pervading languor encompassed me. I heard the doctor pass into an adjoining room.

"Now," I thought, "I can shake off the current."

I endeavored again to free myself, and again came a powerful thrill that left me inert.

The doctor returned and seated himself at the piano. He played Mendelssohn's "Song Without Words."

"Now, listen for the vibrations, and tell me when you hear them die away," he said.

I listened, and it seemed to me that the vibrations were interminable. When they had ended, I spoke.

"That is how I develop clair-audience—a quality possessed by many 'sensitives' and also allied to clair-voyance"—he said.

I slept on, conscious that I was asleep, and conscious also of what occurred about me—the moving of a table in the room above, the rustling of a newspaper, and the doctor's step as he moved about. I tried to think of people and of places, but thought, too, became an effort, and my mind became a blank.

The darkness of this sleep appeared intense. Although the room was light not a ray pierced the absolute darkness that shrouded me. A profound languor had taken possession of me. I desired nothing—neither life nor death.

I wonder if death is like that!

Suddenly I felt a tingling sensation in my veins. My head began to throb and my breathing to grow more rapid. I was coming back from my trip to Lethe, and not altogether pleased to emerge from my state of torpor. I opened my eyes, stretched myself and finally arose from the chair. My hands were moist and cold, and a peculiar enervation possessed me.

"Well, how did you like it?" exclaimed the little doctor, with a merry twinkle in his eyes. "You believe now in magnetism, do you not?"

A Handsome House Dress.

This is a home dress, in plaid woollen. Skirt with puckered pleats behind, flat in front, and scalloped. Close round-waisted bodice. Straight collar of velvet. The Law and Engagement Rings.

An important decision has just been pronounced in Vermont as to engagement rings. A young man sued to recover one that he had given to a young woman who, after accepting the ring, repudiated the engagement. The judge decided that it must be returned or else that the recipient must fulfill the conditions under which it was presented. The English courts some years ago decided that an engagement ring is not recoverable under any circumstances.

Didn't Want Two Pairs.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

SLEEVES DROOP UNDER THE WEIGHT OF WINTER WRAPPINGS.

The Evolution of Styles. Fashions Now Are in the Interest of the Shop Keeper. Rough Wools, Braids and Buttons are Conspicuous. About Under Garments.

"What are the fashions?" is a question which is, at least, temporarily settled in the feminine mind, but "What is fashion?" is a query ever open to argument, and as productive of inconclusive answers as the more vital one, "Is marriage a failure?" The wise woman who says that "fashion is simply force of example exercised in cut and material, rather than thought and principle," gives a pretty clear solution of the problem. Some one who, by fate, circumstances, or a peculiar gift in originating designs, sets himself up as an authority on dress, and no matter what manner of exaggerations he thrusts upon the market of fashions, they are, with rare exceptions, sure to be accepted if he finds a few followers to display them. We rebel a little at first, but we gradually become accustomed to any phase of dress by seeing others wear it and soon mould our conservative ideas of outline and harmony of color to agree with the examples we have before us. To be sure, we accept things by degrees so we can deceive ourselves with the belief that original taste is the guiding rule of dress, but all the same the more unique and striking the mode presented the more ready we are to develop its advantages. For example, the evolution of the sleeve to its present proportions has occupied several years, but here it is, the most conspicuous feature of our gowns, and we have grown such an admiration for its possibilities that size seems to be the one element of beauty in its make up. Extended skirts which measure eight yards around at the bottom meet with approval despite the fact that they are alarmingly suggestive of the much-dreaded crinoline, and so we are led on by convincing illustration to almost any extreme in dress which it may suit the fashion makers to devise. It is too late to expect any important changes in the winter fashions, but it is just the time when great variety in dress is in demand, and every trifling variation which can be rung from the theme of the prevailing mode is sure to be useful.

Smooth satin-faced cloths and rough wool materials of medium weight are used extensively for street gowns, particularly the rough wool crepons, and among these is a novelty called "cameo crepon." In wool goods shades of serpent green trimmed with brown and brown trimmed with green are favorite combinations.

Braiding is coming in again for tailor-made gowns, and the military uniform patterns, used above narrow bands of fur, are very effective.

Buttons of elegant enamel and imitation gems are gaining favor, but they are chiefly employed for ornament where they might be useful.

Fine nainsooks, French batiste, and sheer lawns are the popular materials for underwear, and China silks are very little used, except for night gowns, which might be more properly called wrappers, as they are elaborately trimmed and made to wear over a nainsook gown. They are sometimes made with a yoke of alternate rows of lace insertion and silk, both back and front; and again the back is tucked to the waist, where a short belt confines the fulness, and to this a ribbon is attached, which ties in front with long ends. A wide bertha of lace insertion, silk, and lace edging goes over the shoulders. In pink, pale blue and white these gowns are tempting enough to make any woman forget all her resolutions of economy.—N. Y. Sun.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

AT REST.

Alexander M. Ross.

The home which was made desolate by the sudden death of Alexander M Ross, on Grant avenue, was thronged with friends and relatives yesterday, to witness the sad obsequies conducted by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

In the front part of the parlor lay the silent form of one whom so many had known to respect and love as a man of most estimable qualities, and the floral tributes to his worth were many and beautiful.

On the velvet-covered casket was a large wreath of choice pink and white roses, and at one end an exquisite bunch of lillies rested, while at the other end were daintily entwined smilax and roses. A very large and handsome pillow of white and pink roses, orchids and hyacinths, rested gracefully at the head of the casket. An old-fashioned clock standing near held another very beautiful wreath of roses, while directly back in the corner a choice selection of wreaths of roses was arranged, in the centre being an excellent portrait of decedent.

There were also bunches of perle roses and white hyacinths, bride and Catharine Mermet roses, calla lillies filled with perle roses, and adiantum fern roses.

A quartette, George O. Stevens, Robert Gorton, Frederick Pope, and Elmer E Runyon, sang very tenderly "Sometime We'll Understand", which was followed with Scripture selections and affecting remarks by Dr. Lewis.

Dr. Lewis concluded his remarks with a touching prayer, affectionately remembering the afflicted and bereaved ones in an especially tender manner.

The quartette then sang "Lead, Kindly Light", the words and music bringing comfort and consolation to the saddened hearts.

An opportunity was given to all to look for the last time on him who had been so near and dear to them.

Interment was made today in Woodlawn Cemetery.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Bacon & Vail, real estate brokers, now occupy handsome offices in the Babcock Building.

—Denton, the Hillside Avenue florist, has a beautiful stock of palms, ferns, etc. His primroses at 25 cents are especially large and fine.

—Levi Kline has just completed the laying of a new board walk in front of the Marsh estate, corner of Somerset street and Summit avenue. There are other walks in the borough which need looking after.

—Workmen are cutting out two large windows at the rear of the second story of the Babcock Building, to give light to the composing rooms of the Sabbath Recorder plant, which will occupy a section of the store from front to rear.

—While Marshal Lines of North Plainfield was riding his wheel on Monroe avenue near Grant avenue yesterday afternoon, he very unexpectedly fell off and broke the handle bars on his wheel. He was obliged to walk home.

—The daintiest of the week's newspaper Christmas issues is that of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, which is printed in colors, richly illustrated, and whose Christmas holiday literature has the special excellence of possessing a strictly local flavor. The Unionist-Gazette keeps to its line of being a home newspaper for its town.

Spartan Devotion.

A mother's love for her children is always being illustrated, not only in books but in real life. A true story is told of a lady whose baby was very ill, and who sat watching the child with absorbed attention, every instant fearing another convulsion and praying for deliverance from it. At her side stood an older child, who had stolen into the room unobserved, and who was trying to prick the little black spots in mamma's muslin sleeves with a needle he had found. Presently the father came in and the little child was seen and sent away. "What is the matter with your arm?" whispered the gentleman to his wife when, at last, they turned to each other and smiled their thankfulness that the baby had fallen asleep. "I don't know," said she; "nothing that I am aware of." She put up her hand and found that the thin muslin sleeve was soaked with blood. The little boy had become so absorbed in his sport that he had "jabbed" with all his might, and she, in her terrible anxiety, had not felt the thrusts.—Youth's Companion.

THE VETERAN

A DRAMA OF THE STREET

BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.]

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ — Henry Holt (a blind veteran of the civil war.)
Maria Holt (his wife).
Molly (their daughter; a child).
A Lady (name unknown).
People in the street.

TIME—The afternoon of a bleak December day.

SCENE—The main shopping thoroughfare of an American city. A crowd block the sidewalk in front of a large dry-goods store in whose windows glitters a splendid holiday display. A wax dummy enveloped in brocade and ermine confronts another in evening dress of white satin and rose chiffon. Gorgeous fabrics of silk and velvet drape the sides of the window. These are all akin in tint; the colors of the window resemble a cluster of roses, shading from bride to blush and jacueminot. In the rear is seen the interior of a luxuriously appointed little room; it is labeled: "A boudoir," and is arranged to advertise the prevailing fashions in furniture and upholstery. The room is furnished in rose and silver. Its dressing-table is covered with the elegant conveniences of a lady's toilet, costly in value and dainty in design. Tall candles of pink wax burn in silver sconces at the sides of the long mirror. The draperies of rich lace are carefully looped back from the glass, to avoid contact with the flaming candles. The mirror reflects the street.

A lady, plainly dressed in black, is trying to push her way through the crowd, but is blockaded by the women who are studying the show window. She casts a quick glance between the ermine and the chiffon dummies, across the splendors of the rose and silver decorations. Her eyes rest upon the mirror, and an expression of trouble crosses her countenance. In the glass she perceives the reflection of two wretched figures. These are a man and a woman. They stand upon the curbstone huddling together; the woman holds the man's arm; both are thinly dressed and are seen—in the mirror—to shiver. The man is pale and undersized; he has a consumptive look; his hands are cold and blue; he raises a flute to his lips, then puts it down, and tries to warm his fingers.

The woman has a delicate face; she holds out a cap, somewhat timidly or proudly, as if she shrank from the act. Now and then a passer drops a nickel or a penny into the cap. The woman removes her other hand from the man's arm, and wraps his fingers in her shawl to warm them.

The Man—Cold, Maria?

Wife—Not so very. Henry.

Husband—Tired, girl.

Wife—Standing hurts me a little. But I don't mind.

Husband—It is pretty cold. It comes hard—draggin' you out. If I could come by myself! Oh, Lord, if I could get about alone!

Wife—Now, Henry! Dear Henry! Why you know I don't mind it—much. I like to come along of you. I think it does me good to get the air. Only the stormy days—and you ain't fit to play when it storms, yourself. You will have to give it up this winter, I'm thinkin'.

Husband—I'll take Molly next time. You're beat out, Maria. Molly—she can take me in tow like a little lady. She's the smartest of the blood, Molly is. I'd feel bad if we shouldn't make out a Christmas for 'em, this year, Maria. Somebody may send a turkey—but that don't go into little stockin's.

Wife—If I get another dress to make over we can manage. Don't you feel anxious, Henry! That fat customer I had wears out dreadfully on her side seams. I calculate she'll need another cheap wrapper soon.

Husband (more cheerfully)—Yes. That's one thing about it. You can always sew when you can get the job. And Molly can tend to me. I guess we'll manage.

Wife—We always have, dear—most always.

Husband—That's so, most always. But we can't afford to talk. Time to talk is for rich folks. You've warmed my fingers up nicely in your shawl, girl. I'll go at again.

The street musician plays.

"How can I bear to leave thee?
One parting kiss I'll give thee.
And then what e'er befalls me
I'll go where duty calls me."

Lady blockaded in front of the shop-window starts and stirs.

The musician, reflected in the mirror, plays on:

"Farewell, farewell, my own true love.
Farewell—Fare—well."

Lady turns her back on the show window and urges her way through the crowd towards the man and the woman. In the mirror her figure replaces for the moment those of the street-players. The light of the pink candles is obscured. The dummy in ermine and the dummy in rose chiffon exchange haughty glances over her head.

Woman in the Crowd—Now, there's an air about that brocade.

Second Woman—Give me the chiffon! It's the fashionable shade.

First Woman—I'll tell my husband he shan't have any peace till he fits me up a room like that yonder. He's goin' to begin with the silver hairbrush come Christmas.

Second Woman (sighing)—But then the children clutter and muss so! Do you think it would pay for the bother? I'd rather have that real ermine opera cloak. It's marked four hundred dollars.

Henry Holt plays:

"In the beauty of the lilies
Christ was born across the sea
With a glory in His bosom
That transfigures you and me."

(Lady with sighs of emotion stops in front of the street musician, and silently observes him).

Henry plays:

"Since He died to make men holy,
Let us die to make men free."

Lady (to herself)—I can't stand this! I suppose the Conglomerate Anti-Pauper Mission would disown me forever, but I cannot stand it! (Empties her purse of its silver into the musician's cap.) As she does so, she withdraws a nickel coin and says apologetically: "You see I'm a suburban, and I must keep a car fare to get to the station. I'm late to my train now. It's too bad there is no more. Oh, I'm sorry for you!"

The lady hurries away. Maria Holt looks after her wistfully, as she deftly

"OH, I'M SO SORRY FOR YOU!"

turns the silver from the cap into Henry's pocket.

Her eyes fill. Henry plays and sings:

"Let us die to make men free!
For God is marching on."

Lady, (unexpectedly returning)—Never mind my train. I've given it up. I can't bear this! I must know something about you—why, what's the matter? Why, you poor woman! What ails you?

Maria Holt (bursting into tears)—Oh, it's the words you said! It's the words you said! Nobody else—for so long—and we have had such a hard pull!—Oh, don't mind me! Oh, I am ashamed—Henry, Henry, I'm ashamed of myself! I don't know whenever he's heard me cry before—have you, Henry? But it's the words you said!

Lady (much moved)—The words I said? Oh—that! Such a little common human—oh, you poor woman!

Henry Holt puts down his flute. His pinched face works pathetically. He rolls his eyes helplessly towards Maria. Then, with the most exquisite motion by which knight or gentleman could express reverence or tenderness for women, the street musician gropes for the cheek of his wife, and strokes it with the palm of his blue hand.

A crowd has begun to thicken around Henry, Maria and the lady; but neither of the three appears aware of it.

The man caresses his wife as ingenuously as if she and he were alone in the world. He shows no consciousness of the presence of observers.

Lady—Tell me all about it! Tell me how it happens. Why are you like this? You are Americans—

Henry (interrupting)—New England, born and bred.

Lady—You don't look as if you ought to be doing this. You look above begging on the street.

Henry—Ma'am?

Maria—Oh, madam! Don't you see? Henry, she don't understand. She didn't mean it. She ain't that kind of lady. Madam—

Henry—Begging?

His face flushes from white to purple. His flute drops to the pavement. His wife picks it up and wipes it with her shawl. She speaks in a crooning tone.

Maria—There, there, dear! She don't know. She don't understand. Madam! my husband is a musician. He is not a beggar. He works hard for a living. Try it and see—all weathers.

Maria Holt raises herself with dignity and with a trembling forefinger points at her husband's eyes.

Lady—Blind?

Maria nods silently.

Lady (overcome)—Oh, I beg your pardon! Oh, you poor people! I beg your pardon with all my heart.

The Street Musician (bowing with a fine grace)—Madam, you have it from mine.

Lady—Tell me how it came about—this great misfortune. Do you mind telling me? I will try not to hurt your feelings so stupidly again.

Henry Holt (drawing himself erect)—Yes, ma'am, I will tell you. It happened thirty years ago, but it don't need thirty words to tell it. Seems to me, ma'am (smiling) if you'll excuse me, you're the one that don't see of us two!

The street musician lifts his purple fingers to his sightless eyes and then, with a superb gesture, points in silence to a faded decoration pinned upon his shrunken breast. It is the badge of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The crowd about the group has slowly increased. Silver begins to fall into the street-player's cap. There is a gap among the women at the show window.

Maria Holt looks through this gap. Her wan eyes raise themselves to the ermine opera cloak with instinctive feminine attention; she glances at the pink and silver room. The blind man's pale face turns blankly in the same direction. To him alone of all the people before the window its luxurious display appeals without arousing interest. The dummy in ermine and the dummy in chiffon regard him scornfully.

The First Woman in the Crowd—It's a hand organ, I guess. Isn't there a monkey? I dote on monkeys.

Second Woman—It isn't a monkey. It's only a little man with a flute. Let's move on to the millinery window.

First Woman—Wait. I've got ten cents.

Second Woman—I've spent every cent I've got in the world on that ostrich plume and my jet trimmin's. I've got to borrow of you to get home. I feel kind of ashamed, too—seems so mean. Let's move along, and they'll think we didn't see him.

Lady—Did you lose your eyesight in the army?

Henry Holt (cheerily playing Yankee Doodle. Finishes the strain conscientiously before he speaks)—Excuse me, ma'am, it seems to be silver that's coming in. I know it by the note it strikes. I want to earn what I take. I don't beg. I am a musician. I used to play in bands. I've always been fond of music. Yes, ma'am. I lost my eyes in the war; one of 'em.

Maria Holt—The other followed, some five years. That was when we was first married, so I know. I was young then, a slip of a girl. It came dreadful hard on us.

Lady—Is he quite blind?

Henry—I am quite blind. One eye don't look it, they say. Some folks think I'm shamming, but they're folks that don't know anything. I got a piece of a shell at Antietam.

Lady—But the United States does not leave its blind soldiers to be—play on the streets—on public sympathy—for a living. What is your pension?

Henry (smiling)—I don't get the pension for serious disability. What I get just about pays our rent. It don't clothe nor feed us. I don't get a blind man's pension. But we get along sometimes quite well. It depends some on whether my wife can get a job, and then there's the weather. I ain't so strong as I was before the war. I don't stand bad weather. I have the pneumonia—and that's expensive. There's a hitch about my pension, you see. I used to think it would come round. But we've given up bothering, haven't we, Maria?

Maria (apathetically)—Yes, it only riles you up and disappoints you. Nothing comes of it.

Lady—Weren't you honorably discharged?

Veteran (proudly)—Madam?

Lady—Well—of course—but I mean—

Wife—It's something about a surgeon. He died.

Henry (recovering himself and smiling)—So he doesn't find it convenient to testify. His testimony is lacking.

Lady—Ah! A flaw in your pension papers?

Veteran—That's about the size of it.

Lady (gently)—Hard!

Veteran—Well, yes. But we're kind of used to it. It is hard, though—sometimes.

Lady—How many children have you?

Henry (eagerly)—There's Molly!

Maria—And the two little ones. We had two older boys. They died. The drainage was bad where we lived. We tried to save on rent those days. We don't—since.

Lady—Do you make a living? Do you suffer? Have you clothes? A fire? Food enough? How many battles did you serve in? Now give me your street and number. I must look into this matter. How many battles, did you say?

Veteran (putting his flute down from his mouth and counting on the stops with his cold fingers)—Fair Oaks, Malvern Hill, Bull Run, Antietam. It was at Antietam I got the shell.

Lady—This is pitiful! It is not right. The country—patriotic people ought to do something!

Veteran—Oh, folks are kind enough. I get a turkey most every Christmas. Last year we had cranberry sauce and fixings.

Lady (sotto voce) — He gives his youth, his manhood, his health, his eyesight for his country, and he gets a turkey and cranberry sauce on Christmas.

Veteran—Ma'am, there was thirty-five thousand of us the last time I inquired. I'm only one of the delayed list. Don't take it to heart so. We're kinder used to it. Some weeks we get on very well. It depends so much on the weather!

Man from the Crowd—How do you know that he ain't one of the fraudulent claims? There's been a good sight more than thirty-five thousand of them.

Lady—I don't know, but I don't believe it; and I can look him up.

Gentleman from the Crowd—I'll spare you the trouble. I know the man. I'm a neighbor of his, in a way. I teach in his ward. His children come to my school. I know about the family. They are honest people. It is all just as he says.

Lady—I will see you again. You shall hear from me. I will remember—and the children! The holidays are coming along.

Maria—Yes. We do mind it when we can't make Christmas for the children. That's the hardest. Now, he talks about Molly. I don't see how I can let that child go on the street with him. Her little winter sack's worn to rags; it's past mending, and I've cut over all the flannels I've got. It's no place for Molly, anyhow, but I ain't very strong. Madam—(she whispered).

Lady—Oh! (She wrings the woman's hand).

Henry (mechanically counting on the stops of the flute)—Fair Oaks, Malvern Hill, Bull Run, Antietam—

Lady (extending her hand, for which the street player gropes)—So, good-by, now. I shan't forget you. Your country hasn't forgotten you, either. I don't believe it!

Veteran (smiling slightly) — Don't you, ma'am?

Lady—Well, I don't blame you for looking that way!

Maria—Ma'am, he sings, too. You ought to hear him sing before you go. My husband is a born musician. He gives his money's worth. You ought to know about that.

Henry (flattered)—Now, madam! My wife is so foolish about me. Women are, you know. (Plays and sings):

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty!
Of thee I sing.

Lady, with emotion, turns away from the singer and disappears in the crowd.

HE MARKED THE SPOT.

A Particular Instance of Complete and Insurmountable Lunkishness.

"Seems 's ef a man was made sometimes so's 't his sense all run to jest one p'int, an' there wa'n't scussly enough left to keep him goin' in other d'rections," said Amos Bean, as he sat in the barn doorway, chewing a wisp of straw. "Now, there was Ezra Stoughton, for example, when you come to pertickler instances."

"Who was he?" inquired Jed Perkins, the hired man, who also had a wisp of straw in his mouth.

"He was a man that lived down to Shoremouth, where I was raised," replied Amos, "an' he suttinly was a queer case—a queer case! He had book l'arnin' fr'm a to zed, right at his tongue's end, seems 's ef; he could relate to you everythin' that had happened wuth mentionin', fr'm Bible times down to yist'day, as fur as hist'ry went. Dates! my land, sech a head fer dates as that man had!"

"Some folks hes," remarked Jed Perkins, oracularly.

"'Tain't often you meet with sech head-works as his was, I can tell ye,' continued Mr. Bean. "Poetry he knew—yards on't—an' prose the same, an' sev'ral furrin tongues; some said he couldn't scussly be told from a native when he was conversin' in French, an' likewise Eyetalian. But when you come to everyday things, why, Ezry wa'n't on hand—that's all ye could say about it.

"There was a sight o' yarns told about him, but the one I rec'llect best was what old Cap'n Gregg used to tell. Ezry went off with the cap'n on a kind of a pleasure v'yage one day; jest rounded the cape, an' a little piece on toward Bayville, an' then back agin.

"Ezry, he wore a high silk hat—a reg'lar stovepipe—an' he never kep' a hold on it at all, the cap'n said. He set right out, cluss to the edge-railin'—'twas a real pooty little boat the cap'n owned, all fixed up stylish, an' the wind was kind of stiff.

"The cap'n went off once for a few minutes, an when he come back, there set Ezry with his handkerchief tied on his head, repeatin' a poem about the waves.

"'Where in Tunkett is your hat gone, Ezry?' the cap'n asked him, kind o' sharp, fer Ezry seemed to be sort o' dreamin'.

"'It blowed off quite a spell back,' says Ezry, calm as you please.

"'Well, well,' says the cap'n, 'that's unfort'nit'!'

"'Why, it'll be all right,' says Ezry, with his eyes set a good ways off; 'it'll float, you see, an' here I've marked the place on the railin' jest where it went over, an' when we come back we can git it.'

"Well, the cap'n, he was struck all of a heap! He said he didn't see his way clear to the beginnin' to explain, to a man that didn't know the fust thing about common sense. An' he said the more he pondered on what Ezry's idees must be, an' viewed the pencil-mark he'd made on that railin', the more he see it was a job to be give up—an' he give it up.

"P'r'aps I don't need to remark that Ezry had to git him a new silk hat. But the cap'n said he didn't believe Ezry ever understood why his cal'lations on gittin' the other one back wasn't successful!"—Youth's Companion.

A GHASTLY DISEASE.

Different Doctors Give It Different Names.

The Result Always the Same.—Speedy Death.—Until Recently, Considered Hopeless.—Now, New Methods. Salvation.

Nothing is more alarming than diseases of an ulcerous nature. A continual gnawing away of life-generating tissue, until a vital spot is reached, an artery is severed, or from sheer weakness death ensues.

Especially in Gastritis—ulcers of the stomach—is terrible suffering experienced. The symptoms, though not at first alarming (seemingly a slight attack of indigestion), gradually become worse, so that no nourishment can be retained on the stomach, and unless the trouble-causing ulcer produces death by perforation, the patient

Dies of Starvation.

In Consumption, where the ulcers attack the lungs, the termination is very similar, as it is, in fact, in any of the wasting diseases to which are given various names, according to the organs affected.

By the methods of physicians of to-day thousands of lives are being saved in cases that a few years ago were considered hopeless. The first step now taken to effect a cure is to make new blood and tissue, give the patient strength, and keep him "on the gain" by administering Bovinine.

Bovinine is not a medicine, but a greatly concentrated extract of the most vital elements of lean raw beef. The life-maintaining qualities of this wonderful preparation are simply marvellous. Dr. A. M. Cook, of New Castle, Pa., states that he maintained life in his wife, while suffering from gastric ulcers, for three weeks without giving her anything through the mouth, injecting Bovinine instead.

With such results as this, it is not to be wondered at that Bovinine is indorsed by physicians everywhere, and has become recognized as the greatest factor in saving life, hastening recovery from sickness, and warding off disease, ever given to man.

All Secret Societies Under Catholic Church Bans.

Latest Information Confirms the Report That the Pope Has Ordered the Excommunication of All Catholics Who Refuse To Give Up Their Secret Affiliation.

New York, Dec. 21.—Further information discloses that the Catholic church bans against secret societies are the most stringent ever known in this country.

The secret orders well-known in this country—the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Sons of Temperance—have been placed under the ban. Hereafter the Roman Catholic who joins any of these societies does so under pain of excommunication, and every influence will be exerted on those already affiliated to resign.

This action on the part of the church is the result of the council of the archbishops of the United States, held in Chicago on Sept. 12, 1893. There the relations between the church and the secret societies were carefully discussed, and at the conclusion documents were forwarded to the pope recommending the action against the three orders in question, whose principles were held to be of a decidedly anti-Catholic tendency.

The pope, upon receipt of these papers, laid them before a conference of the cardinals, the indorsement of the American prelates' action resulted, and the pope fixed his seal to a decree of condemnation.

This decree was forwarded to Mgr. Satolli for promulgation in this country, where the interdicted orders exist. It was in the form of a letter in Latin to the archbishops and bishops in the United States, who in turn were to notify the priests, who would communicate it to their parishioners.

The first announcement of this order was made by Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, to a conference of the priests held in the old cathedral in Jay street. It will be quickly made public all over the country.

It was expected that Archbishop Corrigan would announce the interdiction at a meeting of the trustees of his diocese to be held at the cathedral.

This action has been expected for some time by those better acquainted with the inner workings of the church. That the archbishops had been considering it was known to many of the clergy, but just what they had done was known only to a few. Their decision was reached only after much debate.

There has long been a unanimous opinion held by the prelates against the Masons, whose members the Catholic church has long refused to retain or receive in her communion. But this last decree has caused considerable surprise.

ARABS DEFEATED IN AFRICA.

A Decisive Battle Won by the Italian Forces—The Sudan Quiet.

Rome, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Massowah, Egypt, announces that six companies of Italian troops, under the command of Major Toselli, attacked the Arabs near Halai and defeated them. A large number of the natives, including Chief Batagos, were killed. The Italian force lost ten killed and twenty-two wounded. It was composed entirely of native soldiers drilled and officered by Italians. It is expected that this victory will prevent any further intrigues upon the part of other Abyssinian chiefs.

The Italian commander-in-chief reports that everything is quiet in the direction of the Sudan.

Indians May Attack Them.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Dec. 21.—The first clash between the Meehan and Jones forces in the mill site controversy occurred when one of the Meehans assaulted a Jones man. They were separated before blood was shed. Both sides now occupy the disputed reservation property. Chief Mon Si Mah was notified of the invasion and it is reported that he is on his way here with a band of braves with the intention of beginning hostilities at once. He is a fearless Indian and his movement occasions much alarm. The Meehans, fearing an attack, have armed sentinels on the ice night and day, and have shut down their mill in order to have all employes in readiness to fight.

Passengers Have a Narrow Escape.

Schoolcraft, Mich., Dec. 21.—A heavily loaded excursion train on the Grand Trunk railroad bound for Winnipeg with Canadians was derailed here. The baggage car and locomotive were wrecked and the baggageman hurt but all the passengers escaped injury.

Thirteen Election Indictments.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—The grand jury has voted to indict thirteen persons for violation of the election law on election day. Three of the number are policemen. Capiases were placed in the hands of bailiffs, and arrests in the majority of cases will soon follow.

Raines Elected Senator.

Auburn, N. Y., Dec. 21.—John Raines, republican, of Canandaigua, was elected state senator at a special election, to fill the vacancy in the Twenty-sixth district caused by Senator Saxton's election to the lieutenant-governorship.

Will Have an Orphan's Home.

Columbus, O., Dec. 21.—The Junior Order of United American mechanics has concluded to erect a national orphans home, and the committee on location will meet in Pittsburg in January.

FOUND IN HER EYES.

A Remarkable Clew Discovered in the Shearman Murder Case.

Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 21.—A startling development was made in the Shearman murder case here. A photograph of the murderer has been discovered. Both Mrs. Shearman's eyes are believed to hold pictures of the man who murdered her.

Sheriff Jenner and Coroner Bowers discussed the statement often made that the eyes of the dead retain pictures of the last objects on which they rest before the last breath is drawn.

It was decided to proceed on that theory, and taking Fred S. Marsh, they visited the Shearman farm. Mr. Marsh with his kodak photographed one eye of Mrs. Shearman and lo! the form of a man was found there, a big, burly man, wearing a long overcoat, with the cloth of his trousers badly wrinkled. The face of the man was not obtained. Both Mrs. Shearman's eyes were removed and taken by the coroner to Jamestown for further examination and to be photographed.

Mrs. Davis' eyes were photographed but no image was found there, consequently it is believed that the murderer came upon her from behind and dealt the deadly blow without showing himself to her.

This revelation caused a sensation at the farmhouse. Undertaker Partridge was present and says the photograph of the man's form and clothing on the one eye of Mrs. Shearman which was exposed to Mr. Marsh's camera, was perfectly distinct and will lead to his capture.

MADE NO OVERTURES.

The Rev. Dr. McGlynn Said To Be Satisfied with His Position.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Dr. Richard L. Burtsell, rector of St. Mary's church, when shown the item printed in New York papers to the effect that Dr. McGlynn was no longer an apostle of the anti-poverty doctrine, which brought about his excommunication, and that he has written to Archbishop Corrigan asking that he be assigned to a parish in the diocese in New York, pronounced the statements untrue.

He stated that Dr. McGlynn had not recanted the doctrines of Henry George. He further denied the report that Dr. McGlynn's restoration to the church after his excommunication was not complete, and that it was generally understood that his announced perseverance in the promulgation of his beliefs was not helping him to become again a regularly established rector, was also denied by Dr. Burtsell.

REFUSED TO ACCEPT.

Miners Will Not Meet Operators' Demands and a Strike May Result.

Pittsburg, Dec. 21.—The session of the Miners Delegate convention has been full of sensational developments following in rapid succession and all of them only serving to pile up greater obstacles in the way of a settlement, rendering the situation almost hopelessly complicated and critical.

The miners, just before the noon adjournment, voted again not to accept the 55 cent rate offered by the operators. A change from this position will not now be made unless perhaps at the next session a statement to be made by President Dearmitt, of the New York & Cleveland Gas Coal company, may influence another diversity of opinion.

After Big Damages.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 21.—B. F. Squire and Mary J. Squire, his wife, of Monroe, Fairfield county, have instituted suit in the superior court of Fairfield county, against the American Telephone & Telegraph company, (long distance) to recover $20,000 damages. On Nov. 14 a horse they were driving became frightened at a quantity of broken poles and wires the employes had left beside the road and ran away. Mrs. Squire received serious and permanent injuries in consequence. The property of the Southern New England Telephone company has been attached.

Activity of Chinese Highbinders.

San Francisco, Dec. 21.—Chinese highbinders are causing terror in the Mongolian quarter. Many of them who had escaped the deportation clause of the exclusion law are driven to desperation through poverty and burglaries, robberies, and shooting and stabbing affrays are of daily occurrence. The Mongolian police employed by the Six companies are apparently afraid to do anything, even with the assistance of the civic policemen.

Dempsey's Case Held Over.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 21.—The board of pardons has announced its action in a number of cases. A commutation of the death sentence was recommended in the case of George Dukovic convicted of murder in Allegheny county. The case of Hugh Dempsey was held over until a special meeting to be held early in January.

Ex-Gov. Alcorn Dead.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 21.—Ex-Gov. J. L. Alcorn died at his home at Eagle's Nest. He had been in a very low state of health for months. His name was an historic one in this state. He was elected governor of Mississippi in 1869, defeating Judge Lewis Dent, brother-in-law of Gen. U. S. Grant.

Killed After Forty Years.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Thomas Qualey, better known on the Hudson River railroad as Thomas Whalen, was struck and instantly killed by an extra train at the quarry at Rhinebeck. He had been in the employ of the road for forty years.

ON STARK AND WEBSTER

Many Addresses Delivered in House and Senate.

The New Statues Presented by the State of New Hampshire to the Government Are Placed in the Capitol Hall—Eulogies in the Senate—But Little Done in the House.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Both houses of congress practically devoted the entire day to the listening to speeches during the presentation by New Hampshire of the statues of General Stark and Daniel Webster to Statuary hall.

The senate devoted the entire time of its sitting to the addresses in connection with the acceptance and placing in the Statuary hall, of the capitol, of the marble statues of General John Stark and Daniel Webster.

There were four speeches made in the senate in eulogy of Stark and ten in eulogy of Webster. The one that attracted most attention was that of Senator Hoar (rep., Mass.) in relation to Mr. Webster—whose speeches—he said, were the literature of American nationality.

They were to the American what the Pslams of David were to the Hebrew, what the songs of Burns were to the Scotchman. Up to the 7th of March, 1850, when he made his speech in the senate in support of the fugitive slave law, he was the oracle of New England. But on that day he put himself in opposition to the conscience of the north. The voice of law, as he interpreted it, and the voice of God, speaking to the individual soul, then for the first time in the nation's history, seemed to be in conflict. Nothing, Said Mr. Hoar, could have resisted the dominion of Daniel Webster over New England until he provoked an encounter with the inexorable conscience of the Puritan. Mr. Hoar's concluding sentence was warmly applauded. It was:

"He is the one foremost figure in our history between the day when Washington died and the day when Lincoln took the oath of office."

Pursuant to an order adopted last week the house turned aside from its consideration of matters relating to the material concerns of the country, and devoted a few hours to the paying tribute to that courage and patriotism which devoted to the interests of the country in war and peace, have made this nation the foremost on the face of the earth.

The occasion for this was the presentation to the United States, for exhibition in the national Statuary hall at the capitol, by the state of New Hampshire, of sfatues of General John Stark, the hero of Bennington, and of Daniel Webster, the famous lawyer, orator, and statesman. Speeches were made by Representatives Baker and Blair of New Hampshire; Powers and Grant of Vermont; Everett and Morse of Massachusetts and Curtis of New York.

The ceremonies closed with the adoption of resolutions of thanks of congress to the state for the gift. Before these exercises, the house spent three hours in further discussion of the Carlisle currency and banking bill, a speech for it being made by Mr. Sperry (dem., Conn.), and against it by Mr. Brusius (rep., Pa.), members of the committee on banking and currency.

An urgent deficiency bill was passed appropriating $300,000 to carry on the work of closing up the eleventh census, and $100,000 to pay fees of jurors and witnesses in United States courts. This was made necessary, Mr. Breckenridge (dem., Ky.) explained because of the failure of the senate to pass the deficiency bill passed by the house last week, which provided the money for collecting the income tax as well as the money for these two subjects.

The senate bill granting a pension of $100 a month to the widow of General Nathaniel P. Banks, was unanimously agreed to, on motion of Mr. Sickles (dem., N. Y.)

A resolution was agreed to directing the printing of 8,000 copies of the investigation into the slums of cities made by the labor bureau.

Mr. Outhwaite (dem., O.) introduced a concurrent resolution providing for a holiday recess of congress extending from the 22d instant to Jan. 3, but in the absence of a quorum and upon the objection of Mr. English (dem., N. J.), withdrew it.

Given Too Much Freedom.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—The federal grand jury will investigate the management of the San Bernardino county jail, where four railway strikers are serving eighteen months sentences. A preliminary investigation showed that the prisoners have been allowed extraordinary freedom, leaving the jail at will to visit their families, and frequently visiting the theatres and other places of amusement.

Forged Pension Papers.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 21.—Stephen Tillinghast, of Scranton, Pa., was arrested at Arctic Centre charged with forging pension papers. He was arrested by United States government officers who had been in pursuit of him for some time and when arrested he had made preperations for a trip to the Bermudas.

Another Insurrection Predicted.

London, Dec. 21.—A dispatch to the Times from Buenos Ayres states that Admiral Da Gama, one of the leaders of the recent Brazilian insurrection, predicts a fresh invasion of the state of Rio Grande do Sul before January.

Must Hang on His Own Plea.

Defiance, O., Dec. 21.—After pleading guilty, Judge Snooks sentenced Charles Hart, the murderer of the Good children at Paulding, to hang on April 20, 1895.

Murderer Stefano Arrested.

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 21.—George Stefano, who murdered Stephen Nagy at Perth Amboy, N. J., has been arrested here.

Hungarian Cabinet Crisis.

Budapest, Dec. 21.—It is expected that the members of the Wekerle cabinet will hand in their resignations.

FUN WITH A VOICE.

FEATS OF VENTRILOQUISTS UPON THE UNSUSPECTING.

Peppering Rounders with Shot and Talking from the Car Roof. Electricity and Astrology Mystify Music-Loving Mr. Shaunnessy.

Mr. C. A. Hartley, the expert ventriloquist, writes entertainingly of some of his funny exploits.

An incident something out of the ordinary was that which occurred on a Ninth avenue uptown "L" train, New York. Five good-natured merchants, somewhat elated by Bacchus's exhilerating potions, boarded the train at Battery place. I fired on them with No. 6 shot, to their great discomfiture. They glared ferociously at every occupant of the crowded car, and I verily believe if any one had the temerity to laugh he would have suffered.

When they had reached a state of excitement verging on desperation I sprang up myself as if struck by a nine pounder. This served to mitigate their indignation somewhat, for I saw them laugh aside. I sent another shower among them so suddenly and rapidly that they severally pulled their hats down over their eyes to shield themselves from the outslaught.

At this instant I brought my ventriloquism into play, and throwing my voice to the roof of the car, I called out, "Hey down there! Did I hit you?"

All eyes were turned to the roof of the car. "Stop it! stop it!", yelled the most talkative of the quintet. "We won't have any more of that!" A number of the other passenger who surmised what, but not who, it was, discreetly hid themselves behind their papers. Every eye of the now thoroughly enraged quintet were focused on the open ventilator slide at the top of the car, and at the next volley, one bolder than the rest, proceeded to bang the slides with his umbrella.

The guard who did not hear the sound from the front platform, rushed back and remonstrated, but to no avail. Here was a nice state of affairs. The guard imagined the quintet was collectively full to the chin, while the latter suspected the guard had a confederate on top of the car where he could blow putty balls at them and jeer at intervals.

A wordy war ensued. The guard outnumbered, left the car and telegraphed ahead for the policemen. Two big bluecoats walked into the car at 104th street.

"I want that man put off!" yelled the poor guard. "I won't have him in here," indicating the more aggressive member of the party.

"Now let me explain."

"Oh, wait awhile."

"See her."

"Oh, say," they chorused as the officers advanced. Confusion reigned. Explanations, expostulations and recriminations were at once the order. When the argument reached a white heat the passengers burst out into a roar of laughter. At 116th street the car was too warm for me. I got off.

James Shaunnessy, is a prosperous Harlemite, a pronounced wit and a man of the world. He was engaged in a lively discourse with several friends at Bartel's dining room, 135th street and Madison avenue one evening when I entered. He had just assayed to exhalt the genius of our home inventors, and had given an elucidation of mechanical harmony, as produced through the automatic mucic book. One of these boxes was stationed in a recess in the far end of the large hall, and, obedient to the call of the five cent nickel, the strains of "Say Au Revoir, But Not Good-by" came softly from the steel tongues.

The last note had hardly died away ere I shouted, in a voice so nearly like the telephone that an expert could not tell the difference: "Hey, Shaunnessy, are you uptown?"

This was a little too much for the astute Mr. Shaunnessy, and he looked at the instrument with much astonishment. He bent low to listen, but no sound came. So he quickly drew another nickel and slipped it through the receiving slot, saying as he did so:

"Hey, speak again. Who are you?" w

"You know me well. Don't you recognize my voice?" came very distinctly from the box. I wanted Shaunnessy to give me some name, and sure enough he did.

"It sounds like Munn, a friend of mine on 84th street. But how does he know I am here? Hey, (he added aloud) who are you?"

"Mr. Munn, piped the voice from within. "I knew it. He's a friend of mine, a great joker he is, too," explained Shaunnessy.

"Say Mr. Munn. Hello, hello, hello!"

"Hello, are you there?"

"Yes. Where am I?"

"At 234th street and Madison avenue."

"Who told you I was here?"

"I am an astrologer. I can see you now and note every movement you make."

By this time a large crowd had collected about the instrument. It was whispered from one to another that I was engaged in a new exploit.

"It's wonderful—incomphrehensible!" And as Shaunnessy said this he raised his index finger and pointed to the east, saying

"What am I doing now?"

"Your finger is pointed towards the east!

"Now?"

"Your hand rests upon the shoulder of a friend near you."

"Now?"

"You have placed your hat on a cane and hold it above your head. Now hold your hat before the instrument, and I will read the maker's name."

The thoroughly astounded Saunnessy did as directed, while I read and shouted back: "Critterion; 6 7-8 ——, maker."

Poor Shaunnessy was a sight. He must have thought (or his looks belied him) that the banshees or the fairies were playing high jinks.

What Kansas Thinks of Her Statesmen.

Until Peffer was elected to the Senate, very few people in Kansas had ever heard of him. Now he is a national figure. He has no sense, it is true, but his position gives him prominence. If a man has long whiskers, it gives him prominence in the United States Senate; he does not need brains. Mr. Ingalls attracted a great deal of attention because he wore red neckties. A HAZER GETS HIS DESERTS.

Knocked Out and Beautifully Decorated By His Victim.

The seniors of the Kingston, Pa., Seminary, have been in the habit of playing numerous pranks on the juniors as a sort of initiation to the school, and though it was hazing in a mild form, it never amounted to sufficient seriousness to cause complaint.

One of these victims was Herbert Braimham, of Rochester, N. Y., whom they had been teasing for some time. Such mild tricks as dropping a cat through the transom of his room, sewing up his clothes, putting molasses in his bed and others of a like nature did not deeply disturb his jovial nature, and as he made no complaint the seniors were all the more eager to do something to arose his anger and increase their fun.

They at last devised a scheme, and one night recently it was put into execution. Six students entered Braimham's room about one o'clock in the morning. They had sheets drawn over their heads, with eyelets cut in them. The sheets reached to their waists, and one and all looked alike. It was impossible to recognize them. Not a word was spoken. All had been arranged before hand. Braimham was awakened. Before he realized what was going on a towel had been thrust into his mouth and he was securely gagged. A pillow was put over his head, his hands and feet were tied, and powerless to resist, he was carried out of his room, down the hall and out to the campus.

His effors to release himself never relaxed, but tied as he was, and in the hands of six powerful young men, he could do nothing. It was freezing, and as he had nothing on but his night shirt, he was benumbed with cold. Without speaking the hazers carried him along the campus to the pump, and holding him under the nozzle they pumped water on him for several minutes. Despite his sufferings, for the water was freezing on his legs and arms, he never cried for mercy, and, at last tiring of their sport, the hazers cut the ropes that bound him and ran away.

Plucky to the last, no sooner were his hands free than he grabbed at the sheet around one of the men and tore it partly off, revealing a blue and white striped sweater underneath. There was but one sweater in the school of that color, worn by Louis Rockwell, 24 years old, of Scranton, the left end on the football team. Though half frozen Braimham recognized it and as he made the best of his way back to his room he resolved that, come what may, he was going to have revenge.

The opportunity came next morning. Owing to a heavy cold contracted by his dousing during the night, Braimham was late for breakfast. As he passed along the narrow hall leading from the student's quarters to the breakfast hall he met Rockwell, the owner of the sweater he had recognized the night before.

"You are one of the cowardly fellows who hazed me last night, aren't you?" exclaimed Braimham.

Rockwell said nothing and tried to pass out whereupon Braimham attacked him fiercely. For a moment or two, Rockwell who was bigger than his antagonist, managed to ward off his blows, but Braimham, who had taken lessons in boxing for a long time soon began landing at will. He struck Rockwell heavily and often in the face, who at last to save himself, clinched.

Braimham threw him heavily, and when on the floor continued striking his face until the blood flowed freely. The noise of the fight had attracted some of students and a professor, and they managed to drag the infuriated Braimham away from his now helpless foe and hold him.

After the affair had quieted down and Rockwell had his face dressed it was found that both his eyes were blackened his nose hammered out of shape, several teeth missing, and both lips split. His face presented a horrible appearance, being raw all over. Braimham was unhurt.

Rockwell confessed being the leader of the gang of hazers, but refused to tell who his confederates were.

A "Godless Traffic."

A trade which has recently sprung into life is in our judgment an attempt to make "gain of godliness." We refer to the traffic in "individual cups" for the Lord's Supper. Enterprising manufacturers, with an eye to the main chance, have taken advantage of the scare of certain fashionable Church circles, growing out of the discovery of microbes, or disease germs, on the rim of the cup containing the communion wine, and are offering for sale very small glasses in which the wine can be passed separately to the communicants. When the scientists peeped through his microscope and discovered the poisonous germs, and proclaimed danger, business right at once saw a source of revenue, and "individual cups" are on the market, or may be manfactured to order on short notice. Philanthropy does not prompt this trade—it is a sanitary measure for the money that is in it.

The whole thing is ridiculous. We do not blame the trade; it is their business to meet demand, to create it, if possible; but it is only a fad, the outgrowth of a fear. The scare is a clear case of running before getting hurt, and this makes the craze for "individual cups" too silly to be followed by sensible and religious people. Admitting the possibility of danger, no well authenticated case of a contagious or infectious disease has been traced to the single cup as far as we have have heard or read. And religious people who love and appreciate the communion of saints ought to be the very last to give countenance to that, which, at one stroke destroys, if not the essence, takes away at least the semblance of Christian communion.—Christian Advocate.

ROGERS—OYSTERS

232 West Second Street

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

At the conclusion, Mr. Job loosed his neckcloth, and spoke:

"That book, sir, ought to be lyin' at the bottom of the sea. It was lost on the evening of September the 3d, 1866, on board a yacht that went down with all hands. Now I'll tell you all about it. There was a gentleman called Blake staying over at Port William that summer—that's four miles up the coast, you know."

I nodded. "—Staying with his wife and one son, a tall young fellow, aged about twenty-one, maybe. They came from up the country—M—— was the place, in Lancashire, and they had a yacht with them, that they kept in Port William harbor, anchored just below the bridge. She would be about thirty tons—a very pretty boat. They had only one hired hand for crew; used to work her themselves for the most part; the lady was extraordinarily clever at the helm, or at the sheets either. Very quiet people they were. You might see them most days that summer, anchored out on the Whitin grounds. What was she called? The Queen of Sheba—cutter rigged—quite a new boat. It was said after that the owner, Mr. Blake, designed her himself. She used often to put in to Penleven. Know her? Why of course I'd know her, 'specially considerin' what happened.

"What was that? A very sad case; it made a lot of talk at the time. One day—it was the 3d of September, '86—the day I spoke about—Mr. and Mrs. Blake and the son, they anchored off the haven and came up here to tea. I supposed at the time they'd left their paid hand, Robertson, on board; but it turned out he was left at home at Port William that day, barkin' a small mainsail that Mr. Blake had brought o' purpose for the fishin'. Well, Mrs. Blake she ordered tea, and while my missus was layin' the cloth young Mr. Blake he picks up that very book, sir, that was lyin' on the sideboard, and begins readin' it and iffian'. My wife she goes out of the room for to cut the bread-and-butter, and when she comes back there was the two gentlemen by the window studyin' the book with their backs to the room, and Mrs. Blake lyin' back in the chair I'm now sittin' on, an' her face turned to the wall—so. The young Mr. Blake he turns round and says: 'This here's a very amusing book, Mrs. Job. Would you mind my borrowing it for a day or two to copy out some of the poetry? I'll bring it back next time we put into Penleven.' Of course my wife says: 'No, she didn't mind.' Then the elder Mr. Blake he says: 'I see you had a visitor here yesterday—a Mr. Macguire. Is he in the house?' My wife said: 'No; the gentleman had left his traps, but he'd started that morning to walk to Port William to spend the day.' Nothing more passed. They had their tea, and paid for it, and went off to their yacht. I saw that book in the young man's hand [illegible] the passage.

THE SPANIARD SHOT HIM DEAD.

"Well, sir, it was just dusking in as they weighed and stood up towards Port William, the wind blowing pretty steady from the south'ard. At about ten minutes to seven o'clock it blew up in a sudden little squall—nothing to mention; the fishing boats just noticed it and that was all. But it was reckoned that squall capsized the Queen of Sheba. She never reached Port William, and no man ever clapped eyes on her after twenty minutes past six, when Dick Crego declares he saw her off the Blowth, half-way toward home, and going steady under all canvas. The affair caused a lot of stir, here and at Port William, and in the newspapers. Short-handed as they were, of course, they'd no business to carry on as they did, 'specially as my wife declares from her looks that Mrs. Blake was feelin' faint afore they started. She always seemed to me a weak, timmersome woman at the best; small and ailin' to look at."

"And Mr. Blake?"

"Oh! he was a strong-made gentleman; tall, with a big red beard."

"The son?"

"Took after his father, only he hadn't any beard; a fine upstanding pair."

"And no trace was ever found of them?"

"Not a stick nor a shred."

"But about this visitors' book. You'll swear they took it with them? See, there's not a stain of salt water upon it."

"No, there isn't; but I'll swear young Mr. Blake had it in his hand as he went from my door."

I said: "Mr. Job, I've kept you already too long from your dinner. Go and eat, and ask them to send in something for me. Afterwards I want you to come with me and take a look at my yacht that is lying just outside of the haven."

As we started from the shore Mr. Job, casting his eyes over the Siren, remarked: "That's a very pretty yawl of yours, sir." As we drew nearer he began to eye her uneasily.

"She has been lengthened some five or six feet," I said; "she was a cutter to begin with."

"Lord help us!" then said Mr. Job, in a hoarse whisper. "She's the Queen of Sheba. I'd swear to her run anywhere—ay, or to that queer angle of her hawse-holes."

A close examination confirmed Mr. Job that my yacht was no other than the lost Queen of Sheba, lengthened and altered in rig. It persuaded me, too. I turned back to Plymouth, and leaving the boat in Cattwater, drove to the Millbay station and took tickets for Bristol. Arriving there just twenty-four hours after my interview with Mr. Job, I made my way to Mrs. Carlingford's lodgings.

She had left them two years before; nothing was known of her whereabouts. The landlady could not even tell me whether she had moved from Bedminster, and so I had to let the matter rest.

But just fourteen days ago I received the following letter, dated from a workhouse in one of the midland counties:

"DEAR SIR: I am a dying woman and shall probably be dead before this reaches you. The doctor says he cannot give me forty-eight hours. It is angina pectoris, and I suffer horribly at times. The yacht you purchased of me is not the Wasp, but the Queen of Sheba. My husband designed her. He was a man of some property near Limerick; and he and my son were involved in some of the Irish troubles between 1881 and 1884. It was said they had joined one of the brotherhoods and betrayed their oaths. This I am sure was not true. But it is certain we had to run for fear of assassination. After a year in Liverpool we were forced to fly south to Port William, where we brought the yacht and lived for some time in quiet, under our own names. But we knew that could not last and had taken measures to escape when need arose. My husband had chanced while at Liverpool upon an old yacht dismantled and rotting in the Mersey, but of about the same size as his own, and still, of course, upon the register. He bought her of her owner, a Mr. Carlingford, and a stranger, for a very few pounds, and with her—what he valued far more—her papers; but he never completed the transfer at the custom house. His plan was, if pressed, to escape abroad and pass his yacht off as the Wasp and himself as Mr. Carlingford. All the while we lived at Port William the Queen of Sheba was kept amply provisioned for a voyage of at least three weeks, when the necessity overtook us quite suddenly—the name of a man, Macguire, in the visitors' book of a small inn at Penleven. We left Penleven at dusk that evening, and held steadily up the coast until darkness. Then we turned the yacht's head, and ran straight across for Morlaix; but the weather continuing fine for a good fortnight (our first night at sea was the roughest in all this time), we changed our minds, cleared Ushant and held right across for Vigo; thence, after revictualing, we cruised slowly down the coast and through the straits, finally reaching Malaga. There we staid and had the yacht lengthened. My husband had sold his small property before ever we came to Port William and had managed to invest the whole under the name of Carlingford. There was no difficulty about letters of credit. At each port on the way we had shown the Wasp's papers, and used the name of Carlingford; and at Lisbon we read in an English newspaper about the supposed capsizing of the Queen of Sheba. Still we had not only to persuade the officials at the various ports that our boat was the Wasp. We knew that our enemies were harder to delude, and our next step was to make her as unlike the Wasp or the Queen of Sheba as possible. This we did by lengthening her and altering her rig. But it proved useless, as I had always feared it would. The day after we sailed from Malaga, a Spanish-speaking seaman, whom we had hired there as extra hand, came aft as if to speak to my husband (who stood at the wheel), and, halting a pace or two from him, lifted a revolver, called him by name and shot him dead. Before he could turn, my son had knocked him senseless, and in another minute tumbled him overboard. We buried my husband in the sea, next day. We held on, we too alone, past Gibraltar—I steering and my son handling all the sails—and ran up for Cadiz. There we made deposition of our losses, inventing a story to account for them, and my son took the train for Paris, for we knew that our enemies had tracked the yacht, and there would be no escape for him if he clung to her. I waited for six days, and then engaged a crew and worked the yacht back to F——. I have never since set eyes on my son; but he is alive, and his hiding is known to myself and to one man only—a member of the brotherhood, who surprised the secret. To keep that man silent I spent all my remaining money; to quiet him I had to sell the yacht; and now that money, too, is gone, and I am dying in a workhouse. God help my son! I deceived you, and yet I think I did you no great wrong. The yacht I sold you was my own, and she was worth the money. The figures on the beam were cut there by my husband before we reached Vigo, to make the yacht correspond with the Wasp's certificate. If I have wronged you I implore your pardon. Yours truly, CATHERINE BLAKE"

Well, that is the end of the story. It does not, I am aware, quite account for the figure I saw standing by the Siren's wheel. As for the Wasp, she long since rotted to pieces on the waters of the Mersey. But the question is, have I a right to tell the Siren? I certainly have a right to keep her, for she is mine, sold to me in due form by her rightful owner, and honestly paid for. But then I don't want to keep her.

FOR THREE DAYS ONLY.
Vano's Extraordinary Offer to Sick People.
All Sufferers Applying at Reform Hall Will Receive Treatment, Advice and All Services Free of Charge Until Cured—The Only Expense to the Patient Will Be the Actual Cost of the remedies Necessary to Effect a Cure—This Offer Holds Good Until Saturday of This Week Only—After that Time the Usual Charges Will Be Made.

For three days only, all suffering people will receive treatment and all services free. The only expense is the actual cost of remedies used. The usual charges will be made after Saturday evening. Vano's cures in Plainfield have puzzled the medical fraternity, because he has completely cured the very people they have been trying to cure for years past.
Vano's remedies have done wonders for many chronic sufferers in Plainfield who had given up hope of ever being cured. No matter how bad you are, call and see the doctor at the hall at once. If you are not cured the money you pay for the remedies will be returned to you and a written contract will be signed and given to you to that effect. The three days' free treatment is given for the benefit of those who cannot pay the usual charges and also to show the remarkable power of the Vano remedies. All sufferers from nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, liver, kidney, stomach, bladder and blood disorders, poor appetite, sleeplessness, fits, catarrh, deafness, piles, throat and lung troubles, rheumatism, paralysis, sciatica, neuralgia and all aches and pains, should call at once. Special quick treatment for diseases of men and delicate women and children. Hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m

THE MASONS NIGHT.

Anchor Lodge, F. & A. M., Installs Officers and Has a Good Time.

The beautiful lodge rooms of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, Free and Accepted Masons, were crowded Thursday evening by the members of the lodge and other representative Masons from this city and vicinity, many of whom were in the conventional evening full dress. The occasion was the annual installation of the Master, Wardens, and other officers of the lodge, which had been elected at a previous communication. District Deputy Grand Master Shoder and Past District Deputy Grand Master Sheppard of the Fifth Masonic District, Elizabeth, acted as Grand Master and Grand Marshal. The ceremonies were given with organ accompaniment and were very solemn, interesting and impressive. The following gentlemen were installed: C. C. Howard, Master; Hugh R. Knox, Senior Warden; P. A. Emmons, Junior Warden; J. E. Turrell, Treasurer; T. A. Rogers, Secretary; Revs. E. M. Rodman and S. P. Simpson, Chaplains. The appointive officers, John James, Senior Deacon; H. W. Marshall, Junior Deacon; J. A. Smith, Senior Master of Ceremonies; J. E McClintock, Junior Master of Ceremonies; T. S. Armstrong, Senior Steward; F. C. Kinsman, Junior Steward; R. J. Shaw, Marshal; Caspar Boisterle, Tyler; and a Board of Trustees, consisting of Right Worshipful W. A. Freeman, Past Master F. O. Herring, and O. T. Waring, were also installed.

The large assembly present at the conclusion of the ceremonies congratulated the visiting officials for the dignified and impressive manner in which the Masonic ritual for the occasion was performed; and the lodge, on motion of Right Worshipful Brother H. H. Lowrie, also passed a resolution of thanks. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the company adjourned to the banquet hall and passed an hour in social converse and in the discussion of a bountiful supper, spread for the occasion.

Addresses appropriate to the occasion were made by Right Worshipful Brother Schoder; Right Worshipful Brother Shephard; Rev. J. W. Richardson; Worshipful Brothers Benjamin B. Western, C. M. Goddard, William B. Cock, D. C. Adams of Jerusalem Lodge, Brothers F. W. Bunyon, P. A. Emmons and other prominent Masons present. The party adjourned at a reasonable hour. Worshipful Brother Howard and his committee received much praise for their complete arrangements which contributed so largely to the success of the affair. Among others present were F. A. Dunham, W. L. Gavett and Craig A. Marsh.

Christmas at the Home.

The Christmas tree at the Children's Home will be lighted at 4 p. m., Wednesday, Dec. 26. There are fourteen children to make happy. Two are little ones, just past two years old, the others range from five to twelve years in age. Mrs. Kimball states that the management will be very glad for shoes, knee pants in assorted sizes, flannel underwear, with dress materials, either woolens or ginghams, handkerchiefs, sheet and pillow-slip muslin.

Christmas toys, candies, etc., suggest themselves to the lovers of children in the holiday time. A Christmas dinner will be served at 1 p. m., Tuesday, Dec. 25. Friends of the Home will be welcome from 4 to 6.

The Inspector Favors It.

Postoffice Inspector Lewis arrived from Washington yesterday in response to a request from Postmaster Hetfield. In conference with the executors of the Babcock Estate Mr. Lewis expressed himself as heartily in favor of the proposed change, and the necessary papers were forwarded to Washington last evening for the proper signatures. The office will be moved March 1.

This morning the postmaster placed on sale 250,000 properly gummed stamps and returned the remaining 60,000 of the last lot, which had caused so much annoyance by refusing to stick.

Mt. Olive's Anniversary.

Rev. George Boswell of New York preached a very enthusiastic and interesting sermon in the Mt. Olive Baptist Church last evening. His remarks were chiefly on the line of Christian warfare, and his words were very impressive. At the close of the sermon, Alfred White read the historical paper of the church.

Plainfield's Big Cheque.

Alex. Titsworth, City Treasurer, has just sent to E. M. Wood, County Collector, a cheque for fifty-six thousand, seven hundred and seventy-nine dollars, Plainfield's share of the State and County tax for 1894.

—Fresh confectionery at Harper's.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CAR STEPS WANTED.

Here's a Chance for the Jersey Central to Perfect Its Public Service.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Why do not the women of Plainfield rise up in wrath and compel the Central Railroad Company to provide stools to facilitate getting on and off the cars? I have never traveled on a road where there was such a high step from the ground to the car steps as at nearly all the stations of this road. On other roads the station platform is raised, but it is not so here. The result is that every day one sees the most unbecoming struggles and efforts to climb up. The brakemen try to help, but it amounts to little; besides, no woman likes to be pulled and boosted by the trainmen, nor has the company any right to force it on them. For old women, or for those who are feeble, or short, it is especially unpleasant. It is dangerous, too, and sooner or later some one will sprain an ankle, or break a leg, and then the company will have to foot the bill.

Complaint of this nuisance was made some time ago, and as a result the colored porter at the Plainfield station has two benches which are used by him at all eastbound trains up to 10:04. This is utterly insufficient. A bench for every car platform should be carried on the train, and placed in position by the brakemen. This would make entrance into and egress from the cars not only more comfortable and safer, but more expeditious as well. The time consumed in placing the stools in position would be more than saved in the more rapid movement of passengers.

If every person who agrees with me in this matter will write about it to J. H. Olhausen, care of the Jersey Central Railroad Company, Liberty street, New York, it may bring about a change. Try it and see. A. H. A.

Home from College.

That Plainfield is well represented in the various leading colleges throughout the country will be seen by the following list of students who are home for the holidays:

Yale—Clarence Peck, A. Huntington, Harry McGee, H. Ryder.
Princeton—Richard Dwight.
Harvard—B. Bushnell.
Swarthmore—Irving Cooley.
Smith's—Miss Mary Wells, Miss Viola Conklin.
Debbe Ferry—Miss Edith Smalley, Miss Daisy Shepard.
Baltimore—Miss Florence Williams.
Amherst—Stephen Rushmore, John Whiting.
Lehigh—Arthur Serrell, A. Saltzman.
Wellesley—Miss Gertrude Rushmore.
Nazareth, Pa—Ferdinand Lisciguolo.
Framingham, Mass—Miss A. Gilbert, Miss Hattie Rockwell.
Rutgers—Raymond Carpenter, Ralph Campbell, Arthur Jennings.
Stevens—J. W. Beveridge.
Worcester Academy—Richard Waring.

Raided the Sweets.

A mammoth pile of fresh candies and bonbons was heaped up in the main show window of Leggett's pharmacy last evening, and even while the crowd of people admired and praised the mountain of sweetness it melted away into Christmas packages for the ready purchasers. Mr. Leggett found that the stock was exhausted before the night was over, and immediately sent to Huyler's for another shipment. That came today, and is rapidly going. The people of Plainfield have found that Huyler's candies are indispensable to Christmas time, and they realize that at Leggett's only can they be bought in all their original freshness. They are made to Leggett's order.

—Rocking horses and doll carriages at Harper's.

Oregon Pine.

A shipment of this building material has just arrived at the yard of Thorpe & Ivins. It is used for all purposes but has special fitness for out-of-door use. It is cut with vertical grain and for step-plank is said to be unequaled. It seems a long distance to bring lumber, but this firm also receive direct consignments of red cedar from the Pacific coast.

Christmas Cheer.

In olden times, when glad-tongued bells proclaimed
The hallowing Christmas-tide, the yule-log famed
On hearthstones burned to light with timely cheer
The day most jubilant of all the year.
Now, from "Black Diamonds" comes the radiant glow
That makes your households warmth and comfort know,
And these, of grades the purest ever mined,
At ruling prices and well screened you'll find
Where yards of Geo. O. Stevens meet your view—
On Front St., West, and near Grant avenue.

Yule-Tide.

In the olden days this season of Christmas was known in portions of "Merrie England" as the Yule-tide. That same tide has struck Plainfield now and is carrying people to Collier's, 103 Park avenue, in quest of seasonable gifts. There is no place in the city where you get better value for your money, and where variety, attractiveness and intrinsic worth give you the surety of a satisfactory investment.

AND THAT'S SO!

Crosstown Rapid Transit Is the One Thing Plainfield Lacks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: I want to commend your article on the trolley—it is the one thing above all others that Plainfield needs; and until it gets it, it will remain just about where it now is. The residents of Broadway and Central avenue ought not to be allowed to reject it.

The point which you make about the effect of rapid transit in New York on these country towns is especially good. Whenever New York business men can reach upper New York quickly and cheaply, our suburban towns will have to stir themselves or they will fall behind. We must keep up in the race or we shall be distanced. COMMUTER.

Casper, Christmas Night.

Delightful "Casper the Yodler" will come to town Christmas night, and will be seen in Music Hall. The "Casper" will be our old and familiar friend, Chas. T. Ellis, and he will be greeted by a throng. He is always a loving figure, and this is the last season he will present this pretty domestic comedy. The scenery will be new and the electric effects will make possible stage pictures whose superior has never been seen on any stage in a dramatic performance. During the action of the second act, a picture of a yacht at sea, a sunset will be shown with its rich after-glow, in such fashion as almost to persuade the spectator that he is looking at the real thing. The gradual coming on of a thunderstorm will be accurately depicted.

Buy at Home.

Don't go to New York to buy your Christmas presents. That city is crowded with shoppers, and the stores are so packed that it is almost impossible to get waited on, the result being that people come home disappointed in not getting what they went after. Therefore, to save money and please yourself in the bargain, buy at home. Before going out scan carefully the advertising columns of The Daily Press, the perfect Plainfield guide for holiday shoppers.

Peculiarities of Excavating.

The sewer contractors ran into a stratum of clay on Watchung avenue just before reaching Richmond street, and had no more trouble with the water.

This corner was formerly low ground, and four feet under the present surface is found the dark soil which is underlaid by white clay.

The sewer trench is very shallow along Richmond street, from 4 to 6 feet deep, so it will only require a short time to complete it.

The West Fifth street sewer is being laid between Arlington and Park avenues today, and the residents are congratulating themselves that the work will be over with now, so that the frost and rain during the Winter will give the trench a good settling.

The Press understands that the property-owners on the Seventh and Eighth street section of the sewer contract prefer that the work should be deferred in front of their property until Spring.

After the Deluge, What?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: The sleepy old borough of Scotch Plains seems in a fair way of being aroused from its "Rip VanWinkle slumber" by a deluge of electric railways, and it is a matter of considerable interest to its inhabitants to know how she will conduct herself under the circumstances.

What with the Plainfield railway's projected extension through North avenue, Terrill road and Front street to the centre of the "sleepy city", the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company with its branch to Fanwood station, and the other line which somebody is trying to push through from Elizabeth, there will be no lack of lines, and everybody will have at least one near enough to be convenient, and if some people succeed in their efforts a part of them will have two lines at their doors. Good for old Scotch Plains!

ONE OF THE SLEEPERS.

—The lamp in front of the First Presbyterian Church last night joined the ranks of the strikers, and refused to burn.

—John H. Kitchen has bought the lots on Plainfield avenue on which the billboards fronted, and began today the excavation for a new house. The purchase was made of F. M. Bacon.

—Velocipedes and tricycles at Harper's.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manage

HYMENEAL.

Shipley—Mekeel.

A quiet home wedding was solemnized this morning in the quaint form customary among the Society of Friends, at the commodious residence of Isaac W. Rushmore, 751 West Seventh street.

The contracting parties were Miss Hannah Mekeel, youngest sister of Mrs. Rushmore, and George W. Shipley of Peekskill.

The guests assembled to witness the happy union were nearly all from out of town, friends and relatives of the bride and groom being present from Peekskill, Chicago and New York.

A wedding breakfast followed the ceremony, and amid hearty expressions of affection and good will the happy couple started on their journey.

Progressive Young Men.

At the monthly business meeting of the Young Men's Society of the Monroe Avenue Chapel held Wednesday evening the following officers were elected:

President—Blanchard Randolph.
Vice-president—Samuel Saums.
Secretary—Charles Hayes.
Treasurer—Frank Batson.

The meeting nights were changed to the second and fourth Wednesdays, and it was decided to hold a spelling match Wednesday evening, Feb 6, and invite the women. The number necessary for a quorum was changed from 11 to 7, and the dues reduced from 15 to 10 cents a month. The dues of those in arrears were cancelled to Jan. 1.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $37.50.

Ice-cream and cake were served at the close of the meeting.

Salvation Meetings.

A great hosanna meeting will be held at the Salvation Army hall Christmas at 3 p. m., led by Capt. M. McIntyre, formerly of Plainfield. Everybody welcome. On the 10th and 11th of January there will be held anniverseary meetings. On the first night there will be a grand banquet, followed by a meeting led by the Divisional Staff, and on the 11th there will be a large demonstration conducted by Brigadier Evans, assisted by a number of officers who have been stationed in this city. All are cordially invited.

—Holiday goods at Harper's, 411 Park avenue.

—A free box of candy is given with every dollar purchase of boys' goods at U. B. Crane's hat store, 120 West Front street, till Christmas morning.

—The Etna Social Club will give a dance for prizes next Wednesday evening. The best waltzer will receive a handsome souvenir. Many out-of-town guests are expected. Guttman will play.

—The goods and chattels belonging to the plumbing establishment of George H. Leland of Central avenue, were sold yesterday to satisfy a chattel mortgage. The business will be conducted by George B. Leland.

—The German Lutheran Church will have its Christmas celebration at 7:30 p. m., Dec. 25, and on the following day Rev. Dr. Nelson will conduct the Danish celebration. A tree will be provided at both celebrations.

—Since the letter-box at the corner of North and Park avenues was attached to the electric-light pole, it has the effect of a Leyden jar on some sensitive people. Through imperfect insulation it becomes charged with electricity, and persons depositing mail often get a shock.

—Edward Martin, the careful and obliging porter at the North Avenue railway station, who has won the gratitude of so many women for his enterprise in providing a step to assist them to the cars, will doubtless fare well this Christmas, as the patrons of the road have their eye on him.

—F. M. Hulett has transferred his music business to P. M. Ising, who, while not severing his relations with Schepflin, Schultz & Co., will personally conduct the business he has acquired. Mr. Hulett's friends will be glad that he will retain his residence here and engage with a New York piano house.

—Sun and Shade, the superb monthly publication issued from 137 West 23d street under the direction of the popular Scotch Plains Mr. Stanbury, comes out more elegant than ever for the holiday season. The frontispiece is a dream in rainbow tints, and the pages give calendars for all the months of '95, artistic in execution and exquisite in their adornments, the dates being overlooked by rare feminine faces from nature. Mr. Stanbury has a good eye.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Xmas tree ornaments at Harper's.

—The Daily Press will not be published Christmas Day.

—"The White Squadron" will be the attraction in Music Hall, Dec. 28.

—Men's bath robes, in college colors, are a specialty at Hallock's, West Front street.

—The installation of the officers-elect of the Reform Club will take place the first Thursday evening in January.

—A highly creditable Christmas special was issued by Somerset County's leading newspaper, the Somerville Democrat.

—Electric lamps whose lights alternately vanished and re-appeared were a novelty in the window of Leggett's pharmacy last night.

—Dr. Jenkins, who has charge of the case of Wm. McD. Corlell, and who so successfully rallied him from his serious illness, feels much encouraged at his condition.

—William Grannatt of Manning avenue lacerated several fingers on one of his hands by catching them in the sprocket wheel and chain of his bicycle, while cleaning the wheel.

—U. B. Crane, hatter and furnisher, 120 West Front street, received a large stock of fine hats today for the holiday trade. Little boys as well as big men, will find something new there.

—You will find some very useful holiday presents at Sebring's, Park avenue. He is offering children's suits and overcoats at cost, and has made a big reduction in all Winter goods to close.

—A fox will be started between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m., Christmas, from Benner's Hotel on the Fanwood road. Mr. Benner has recently constructed a club-house 16x40, for the accommodation of the Climax Gun Club.

—Holly wreaths, roping, mistletoe, and everything for Christmas decorations, choice cut flowers and rare blooming plants, the largest and finest assortment in town; are found at A. E. Lincoln's, 226 Park avenue.

—If looking for a gift at this season, drop in at Swain's, East Front street, and you will find a good selection of pictures, oil and water color boxes, fine stationery, and many things in that line from which to choose, and the prices are very reasonable.

—The friends of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school are invited to attend its Christmas service at 3 p. m. tomorrow. In addition to exercises by the school, the pastor will deliver a short address on "Childhood in the light of Christmas". There will be no preaching service in the evening.

—The Palmer Cox books sold only by The Daily Press are a rare holiday treat for the big people (as well as the little ones. The series of eight numbers is now complete, and The Press supplies them at 10 cents a part. "Queer People" is a creation which every household wants, and the supply is fast going.

—The Brown University Glee Banjo and Mandolin Club will give their first concert in Plainfield in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Saturday evening, December 29, at 8:15. They have a very high reputation as a college musical club and should ensure the women of the church that success which their efforts deserve in bringing them to Plainfield.

—In the Church of The Redeemer the services of Christmas week will be as follows: Christmas morning, service and celebration of the Holy Communion, 11:15; Wednesday, St. Stephen's Day, Holy Communion, 10 a. m.; Thursday, St. John the Evangelist's Day, Holy Communion, 10 a. m.; Friday, Holy Innocents Day, Christmas celebration for the Sunday-school, 7:30 p. m.

—A wild, weird, long-drawn cry which alarmed the wakeful people a few nights ago, and which was puzzled out as the yell of a railroad brakeman, is explained by the borough marshals as the homegoing song of George Totten, who, on getting into the mountain at early morning hours, gives vent to this stentorian whooping in order to drown his loneliness and to keep up his spirits.

—The Washington Star, which ranks next to Scripture through all Warren County, issues an especially good Christmas number. While not neglecting the local news field, it gives additionally a superior lot of holiday miscellany, handsomely illustrated, and including much matter of local historical value. Robed in modest chocolate brown the Christmas Star is a refreshing addition to the holiday literature.

—The quality of the literature supplied in The Daily Press alone in Plainfield is superior to that found in the ordinary newspaper, and equal to that of the best magazines. No better story has been printed during the current revival of Napoleon than "The Medal of Brigadier Gerard", recently completed in these columns. For that story of Conan Doyle's $1,000 was paid. The Christmas drama completed in this issue appeals to every heart. Other masterpieces are in preparation, and the Plainfield public may rest assured that the standard will not be lowered. The Press is proud of its record as Plainfield's cleanly edited home newspaper, and intends to maintain it.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A handsome painting by Col. Scott is admired in J. Hervey Doane's windows.

Miss Carrie Randolph of Central avenue is visiting relatives in Westerly, R. I.

David Rushmore of Cornell University has returned to his home on Grove street for the Christmas vacation.

Miss Mary Maurer of Raritan is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Hipp of Somerset street.

Miss Jennie M. Sutphen of Emily street left today for a visit of one week in Bridgeport.

Miss Ryder of East Front street has returned home from boarding school in Springfield, Mass., for the Christmas holidays.

Rev. D. Kendall Smith, wife and daughter, of West Winfield, N. Y., who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Smith, left yesterday for home.

Minor Smith, son of Garrett P. Smith, who has been traveling extensively through the West, is in town and will spend the holidays with his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hogan leave tonight for Syracuse, where they will spend three weeks, after which they will reside in New York until the latter part of March.

Miss Hattie King, of Delhi, N. Y., Miss Emma McLaury, and Messrs. Will and Gale McLaury of New Brunswick, were the guests of the Misses Blish of West Seventh street Thursday.

The Hall Boy, the bright monthly newspaper of Nazareth Hall, Nazareth, Pa., says: "Sergeant Ferdinand Lisignolo partook of the good things Thanksgiving brings while a member of the cheerful home circle in Plainfield, N. J."

The many friends of Mrs. William Miller of Somerville, formerly Miss Kittie Day of this city, will be grieved to know of her death which occurred in Somerville at 8 this morning. She has been ill for almost two weeks and leaves a husband and infant son. Her remains will be brought to this city tomorrow afternoon and she will be buried from her father's residence, 303 East Fourth street, Monday morning. Interment at St. Mary's cemetery. Decedent lived in this city until her marriage a year ago last October. She was a general favorite, and was loved by all who knew her.

Found Dead on the Track.

Sobie Smith, young brother of Mrs. M. J. Bumbaugh of 307 Monroe avenue, who left for Harrisburg, Pa., Wednesday morning after a short visit to his sister, was picked up near Palmyra early Thursday morning by Engineer Schuyler of the Pennsylvania road, who stopped his train when he felt the jar as he passed over the body. The remains were mangled beyond recognition, and the presence of large clots of blood under the body indicate that it had lain there several hours before Schuyler's train struck it.

Identification was established by cards found in the young man's pocket.

Mrs. Bumbaugh, with her two daughters, started for Harrisburg this morning.

At the regular meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last evening, the following nominations were made:

M. W—Theodore Mason.
C. C—Jacob Blimm, Jr.
V. C—Stephen Higgham.
P—Louis Mohring.
M. A—Charles Foster.
Trustee—C. M. Ulrich.

The election takes place next Friday evening.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. SUBMITTED A NEW BILL

Carlisle Has Displaced the Original Measure.

General Dissatisfaction Among Democratic Members Caused a Fear That Unchanged the Bill Could Not Pass Prepared by the Banking and Currency Committee.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Secretary Carlisle has withdrawn his famous currency bill. The democratic managers of the house were dissatisfied with it. Many were of the opinion that it could never pass, and many conferences were held upon the subject. The result was the withdrawal of the first bill and the substitution of a new one. The latter measure was prepared by Secretary Carlisle and the majority members of the committee on banking and currency. It was introduced in the house by chairman of the committee, Mr. Springer (dem., O.), who explained its provisions. Several hours were spent in discussing the sections. The principal speakers were Messrs. Pendleton dem., W. Va.), Russell (rep., Conn.), Sickles (dem., N. Y.), McLaurin (dem., S. C.) and Rawlins (dem., Utah). Mr. McLaurin made a vigorous attack upon the policy of the democratic party upon financial matters in the past two years and ventured the prediction that if this bill became law, at the next election the people would wipe out the last remaining vestige of the democratic party.

Gen. Sickles created much amusement. He said that, while not approving many of the bill's provisions, nor agreeing with the reasons advanced for its passage, and reserving to himself the right to vote upon it as he saw fit when the time for voting came, he stood with the committee on banking and currency in favor of the measure.

The new measure, as introduced by Mr. Springer, contains but few of the provisions of the old one. It first provides that banks must pay into the treasury guarantee fund of seventy-five per cent. of their capital. They can then obtain notes of $10 and above which must be first liens upon assets. All notes must be uniform in design. There are several thousand different styles now in use. All of these must be retired. The new notes are redeemable in gold, either at the banks or treasury.

That in lieu of all taxes the banks must pay to the treasurer a duty of one fourth of one per cent. annually upon all notes in circulation. To retire notes they must be turned over to the comptroller of the currency who will cancel them. The safety fund which will guard the United States against loss through banks failing will be raised by the one quarter of one per cent. tax. In case of failure the guarantee fund must be turned into the safety fund and so held until all notes are redeemed. The bill also says:

"That the secretary of the treasury may from time to time invest any money to the safety fund and the interest accruing thereon, shall be held as part of the said fund. Such bonds may be sold when necessary and the proceeds used for the redemption of the circulating notes of failed national banks.

"The secretary of the treasury may in his discretion, use from time to time the surplus revenue of the United States in the redemption and retirement of United States legal-tender notes, but the amount of such notes retired shall not in the aggregate exceed an amount equal to 70 per centum of the additional circulation taken out by national banks and state banks under the provision of this act."

The measure in conclusion provides that all circulating notes shall be free from taxation, and that stock holders shall be, with the United States, individually and collectively responsible for the redemption of notes.

The bill also dispenses with the provision compelling existing national banks to withdraw their bonds now on deposit, and take out circulation under the new system, and in lieu of that provision insert one permitting the banks to withdraw their bonds, if they see proper to do so, by depositing lawful money as now provided by law and then to take out circulation under the new system if they choose to do so.

Mr. Russell (rep., Conn.) opposed the bill, claiming it is partisan, and asop to the "Solid South." The other business in the house consisted of bills passed permitting laborers from foreign countries employed by exhibitors at the Atlanta (Ga.) exposition to come in.

A bill was also passed for the relief of Homestead settlers in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, who suffered loss of life or property in the forest fires of last season, by extending the time in which they may make final proof of location and permitting them under regulations to cut the burned timber on their lands.

A concurrent resolution was agreed to providing for the holiday recess of congress, extending from to-day to January 5. This passed by a vote of 172 to 12.

Bogus Bonds Sold Well.

London, Dec. 22.—The first meeting of the creditors of J. T. M. Pierce & Co., was held, and proofs were furnished of the sale of bogus Yankton, Dak., school bonds. The creditors proved the sale of bonds against the firm amounting to £120,000.

Ingalls' Senatorial Ambitions.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 22.—Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls before leaving for the east, declared he had no expectancy of being voted for for senator in the legislature this winter. He said his senatorial ambitions were not for 1895, but if he had any, for 1897.

CHINA TO SUE FOR PEACE

Chang Yin Huan En Route To Arrange Details.

Ministers Denby and Dun Were Instrumental in Bringing About the Negotiations—War May End with the New Year—Japan Expected To Make Heavy Demands.

Shanghai, Dec. 22.—It is reported on good authority that direct peace negotiations are proceeding between Pekin and Tokio.

The emperor has granted plenipotentiary powers to Chang Yin Huan, vice president of the tsung-li-yamen, to make peace with Japan. He will take his departure at once for Japan.

Word has been sent to Japan and it is understood that the Mikado will consent to end the war if a large indemnity is paid. The absolute freedom of Korea will also be demanded, and it is believed that Japan also has covetous eyes upon Formosa.

The Japanese fleet has left Port Arthur and steamed southward. Its destination is not known.

Washington, Dec. 22.—State department officials preserve the customary reticence as to their official knowledge of Chang Yin Huan's departure from Pekin to sue for peace, but it is well understood throughout the department, that Minister Denby has informed Secretary Gresham that the appointment had been made, and the impression exists that Minister Dun has questioned the Japanese government as to its readiness to receive Chang Yin Huan as peace ambassador and received a favorable reply.

In fact, it now transpires that correspondence between Mr. Denby and Mr. Dun caused the recall of Commissioner Detring, the Japanese demurring to receiving an official of secondary rank, and that the two American ministers have skillfully arranged for the dispatch and reception of the vice-president of the tsung-li-yamen.

State department officials are significantly confident of the success of the ambassador's mission, which they think will be accomplished by January 1.

It is said Chang Yin Huan would probably reach Tokio by Christmas. It is not imagined that any great delay would occur in arriving at a conclusion, as it is not believed that Japan would consent to receive the ambassador nor China to send him, unless the preliminaries had been satisfactorily arranged by the American representatives.

The new ambassador is very well known in Washington where he resided four years, commencing in April, 1886, as the Chinese minister. While here his name was printed on the diplomatic list as Chang Yen Hoon, but the correct spelling appears to be Chang Yin Huan.

CHURCHILL IS PARALYZED.

The Famous English Politician Is a Complete Physical Wreck.

London, Dec. 22.—Word has reached here from the east that Lord Randolph Churchill is paralyzed in one side and is unable to recognize his friends. His mother and sister, Lady Wimborne, have started for Marseilles, where he will arrive shortly, to meet him.

Constitutionally he is of an excitable temper and this has been overstrained by excessive cigarette smoking.

The want of outdoor exercise and lately the use of opiates also are given as causes of the wreck. It is impossible for him to continue in politics.

Drugged and Robbed.

Fall River, Mass., Dec. 22.—Henry Spencer, an Englishman, two weeks out from Liverpool, called at police headquarters and said he was robbed while on his way from Boston, in the smoking car of the Fall River Line train. He drank pretty freely of liquor given to him by a stranger who sat with him, and who, he says, poisoned him. He fell asleep in the car and when he arrived in this city he found that his gold watch and $900, were stolen.

Connecticut's School Fund.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 22.—Jeremiah Olney, commissioner of the Connecticut school fund, in his bi-annual report issued, gives the total amount of the school fund on September 30, 1894, as $2,011,768, and last year's revenue from investments as $129,299. The fund last year paid 75 cents per capita to 169,457 school-children in Connecticut.

Summoned the Whole Board.

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 22.—The whole board of public works have been summoned to appear before the supreme court. The members refused to produce their books in the case of Daniel Demoranville, who is suing the city.

Baseball Players Signed.

Brookville, Pa., Dec. 22.—Pitcher Whiteline, acting as agent for the Omaha Baseball club, has signed outfielder Slagle and Shortstop Miles for 1895. Both men are very promising players.

A Knife Blade in His Brain.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Alb Dennison drove his knife into head of William Booth and the e snapped off in his brain. Dennison escaped. Booth is still alive.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25c. per box. For sale by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

BURNS ON OUR PROBLEMS.

The English Labor Leader Discusses Financial and Social Evils.

St. Louis, Dec. 22.—John Burns, M. P., spoke here to 400 people at the exposition. In citing some of the causes that has produced the great and growing disparity between the rich and the poor he said:

"Under consumption, over production and the satanic selfishness of greedy monopoly has produced the vagrants and the Vanderbilts. The one is an enormity and the other a monstrosity.

"As the percentage of the share of the laborer in his product has decreased that of the capitalist has increased.

"Just now the currency conjurors are kicking up a dust to blind you to the situation at the same time increasing the great disparity."

As a remedy for this Mr. Burns suggested socialism pure and simple. He dealt out caustic criticism of American municipal government and thought socialism the panacea. Frequent and loud applause greeted him.

GOULDS DENY FRAUD.

They and Russell Sage Make Answer in a Big Law Suit.

New York, Dec. 22.—The answers of Russell Sage, George J. Gould, Edwin Gould, Howard Gould and Helen M. Gould to the complaint in the action brought against them in the supreme court by the Soldiers Orphans' Home, of St. Louis, to compel restitution of about $11,000,000 of trust funds, which, it is claimed, Sage and the late Jay Gould, as trustees of the consolidated mortgage bonds of the Kansas Pacific Railway company, appropriated to their own use, have been filed in the supreme court.

The answers of Mr. Sage and the Gould children are to a great extent similar. They deny that any of the stock which was issued to the trustees was fraudulently or unlawfully appropriated to their own use, and also deny all charges of misappropriation or misconduct in the administration of the trust estate.

MORE DUCKS SLAUGHTERED.

President Cleveland and Party Find Plenty of Game.

Georgetown, S. C., Dec. 22.—The tender Wistaria has dropped down to South Island where the president and party will hunt in the early morning on the lands of Gen. Alexander, returning to Georgetown in time for the reception to be given in the Winyah Indigo Society hall.

The hunting party has bagged ninety-six mallards, the president bringing down fifty of them with his own gun. The weather has been ideal for the past three days in the marshes.

The president continues in good health and spirits and is having an enjoyable time. The owners of the residences and stores on Front street have been hard at decorating the fronts of their buildings with innumerable flags.

NOT IN HER EYES.

Failure of a Remarkable Experiment Upon Murdered Mrs. Shearman.

Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 22.—The experiments made by B. F. Prudden and Fred B. Marsh, expert micro-photographers, of this city, on the eys of Mrs. Shearman, one of the women murdered near this city a few days ago, resulted in failure.

It was claimed that a microscopic examination of the dead woman's eyes by five responsible men revealed the image of the murderer photographed on the retina, and the object of the experiments which were continued all night were to produce by the micro-photography process the picture.

If the photograph was really upon the retina it was lost by the removal of the eye from the socket.

SIXTEEN WERE BITTEN.

While Suffering from Rabbies a Dog Creates a Panic in the Street.

Salem, N. J., Dec. 22.—A mad dog got loose in the streets here and bit sixteen persons.

Six of them afterwards went to New York for treatment at Pasteur's institute. The wounds of all of the injured were cauterized.

The dog was of New Foundland breed and belonged to Samuel Klein. The animal created a panic in the street.

Among those bitten were Professor Storie, principal of the high school; H. F. Sickles, member of city council; Dr. J. C. Robinson, James Ayres, E. S. Carter, Jacob Schrier, Charles Smith, Charles Bacon, Mrs. Miller, Lewis Neil and John Hart.

Oleomargarine Sale Stopped.

Baltimore, Dec. 22.—As a result of Judge Harlan's recent decision sustaining the Massachusetts law pertaining to the sale of oleomargarine, Armour & Co., who were perhaps the largest dealers in butterine in this state, have decided to discontinue handling the article in Maryland. All of the other wholesale dealers in oleomargarine have also closed.

Wants United States Ships.

Lisbon, Dec. 22.—The Portuguese government has decided to construct a new navy, and will expend £120,000 yearly for twenty years. Proposals will be invited from shipbuilders in the United States and other countries.

Will End the Steerage War.

New York, Dec. 22.—The great steamship companies centering here have decided to end the steerage rate war. A meeting of agents has been held and rates will be increased one hundred per cent. January 1.

Sentenced a German Spy.

Paris, Dec. 22.—Schoenbeck, a German spy, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for stealing written documents concerning the national defence. He was also sentenced to pay a fine of 5,000 francs.

Murdered an American.

Munich, Dec. 22.—Anton Besold, a native of Kitzingen, has been arrested at Dettelbach, Bavaria, charged with murdering Joseph Doell, a confectioner, in America.

A Soldier Shoots a Colonel.

Calcutta, Dec. 22.—Col. Money, of the Ninth Bengal lanciers, has been shot dead by a member of his own regiment.

Bismarck Leaves Varzin.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—Prince Bismarck has left Varzin for Friederichsruhe.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE In 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will begun in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degreeto that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the personal Recolections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 23 Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Carrying to others the Christmas joy.—Isa. ix, 2-7. (A missionary topic.)

Christ's birth into the world has always been an occasion for joy. Ever the assurance that He would come brought joy to God's people long before He actually came, as is proved by the testimony of the prophet Isaiah in the words before us, in which he describes the joy of his people because "unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulders." It was no less a great joy, but rather a more rapturous gladness, because it was the joy of harvest, and as men rejoice when they divide. It came as joy to the one who saw the fruit of the seed that had been sown amid tears, or as men rejoice when after severe toil and conflict they divide the spoil. But Christmas time is not only an occasion for receiving joy, but for distributing it. Indeed the joy of giving to others at this time is even greater than that of receiving gifts. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And what joy could we better carry to men upon this happy occasion than the true Christmas joy—the joy that comes to one who realizes that "unto him a Child is born;" that this divine Child is his Saviour and Redeemer.

1. Carrying the Christmas joy to members of our own families. This is the first natural obligation of the season. Our minds are first and principally occupied with what we shall give to those closest related to us. This is natural and just. So it should be in reference to spiritual things. We should be most concerned that our loved ones should be true followers of Christ, and by prayer for them, by a consistent Christian life in the home and anxious solicitation and judicious conversation, we should strive to lead them to Christ.

2. To friends and companions. Our gifts do not stop with our loved ones. All our friends and our companions come in for a share of our affection and our remembrance. So also we should strive to lead them to this higher Christmas joy. We may have responsibilities to them, and we should be interested in them.

3. To strangers. Nor do we confine our Christmas greetings and gifts to loved ones and friends. How often we remember those who have no joys upon this occasion, the poor and the unfortunate, who cannot celebrate the glorious occasion of Christ's birth. There are many also who have never even heard of Christ, and as we think of the joy the knowledge of His birth has brought to us, we should desire to have the whole world know of it, and should therefore do all that we can to spread the Christmas joy the world over.

Bible Readings.—Isa. lii, 7-10; Nah. i, 15; Math. iv, 16; v, 16; xxviii, 19, 20; Mark xvi, 15; Luke ii, 7-20; xxiv, 27, 48; John iii, 14-16; viii, 28; xv, 27; Acts i, 8; Rom. x, 14, 15; Col. i, 25-29; Rev. xxii, 17.

Burning Off the Ghost.

In China, after a person is dead, many of the people are in great fear of coming in contact with his ghost. A lady who went there as a medical missionary called one day on a patient and found that he had just departed this life. When the servants who were carrying the missionary's chair discovered this fact, they thought the spirit of the deceased had gone into her body and refused to take her any farther. Finally, consenting to go on, they terrified the lady by running her through a street fire for the purpose of burning off the ghost, as they afterward explained.—Selected.

Love Covers All.

Love is not only the supreme grace, but it is also the all inclusive grace. The apostle not only declares that it is the greatest of the three, but when he says "it hopeth all things and believeth all things" he shows us that it comprehends them all. So that to be perfect in love is of necessity, therefore, to be perfect in faith, too, and in hope. Perfect love is Christian perfection.—Christian Standard.

Neglecting Christ.

Men who neglect Christ and try to win heaven through mortalities are like sailors at sea in a storm, who pull, some at the bowsprit and some at the mainmast, but never touch the helm.—Beecher.

Christian Endeavor Jottings.

The Endeavor societies of Oakland, Cal., are carrying on a most active campaign in favor of Sunday closing and against the saloon.

The Endeavorers of Fort Worth are already at work on their preparations for the Texas state convention, which they are to entertain next spring. A larger attendance than ever before is anticipated.

Christian Endeavor meetings are regularly conducted in Chicago in seven different languages—German, Dutch, Norwegian, Chinese, Bohemian, Welsh and Swedish.

The wearing of a small bow of narrow purple ribbon has been adopted as the distinctive sign of one of the Kansas Mothers' societies of Christian Endeavor. This is in addition to the pin.

The first convention of Endeavorers in Ireland took place in Belfast recently. There are now 40 societies there, with a membership of about 1,600, and the leaders recently came to the conclusion that a further impetus might be given the movement by arranging for a convention of their own.

The "badge banner" is traveling north, south, east and west through the British isles and is doing much to tell the story of "Advance, Endeavor!"

No one could guess what conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has the largest number of Sunday schools. It is not in any part of the United States, but in north India. There are in this conference 518 Sunday schools, with a total attendance of 21,329.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Dec. 23. Spirituality the Topic.

SCRIPTURE READINGS.—Rom. i, 4, 8; I Cor. ii; Gal. v, 6.

The essential feature of Christianity, which distinguishes it from all other religions in the world, is the cultivation and development of the spiritual nature. Right sentiments toward oneself, his fellow men and God lie at the basis of all right character and action. The outward act is not so important as the inner life from which it springs and of which it is the expression. It is not enough to have the visible actions and words proper and kind. One can do this simply to deceive, and so the more effectually accomplish an evil and malicious design. Nor is it possible for one to long keep up a good outward appearance with ease and moral honesty unless the inner nature is right and pure.

Christ shows this principle of pure spirituality to lie at the basis of all the true character and to be fundamental in the gospel. This is the teaching of the sermon on the mount. He stated the facts in concisest form to the woman at the well of Sychar. "God is spirit, and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and truth." This is shown in Heb. x, 16, to have been the purpose of God in revealing Himself to mankind. "I will put My laws on their heart and upon their mind; also will I write them."

In accordance with this principle, Paul declares that it is a matter of indifference whether a Christian is circumcised or not. The necessary thing is "faith working through love." This is confiding trust in God, shown through acts of kindness and affection. This seems foolish to the worldly minded, or as the apostle puts it, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God," and he cannot know them, because they are spiritually judged, or examined. But one who is right minded or spiritual sees both sides and knows the insufficiency, the ungodlikeness of the one condition, while the joyousness, reasonableness and safety of the other are matters of real experience to him. He is conscious of being in spirit a child of God, knowing, feeling and doing as God Himself does, but ever with the difference which must exist between one who is finite and he who is infinite. The same power and presence of the Holy Spirit is promised him as sustained that one "who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh, who was declared the Son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection of the dead, even Jesus Christ our Lord."

Epworth Rectory.

This building, though of such interest to Methodists all over the world, is not now and never was owned by them. It belongs to the Established church of England, as does also the old parish church of which John Wesley's father was rector. None of the Wesley children was born in the house now standing, though much of the early life of John and Charles was passed here. The former rectory was burned when John was 6 years of age. His thrilling rescue from an upper window made an impression on his own mind, as well as upon that of his mother, which remained to the end of his long life. Visitors to the present house are usually pointed to a window on one end as the veritable scene of the occurrence, but this is an error, since that building was burned, and its foundations some short distance away have recently been discovered after having been long forgotten.

RECTORY, EPWORTH, ENGLAND.

Names.

In every case the name which has been adopted by the young people's society of a denomination covers some interesting bit of history. United Society of Christian Endeavor declares the purpose of the organization and serves as a constant reminder of the obligations of its members.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew is specially fitting as the title of a society whose members are pledged to hunt up the brother needing light and help and bring him to Christ. Young People's union will not only aid the Baptist young folks to remember their duty to each other, but expresses a fraternity with the young of other churches and also the unsaved. Epworth League is a name which will ever suggest to the world at large and Methodists in particular the importance of early religious training. Daily living after the New Testament pattern is its practical meaning.

A Good Resolution.

I will earnestly seek for myself and do what I can to help others attain the highest New Testament standard of experience and life. I will abstain from all those forms of worldly amusement forbidden by the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal church, and I will attend, so far as possible, the religious meetings of the chapter and the church and take some active part.—Epworth League Pledge.

Love.

When he (Boehmen) asserts that in some sort love is greater than God, his heart beats so high that the thumping against his leathern coat is audible across the centuries.—Emerson's "Representative Men."

Each sin destroys more Edens than our own.—Young's "Night Thoughts."

COTTOLENE IS MADE TO EAT

Made from clarified oil, expressed from Cotton Seed—as pure and golden as the Southern Sunshine which produces it.

For convenience in handling, there is added to this oil enough beef suet to make it a semi-solid.

The combination of these two pure natural products makes Cottolene, a shortening and cooking fat, with which in healthfulness, cleanliness, flavor and economy, nothing in the world can compare.

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL

To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the detriment of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

DANIEL AND THE PRESIDENT.

Disclosures of the Causes of Lamont's Popularity as Private Secretary.

Secretary of War Lamont was with Mr. Cleveland when he was Governor of New York, and he was a legislative correspondent before he became private secretary. When Mr. Cleveland came down from Buffalo to Albany to be installed as Governor he had not selected his private secretary and he asked Daniel Manning to suggest some young man who knew all about the Legislature and the State departments. Lamont worked upon Mr. Manning's newspaper and was one of his favorites. He recommended the young reporter and Mr. Cleveland told Manning to send Lamont to the Executive Mansion. That was way back in 1882, and no man since then has been closer to Mr. Cleveland than Lamont. Lamont went all through the State with Mr. Cleveland in 1884, and the information he picked up on this trip made him invaluable to the President when he came to Washington.

The politicians who visited the White House marveled at Lamont's memory for names and incidents, but no one suspected how the shrewd private secretary kept himself posted and prepared for surprises. Lamont kept a scrap-book at Albany and picked up newspaper clippings describing the Governor's reception at the various cities included in the campaign itinerary. All this came in handy when the New Yorkers hurried to Washington to hunt for patronage.

Lamont's method of receiving the callers was decidedly unique. He sat in the same room now occupied by Thurber. Suppose Mr. Smith, of Watertown, was the caller admitted. Mr. Lamont didn't know Mr. Smith from a side of sole leather, but he greeted him with the cordiality of an old acquaintance. Then the Lamont method was put into operation. It began in about this way:

"So you are Mr. Smith, of Watertown. I thought your face was familiar. Just take a seat until I can tell the President that you are here."

Off would go Lamont to the President's room, down would come the scrap book, and the Clippings describing the Governor's reception at Watertown would be hastily scanned. Mr. Smith may have been on the platform, and, of course, the local paper hadn't overlooked this fact. Possibly Mr. Smith had pinned a badge of the Democratic Roarers on the Governor's lapel or had handed the Governor a glass of water while he was speaking. Lamont would get all these facts and detail them to the President. Lamont would then go to the outer room and usher in Mr. Smith. Then the second step in the Lamont method would be taken by the President, who would greet Mr. Smith in about this style:

"Why, my old friend Smith, of Watertown, as I live. Sit down and make yourself at home. Do you know that I have the badge of the Democratic Roarers you pinned on me at the big meeting. Smith, do you know I would have choked that night if you hadn't been thoughtful enough to hand me that glass of water?"

Lamont had given the President the names of other men at that great Watertown meeting, and, of course, Mr. Cleveland would inquire all about Bill Brown and the rest. Then Smith would venture to suggest what he was after, and Lamont would duly note it. Smith would go home with a long story, and in many cases that was all Smith realized from his Washington trip. But the beautiful effect of the Lamont method was just this: Smith, if unsuccessful, was convinced that the President would have given him the office if some unforeseen circumstance hadn't prevented it. Lamont's scrap book contained the names of about every politician in the State of New York, and some information about the prominence of each one in his home district. That scrap book was the basis of Lamont's great reputation as a private secretary.

American Slang.

From the Mpwpka Gazette: We learn from the latest American mail that the beloved customs of our ancestors, which the missionary element has been so opposed to all along, are obtaining a foothold in the land of the Yankees. It appears that the republican and democratic tribes have had a fierce battle in which the latter were completely routed. We learn further that the victors were converting their foes into soup as fast as they can dispose of them.—Cincinnati Tribune.

SATURDAY NIGHT, DECEMBER 22

Extraordinary Entertainment-Wonders Never Before seen in Plainfield.

Mlle. Belladonna Agramonte, the Spanish Magnetic Wonder, Dr. Stamford, Professor Warren, Sig. Wilhelmina Vandoran—Wonderful Illusions, Startling Spiritual Manifestations, Hindoo Mysteries, Extraordinary Mental, Physical and Second-Sight Phenomena, Mind Reading, Feats of Dexterity, etc., etc.

The whole entertainment will be of extraordinary interest, and consists of novelties and wonders never before produced in this vicinity, and something no person should fail to witness. It will be instructive, amusing, wonderful and something to remember and talk about as long as you live.

Admission only 15c, giving everybody, including the children, an opportunity to attend and enjoy the novelties and wonders at this festive Christmas season.

The following is from the Pottsville Press of December 1:

Stamford's Modern Wonders—An Extraordinary Entertainment at the Opera House.

The closing entertainment given by Stamford's Modern Wonders Co. at the Opera House on Saturday evening was greeted by a crowded house, and was in many respects the most wonderful and enjoyable ever given in Pottsville, and gave the audience immense satisfaction. The spiritual materializing manifestations and slate writing tests were marvelous and astonished the committee upon the stage and the entire audience, as no possible means could be seen of performing the feats except by spirit power. Miss Agramonte's second sight or mind reading phenomena excelled anything ever seen here. As also her performance of the Hindoo Box Mystery. A similar illustration of this mystery was given by Kellar while here, but Miss Agramonte's feat far surpassed his, insomuch as she was securely tied up in a sack, put in the box, locked up, and the box more than securely bound by a hundred feet of rope. The lady when placed in the sack and box wore a beautiful fancy costume of black and gold—when she reappeared she was attired in a stunning pink silk dress garnished with yards of pale blue ribbon and lace. How she escaped from the bag and box and changed her costume in the short space of four minutes is now puzzling the people, as she certainly received no assistance. Her remarkable feats, including some high class illusions and feats of dexterity, were greeted with loud applause, which they deserved, as they certainly were very cleverly performed. Miss Agramonte is of Spanish extraction, of that rare type of castillian beauty so seldom seen, small round face—dark hair and large gray eyes—and is altogether a very pretty, charming little lady, and by her modest demeanor and ladylike ways she has made a host of friends here, in fact, many of our ladies seem to be quite envious of her accomplishments. Dr. Stamford and his company made a good impression, and they leave here with the best wishes of everybody. They have done all they advertised to do, and had large audiences each night.

—Special music by a double quartette choir, and a special Christmas sermon by Pastor Schenck will be features at the morning service in Trinity Reformed Church tomorrow. In the evening a bountiful Christmas service, entitled "The King's Messenger" will be rendered eleven young women of the Sunday-school.

—Yesterday afternoon White's dry goods delivery wagon collided with Dr. W. H. Murray, unseating him from his bicycle. As both were going slowly no injury was done and the physician picked himself up and continued on his way.

INTERESTING & VALUABLE

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS A SUFFERER.

Mrs. Lizzie C. Wilt's Grateful Account of Her Recovery—A Simple Remedy.

From Advance Argus, Greenville, Mercer Co., Pa.

With feelings of uncertainty Mrs. Wilt began the use of Dr Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, but today it has no better friend than she. Mrs. Wilt is well known, for she has livsd for years within a few miles of Greenville. The following letter, addressed to Dr. Kennedy, will make interesting reading for many a sick person.

DEAR SIR—For 25 years I have been troubled with sick and nervous headaches, so bad that much of the time I was unable to do anything, for I would be so weak and prostrated after the severe pain was gone. I tried everything I could hear of, but they all failed to do me any lasting good. Last spring my son was using Favorite Remedy, and he insisted on my trying it. I did so, and used less than a bottle, and found it was just the medicine I needed, for I have not had a headache since

It also benefited me in other ways, for my health was poor, and it acted as a tonic. I hope this letter will reach the eye of some poor sufferer, for I know if they will only try Favorite Remedy they will be thankful for it. Yours truly, Mrs. Lizzie C. Wilt, Greenville, Penna."

Such a mark of commendation coming from one of our residents should place in the minds of all the great value of this medicine.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is pronounced by the majority of physicians as the superior of all blood medicines and nerve restorers. It cures rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous and bilious headaches, nervous prostration, and the tired feeling resulting therefrom. It is a specific for scrofula, erysipelas, dyspepsia and for the troubles peculiar to the female system.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be purchased at $1 a bottle or six bottles for $5.

THE THUMB THAT TOLD.

A Christmas Sketch

WALTER IRVING CLARKE.

The market across the street was a sight of poultry. The old man looked at the plump white fowls and sighed; the young man, gazing in the same direction sighed more heavily; but he saw not the chickens nor the turkeys. He saw a girl gowned in blue, and her face beamed towards him with a roseate smile. The girl and her smile flitted past, but he sat there seeing them.

When it grew dark he roused and went to his lodging. The old man was still viewing the crowd of Christmas buyers.

The old man remembered the first Christmas turkey he had bought, and each succeeding. How well his young wife had served them, and how happy was that dinner, at which the tiny occupant of a high chair became their autocrat and commanded for the wishbone.

In those days the old man had been the leading lawyer in the county. He could have been a judge, but declined. He had determined that his son, too, should be a lawyer and win a glory even greater than his own, a glory which was no glory equal to the judgeship.

The boy was vigorous of body, active of mind. He had a broad, flat thumb, which his father used to say was meant to set seals. Large, forcible, such keenness and largeness were meant for a judge; that thumb was meant to rule.

How often had he toyed with that thumb, looking at the big, pressing it down on a sheet of paper, showing its size and shape, watching its grasp emitting in its power. That was in boyhood, in youthhood, it dominated the household which he became a head. Its owner would be a potentate.

Then came the father's dreams. But the boy, instead of becoming a disaster. Time came when it was [illegible] will again [illegible] and the words ringing in his ears, [illegible] lights surging through his head. The old home had been empty Christmas since that day, for the boy was a wanderer, and there was a mound in the churchyard and the old man's chair was the only one filled at table.

He left with bitterness the sight of hopes he had built for years ahead of that morrow when it [illegible] other than his meant [illegible] happiness.

The thought came that he might invite Brentleford, but he feared the young man would [illegible] asked to relieve the loneliness of the old man's forsaken boarding [illegible] be that he had already made engagement at some other's table. The frequent recognitions between the long-gowned girl and the blue-eyed clerk had not been lost on the veteran lawyer.

Brentleford had been in Camertown some months. He had come there a stranger, and had gone direct to Kenned Moodley's office. The old man was busy among his documents, and had been wishing for younger eyes and a swifter pen, when Brentleford stood before him and said:

"I am a young man, homeless, nameless, though the son of an honored father. I am tired of my uselessness, and the law is my ambition. I offer myself to you."

Installed as a clerk, Brentleford became a fixture. The old man grew to depend on him as a helper, to love him as a companion.

And another had grown to love him—the girl in the blue gown.

She too was in the law, though nominally himable typewriter for Sheaf & Co. She had the great inward ambition of becoming a member of the Bar. Brentleford found out her secret, and was a masterly aid in her studies.

They knew of their love, one for another, and when he first told his story, and received a return of confidence, they had discussed the matter seriously, much as law partners reviewing the elements of a case and deciding on a line of policy.

They were never to marry.

How could they and retain their professional relationship?

For they had agreed that when she was admitted, and he was elevated from mere local attorneyship to practice in the higher courts, they would be partners at law—and law only.

On this Christmas Eve they met in the public library. She sat at an open book, when his shadow darkened her page. Looking up, her welcoming smile changed to solicitude as she noticed his anxious face. She put on her gloves, and they walked out together.

"You look so solemn!" she exclaimed. "Have you come to tell me there is no hope of my passing the examinations?"

"You are perfect in your preparations," he replied. "You will receive your parchment with honors. You will go on to success after success."

She patted her palms together in feminine glee.

"I shall be proud," she said, "to represent my sex before the juries and the judges. But," she added pensively, "remember you are to be my most wise counsel."

"I see a wide career before you," he responded. "It is one continual triumph. But in your success I am not to share."

The light that had shone in her eyes was dimmed a shade.

"If you want to tease me," she said, "it would not be so cruel. But if in earnest, what does it mean?"

"I mean, my Little Bluebird, that I love you, so I want you for my mate. But you have a career before you, dear as the life it will be. I have an ugly cross past whose [illegible] you must not share. It would [illegible] your ardor, check your progress. It was as though I were the spirit of the [illegible] both, which for the Bluebird meant [illegible]

"The Bluebird," she said gently, "knows no death more [illegible] than the desolation of a forsaken nest. She would suffer [illegible] great a disaster [illegible] as [illegible] her [illegible] than [illegible] separation [illegible]

"You are a woman [illegible]" he answered. "But I shall not [illegible] your [illegible] [illegible] and my [illegible] me, a [illegible] night, [illegible] of our [illegible] Merry [illegible] the anniversary of our [illegible]

"Something [illegible] has been in line," said the girl, "that this sudden [illegible] me. How can I do without you? Anne, I am weak and helpless."

"You have your own talents, your own strength," he answered. "You will succeed—better, far better, with me away.

"When we found we loved one another," he continued, "we agreed to a cooperation which should afford us comradeship as well as professional achievement. As a partner you could overlook the stain on my past. As a wife you would suffer the insult of my dishonor. I would be robbing you of your name, and giving you none in return.

"I thought I was content with our agreement, but I have undeceived myself. Each day as you flitted past our dingy office and the radiance of your celestial sunshine lighted up the room which the earthly sunlight never reaches, I have come more and more to know the truth. I love you, too well to be your husband unless I can clear my life of its blemish. Of this I am hopeless; and I go, to-night, I say good by."

They were now in front of her home, and paused.

"Good by," he repeated, holding out his hands.

She held them longingly.

"No, not good by," she said. "Instead, good-night."

The door shut between them.

He stood a moment irresolute, and then strode down the street.

She sobbed out her heart in her mother's lap.

At the office he stopped. His favorite book was there, and a thumb even better she had written him. He must get them and leave a parting message, for his employer.

He found the old man still seated in his chair by the window. He had fallen asleep.

Kneeling by his side, he stroked the wrinkled brow.

"Dear old man," he softly sighed, "I shall never see you again. When you have known the truth, and stored your heart against me, or whether my image had died out together out of your soul, I shall never know. I only know that I came to you ready to be whatever you wished, and found no place but that of friendship. I have done the work you required, you have paid me for it. For whatever kindness you have bestowed I am grateful. For whatever of sorrow I have caused, I pray forgiveness."

The old man stirred in his sleep, and nervously toyed in his sleep with the young man's hands. He was dreaming of the flaxen-haired baby whose broad flat thumbs he had played with years ago.

He awoke with a start, and his grasp was firm on the young man's thumb, and his yearning eyes pierced his soul.

With a quick cry of recognition he sprang into his arms.

"Son!"

"Father!"

Each word was a song of joy.

And a little later Love's serenade revived the fabled spirit of the Bluebird, as she heard her lover say:

"I have found my old place in my father's heart. He has given me back my name and honor, and I come to offer them to you."

The old man's Christmas dinner was not a lonely meal. For in this, as in other households, it was the feast of reunion and happiness. The Bluebird was there, and had her parchment. However, it was not the legal document of attorneyship, it was the certificate of that nobler profession, wifehood.

And after dinner the old man had a nap, and he and [illegible] out the days to come, and dreamed [illegible] his son was judge.

But best [illegible] through the dream was the [illegible] song of the Bluebird.

For that was real.

JAPAN'S EMPRES

Her Great Interest in the Cause of Woman's Enlightenment.

The Empress of Japan is a fragile but beautiful little woman, and has done a noble work for her people. She loves them as a mother loves the babes at her knee. Her whole life has been given to good works.

She is highly educated. She did what no empress in the world's history has done. Out of her own funds she established free schools for girls of the Empire. She thereby acquired a new title to the respect and gratitude of the civilized world.

Then, too, she erected a magnificent college for women. It is a beautiful building, almost a palace, and stands near the famous Temple of Confucius in Tokio. The empress presided in her sweet, modest, womanly way and made an address, full of heart and womanly sympathy with the women of her nation, for whom she desired higher education and privileges.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

A PICTURE FOR WOMEN'S EYES,

With the Hope That It May Do Some of Them Good.

Today there is the happy mother, healthy boys and girls, sunshine, music, amusements, the church, the romp and the ramble, the country and seashore. What's everhealthy minds in healthy bodies may desire, that they may have, and mother is ever ready to join with them in the pleasure and fun.

Years come and go. The boys and girls grow up to men and women. Mother's hair is turning white; her steps are not so elastic, her spirits flag; there is an uneasy look in her dear eyes.

What can be the matter with mother?

She is approaching the most important crisis of her life, "the change of life." Those watchful eyes detect the evidences. Years bring this change demanded by nature. What preparation have you made to carry the brave mother safely through it?

Within a comparatively short time the issue will be decided. Either nature fulfilling the law in proper, healthful manner, or—there is the wreck of a noble woman for you to grieve over.

There is salvation in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will carry the mother safely through the inevitable change in her physical life.

All reputable druggists keep for you this grand remedy. See that "mother" has it, for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was won from the heights of medical science by a woman for all women nearing the change of life.

Astounding Tales Concerning New York's Police.

Captain Maxmillian Schmittberger Gives Details of Bribery, Extortion and Disreputable Dealing by High Officials—Martin Made Him Apologize for Raiding a Resort.

New York, Dec. 22.—As a result of the disclosures made in Captain Schmittberger's confession before the Lexow committee there is no doubt but that most of the higher police officials will have to stand trial for bribery. Mr. Goff and District Attorney Fellows have held a consultation and decided to place all of the evidence before the grand jury.

The testimony of Captain Schmittberger was the most sensational adduced so far before the committee. He swore that he had collected money from all sorts of disreputable resorts and that he had paid most of it to Inspectors Williams and McAvoy and ex-Inspector Steers. He had been compelled by Commissioner Martin to apologize to Sadie West, the keeper of a disreputable resort, for raiding her place. Citizens had complained of the place.

The witness also said that a man named Proctor wanted to open a gambling house in his precinct. Proctor went to him with a letter from Commissioner Sheehan asking him to give Proctor what he wanted. A man called Maynard, a paymaster of the aqueduct commission, was to be Proctor's partner.

"Proctor was introduced to me as a respectable man by Commissioner Sheehan," said he, "I visited Commissioner Sheehan and he compelled me to allow the gambling house to open."

Every species of known corruption and bribery was revealed by Schmittberger. He, however, said he had paid nothing for his position and said he believed Commissioner Voorhis honest.

Regarding the Empire, the Silver Grill, the Cremorne and other infamous tenderloin resorts of the past Mr. Goff asked:

"Was it understood that all these places were under police protection?"

"Yes, sir."

"And to whom was the protection money paid?"

"To Captain Williams."

The pent up excitement of the crowd broke out in one long "Ah-h!" which Mr. Lexow was too tender hearted to suppress.

Schmittberger told of his transfer to the steamboat squad. Detective Vail gave him the names of the men who paid the police and suggested that he continue the blackmail.

"I told him," said Schmittberger," at first that I didn't want to do that, and he said I'd be a —— fool if I didn't. He brought me about $180 a month and I gave him 20 per cent. of it."

"The captains understand that they are to make money whereever they can."

"Once I had a talk with Inspector Steers. He said he didn't expect anything from the precinct, as there was nothing in it."

The foreign liquor dealers then came up and Mr. Goff asked:

"What about the Bohemian liquor dealers?"

"There was an association of that name then. They paid $80 a month, I believe. Gannon collected it and got 20 per cent. I took the rest."

"Did you give up any of your 80 per cent?"

"I did."

"To whom?"

"Inspector Williams."

In April, 1892, the witness said he was transferred to the East Eighty-eight street station in the general "shake up." That was just after Byrnes was made superintendent, and he was there from April to December of the same year.

"Did you collect any money there?"

"Yes; from policy shops and pool rooms. I collected about $800 a month from these places. There were ten policy shops and three pool rooms. The latter were in Eighty-sixth street, and 106th street and Third avenue. Each paid $100 a month."

Most of this went to Inspector Williams and Police Commissioner Sheehan.

"Now," said Mr. Goff, straightening himself, "did you ever get any orders outside of the actual police officials regarding the protection of any disorderly houses in that precinct?"

"I did."

"Who from?"

"President Martin."

Everybody jumped, and one man whistled in his amazement.

"He called me down to see him," said the witness, "and said: 'You might let the houses in Forty-sixth street, between Sixth avenue and Broadway, remain until the school is built. Then you will have to put them out.'"

He then told of how Martin had made him apologize to the disreputable woman West.

Schmittberger related how he had paid hundreds of dollars to Inspector McAvoy, and of a certain disreputable house in the Twenty-second precinct which could not be raided because it was patronized by police justices. He said that Captain Martin had paid Williams $1,600 to secure a sergeantship and later gave McClave $14,000 for his captaincy. The committee then adjourned until next Wednesday.

Fire Destroys a Rope Mill.

Norwich, Conn., Dec. 22.—Murlbut's rope mill at Monteville has been totally destroyed by fire. The mill had just started up, after an idleness of some weeks. A defective flue caused the fire. Twenty hands are thrown out of employment.

Forsythe Elected President.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 22.—James Forsythe, of Oswego, N. Y., was elected president of the American Poultry association at its annual meeting held here.

The Marblehead's Long Cruise.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Secretary Herbert in a few days will send the Marblehead on a three year's cruise around the world.

MAY FORCE HIS WAY.

Minister Terrell Is To Investigate the Armenian Outrages.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The latest advices from Minister Terrell at Constantinople to the state department indicates that the Potre is still firm in its opposition to the proposed inquiry to be made into the Armenian outrages by him, under the conditions prescribed by the president. In undertaking the inquiry in spite of the refusal of the Porte to sanction his mission, he will be at great personal risk.

It would be extremely unsafe for him to venture into the disturbed country without an armed escort, and the Porte seems disinclined to furnish such an escort.

It is probable that the United States minister will persist in his efforts to induce the Porte to accede to this request, and, if it should be finally refused, will still undertake the inquiry with which he is charged, and the Turkish government will be held responsible for his safety.

Constantinople, Dec. 22.—United States Minister Terrell has had a long interview with the grand vizier, Gen. Djevad Pasha, during which the question of sending an American delegate with the Turkish commission appointed to inquire into the reported outrages in Armenia is stated to have been definitely settled.

BUSINESS IS QUIET.

Bradstreet's Report Gives Facts To Prove That It Is Dull.

New York, Dec. 22.—Bradstreet's report on the state of trade says:

"The volume of general trade continues small, as expected from evidences of shrinkage within the month. Unusually mild, unreasonable weather continues to check distribution of coal, heavy clothing, shoes and rubber goods northwest, south and throughout the central west and eastern states, although at larger cities the favorable reports as to holiday goods and specialties at retail are for the great part the outcome of bright, mild weather.

"The year of 1894 naturally brings low quotations for staples and securities a characteristic of years following those marked by panics. Lowest prices on record are or recently have been made for iron and steel, wheat and Indian corn, and cotton and wool.

"Improvement in prices is recorded in only a few leading lines, wheat, copper and lower grades of shoes, which have long sold at depressed figures."

PERJURY IS COSTLY.

Frau Schnutz May Join Her Lover in His Prison.

Btrlin, Dec. 22.—The conviction and condemnation of Deputy Lewis in Hanover for having perjured himself in denying his relations with Frau Schnutz in the course of his testimony in the trial of the action of Herr Schnutz against his wife for divorce, has been followed by the arrest of Frau Schnutz on a charge of perjury.

During her examination which lasted four days, Frau Schnutz repeatedly denied that she had been intimate with Lewis, but finally admitted her guilt, whereupon the co-respondent, Lewis, who had also denied the charge of intimacy with the woman, was arrested and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. It is probable that Frau Schnutz will also be imprisoned.

POLITICIANS' DAY ENDED.

Ex-Speaker Reed Says a Good Word for the Business Man.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22.—Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed was the orator at the commencement of the Pierce Business college. During his speech he said:

"Perhaps in no country in the world have the lawyers and politicians had such sway as in the United States. But they are slowly, but surely, giving way to another class. The business men are taking their turn, and are possessing the earth. And this is for the good of the earth.

"To the politicians and lawyers we owe much. I hesitate to say this, but because I am afraid you won't. They gave us fixed rules for the rights of property and they established the great boundaries of civil liberty."

Robbers Thwarted by a Woman.

Lawrence, Kan., Dec. 22.—An attempt was made to rob the railroad station at Bonner Springs between Lawrence and Kansas City. The office was in charge of Miss Annie Nesbitt, night operator. The robbers demanded money and when refused the robbers struck her over the head with a revolver but fled without securing any plunder. Miss Nesbitt was very roughly handled.

Blizzard in Nebraska.

Alliance, Neb., Dec. 22.—The snow for which Nebraska farmers have been praying for a month, is falling all over Western Nebraska. The storm possess all the features of a blizzard, with the exception that the weather is very mild. A heavy snow fall at this time, is absolutely the life of winter in Nebraska and South Dakota.

Chinaman Convicted of Murder.

Albany, Dec. 22.—The jury in the case of Chu Fong, charged with the murder of Chu Hing, brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree. Chu Hing was shot in his laundry, 103½ South Pearl street, on August 30. The was tried before Justice Landon in the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The Pain Killer Took His Life.

Amesbury, Mass., Dec. 22.—George Sargent, aged nineteen, died at Merrimac from paralysis of the heart, caused by asphyxiation. He took vegetable vapor for the purpose of having two teeth extracted, and failed to recover. No blame is attached to the dentist.

The Vatican Relics in Rome.

Naples, Dec. 22.—Commander Newell, of the United States cruiser Detroit, accompanied by four of his officers and nine sailors, will go to Rome and deliver the Vatican relics.

Earthquakes in Greece.

Athens, Dec. 22.—Violent earthquakes, accompanied with loud rumblings, shook Atalanti and the surrounding district.

BENEATH A TIDAL WAVE

Thousands Drowned in a Central American City.

Santa Maria Has Been Inundated and Nearly Destroyed by a Furious Upheaval of the Sea—The Town of Garia Competely Wiped Out of Existence and 700 Drowned.

Panama, Dec. 22.—Passengers arriving here bring news to the effect that Santa Maria, the capital of the Department of Magdalena, a city of some 10,000 inhabitants, has been inundated by the overflowing of the banks of the River Manzanares, and by a tidal wave which swept over the city on the 7th inst., washing away scores of houses and drowning hundreds of people.

Hemmed in by the slowly but gradually rising waters of the Manzanares on one hand and the mountainous waves of the Caribbean, dashing with violent fury into the town, the inhabitants were thrown into the greatest consternation, some taking refuge in the church steeples and highest buildings in the town, while others took to the mountains.

The number of persons that have perished in the disaster or number of buildings destroyed, cannot yet be ascertained.

The small town of Garia nearby completely disappeared as also 714 did of its inhabitants.

At the time of the sailing of the steamer the tempest had somewhat subsided, but it was impossible to get about the streets except in boats.

The towns are both isolated, and information is hard to obtain. The government has sent a ship of war to the scene to aid the people.

Advices from Chili state that an earthquake in Valparaiso did much damage. It was short but very severe.

There was a great feast going on in the church of the Recoleta Dominica in Valparaiso at the time, and when the building began to tremble, a panic ensued amongst the congregation, and the people rushed to the doors. Many people were injured. Reports throughout northern Chili state that great damage was done. Ten houses were demolished in Valparaiso.

ONLY HIS DEBTS IN SIGHT.

Broker Swain Missing with Liabilities Amounting to $50,000.

Boston, Dec. 22.—Paul M. Swain, a well known business man, who has for years been engaged in the merchandise brokerage business in New York, Providence and this city, is missing.

He left his office on the morning of Dec. 11 to settle some financial obligation with a large firm in this city and has not yet returned.

It is now known that heavy losses had made it impossible for him to meet this indebtedness, and instead of keeping the appointment with his creditors Mr. Swain went to New York, where all trace of him is lost. The liabilities, it is claimed, will reach nearly $50,000, and the assets are small, only a few thousand dollars at the most.

TO FREE IRISH PRISONERS.

Irishmen in British Prisons for Dynamiting Are To Be Released.

Liverpool, Dec. 22.—Arrangements have been concluded between the Redmondites and the government for the release of certain of the prisoners confined for participation in the dynamite outrages.

It says that among those who will be released is John Daly. The amnesty association decided, in April last, to nominate Daly to stand for election to parliament as representative of the city of Limerick, and at a convention held in that city on May 23, the mayor presiding, it was unanimously resolved to nominate Daly for parliament at the next general election.

New York Bankers Meet.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Group No. 1 of the New York State Bankers' association representing the counties of Erie, Niagara, Wyoming, Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Orleans and Genesee, held its second quarterly meeting in this city. By-laws were adopted, five standing committees appointed and the executive committe reported progress in its consideration of the Baltimore plan for reformation of the currency.

The G. A. R. in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 22.—Statistics of the grand army of the republic in Connecticut, just given out, show that there are seventy-two posts in the state and the total membership is approximately 6,500. The mortality last year was the largest on record.

Mayor Willetts Returns.

Rome, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Samuel Willetts, mayor of this city and an alleged embezzler of $7,000 belonging to the Central National bank has returned and given himself up.

Murderer Christie Sentenced.

Kalispell, Mont., Dec. 22.—Calvin J. Christie, alias Charles J. Black, suffered the death penalty here for the murder in April last of Mrs. Lena Cunningham.

MR. RUNKLES' COURTSHIP.

Why Mrs. Runkles Is "Rather Sharp on Him" at Times.

"No, I can't say as I was married to my husband, Mr. Runkles, through just what you folks nowadays would call love. It came mostly about in this way: When I was a girl about sixteen Mr. Runkles took a strong hankerin' after me and he did considerable escortin' with me, goin' to several places, an' bein' seen there with him it got out that we was keepin' company, an' Mr. Runkles was a mighty strong man and no one could come up to him in fist fightin', and the other fellers were feared of him, owin' to his brags if another feller started goin' with me he' pull him limb from limb. Now, there was a lot of nice, slick fellers that took a hankerin' after me, but they was feard of Mr. Runkles and you could not get one of them to go near me, much less start keepin' company.

"All this went mighty hard on me, for I was a girl of no very poor appearances, and when it came to dancin' and smart back talk not a girl could come near up to me. I can't say as Mr. Runkles was the kind of man that I could take a strong hankerin' after. He was too big and what you might call 'raw-boned' in them days. He was not given to talk at all and I had just to keep quiet when he was keepin' company, if that could be called keepin' company. Things went on in this way and I didn't see any things tellin' of a change. I knew Mr. Runkles was determined-like and nothin' would happen unless some of the fellers that had a hankerin' after me would stand up fighty and not be feard of Mr. Runkles.

"Thar was one feller I shall never forget, and he was a nice feller, the nicest one of them all; he was a feller named Dave Harris, and I did like Dave, and Dave did like me; but Dave had not the spirit of fightin' in him and he would have nothin' to do with me, owin' to Mr. Runkles' intentions in that line. At last I speaks up to him and says: 'Mr. Harris, why don't you come and see me no more?' and he says back to me: 'I'd like to awfully, Miss Briggs, but, don't you know, I kinder hate to face the wrath of Mr. Runkles.' And then I tell him not to mind Mr. Runkles, but he would not look at the case in that way. 'You know I ain't no good at fist-fightin',' he said, 'but you know I think the world and all of you.' I says to him: 'Be a man, Dave Harris, and make a stand for your rights and my own as American citizens to do our own free will,' but Dave would say to everything I said: 'You know I ain't no good fist-fightin'.'

"Then I got very proud-like and had nothin' to say to him. I was gettin' well up in twenties, and things did look serious to me—my looks was fadin' and Mr. Runkles showed no signs of yieldin.' I was so tired of trying to hold out, I saw no fellers would come near me, owin' to their bein' feard of Mr. Runkles. I came to terms and we was married, and that is the reason that I am rather sharp on Mr. Runkles at times, as you may have noticed."—Kate Field's Washington.

A NOVEL DEFENSE.

The Clever Escape of Two City Girls from a Ferocious Bull.

Two city-bred young ladies, Maud and Molly, were spending their summer in a village where their chief "playground," as they said, was a slope of land behind the house, separated by a board fence from a rough pasture. For this was a village by courtesy only; the houses were "scattering." One afternoon the young ladies mounted their slope, spread out their shawl and lay down at ease. Maud read aloud for a time, and then they succumbed to sleepiness and lay dozing, their hats over their eyes. The rest of the story can best be told in Molly's own words.

"I think I must have been sound asleep," she said, "for I woke with a very confused feeling that a hot wind was blowing over my face. I opened my eyes. A black figure close beside me seemed to shut out all the sun. A huge, shaggy-horned head looked down upon me. It was that of John Thurlow's bull, the terror of the town. He had escaped from the pasture into this field.

"I hadn't time to be frightened. I think what chiefly impressed me was his tremendous size, for as I lay there on my back he loomed above me like a small mountain. His head seemed enormous. As I opened my eyes he gave, almost in my very face, a really terrible bellow, and I noted that the forefoot nearest me had already pawed a considerable hole in the ground.

"Now, I had always understood from stories that a bull's attention should be diverted from attack by throwing something over his head. I could not throw the shawl, for we were lying on it, but, perhaps as much to my surprise as his lordship's, I tore the wide leghorn hat from Maud's hands, for she had taken it off at sound of the bellow—and with one desperate effort threw it on that huge head and pulled it down over his eyes.

"Almost with the same movement I seized Maud's hand, and we went tumbling down the slope. You may be sure we did not waste time in looking behind us, but when we did reach the kitchen steps, what do you think we saw?

"A bull decidedly out of temper with the world, plunging about on the slope and trying to rid himself of a wide leghorn hat through which one of his horns stuck firmly. A streamer of white mull hung over his face, and waved like a banner with every plunge.

"It was worth the fright to have gained such a rich addition to the few absolutely comic pictures that hang on memory's wall."—Youth's Companion.

THE first English dictionary contained only nouns and verbs, the nouns in one column and the verbs in another.

"The great advantage a Boston girl has over us," sighed Miss Wellalong, laying aside the volume she was reading and taking up one with larger print, "is that the world never looks upon her spectacles as a sign that she is growing old."—Chicago Tribune.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

THE VETERAN

A DRAMA OF THE STREET

BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

II.

TIME—December a year later.

SCENE—The same street, the same shop. The show window is superbly decorated. Its side and top are hung with dainty little articles of infants' and children's wear, all of white, exquisitely trimmed with costly lace. Holiday gifts for very young children are scattered among the baby clothes. The rear and floor of the window are given up to a solemn spectacular effect. There is a grotto; and a manger rudely carved in rock. Oxen are chewing their hay on one side. On the other kneel the three Magi in gorgeous turbans and draperies; they present myrrh, frankincense and gold. Humble Jewish figures—a man and a woman—lean over the manger. The woman is young and fair. In the manger lies a sleeping babe. A powerful electric jet, concealed below, throws a glory upon the face and head of the child. All the light in the window comes from this jet. A crowd is collected before the window. The people talk softly. Rude men and delicate ladies stand side by side. Not an oath is heard nor a peevish exclamation. Many people look silently into the window.

The street player comes to his stand upon the curb-stone. His wife is not beside him.

A little girl leads him by the hand. She is decently dressed and of a modest appearance. The player wears a woolen jacket of the kind called cardigan beneath his thin coat. He looks less cold than formerly; but his face wears an expression of deep anxiety. He speaks.

Henry Holt—Molly, did you say mother seemed quite bright, when you went back, after you left me on that corner to wait for you? She's been so long getting up! It worries me.

Molly—As bright as silver, father! She told me to tell you. She said she was sure she'd be out again by Christmas. Play something jolly, father!

Henry plays and sings:

Oh, though the world turn a cold shoulder,
I'll take up my march and I'll fight.
For wife and for home and for children—
They need me from morning till night.
For wife and for home and for babies—
They love me from morning to night.

Molly—Isn't that a new song, father?

Henry—Yes. I composed it last week, after those things came from the lady. I felt so encouraged. I never can write poetry when I'm down.

Molly—So it's one of your own poems, father?

Henry—Yes, it's one of mine.

Molly (proudly)—It is a pretty poem! Sing it again, father.

Henry (sings)—

"Oh, the wife, and the home, and the babies!
I love them from morning till night."

Molly (in an undertone)—Mother said it was just as well that new baby died. But she cried when she said so.

Henry (dully)—Yes, that's the worst of such things.

Molly—But it's been so much easier, since we had the lady, father.

Henry—God bless her!

Molly (quaintly)—Yes, I should think He'd enjoy that.

Henry plays:

God rest ye merry gentlemen,
Let nothing you dismay.
For Jesus Christ our Saviour—

Molly (interrupting softly)—Father, the people at the window are turning this way. They're looking at us. I see through the crowd of 'em. Oh, father! There's a baby Christ in the window!

The Street Player (with a little—Is there, Molly?

Molly (plaintively)—I wish you could see him, father!

Henry (slowly turning his blank eyes toward the window)—It seems as if I did, Molly. (He removes his faded hat, and bends his uncovered head before the window. Several men in the crowd seeing the action of the blind player, do the same.)

Molly—It's such a pretty little Jesus, father! And there's presents hung round over His head. I wonder if He'll get any. Do you s'pose the lady will send us any more come this Christmas?

Father (beginning to play restlessly)—I guess likely, Molly. But I'd rather get 'em myself. (He plays eagerly.)

For Jesus Christ our Saviour—

Molly—Father! Father! Look, look!

Henry—Molly, be still! I shan't earn you a supper if you go on like this. (Sternly) I shall lose my reputation as a musician, Molly! (To himself) She says, look, look! Lord, if I could look! I never see the child lose her wits so before.

Molly—Father, father! It's the lady! Here is the lady!

Henry Holt (fretfully)—I wish I could see her—once.

The lady advances rapidly. The crowd parts before her. She speaks a word here and there to right and left, as she comes through. She looks agitated and happy. Her delicate face has a beautiful expression. She comes up to the street player and lays her hand upon his arm. She speaks:

"Mr. Holt, don't be too much disappointed—"

Henry (patiently)—I've lived too long to be disappointed. That's for young folks.

Lady—If it shouldn't come out as I hope—but I do hope. And the senator says I may hope. In fact he writes—here is the letter—that he is just as good as sure.

The Veteran (flushing pitifully)—Oh, you don't mean the pension.

Lady—Yes. I mean the pension—the full pension. All that belongs to you—that part of what the country owes to you. That part of the big, deep, terrible debt. The letter says he hopes it isn't too late to set a great wrong right. He hopes before long—perhaps by New Year's—sooner than we expected—

The Veteran—Oh, my God!

The soldier weeps upon the street, before all the people. They crowd around him. At a sign from the lady money rains into the cap in Molly's hand.

Molly—Father! It's growing so heavy I can't hold it! And there's bills—Oh, they'll blow away!

A Voice (from the crowd)—That's for Christmas' sake!

Another Voice—That's for his own sake!

The Lady—For honor's sake.

A Voice—For freedom's sake, and them blind eyes he gave for it!

The Veteran (confusedly)—Fair Oaks, Bull Run, Malvern Hill, Antietam.

The Crowd—For their sakes!

Molly—Father! I cannot hold the cap. It is so heavy it will break me!

The Lady—Come, come, Henry! Give them a song.

The Crowd—Give us a tune! Give us a song!

The Veteran (trying to compose himself)—Ma'am? Yes. I'll try. Molly? Here, little girl. Molly? I wish your mother was here. Ma'am? Yes. I will try again. (Sings)

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty—

Chokes, and begins once more, tremulously:

My Saviour, 'tis of Thee—

He stops, and removes his hat again. "Madam, I've lost my head. I don't know which is which."

The Lady (smiling through her tears)—It doesn't matter. Either will do.

The face of the street player falls into his hands. His bowed figure bends before the lady. With a fine gesture she steps aside. The crowd parts. The light from the head and face of the child in the manger falls in a broad white ray upon the veteran. The soldier can be heard sobbing.

A Voice from the Crowd—Lord, I could cry myself!

The Lady—Let us pass, good people, if you please.

Molly—Father, father! What will mother say? The lady says she'll lead you home. May I run on before? I only want to stay a minute to see that cunning little Jesus—there! Good-by, little Jesus! (Throws a kiss at the child in the window and runs on.)

The lady and the veteran follow slowly, smiling as they go.

[THE END.]

FOR FREEDOM'S SAKE AND THOSE BLIND EYES HE GAVE FOR IT.

"MADAM, I'VE LOST MY HEAD. I DON'T KNOW WHICH FROM WHICH."

NEPTUNE HELD HIS JOB.

Convinced His Master That There Must Be Two Parties to a Discharge.

Not long after the war old Neptune Burgess drifted up in Illinois from his plantation home in the south, and was so well satisfied with "God's country," as he was pleased to term it, that he settled permanently in McLean county, becoming a fixture upon the farm of Ezra Miles, a well-to-do planter.

Neptune was gray-haired and lazy when he bargained for this place, and time did not improve his value as a servant. He was good natured, faithful after his fashion, and apparently much attached to Mr. Miles, but nothing could persuade him to imitate the bee in industry.

One year passed and another, and still Neptune remained, while his contentment was a real comfort to behold. Nothing in the world troubled him except a delay in serving his meals, and as this rarely happened his serenity practically remained unbroken.

The negro was coal black when he first entered Mr. Miles' home, and he seemed to take on deeper shades as his hair whitened. But the latter was the only sign he gave of advancing age. He was thin, tall, erect and active—when moving toward the house at dinner time. Day after day, though, h became lazier; yet there were those who knew him that declared he had reached the lowest possible descending point in the first year. Mr. Miles even, who was one of the most forbearing men in the world, could finally stand it no longer and resolved on drastic measures. Coming up with the darky in the barn when he should have been out in the field, he said sternly:

"See here, Nep, you are not worth your salt. You are discharged. Get yourself off at once."

The old negro, who had been leaning out of a window looking dreamily upon the landscape, now turned about, regarded Mr. Miles half curiously for a moment, and then shook his head negatively.

"Kain' do it, Marse Ezry. It tecks two ter meck er barg'in, 'n' I ain' er gwine ter fling erway er job I's hilt nigh onter twenty year, comin' nex' Jinnerwerry. I laiks de place mighty well, 'n' reckons I'll stay ontwell I dies." Here Neptune turned to go away, having rejected what he considered an undesirable proposition.

"Come back here," cried Mr. Miles angrily. "If you talk to me that way I'll thrash you."

The negro halted, moved half about, and answered, reflectively:

"Dat you kin do, Marse Ezry, bekase it on't tecks one ter do the lammin', but it sho'ly do tek two ter meck a bargain, 'n' I ain't sich er blame fool 's ter frow up dis er place."

And stay old Neptune did to the end of his days, persuaded to the last that the right of the employe to remain was as potent as that of the employer to discharge.—Chicago Tribune.

RUDELY SHATTERED.

Love's Young Dream Disturbed by a Practical Parent.

As the old man gazed thoughtfully at the smoldering embers, she came with radiant face and kissed him.

"Papa," she whispered, fondly caressing his silver hair; "I have found my affinity."

He turned suddenly and confronted her.

"Daughter," he demanded; "is he a good young fellow?"

"Yes, papa."

Her eyes were directed to the floor, and she saw not the play of emotions upon his countenance.

"Doesn't he smoke?"

"No, papa."

"My child—"

His voice was unsteady.

"—after all the money I've spent on your education—"

He heeded not her startled glance.

"—I don't propose to buy my own cigars in my old age if I know myself. Don't come to me with your affinity racket. It won't go, I tell you right now."

Her tears were of no more avail to melt his heart than the touch of the zephyr upon adamant.—Puck.

CHRISTMAS SUNDAY.

SPECIAL DECORATIONS, MUSIC AND EXERCISES, IN THE CHURCHES.

First Baptist Church.

The First Baptist Church had attractive and interesting Christmas services yesterday, large congregations being present at both the morning and afternoon sessions. In the morning a chorus choir of seventeen voices under the leadership of C. W. McCutchen and E. J. Fitzhugh rendered excellent music. An anthem "There were Shepherds" by Foster, contained a very effective bass solo and chorus. Wm Holmes sang the solo in a pleasing manner. Another anthem, "Bethlehem", was sung by the chorus, with a duet by Mrs. M. I. Cooley and George Smith. "O Sing to God", by Gounod, was effectively rendered by Miss F. May Grant and Miss Nancy Randolph. Wm. Holmes's rendition of "Nazareth" was much enjoyed. One of the most pleasing numbers on the programme was "Cantique de Noel", by Gounod, arranged for solo and chorus by E. J. Fitzhugh. The solo part was taken by Miss Bessie Blair. Her voice has rare qualities, and her singing was thoroughly enjoyed. An excellent sermon appropriate to the occasion was preached by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, and this service closed with the "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah". The decorations were very pretty, the arrangement of evergreens around the organ and pulpit being much admired, while on the platform were choice potted plants and lilies. The Sunday-schools of the First Baptist Church, Mt. Olive Baptist Church, and East Third Street Mission, met in the church in the afternoon and enjoyed an excellent programme of music, with responsive readings, and an address by L. V. F. Randolph. Frank Drake, pianist, and Milton Gruett, violinist, of Newark, assisted in the musical part. Carols by the main, Mt. Olive, and East Third Street Mission schools were a feature. An anthem with a solo part by Miss Bessie Blair was also enjoyed, as were the two trios on the violin, organ and piano. A recital, "The Angels and the Shepherds", from "Ben Hur", was delightfully given by Miss Addie Parker Jackson, with vocal accompaniment by Miss Grant, Miss Blair and Miss Randolph. Those in the choir were: Sopranos, Miss Spear, Miss Blair, Miss Grant, Miss Swain, Mrs. Cooley; altos, Miss Gussie Runyon, Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Florence Kline, Miss Grace Bonny, Miss Overton; tenors, C. W. McCutchen, E. Ryder, George Smith; M. Douglass bassos, B. T. Barnes, Wm. Holmes and Stacy Reynolds.

Monroe Avenue Methodists.

In the Monroe Avenue Chapel the regular service was held in the morning, with a Christmas sermon by the pastor, Rev. Herbert Munson. The church was prettily decorated with evergreens around the pulpit and platform. In the afternoon the Sunday-school rendered a pleasing programme. A male quartette, John Thompson, F. Batson, Walter McGee and Raymond McGee, sang several choice selections, and another quartette, Miss Bunnell, Miss Phillips, J. Thompson and F. Batson, pleased all with their excellent music. All this, together with singing by the school, with responsive readings, made an attractive programme. Christmas cards of pretty design were given to each member of the school. The Christmas entertainment of the school will be held Friday evening at 7:45.

First Presbyterian Church.

The Christmas service of the First Presbyterian Church was held yesterday morning. The Sunday-school was seated in the gallery, while the main body of the church was well filled with the congregation and their friends. The decorations were artistically arranged, and added much to the beauty of the church. Evergreens were the principal decorations, and were hung in festoons around the organ loft and pulpit, while holly wreaths brightened the walls and gallery. Above the pulpit hung a large evergreen star, at every point of which glistened an electric light. During the service the rite of baptism was administered to the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson. Rev. Charles E. Herring, the pastor, gave the Christmas address, and took for his text Ephesians 5:16, "Redeeming the Time". He had, to illustrate his talk, a table covered with clocks of all sizes and kinds. He said in starting "Take advantage of your opportunities and of every hour, minute and second. How many men are so sorry that they did not take advantage of their opportunities when young, that they did not go to school and learn all they could. If you do not take advantage of them now you will never have the chance again, as they never come back." He then spoke on the great mistake of so many young men in losing their chance of education, and then when at work of not improving their evenings and spare hours. And, taking the different watches and clocks, he told how one was fast, that like some young people, it led a fast life, because something inside was wrong. Other clocks, one that was tipped up so that it would not run, another that was slow, were compared to people; and then alarm clocks, clocks that had run down, clocks that point to 1 and strike 12, clocks that strike all the time, and broken and shattered clocks, all were spoken of, and the likeness between them and some of the people of this world, pointed out. The music, especially the anthems rendered by the choir, were of a very high order and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The special musical service in the evening was attended by a very large congregation that completely filled the pews and chairs that were placed in every available spot. The instrumental music was very much enjoyed by all, while the singing of the choir was deserving of great praise. Rev. Mr. Herring's address, which was divided into three parts, had for its subject the three aspects of Christ's life on earth: "Root—Offspring—Morning Star."

Park Avenue Baptist Church.

The Park Avenue Baptist Church was well filled yesterday morning with the congregation and their friends who came to attend the Christmas service of the church. Special music was provided, and the choir increased. Rev. J. W. Richardson preached a sermon appropriate to the day. He took as his subject "The Wise Men and the Star". He said that Christ's birth brought in a spiritual kingdom which was recognized by the wise men in their adoration. It was also the beginning of an era of spiritual overcoming power, and it brought us redemption from sorrow. A large number of the friends of the school attended the evening service, and heartily enjoyed the exercises. After an organ prelude, and a carol, "The Promised Day", by the school, Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor, read from the Scriptures. Another carol, "Joy's Sweet Song", was followed by a prayer by Rev. Dr. Humpstead of Brooklyn. After the chorus, "Morn of Promised Ages", the primary department gave their special exercises. A carol, "Ring the Bells", came first, after which Miss Violet VanWinkle recited the "Christmas Greeting". Miss Marion Shotwell sang the carol "The Dear Old Story"; then nine little girls recited "Gifts for Jesus". Another carol, "Once in Royal David's City", followed, after which Miss Retta Nash gave the recitation "The Two Little Girls". Miss Florence Cuming next sang "We Can Tell", and Masters Harold Skaden, Gussie Nash, Charles Hellyer and Vanderbeek Shotwell recited "We Can be Little Boys but Once". After the carol, "Oh We Love the Merry Christmas", the primary department exercises were concluded with "Mizpah". While the collection was being taken, the large chorus choir sang an anthem. Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry spoke a few words on "Giving and Receiving", and after a responsive reading the chorus "O Zion, Glad Zion" was sung by the school. The recitation "Let Us Have Christmas every Day", by Miss Grace Day, was followed by the chorus "Promised Redeemer". After a recitation by Miss Emily Runyon, another responsive reading, and the carol "Good Will", sung by the school, Miss Lizzie VanWinkle gave a recitation and Rev. Dr. Humpstead made an address to the young people. The chorus "Within the Town of Bethlehem", and the benediction by Rev. J. W. Richardson, concluded the programme.

Congregational Church.

The Congregational Church was well filled yesterday morning with those who came to attend the Christmas services. The church was tastefully decorated with evergreens and holly wreathes, while on the platform were palms and flowers. The programme was as follows: Voluntary—"Overture Jessonda", Spohr; Doxology; Invocation; Hymn—"Oh Come All Ye Faithful"; Responsive Reading; Gloria; Scripture Reading by Rev. C L Goodrich; Prayer; Offertory — "Ave Maria", Gounod; Hymn—"Hark the Herald Angels Sing"; Sermon — "The Prince of Peace", Rev. C. L. Goodrich; Prayer; Hymn—"It Came Upon the Midnight Clear"; Benediction; Postlude—Bell Rondo, Morandi. Mr. Goodrich took for his text Isiah IX:6, "Unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given; and His name shall be called 'The Prince of Peace'". He spoke of how people often wait anxiously for messages, but no message could compare with the tidings that came that first Christmas evening. He told the condition of the world just before the coming of Christ, and how He carried peace to homes of sickness and sorrow, to demon-possessed men, and even to the thief on the cross. He came to bring the spirit of perce, but the world seems slow to learn the lesson. After speaking of the strife still in the world, he told how much less there is of it now than formerly, and how the spirit of kindness and love is increasing. The instrumental music was delightfully rendered by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist; Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist. The Sunday-School held its special Christmas service in the afternoon. A selection "Once Again, Oh Blessed Time" was rendered by a quartette composed of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss E. A. Whiting, Horace J. Martin and Stacy R. Reynolds. Mrs. B. T. Barnes at the organ; Mrs. M. E. Dwight at the piano and P. Ludwig Conde on the violin, rendered in a very artistic manner, a selection from "Cavelleria Rusticana". Instead of the regular lesson, Rev. C. L. Goodrich read a Christmas story entitled "A Story of the Other Man" by VanDyke.

First M. E. Church.

The Sunday-school of the First Methodist Episcopal Church held their special Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon in the church. The school met at 2.30 as usual, and, after devoting ten minutes to a glance at the lesson, the classes marched into the main body of the church. Evergreens and holly wreaths tastefully arranged about the platform, formed the principal decorations. A chorus choir, composed of Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss May MacDonald, Miss Florence Barnes, Miss Mamie Steiner, Miss May Mulford, Miss Cora Shepherd, Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Lucie Davis, Miss Edna French, Miss Margaretta Barnes, Miss Nellie Martin, Miss Edna Harris, Mr. Bond, Will Simmonds, Clifford McGee, Robert Douglass, Robert Davis, Arthur Crone, and Arthur Peck, led the singing, and rendered several selections. The order of exercises was as follows: Organ voluntary; carol by the school, "Crown Him"; prayer by Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes; carol by the school, "Christmas Time"; Scripture reading; carol by the school, "Joy to the World"; Scriptural exercises by infant class; song by infant class, "We Can Tell"; solo and chorus, Over in Bethlehem", Miss May Mulford and school; star exercises by the infant class; sextette and chorus, "The Morning Star", Mr. Bond, Clifford McGee, Robert Douglass, Arthur Crone, Robert Davis and Will Simmonds; carol by school, "Gleam On"; recitation, Miss Etta Raybert; solo, duet and chorus, "The Only King". Mr. Bond, Miss Lucie Davis and choir; address by Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, on "The Love of Jesus Christ"; collection; anthem by the choir; song by the school, "Song to the Saviour"; benediction. This programme, especially that part rendered by the infant class, was highly enjoyed by a large number of the friends of the school.

Crescent Avenue Church.

In the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, yesterday, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, always forceful and eloquent, held the large audience spellbound throughout his earnest and soul-inspiring discourse of the morning. The text was from Luke II:1, "All the World". The speaker concisely related the circumstances which occasioned the utterance of the text—mentioning the desire of Cæsar Augustus to enroll "All the world" under his standard, and clearly stating the vital importance of the enrollment of every Christian under the standard of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the afternoon 1,075 happy children with bright, expectant faces filled the church and participated in the special Christmas Sunday-school exercises, which were given by the members of the Crescent Avenue, Hope Chapel, Warren Chapel and Bethel Mission Sunday-schools the last three being auxiliaries of the parent church. A chorus by the entire school was followed by a prayer by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren Chapel, and after Scripture reading and song a very interesting address was delivered by Rev. J. K. Newell of Hope Chapel, depicting the incidents connected with the birth of Jesus of Nazareth. Prayer by Rev. W. A. Alexander of Bethel Chapel, and singing by the school, were followed by the closing address, in which Rev. Dr. Richards in a most entertaining manner gave a short resume of the history of the different auxiliaries established or adopted by the Crescent Avenue Church in the last six years According to the June report the Sunday-school of Hope Chapel contains 546, that of Crescent Avenue Church, 431, Warren Chapel, 381, and Bethel Mission, 250, a grand total of 1,603 earnest searchers for the light as it is in Jesus. The evening discourse was a forceful and pointed elucidation of the text "And they shall call His name Emanuel", and again Dr. Richards was greeted by a large and interested audience, who listened with marked attention. The church was beautfully decorated in green and white. Banked in front of the pulpit was a gorgeous array of white chrysanthemums flanked on either side by a profusion of evergreens, while over all, suspended in midair, was a beautiful star symbolic of the "Star of Peace."

Trinity Reformed Church.

As the congregation of Trinity Reformed Church assembled in their accustomed places yesterday morning to worship and praise God for the gift of his best Beloved, many were the exclamations of admiration as the eye took in the results of hours of work of the decorating committee, composed of Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, H. C. VanEmburgh, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Elmer Garretson, B. F. LaVere, Mrs. J. Krymer, and Mrs. R. A. Meeker. Above the organ were the words that are on the lips of everyone at this gladsome time, "Merry Christmas"; around the pulpit, evergreen which R. A. Meeker had so generously provided, palms and potted plants were banked, while, above was suspended a large white star. Excellent music was rendered by a double quartette: Miss Krymer and Mrs. VanDyke, sopranos; F. S. Cutter and Mr. Moore, bass; Miss Dunn and Miss Gillem, alto; and R. Clark and E. Clark, tenor; and Organist Titsworth deserves praise for his very careful and thorough training of the choir. The Press would suggest a repetition next Sunday of the Christmas music, which was the following: Organ Prelude, "Allegro Pomposo", Harris; Anthem, "TeDeum", in B flat, H. Millard; Anthem, "See now the Alta:", J. Faure; hymn, "Joy to the World"; offertory anthem, "Bethlehem", H. N. Bartlett; anthem, "O Little Town of Bethlehem", H. N. Bartlett; hymn, "Shepherds! Hail the Wondrous Stranger"; organ postlude, "Hallelujah Chorus", Messiah. Pastor Schenck's sermon on the "Adoration of the Shepherds" was earnesly delivered from the text Luke 2:8. Long before the time for Organist Titsworth to begin the evening service, Trinity Church was crowded to its doors, and when the school had taken the seats reserved for them, many were standing. The organ prelude, Gloria 12th Mass, Mozart, was followed by a cornet solo by Mr. LaVere. Pastor Schenck began the services with prayer, and Master Luther Sheppard bade all welcome. The primary department then very sweetly sang "Christmas Bells", which was followed with a Christmas carol by Jennie Thorn, Martie Anthony, Gertie Tier, Violet Beerbower, Isabella Edwards, Lucy Corieli, Lillie Scribner, Olice Mariner, May Anthony, and Eva Dunavan, eleven little girls from the primary department. After singing of the offertory anthem by the choir, the exercise entitled "Christ's Messengers" was given. During the singing of "Hail, All Hail" the "Spirit of Christmas", impersonated by Miss L. Snediker, took her position on the pulpit platform, and after telling her mission here called on her attending spirits to come and help scatter cheer over all the earth.

The messengers, robed in white, and carrying wreaths of evergreen with which they formed a chain, responded to the Spirit by slowly marching up the aisle singing "Messengers of Jesus", and took their position on the platform, forming a semi-circle around the Spirit. Miss Woodruff, representing "Joy", then told of her mission followed by "Peace", Miss Lillian Force, the primary department responding with the "Song of Peace", with chorus by the school. "Faith", Miss Krymer, came next, and then Miss Baxter told of how "Courage" was had by Faith", followed by "Hope", Miss E. Gardner. The school then sang "Star of Our Destiny". "Humility", Miss Emma Cutter, explained how He came to minister, and "Truth", Miss L. Dunn, told of how through the Truth we shall all be made free, followed by Miss Carrie Mehl, representing "Love", and telling of that great and wonderful gift of love to all mankind. A solo "For you and me", by Miss Etta Krymer, with male quartette accompaniment, was beautifully and artistically sung, and then Miss Arnold representing "Knowledge", clearly and distinctly told her mission, followed by Miss Cora Gardner, "Liberty". The school then sang "Come In, O King", and after a few lines from the "Spirit of Christmas" the messengers surrounded her, holding their wreaths so as to make a complete chain, and sang "Chain of Thanksgiving", thus bringing to a close one of the most enjoyable and effective services ever held in that sanctuary. It would be unjust to Mrs. J. S. Cutter if credit were not given her for the great success accomplished.

The attendance was so large that nearly a hundred camp stools were used on each side and in front of the pulpit platform, and still many people were standing.

Church of the Redeemer.

The regular service was held in the Church of the Redeemer yesterday morning, and in the afternoon the Sunday-school participated in special exercises consisting of the singing of carols and responsive readings appropriate to the occasion. The usual evening service was held immediately afterward.

A Christian Endeavor Birthday.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist Church celebrated their first birthday yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. The programme commenced with a recitation by Miss Marie Rogers, entitled "Gathering Smiles and Frowns". A song by the Juniors followed, and then Miss Ruth Maxson gave another recitation. After another song, Charles Titsworth recited, and the meeting closed with "God Be With You". Mrs. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of the Junior Society, led the meeting and Miss Lizzie Allis was in charge of the singing. George Babcock and Harry Rogers were the ushers, and did their work very satisfactorily. After the literary exercises, cake and lemonade were served by the Juniors. The attendance was very large, the elders being conspicuously present and everybody expressed much pleasure with the entertainment and the work of the Juniors.

MISS VAIL'S DEBUT.

THE TOWN'S 400 GREET THE BEAUTIFUL DEBUTANTE.

The Elegant Home, Embowered in Roses, and Animated by the Local Social World, Affords a Scene of Rare Delight.

The elegant residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Vail, 219 West Eighth street, was the meeting place of over 400 relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Vail Saturday afternoon, the occasion being a reception given in honor of the debut of their daughter, Miss Carolyn L. Vail.

Numbered among the guests were the leaders in Plainfield's social, literary and artistic circles, as well as many from New York, Brooklyn and Boston.

The reception room, parlors and music room were filled with a profusion of beautiful roses, most artistically combined with garlands of smilax.

In the reception room, on either side of the fair debutante stood Mr. and Mrs. Vail and Miss Emily Pratt one of Boston's beautiful Back Bay belles; and they were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Alfred W. Day, Miss May Evans, Miss May Waring, Miss Florence Abbott, Miss Annie Stewart and Miss Maud Middledith.

Beautiful women beautifully gowned, and in many instances accompanied their husbands or friends, continued to pour in through the portals and all congratulated their host and hostesses as they passed on to the spacious banquet room, which was done in green and white, ferns and flowers being banked in tasteful abundance.

Caterer Maresi, of New York, fairly outdid himself in the artistic table decorations, as also in the elegance of the refreshments served. At either end of the table were Mrs. George W. Endicott and Miss Florence I. Marsh, who presided most efficiently during the reception.

After the departure of the guests a merry party assembled at the dinner table, at the head of which was seated the genial host and on either side the hostess, the beautiful debutante, and the ladies who assisted, with their husbands or gentlemen friends. Piquant jest, lively repartee, and merry pealing laughter seasoned the bountious repast, and after "the feast of reason and the flow of soul" the happy home party joined in the mazy dance.

They Come Here Saturday Night.

The Brown University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Club gave a concert at The Berkely Lyceum, New York, Friday evening, before a large audience. The New York Tribune of Saturday in an article nearly half a column long speaks very highly of it, and says in part: "Although the printed programme was reasonably long, it proved so entertaining that the audience felt disposed to lengthen it by demanding many repetitions. The club form together a most excellent musical organization, giving a varied and thoroughly interesting entertainment. When the Brown boys come again they will find a widening circle of admirers."

The women of the Park Avenue Baptist Church have secured them for Saturday evening, Dec. 29.

Loved, But Met to Pray.

The New York papers yesterday devoted much space to the story of a suit for $25,000 for the alienation of a wife's affections. The suit is brought by William H. Scott of Brooklyn, aginst John W. Ogden. Mrs. Scott has taken refuge with her aged father at his boarding place, 29 Grandview avenue. She says she and Ogden love one another "tha soul love", and that there is nothing criminal in their relations. She admits their meeting, but says they met to pray. Mrs. Scott was Lottie Stevens before marriage.

The Better Way.

To May they gave a tambourine, to Adelbert a fife,
To Jonathan a trumpet and to Saul a Christmas drum,
Two days thereafter all the town with lunacy was rife
And all the household with acute neuralgia overcome.
"Next year", said pa, "at Collier's we will purchase for each child
A Christmas gift that lasting is, and will not drive us wild."

—The crosswalk which the Council recently ordered laid at the corner of Ninth street and Park avenue, has been completed.

—The Daily Press carriers will visit the subscribers tomorrow morning and present to each a handsome calendar giving the dates and moon's phases for the year, and a list of the fire-alarm boxes revised to date. This Christmas calendar takes the place of the customary New Year's address.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. THE POPULAR PARKS.

FIRST OF THE SEASON'S BACHELOR-BENEDICK GAMES.

S. A. Hegeman, Jr., Proves His Heroism by Bowling in Spite of a Crushed Finger.

A lively and enthusiastic party was that which gathered at the Park Club alleys Saturday evening to witness the Bachelor-Benedick bowling contest.

Tastefully gowned women and their escorts lined the alleys on either side or crowded together near the scorers, all intent on the victory of their favorites and generous in their hearty demonstrations of approval when a particularly well placed ball caused the mercury to rise in the fluctuating tube of success. Over one hundred were present, a notably large percentage being of the fair sex.

The players were heavily handicapped by being forced to play with old balls, owing to the non-arrival of the club balls used in Thursday's Roselle Casino-Park Club game at Roselle. The trunk containing them arrived in the city at 2 p.m., but failed to reach the club-house until 10:30 owing to the congestion incident to the largely increased Christmas express traffic. It is but just to state with regard to B. A. Hegeman, Jr's, low score, that he was forced to play against his will because of a scarcity of eligible Benedicks. Suffering as he did from a swollen finger injured during the Park-New Jersey Athletic game, it was impossible to properly handle a ball, yet he gamely fought it out to the finish. The game throughout was closely contested and full of interest, the score being excellent in view of the facts above mentioned. After the game the Princeton College Bliss Quartette, whose concert of the 8th inst. is so pleasantly remembered, favored with a popular selection of college glees which was received with hearty demonstrations of pleasure. Dancing followed until a late hour The score:

Game called at 8:40.

CHRISTMAS IN BERLIN

Royalty Entertains Many Poor Children.

Emperor William Is Much Irritated Against Radical Parties in Berlin, Still He Will Not Maintain Conflict with Them in the Reichstag—Chancellor Hohenlohe's Successor.

Berlin, Dec. 24.—Following the example of the imperial family most of the society people, are spending Christmas week in the country. Some say the emperor has been prejudiced against his capitol by the radical elements there. His family will remain in Potsdam until the middle of January.

The absence of court circles has not affected the general holiday aspect of the city.

On Thursday the Empress Frederick attended a grand fete of the children of the Pestalozzi Frobelhaus. The Empress Augusta Victoria entertained the children of the Empress Augusta Home still more elaborately. She brought them in court carriages from Charlottenburg to the new palace in Potsdam and treated them to chocolate, cakes and fruits in the presence of the small princes who sat at the table with their visitors and afterwards joined them in a dance and general frolic. After three hours of fun the children had lemonade and cakes and went home. The imperial princes will have an unusually splendid tree on Christmas eve. The Empress Frederick has devoted the best part of several days in dressing it and has bestowed on it a vast amount of Christmas stuff sent to her by the Prince of Wales, her brother.

On Thursday she gave a reception and dinner in honor of the czar's envoy, General Swetchin. Among those present were Ambassador Theodore Runyon and Mrs. Runyon, the Austrian and Spanish ambassadors and their wives.

Emperor William has gone off hunting in the neighborhood of Koenigs-Wusterhausen. At his urgent request Count Botho zu Eulenburg, the former premier, accompanied him. The imperial favors bestowed upon this unpopular and untiring office seeker have caused much dubious headshaking in the last week as they have given rise to the reports that he soon will succeed Prince Hohenlohe. It is regarded as reasonably certain that the present chancellor can be only a stopgap. His few appearances in the reichstag have shown that his vocal powers, which never were great, are waning rapidly. As a debater he cuts no figure whatever, generally reading his speeches as he would official statements and, when diverging from the text, invariably needing suggestions from the secretary at his elbow. His lifeless manner and thin voice make a forlorn impression on all who remember Caprivi's vigorous delivery and penetrating tones. Persons who have done business with Hohenlohe in his office say that there he is a quite different man, easy, affable and keen. He has a wonderful grasp of detail and mentally is always alert. The old Prussian tories boast also that he will give the most brilliant receptions seen in the Welhelm Strasse for a generation, and the chancellor is refitting the chancellery on a scale of magnificence which verifies their predictions.

The semi-official newspapers say that neither emperor nor chancellor is anxious over the results of their failure to discipline the social democrats in the reichstag. The emperor is represented as holding aloof from parliamentary business, having no share in the attempt to curtail members' privileges, and not caring whether this attempt succeeded or not. Yesterday's Koelnische Zeitung said:

Herr von Koeller, who, as Prussian minister of the interior, is regarded as the head and front of the conflict group in the cabinet said on Saturday that there was no truth whatever in the newspapers reports that the government sought a conflict with the reichstag. The ministers were ready to discuss the anti-revolutionary, tobacco and other bills in a fair spirit and were prepared to accept amendments.

The north German anti-Semites have called a congress to meet in Berlin on January 15, mainly for the purpose of deciding whether they shall accept Ahlwardt as a member of the party. The ex-rector was released from prison last Thursday and he wishes to join the parliamentary group of Jew baiters instead of occupying a seat in the visitor's row.

The spy mania in France has stirred German feelings to the boiling point. The trial of Dreyfus, the expulsion of von Cassel and the sentencing of von Schoenbeck last week have been discussed with bitterness throughout the empire. The declaration of the French ministers that Dreyfus had no relations with the German embassy are regarded as unsatisfactory in the face of the repeated assertions of the French press that the sole document on which he was convicted was stolen from the embassy. The Paris journals insinuate also that Count Muenster tried to induce the French government to drop the prosecution, although this is a palpable falsehood. The few trustworthy accounts of events in Paris show fully that French suspicion and hatred of Germany are again at the flood.

The Kreuzzeitung said on Wednesday that full chemical analysis of Standard Oil company's imports showed adulteration. Independent investigation show that the whole hubbub about this oil originated with Pohl of Manheim, who buys exclusively from the Columbian Oil company. He informed the government that the Rothschilds were negotiating to combine the Standard and the Russian oil companies in order to create a worldwide monopoly. Pohl asked that, in the interest of the German consumers, the government grant a subvention for heavy purchases from the Columbian company. This course, he said, would check the monopoly. He advised also that the government build tank boats to bring the oil up the Rhine. The government approved his plan and advised him to have a subvention bill drawn and presented in the reichstag.

MANY STARVING TO DEATH.

Terrible Suffering in the Drought-Stricken Part of Nebraska.

Niobrara, Neb., Dec. 24.—The suffering among the inhabitants of the drought-blasted part of Nebraska, including three-fourths of the residents of five counties, is becoming more intense daily and immediate steps alone can prevent many deaths by starvation.

For three years the crops have been almost total failures. Many families have not enough provisions in their homes for one week's sustenance, and no money to purchase the necessities of life.

Many of the merchants here feel they have aided these poor farmers to the extent of their ability, and are unable to do any more for them or to sell them goods on credit. The sufferers cannot obtain employment, and unless they receive aid very soon it is the general opinion that many will starve to death and should the weather turn very cold many will freeze to death, as it is a fact that many are barefooted and have scarcely sufficient clothing to cover their nakedness.

A mother and her two children were found dead in their little cabin. It is supposed the mother had been confined to her bed by sickness and she and her two little ones starved to death. The stomachs of the children were opened and not a trace of food could be discovered.

In many instances, people of the districts remote from railroad facilities are said to be eating prairie dogs.

"PARSON" DAVIES' OFFER.

He Wants To Match Ryan and Choynski Against English Pugilists.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—"Parson" Davies, of this city, has forwarded to the editor of the London Sporting Life two challenges. The first is a wager of $2,500 that Tommy Ryan, of Chicago, can defeat any pugilist in England at 142 pounds, give or take two pounds, the winner of the Burgess-Williams contest preferred; the contest to take place before the club offering the largest purse in England or America, and the winner to receive the wager and a purse and title of welterweight champion of the world.

The second is a wager of $2,500 for a match between Joe Choynski and any heavyweight in England (Peter Jackson excepted), Frank Craig, the "Coffee Cooler," preferred; the contest to be for the heavyweight championship of England and the largest purse offered by any club.

The "Parson" deposited $1,000 with William J. Davis, of this city, in support of these challenges, to be transferred to the editor of the Sporting Life or any other person agreed upon on the acceptance of the offer.

REFORM IN TRENTON.

New York Tenderloiners Not Wanted in the Capital City.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 24.—There is consternation among the keepers and inmates of disorderly houses in this city owing to the action of the police in making lists of the places for submission to the grand jury. Since the beginning of the Parkhurst crusade in New York several hundred tenderloin women have come to Trenton and their behavior on the street and in the public resorts have given rise to many indignant complaints. Now they are fleeing the houses they live in, but not the city, and street walking is largely on the increase. The "madames" have already been sent to state prison. The lists being made by the police will also give the names of the owners of the property leased for other purposes. There are numerous church members among these owners and their indictment is quite certain.

Fatal Railroad Collision.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 24.—A bad wreck occurred on the Oregon Railway and Navagation line near Belles junction yesterday, killing one man and fatally injuring three others. The north bound passenger train, from Portland, struck a soft place in the track, causing the rails to spread, throwing the engine and two cars into the ditch. The train parted in the middle, saving the passenger coaches and many lives. Engineer Walker was pinned under his engine and scalded to death by escaping steam.

Tonawanda, N. Y., Dec. 24.—The most disastrous fire in the history of Tonawanda started at the lumber yards of A. Weston & Son, on Main street, and about 10,000,000 feet of high grade pine lumber were destroyed, the estimated value of which is placed at $175,000, and which is covered by the 80 per cent. insurance clause.

A Condemned Murderer Escapes.

Wichita, Kas., Dec. 24.—Oliver Jewell, who was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Tom Arnold and his son in the Cherokee strip, escaped from the Woodward jail last night. Three hundred officers and citizens are searching for him, but he will probably get away, as it is certain that his friends from the Indian country aided in his escape.

LABOR LEADERS CLASH

McBride and Hayes Are To Fight for Supremacy.

Contest Will Begin in Earnest When the Mine Workers Meet at Columbus—The Men Who Will Lock Horns Have Records as Hard Fighters—Knights vs. Federation.

New York, Dec. 24.—It is reported here by those on the inside of labor matters that the two big labor leaders of the country are preparing to meet in fierce conflict at the United Mine Workers' convention at Columbus in February next.

The action of the American Federation of Labor at the convention in Denver in adopting a resolution to ignore the national officers of the Knights of Labor in future conferences between the heads of labor organizations is known to be in accord with the policy of John McBride, the newly elected president of the American Federation of Labor.

The miners' organization is composed of two wings, one of which is connected with the Knights of Labor and the other affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. At the convention the influence of Mr. McBride will probably be exerted to have the Knights of Labor miners withdraw from the National Assembly of the Knights of Labor and becoming contributing members of the organization, of which he is now the head. Then the ball will open in earnest.

General Secretary John W. Hayes, of the Knights of Labor, will be there to keep his men in line, and he is probably the one prominent leader in the country who is a match for Mr. McBride in diplomacy. For a number of years Mr. Hayes has been the power behind the throne in the organization of the Knights of Labor, and at the present time it may almost be said that Grand Master Sovereign is but a figure head and Mr. Hayes is the real sovereign of the K. of L.

John McBride was practically unknown outside of Ohio until he organized and directed one of the greatest strikes in the history of the country. It involved 150,000 miners, and it was a success.

McBride is a Scotch-American. He was only 18 years of age when he began holding office in a labor organization. He has been prominently identified with the cause ever since, a period of twenty-two years.

He was a democrat in politics until last fall, when he joined the populist-labor party.

In 1872 he was secretary of Newman's Creek lodge No. 15 of the Miners' and Mine Laborers' Benevolent association. Shortly afterward he became secretary of the Tuscarawas Valley Miners' association.

He was elected president of the Ohio Miners' association in 1882. The memorable Hocking valley strike of 1884 was a severe test of his resources, and demonstrated his ability as a leader.

In 1884-5 he represented Clarke county in the Ohio legislature, and got through a number of labor laws.

In 1886 he presided over the convention in Druid's hall, Columbus, which gave birth to the American Federation of Labor, and at the first meeting of the newly formed body is said to have declined the presidency.

In the same year, 1886, he was nominated on the democratic ticket for secretary of state, and was defeated with the ticket.

In 1887 he succeeded in bringing the operators and the miners under an interstate agreement for the maintenance of wages—the breaking of which agreement by the Indiana and Illinois operators led to the great strike last spring.

In 1890 he retired from active leadership among the miners when the Miners' Progressive union and N. T. A. No. 135, K. of L., were consolidated under the title of the United Mine Workers of America.

He served as state labor commissioner for two years under Governor Campbell.

In 1893 he was elected president of the United Mine workers. In that position he directed the strike of 150,000 miners a few months ago, the result of which was perhaps the most substantial and decisive victory ever achieved by organized labor in the United States.

In connection with his election as president of the Federation of Labor, it is recalled that he declined to be a candidate at Baltimore in 1889, although strongly urged to go into the race, and again at Detroit in 1890 he declined, when the chances were even more in his favor.

He consented to the use of his name last year at Chicago, after a majority of the delegates had signed a petition requesting him to be a candidate. He was defeated by 82 out of a total of 2,400 votes.

Negro Killed by a Mob.

Mont Brook, Fla., Dec. 24.—Jim Williams, a negro, who attempted an unsuccessful assault upon a young married white lady and escaped, later was discovered boarding a train. He was fired on by a mob of white men and riddled. An inquest was held and a verdict rendered that death was caused by gunshot wounds at the hands of unknown parties.

Dr. Rooker's Successor.

Milford, Conn., Dec. 24.—It is reported here on good authority that Rev. Dr. Maher of this place, late chancellor of the diocese of Hartford, has been appointed vice-rector of the American college at Rome, to succeed Dr. Rooker who recently became private secretary to Mgr. Satolli.

Kroshi Catholics To Be Released.

Warsaw, Dec. 24.—It is reported that the czar has ordered the release of all persons convicted of resisting the military who were sent to close the Catholic church. The brutality of the military to the Kroshi Catholics caused the pope to send a protest to the late czar.

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirtyfifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE In 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will begun in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the personal Recollections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

FESTAL DAY IN JAPAN.

All Debts Are Paid New Year's Eve. Unique Decorations.

Across the front of the house, for instance, is festooned a grass rope with a deep fringe. This is a very pleasant sort of a thing for a man to have over his door, for no evil spirit dare pass under it.

Over each entrance hangs a great tassel of grass containing a scarlet crawfish. Its crooked body symbolizes the back of the aged, bent with years.

This is surrounded with the branches of a kind of japonica, whose young leaves bud before the old ones are shed. This is typical of parents living when their children's children are born.

In the center are the leaves of the Japanese polypody, which symbolize conjugal life because the fronds spring in pairs. Embryo leaves symbolize offspring.

There is also a piece of charcoal, which means home, and two little pieces of seaweed, which typify good fortune and rejoicing.

In the middle of all is the lucky bag, a square of white paper held in by a red and white string, which marks a present.

Not only the Japanese, but the Europeans in Japan also hang this tassel over their front gates. They do it partly as a compliment to the Japanese and partly for luck.

The natives have another decoration, consisting of three green bamboos with sliced tops, reminding one of organ pipes, erected on each side of the portal at a distance of six feet, the right hand one springing out of a tuft of the mematsu, which signifies the female principle, and the left hand from the omatsu, which signifies the male.

In the midst of all these emblems the national flags generally wave from black lacquered poles headed with gold balls. If the common people fail to display these flags, they are admonished by the police, and the flags go up. They are generally of white silk crape, with a red sun in the center.

A Japanese New Year's custom which it would not be amiss to import to America is that of paying all debts (except to foreigners) on the first day of the year. A man who fails to do so without leave of his creditors is dishonored. Consequently those creditors who are in debt try to sell everything which will fetch money, and in Tokyo a huge fair is held in the principal street on New Year's eve for this purpose.

No Change.

Briggs—Well, I suppose you begin the New Year with a lot of new resolutions?

Griggs—No; some old ones I had last year.

Cycles and Dinners.

Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, resurrects an old and forgotten story apropos of the new year. Some 20 students were celebrating the end of the year by a dinner. During the course of the dinner reference was made to the old belief that at the end of a cycle of 30,000 years everything is begun over again, and the hope was expressed that at the end of the cycle they would all find themselves at the same hotel eating the same dinner. The landlord, who presided, expressed his profound conviction that they would thus meet again and proposed the toast, "Till We Meet Again." This suggested a brilliant thought to the student who had been deputed to pay the bill, and addressing the landlord he proposed that the bill be allowed to stand until the next reunion. The landlord was somewhat taken aback, but he was true to his convictions and consented. But as the cashier was joyfully putting the money back in his pocket a brilliant thought occurred to the landlord also, and he said, "Since we shall be as today 30,000 years hence, we were therefore as today 30,000 years ago." "Without doubt," exclaimed everybody. "Very well, gentlemen," pursued the landlord, "then you asked credit of me then as you have today. Pay me for the dinner you had 30,000 years ago, and I will wait 30,000 years for the amount due for this one." It was done, and during the rest of the evening there was nothing more said about the supposed cycle.

Book of Fate.

It is said in Scotland that those who desire to learn what fate or fortune the new year has in store for them may do so by consulting the Bible on New Year's morning before breakfast. The sacred book must be laid upon a table, and those who wish to consult it must open it at random and place a finger upon one or other of the chapters at which it is opened. This chapter is read and is believed to describe in some way the happiness or misery during the ensuing year of the person making the trial.

Nothing to Him.

Strawber—I have been figuring all the morning on my accounts for 1894.

Singerly—How much has it cost you?

Strawber—I wasn't figuring that. I was figuring how much it cost my creditors.

Origin of Calling Custom.

The old fashioned custom of making New Year's calls comes from the Dutch. They considered the first day of the year a day of kindness and reconciliation.

Ready.

New Year's comin, an I ain't afraid.
My wood is all in an my bills all paid.
Meal's in the barrel an ham in the pan.
Come erlong quick, Mr. New Year's man!

at us for asserting that the Kranich & Bach is the best of all pianos. They say "that claimed for all pianos. All right, othe dealers may honestly believe that their leading piano is as good as the Kranich & Bach. They think we're mistaken—we are morally certain that they are.

If you can find a better piano than the Kranich & Bach, you will have to travel a long way. It is the leading of all pianos. We keep a supply of them on hand.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Christmas tree decorations at Harper's.

—There was skating on Stony brook this morning.

—The Daily Press will not be published Christmas Day.

—The drug stores close from 1 to 6 tomorrow afternoon.

—Have you seen those bargains in rolling-top desks at Harper's?

—The new Somerville Reformed Church raised its entire debt of $12,000 yesterday.

—W. H. Rogers will sell a Spalding cyclometer for $2, or give one away with a machine bought.

—The case of Robinson against Varian, on contract, is returnable in Justice Nash's Court Jan. 2.

—A wheel of Dr. Probasco's carriage was wrecked in turning a corner yesterday. There was no other damage.

—Services will be held in Holy Cross Church tomorrow and next Sunday a special Christmas service will be given.

—J. H. Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will give a Bible reading before the Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed Church tonight at 8.

—The bunch of keys lost by Max Wiertz was found and restored to him by Miss Annie L. Jennings of Rockview avenue and Grove street.

—The Sunday-school of the Hicksite Society of Friends, Watchung avenue, will have their Christmas entertainment Wednesday evening, Dec. 26.

—Justice Newcorn issued a summons this morning in the case of Murray and Duery against Albert Demarest, on contract, which is returnable January 3.

—The package box at the Netherwood station is greatly appreciated by the public, judging by the numerous packages collected by the letter carrier every morning.

—In the Mission Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, there will be Christmas service and Holy Communion at 11 a. m., Rev. Joseph Beers officiating.

WITH A PROVISO.

I am resolved in ninety-five
To swear off cigarettes,
And on the track, as I have done,
I'll make no racing bets.

With poker chips I'll play no more,
I've had enough of that.
I'll take no girl to see the play
Who wears too large a hat.

I shall not look upon the wine
When it is deeply red,
But quite persistently I'll take
My Adam's ale instead.

In ninety-five I am resolved
To save a goodly sum,
And when it comes to good hard work
I'm going to make things hum.

But these resolves for ninety-five
Are made conditionally,
And that is that the girl I love
Does not go back on me.

TOM MASSON.

A MISER'S NEW YEAR.

BY M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"Miser Jones"—that was what everybody called him, and the title did not displease him. Indeed it rather flattered him. To be a miser meant the possession of money, and money was his god. There were people who could remember him as a young man and a spendthrift, but they were very few. To look at him one would wonder if he had ever been young. He appeared to be 60 years old when people first began to call him Miser Jones, and the passage of time did not appear to affect him. He was wrinkled and skinny and white haired, and men said he would have been dim of sight but for the greed of gain which burned in his eyes till they shone like a wolf's.

Miser Jones had relatives, but for fear they might want money he cut loose from them. He owned several houses, but that he might not take from the rent he lived in a miserable room and fared little better than a dog. He had money to lend, and he exacted usury. There were no days of grace for one in his debt. Prompt payment must be made, and to the last penny, and neither words nor tears would move him. No charity, no church, no beggar, ever extracted one cent from Miser Jones. He cared nothing for the trials and misfortunes of others, and he was never affected by what men said of him except when some one observed that he could not take his money beyond the grave. That idea alone upset him and detracted from his happiness. He spent hours in wondering if it could not be done, and sometimes he was on the point of asking a lawyer to so arrange matters that his money should at least be buried with him.

The New Year dawned bleak and cold and dreary. There was a high wind, and the air was full of whirling snow, and even had it not been a holiday few people would have moved away from their firesides unless forced to.

"It is a good day for me—a fine day!" chuckled Miser Jones as he looked out on the deserted streets and up at the leaden sky. "No one will disturb me today, and I may sit down and count up my wealth. I am richer than a year ago today, much richer, but I want to know the figures to a shilling—to a penny. They call me Miser Jones, but I can laugh at their sarcasm and abuse. Now we will figure."

Miser Jones had bonds and mortgages and notes and a bank account. He knew the sum total within a dollar, but it was a keen delight for him to sit down and cast up interest again and add it to the principal. With greedy look and trembling fingers he brought out his memoranda and pencil and soon forgot the storm and the outside world.

"SEE! I HAVE BROUGHT THE BOOK."

"So you are figuring again, Miser Jones, closing the account of the old year and opening with the new?"

The old man leaped from his chair with a shout of surprise. No one had knocked at the door. He was alone in the room. The voice had come from one seated on the opposite side of the table, but he looked and rubbed his eyes and saw only vacancy.

"Sit down, Miser Jones. Sit down while we talk together a bit," continued the voice as the windows rattled in the storm and a skurry of snow blew into the room under the door and reached almost to the old man's feet.

He looked all about him in a dazed and wondering way and sat down.

"The old year has ended, the new begun, Miser Jones. Human life is counted by days and weeks and months and years. On the tombstones of the dead you may read that they who sleep beneath lived so many years, months and days. It is meant that each and every man should sit down at the beginning of a new year and write the record of the old. You are an old man. You have lived beyond the time allotted to man. Your hand shakes as your fingers guide the pencil. You have been making figures. Let me take the pencil and help you."

"But I want no help!" protested the old man. "You have no right here! You were not asked to come! Leave me, or I will call for help!"

"You are figuring on dollars and cents," said the voice. "There is a long column of figures, and I will look them over with you and help you to find the sum total. You have first recorded the sum of $300. That is money you loaned to a hardworking mechanic and took a mortgage on his home. Misfortune had come to him and still pursues him. You hoped that more trouble would come to him, and it has. You figured from the first that you would get possession of his home for half its value, and yesterday, when he came to you with trembling lips and pleaded misfortune, your heart was like stone. Today you are figuring on your profit."

"But he came to me to borrow and was willing to pay the interest!" protested Miser Jones.

"Here is the sum of $750," continued the voice. "You lent a widow $300 on a mortgage and foreclosed it and drove her out of her home. You figure that you made $450 on that deal. She came to you and wept and prayed, but you rubbed your wrinkled hands in satisfaction."

"One must have a profit when he lends money," replied Miser Jones as he looked at the figures with satisfaction.

"Here is the sum of $600. You loaned money to the owner of a small factory to help start him again after he had been crippled by fire, but what the flames left you soon took possession of. Yes, you made a clean $600 on that transaction. I find the sum of $200 and $275 and $300, a long column of figures here to show the profits of the year just ended and add to your fortune. Miser Jones, you are a rich man."

"Yes, yes—a rich man! I like to hear you say I am rich!"

"But you are an old man. You cannot hope to live a great while longer."

"But I shall live for years and years. I am not so old as you think. Don't talk to me of death."

"You are an old man, and your time has almost come," continued the voice. "You have laid up treasure on earth.

SOME ONE CRIED OUT THAT MISER JONES WAS DEAD.

Let us see what is to your credit in heaven. There is no money beyond the grave. The souls of the dead are judged by past deeds and not by the amount of gold and silver left behind. Take the pencil, Miser Jones. It shall be left to you to make the record. Have you had sympathy for the ragged and shivering and hungry fellow men who passed your door?"

"But all of them were impostors!"

"Men and women have appealed to you in sickness and misfortune as one fellow man has the right to appeal to another. How have you responded to those appeals?"

"I can't always be giving and giving!"

"Without religion earth would be a desert and man a savage. All that is good and noble and beautiful comes from our faith in God. What have you done to aid the cause?"

"It costs a great lot of money to keep up so many churches!" sighed the old man.

"There are destitute widows, fatherless children and grieving orphans, whom it is our duty to assist. Even a kind word to such is placed to our record in heaven. Write down your credit, Miser Jones."

The old man had nothing to write, no word of reply.

"All around you hearts have ached. Tears of sorrow have been shed. Men have cursed their God because of the coldness of the world. Have you brought a ray of sunlight to a single one one of these?"

Miser Jones had no answer.

"What has your life been made up of? Avarice, selfishness, greed. You have sinned against God and man and yourself. In your greed of gain you have throttled every noble sentiment God placed in your heart as a child. You have sacrificed every principle that makes a man respected and beloved. You have made money, but you have been pointed out as a thing instead of a man. As a human being you have lived to be hated and reviled. After death—what?"

"After death—what?" whispered Miser Jones.

"The recording angel of heaven sets apart a page in her golden book for each human being born into the world. See! I have brought the book that you might gaze upon it. Here is your page—the page on which your name was inscribed as a child. What do you see?"

The old man looked and peered and rubbed his eyes. Blindness seemed to have come to him, and in his terror he groaned aloud.

"Here is the debit—avarice, selfishness, greed, riches. Here should be your credits, but there are none. Look for them. Bend your head to bring your eyes nearer. Today brings a new year. Today you pass from earth to eternity to stand before your God and be judged. This is the record from which he will judge you! I close the book!"

The gale howled about the old house and rattled doors and windows, but Miser Jones paid no heed. Men passed and repassed, some laughing, some cursing, but he did not look out upon them. Noon came, and he sat there with pencil in his fingers and paper before him. The winter day drew to a close, and night came down, but no light shone from his window. At midnight he sat where noon found him, at daylight where the winds of midnight had blown the snow under the door and over his feet. When noon came again, some one opened his door and cried out that Miser Jones was dead!

DIPHTHERIA

Too many homes bear this fear-inspiring placard, denoting the prevalence of that most insidious and dreaded of all diseases—Diphtheria.

It is to-day a recognized fact among the best practitioners that nine out of ten cases formerly considered hopeless may be brought to a happy termination by the use of that great original raw food product,

Bovinine.

This great blood-generating, life-maintaining, strength-developing, and flesh-producing product of lean, raw meat, contains the greatest amount of life-preserving qualities in the least possible bulk of any preparation known.

In cases of Diphtheria, Bovinine has special advantages. In this disease, as in others, the rapidity with which it is assimilated gives to it a preference over all other foods, passing, as it does, into the system immediately, without causing the digestive organs to perform any labor. And considering the fact that the lesions in the throat prevent the swallowing of solid food, it becomes an absolute necessity. In the worst cases, where even liquids cannot be taken by the mouth, Bovinine by being used as an injection. Above all, Bovinine is in itself a germicide, and in all such diseases as Diphtheria, caused by microbes, it not only performs its greatest mission of maintaining life, but antidotes the existing bacilli.

Bovinine has done wonders in thousands of cases of Diphtheria. When your doctor uses it you may cease to worry, and be assured of a speedy recovery. To neglect its use may mean years of remorse in the feeling that some loved one might still be with you if everything possible had been done. Bovinine is sold by all Druggists.

EUROPE STORM-RIDDEN

Awful Fatalities Reported Afloat and Ashore.

The Meagre Reports So Far Received Show Terrible Loss of Life—The Worst Has Not Been Heard—All Great Britain Suffering — France and Germany Not Spared.

London, Dec. 24.—Report of death and damage to property in the great storm are received. Three fishing smacks went down off Stornaway, on the Scotch coast, and all three crews, numbering 22, were drowned. At Teelin a house collapsed and the three occupants were killed. In Stranorlar two persons were killed by a falling chimney. The brig Loven was wrecked in the Firth of Clyde near Androssaa and her crew of five were drowned.

At Lochwinnoch near Paisley a three-story cabinet factory was wrecked. Forty persons were buried in the ruins. Four were killed outright, and twenty were injured seriously. The proprietor was struck in the back, by a falling timber and is dying. Only five persons escaped without injury.

Paris, Dec. 24.—The storm which has swept northwestern Europe has done great damage in Belgium. The Dendre overflowed its banks at Termonde and the inhabitants were aroused at midnight by ringing bells to flee for their lives.

In Rotterdam the water rose twelve feet above the usual high water mark. The streets were under two or three feet of water and the inhabitants paddled about on rafts and in boats. The dykes of the Meuse and Yssel were strained severely along their lower courses. At one place a large break let out a flood which covered a wide area and did enormous damages. Throughout the Netherlands and Belgium many persons were injured and a few were killed by falling chimneys and timbers.

The pilot cutter Lamaneur capsized off Dunkirk and three of the crew were drowned.

Northern France and Germany suffered severely from the storm although the loss of life and property cannot be estimated as yet.

MARRIED IN JAIL.

Incarceration No Bar To a Matrimonial Venture.

Columbus, O., Dec. 24.—James N. Bray, reputed son of an English army officer of high rank, arived at the Ohio penitentiary here. He came to this country a few months ago and located in Cleveland, where he purchased costly furniture on the installment plan, sold it, and without paying for it, skipped to Houston Tex., where he was arrested.

The arrest interferred with his marriage there to Miss Grace Huge, but she followed to Cleveland and the wedding took place in the jail.

The young man's father sent him $300 to square maters and while the firm he had beaten was willing to settle, the prosecutor would not allow it.

Then several wealthy and influential citizens, who satisfied themselves of the rank of the young man's father, tried to save the accused but their efforts failed. They will now make an effort to secure a pardon for him from Governor McKinley.

A Band of Burglars Arrested.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 24.—The band of burglars who broke into David Slocum's house in Washington township a week ago and after maltreating the old man and his wife, robbed them of over $10,000, have all been arrested. Frank Anderson, the leader, and his brother-in-law, Ralph Vanauler, are in jail here. Jeremiah Casey is in custody in Patterson, N. J., and other members of the gang are under arrest in New York state. Anderson met Casey in the Meadville, Pa., jail and the plot was planned there, which led up to the robbery. A number of other arrests will be made to-day.

Hunters Killed by Guides.

Bangor, Me., Dec. 24.—Camella Nashau and Charles Langley, of Brownville, were murdered in a camp in Millinocket yesterday forenoon. Joseph and Newel Gabriel, Indians, guides with bad reputations, are suspected of the murder. The victims had been hunting, and the supposition is that the Indians killed them for the purpose of robbery. Sheriff Reed has arrested both men.

Massillon Miners To Strike.

Akron, O., Dec. 24.—The judgment of the board of arbitration in the Massillon district has not been accepted by the miners of Summit county and as a result about 400 of them are out on strike. The 1,100 miners in this county are all affiliated with the United Mine workers and it is expected that the other 700 will join the strikers.

A Lucky Bootblack.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 24.—James Beaven, bootblack at the Gibson house, received word yesterday that he had fallen heir to $65,000 through the death of a cousin, William Went, a baker, of Chicago. He has been at the Gibson eight years, always steady, and the congratulations that were showered upon him were numerous and hearty.

The Nimrods Have Returned.

Washington, Dec. 24.—President Cleveland and party have reached here on their return from their duck shooting expedition in South Carolina in fine spirits and greatly refreshed by their outing.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

Second Division of the Japan's Army Steadily Advancing Northward.

London, Dec. 24.—The Antone correspondent of the Central News says that Gen. Yamagi's division of the second Japanese army has advanced northward steadily for a month, and on December 18 occupied Kai-Ping. No defense was made.

On December 19 scouts reported to Lieut. Gen. Katsura that a large force of Chinese had been seen moving in the direction of Laio-Yang. This force proved to be the defeated garrison of Hai-Cheng, under the command of Gen. Sung.

The Chinese had fled with all possible speed ever since the 13th, when their position was captured by the enemy. They were then in a rather demoralized condition, and were making for Moukden. Katsura decides to intercept them. He left camp on the night of the 18th with his whole force and the next morning overtook the Chinese at the village of Kung-Wasai, where they made an obstinate stand.

Although in poor condition they were nearly 10,000 strong and were able to force some fierce fighting upon the Japanese. In the midst of the battle Oshima's brigade from Hai-Cheng came up and gave Katsura active support.

The Chinese held out with surprising bravery. They faced the well-directed fire from five Japanese batteries and fought desperately, although without effective organization.

The Japanese infantry charged twice through the scattered lines, but the enemy rallied. Three bayonet charges eventually won the day for Katsura after five hours of the hottest fighting yet experienced by the second army. The Chinese faltered as the third advance began and they fled in disorder toward Ying-Kow. The losses are not known, but the Chinese are reported to have left 500 men on the field.

Col. Fukushima, who gained notoriety some time ago by riding from Berlin to Corea, has been appointed chief civil administrator of Antone.

A dispatch from the Central News correspondent at Tokio says that Corea has agreed to open the new ports of Mokpo, province of Chollado, and Chiunampo on the Tatung river.

A HUSBAND'S CRUELTY.

He Could Not Drown Her, So He Beat Her.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Dec. 24.—John Para, an Italian laborer living in the Tunnel district of the city, is under arrest for attempting to murder his wife here. According to the woman's story her husband, in a furious passion, grasped her by the arm and dragged her across the street upon which they lived and into a small cove on the upper river, where he tried to drown her. She struggled and finally escaped from him and ran back to the house. Para followed her and again dragged her back to the river, where he plunged her into the water until he supposed she was dead. After leaving her the woman crawled out on the shore where the water was shallow and returned to her wretched home. Her husband met her at the door saying, "If I cannot drown you I can kill you with this club." He then proceeded to beat her in a frightful manner until her cries alarmed the neighbors. The woman was badly cut on her head and her body is a mass of bruises. She is in a delicate condition and it is doubtful if she can recover. Para is in jail.

FATAL STABBING AFFRAY.

John Burns Strikes His Uncle, Who Retaliates with a Knife.

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 24.—John P. Ryan, 26 years of age, was fatally stabbed by his uncle, William T. Byrnes, aged 36 years, near the former's home, No. 1,277 East Main street. Byrnes was arrested, but first denied having committed the murder. He afterwards confessed, saying that he acted in self-defence. Both men, with George H. Penney, left the saloon of P. H. Backett, No. 1,080 East Main street, just before midnight. Penney and John Byrnes walked ahead and William came along behind. As they reached a point opposite John's house, John charged William with owing him money and struck him in the face. William pulled out a knife with two blades and struck John directly over the heart. William walked on home and went to bed. John and Penney walked across the street to the former's house. John fell down at the gate and died a few minutes after.

Embezzling Cashier Arrested.

New York, Dec. 24.—Harold G. Butt, 26 years old, of 453 Pulaski street, Brooklyn, cashier of Hammerslough Bros., clothiers, at 698 Broadway, was a prisoner in the Tombs court yesterday, charged with embezzling $16,000 of that firm's money. It was found that Butt has been systematically altering the books for some time past. Butt refused to say anything and pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice Ryan. He was held in default of $5,000 bail for examination on Wednesday next.

The Engine "Ran Away."

Pittsburg, Dec. 24.—An immense engine in the Carnegie plant at Braddock has been completely wrecked. The loss is about $15,000. Three hundred men are out of employment. A heavy ball twenty feet above the floor became detached and fell on one of the pipes. The engine "ran away," and the thirty-foot fly wheel flew apart and pieces weighing above two tons fell a block away.

Killed by His Servant.

Guadalajara, Mex., Dec. 24.—George H. Torrand, an American mining machine agent, who left here a few days ago on the overland trip to Colima, on the Pacific coast, was killed and robbed near the town of Ameca by his servant, who accompanied him.

Grief Cost a Little Life.

Norristown, Pa., Dec. 24.—A six-year-old daughter of John Washington is dead from grief. Two weeks ago an older sister died, and ever since the little one refused to eat and gradually pined away.

Defaulter Seely's Sentence.

New York, Dec. 24.—Samuel C. Seely, the $354,000 bank thief, will be sentenced to-day by Judge Benedict, of the United States court. The maximum penalty is ten years and the minimum five years.

FOUGHT FOR HIS LIFE

Innocent Men Shot by a Fugitive Murderer.

Jabex Wiggins, Colored. Kills Anderson Williams and Escapes—He Is Pursued by the Police and Kills Detective Joe Murray—John Davis, White, Also Killed.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 24.—Great excitement prevails in this city over the killing of two innocent citizens and the wounding of several officers by a desperate negro fleeing from justice.

Jabex Wiggins, a negro, waylaid Anderson Williams, also colored, on the North Carolina side of the river several miles from Augusta, killing him and it is said also attempted to kill another old negro. The murderer fled to Augusta. Negroes living in the vicinity of the crime learned that he had come to this city and was at the home of his sister. They followed him here and asked assistance at police headquarters to make the arrest. Detective Joe Murray was detailed for the work with instructions to call for further help from the police precinct in which Wiggins' sister's house was located. Officers Wrenn and Stringer accompanied him. Wiggins was told by his sister of the approach of the officers, and as they entered the house where he was lying, the murderer opened fire upon them, shooting Murray twice in the face about the nose and mouth, and Stringer near the eye. Murray will die. Stringer may recover, but he will be injured for life. The negro then fled, followed by Wrenn. The pistol shots attracted people in the neighborhood to the streets and among them was John Davis, white, an operative in Richmond factory near Augusta, who came to the city to spend Christmas with his family. Davis was shot in the breast by a bullet from the murderer's pistol and died in half an hour. Wrenn pursued the fugitive to the river bank, where the negro hid behind a clump of trees. Holding a pistol aloft in his right hand the scoundrel told the officer that he surrendered, and to come and take him.

The officer advanced and the negro shot him in the leg with a long barrelled pistol he had concealed in his left hand. Others joined in the chase, but the murderer reloaded his weapons and made a desperate fight. He was directing his steps toward the bridge, hoping to escape into South Carolina. Just as he approached it, however, one shot hit him, inflicting only a flesh wound. His weapons were empty then and he surrendered. The presence of a number of policemen on the scene when he was captured saved his life.

The only thing that saves the murderer's life to-night is the fact that the legislature that has just adjourned passed a law empowering the judge to call a special session of the superior court in criminal cases for immediate trial. The negro will be tried within two weeks and February winds will probably blow over his grave.

A LOST SON RETURNS.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Young Man Is Explained.

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 24.—Six years ago, at this season, George A. Avon left the home of his father to visit friends in Biddeford, Me., and he was not heard from until yesterday, when he walked into his home, hale and hearty. His mother was nearly prostrated with joy.

George says he was carried from St. John, N. B., in a cattle ship bound for Liverpool. On the way over he and others of the crew were arrested, and reaching port were tried and convicted. He was innocent of the charge brought against him, but he had to serve his sentence, which expired six months ago. He then earned the money necessary to pay his passage to this country, and came home as soon as he could.

Christmas in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The gaities of Christmas week will be largely devoted to the children, for whose pleasure many entertainments have been planned. At the white house extensive preparations have been made for the celebration of Christmas day. This year there will be hung by the chimney in nursery two stockings. In the afternoon a Christmas party will be given by Misses Ruth and Esther Cleveland for all the children of the cabinet. At twilight a gorgeous Christmas tree will be lighted with vari-colored electric lamps. Mrs. Carlisle is preparing a delightful celebration for her little grandchildren, who are visiting in the capital this winter.

Improved Facilities at Liverpool.

Liverpool, Dec. 24.—The Cunard Steamship company has made an arrangement beginning on January 1, to convey railway passengers between the railway stations and their steamships without extra charge. They will get permission for their passengers to carry free on the railways to London double the amount of baggage formerly allowed. It is hoped that the railway connection with the quay's will be completed within the next six months.

The Chelford Accident.

London, Dec. 24.—The accounts of the railway accident near Chelford still vary. The most trustworthy report is that the high wind started a freight car down-grade on a side track and sent it into the main line as the Chelford express passed. The freight car drove two carriages off the track and the next three carriages in the express were tumbled after them. Thirteen persons were killed and seventeen are in the hospital.

Shot His Fiancee.

Paris, Mo., Dec. 24.—Robert House and Hattie Hayden, living at Florida, this county, were to have been married next week. They became involved in a lover's quarrel and Rouse shot and fatally wounded his fiancee. He escaped but officers are in pursuit.

Died with His Boots On.

Danville, Ky., Dec. 24.—Pikejah Rowsey, the desperado, was killed at Junction City by Town Marshal Ellis, whom he resisted. Rowsey was the last of a family of seven sons, all of whom died with their boots on.

A NEW YEAR'S SONG.

BY JEROME WOOD.

Turn on, old Time, my boy, keep the ball rolling.
Just for a kick, my boy, don't let it flag.
Set the bells jingling to keep them from tolling.
Joy give man, be he in velvet or rag.
Laugh, quaff, brush away tear.
We're waiting—come on! Bring in the New Year!

And why not be hopeful, and, when we can, jolly?
The woes of the past we need not recall.
Dispel, then, all sighs and drive out melancholy.
But, hark! There's a voice and a sound in the hall!
Laugh, quaff, brush away tear!
Ope the door wide! You're welcome, New Year!

A MODERN WOOING.

A NEW YEAR'S INCIDENT.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"Bachelors' apartments! Humph! A blot on civilization, a libel on the Creator. A miserable tribe, the whole lot!"

Since the Armitage lifted its brown stone front on Washington square, east, Jonathan Standish had been master of its most spacious suit. Ten years the black and white enamel placard, "Bachelors' Apartments," had confronted his entres and his exits to always irritate him.

"Bachelors indeed!" he groaned, brushing the snow crystals from his iron gray

IT WAS THE ONE WOMAN'S NAME.

mustache. "They ought to be killed, every mother's son of them—wiped off the face of the earth."

"Bad night, Mr. Standish."

"Beastly. Beastly."

"It's coming in like a lion."

The elevator stopped at the third floor. The dean of the Armitage's bon vivants alighted.

"What did you remark, Toby?"

"New Year's is coming like a lion, sir."

"Ah, yes. New Year's? Why, so it is. You're right, Toby. May it bring luck to you, my lad. God bless you."

Richer by a gold eagle, Toby descended in glee, while Standish crossed the threshold of his luxurious semblance of a home. A fire crackled brightly. Creature comforts were on every side, but the lord of the manor felt stifled. Was it the ominous silence, the pertinent placard in the vestibule or disappointment in not meeting a single boon companion at the club? Where were they? What was up?

It was New Year's eve. They were doubtless in the bosom of their families or the guest of honor in the home of a kindred, while he, Jonathan Standish, boy and man for 50 years in the metropolis, was without home, kith or kindred. More than one of his forefathers slept in Trinity churchyard. The stately house in Stuyvesant square where so many, many happy days of his boyhood had passed was long since relegated to a boarding house. And they were going—oh, so rapidly!—all the old familiar faces.

"Won't do, won't do," he muttered, slipping into his elder gown. Antagonistic to his tastes and temperament was the life he led. He was the victim of a series of circumstances that he fancied he was powerless to have averted, and so his life had drifted. "Too late, too late!" Memory recalled what might have been, egotism what was yet possible. "All the good old fashioned women are gone. There's nothing left but that caricature, the new woman. Bah, with her ologies and her isms, her suffrage meetings and good government clubs! She is not only driving men from stores, offices and counting rooms; but, by George, she has robbed him of his coat, vest and four-in-hand, and now she wants his breeches!"

He set about to clean up his secretary. An old address book rolled out. Leisurely

"WHEN I TELL YOU OF THE WILD GOOSE CHASE YOU HAVE GIVEN ME."

he turned the pages. The addresses smacked for the most part of the turf and the counting room.

"Miss Blackmore, 189 Broadway." It was the one woman's name in the little red book. Standish lit his pipe and drew up his chair to the open hearth.

"What a game of whist that woman plays! I wish she were here now. What a rubber we could have if Daniels and the captain would drop in! There's not a man at the club that can match her. There's a woman of horse sense! No new fangled notions about her!" And Standish's thoughts went back to Mrs. Vandyke's parlor at Manhattan. Mrs Vandyke was a dilapidated society woman who resorted to summer boarders to replenish her coffers. Late in the season Standish chanced at her cottage, and the domesticity of the environment charmed him, and soon Standish was enrolled among the widow's most substantial guests.

The night of his arrival it rained incessantly. The guests were driven from the verandas to the parlor. Before Standish could escape Mrs. Vandyke proposed a game of whist. He had an old fashioned reverence for womankind, but when it came to playing whist with them he had his prejudices, but he consented. It did not escape his keen glance that his partner, Miss Blackmore, was not of his world or the type of women he had known and admired in his youth.

Certainly she had little in common with the "set" in which Mrs. Vandyke had singed her wings. But hers was the voice and manner of the well bred woman of experience—experience derived from personal contact with cruel facts rather than from the dilletantisms of the boudoir or the drawing room. She was, moreover, such a strong partner that he did what he had not been guilty of for 20 years—frankly pleaded that an acquaintance so pleasantly begun might not end so abruptly. Miss Blackmore smiled, handed him her card and told him she was always at 189 Broadway.

"A clever woman. No nonsense about her. I meant to hunt her up before this," said Standish aloud as he wakened from his reverie.

"One hundred and eighty-nine Broadway? What the deuce can a woman—such a woman—be doing so far down town? One thousand one hundred and eighty-nine, 981 or 891 would bring her nearer a resident neighborhood. There must be a mistake."

But, then, it was 189 in the little red book. Standish knew, or thought he knew, Broadway from Central park to the Battery. Neither hotel, apartment house nor private residence responded to any combination his fertile fancy could make out of Miss Blackmore's address.

The next night—New Year's night—a hansom drove up at the Armitage. With a carnation in his buttonhole, Standish entered, and it rumbled gayly toward 1189 Broadway, for he could not persuade himself that he had not omitted a figure from Miss Blackmore's address. No. 1189 was a street car stable.

"Drive to 981."

The red lamp of a Turkish bath for "men exclusively" reflected 981.

"Try 891." A wholesale toyhouse greeted cabby. When the hansom finally halted at 189, Standish alighted and scanned the directory in the hallway of a modern scraper.

"Sixth floor—R. Blackmore, draftsman."

On the fourth floor he met the janitor.

"Does R. Blackmore live in this building?"

"There's a Miss Blackmore who has an office on the sixth floor. Never here at night. Don't you know, man, this is a holiday?"

Standish colored. "But I thought she lived here," he stammered—"had apartments, you know."

The janitor chuckled. "Miss Blackmore lives at the Columbine, Washington square, west."

"Whew!" said Standish.

As the hansom rolled back to Washington square Standish found himself face to face with the new woman in a new light. Was it the true light? He had met Miss Blackmore on purely social grounds, and in a social spirit of more than passing interest had asked to call, and she had smilingly given him her business address.

Ten o'clock found Standish in a large alcove room that played the double role of boudoir and salon. In appointment it was simple, but rich, very rich in that which his sumptuous quarters sadly missed, the indefinable touch of a woman, the intangible aroma of sweetness long drawn out.

The latest magazines were on the table. Casts from the antique and copies of the old masters were on the walls. In the shadow of the open hearth was a couch smothered in multicolored cushions. A cozy tea table, with a singing kettle, gleamed under a swinging lamp.

"A HOME," CONTINUED STANDISH.

"Just in time, Mr. Standish. I was about to have a cup of tea. You will share it with me, will you not? And I'm so sorry that two can't play whist."

She extended her hand as if they had parted but yesterday. Very simple and wholesome was Miss Blackmore in the flowing lines of an old rose tea gown. But traces of tears, the first shed in a dozen years, trembled in her dark eyes and did not escape her New Year's caller.

"When I tell you of the wild goose chase you have given me this evening, I trust you will pardon, Miss Blackmore, the tardiness of this intrusion," said Standish, relating with humorous interpolation his reckless ride in pursuit of 189.

His hostess laughed—a merry laugh, with a sob in its ebb.

"How long have you lived in the Columbine?"

"Three years."

"And we have been neighbors all this time? It is ten since I went to the Armitage."

"So, so," said Miss Blackmore. "One of the Christian privileges of living in a cosmopolitan community. No one knows or cares who is his neighbor, provided his comfort or his exclusiveness is unmolested."

"And do you approve of this manner of living?" said Standish.

"I have never had time to give it serious thought," confessed Miss Blackmore, filling his cup. "Most of my life is spent at 189 Broadway."

"You would have preferred to have seen me there rather than here among your penates, a precious boon to me, I assure you." His flattering eyes took in the woman and the environment, each the complement of the other.

"Pray do not misunderstand me," said she, with an impulsive warmth he had not suspected possible to so placid an exterior. "It was force of habit alone that prompted me to give you my business address. Since we are neighbors I will be frank. It never occurs to me, it hasn't for years, that anybody of your persuasion, any man, desires to see me on other than business matters. That will seem strange to you, perhaps, and equally strange to women who are not part and parcel of this workaday world. Nevertheless it is true, as hundreds of women toilers have learned, some to their profit, more to their loss. You see, I have never been without responsibilities. I was early forced into the world to earn my own living. I have created and do fill a distinctive place in the business world. Experience has awakened me to the injustices that confront the woman breadwinner."

"And does it satisfy, does it pay?"

Miss Blackmore paled. It was the very question she had asked herself, and in the effort to answer had shed the tears that had not dried when Standish disturbed her reveries.

Why had this stranger come at this inopportune time to learn in ten minutes more of her inner life than did her closest friends? More and more she was beginning to realize that it did not satisfy her. And this night, of all others, when she had been alone, while the whole world seemed to be reviewing friendships, the thought came to her with unusual force.

"Do you believe in women voting? Do you go to their meetings, make speeches?" gasped Standish.

"No," said Miss Blackmore thoughtfully. "I believe in letting woman's work speak for itself. All existing evils will be righted in time, I think, and much speedier if women would learn to talk less and labor more individually to make themselves invaluable in whatever industry they enter."

"And you have succeeded?"

"Yes, I am counted among the successful women, and I am paying the price. I have no time for social amenities. All day down town, night finds me fatigued, happy to seek the seclusion of the Columbine. Occasionally old friends who have survived the chagrin of my seeming incivility in not returning calls, accepting invitations to lunches, dinners and clubs drop in for cards or a chat. Then I try to keep in touch with new books, new pictures, new plays."

"Does it satisfy, does it pay, to live as you and I do, for example?" said Standish. "To pass in and out of the Armitage and the Columbine year in and year out, with nobody to say, 'God be with you going; heaven send you back?' Nobody to care whether you sink, swim, survive or perish, save the janitor or the elevator boy, who might perhaps miss a fee if neither of us ever returned in the flesh? As a student of sociology I have given the subject thought of late. Believe me, the only one it satisfies, the only one it pays, is the landlord. Oh, I tell you, it is all wrong, and it's such men, such women, as you and I that are multiplying Columbines and Armitages, libels on the sacred name of home.

"I hope you will pardon me, Miss Blackmore, for bringing business into your 'holy of holies,'" he continued, pacing the length of the cozy den. "I have a scheme in which it's my heart's desire to enlist your sympathy, your aid. Let us help wipe out bachelor apartments and maiden dens by building for ourselves a home."

She lifted her hand forbiddingly, but "love in her eyes sat playing."

"A home," continued Standish, folding her hand in his warm grasp, "with a yard in front, a yard in the rear and a yard all around, and neighbors in whose joy we at least will rejoice and with their sorrows weep."

This accounts for the disappearance of R. Blackmore from the directory of 189 Broadway. The young man Mrs. Jonathan Standish trained in her office has succeeded to the business, thus enabling him to give his mother and sister an honorable discharge from the industrial army.

AT THE PARK CLUB.

Christmas Eve Dance Enjoyed by the Junior Set.

A Christmas Eve dance was given at the Park Club, affording delight to the juniors and their friends. The house was prettily decorated with evergreens. The patroneesses were Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. Peck. The management was in the hands of the efficient committee, Clifford McGee, Louis Edward Waring and Edmund Rushmore. The music was by Conde and Rogers. Among those present were: Misses Florence Abbott, Maud Middledith, Marion L. Henderson, Cornelia Faber, Bessie Southwick, Edith T. Clapp, Daisy Elsberg, Grace D. Barlow, Alice Barlow, the Misses McCraedy, the Misses Clark, Misses Daniel, Hallah VanDeventer, Sarah Long, Laura Kyte, Schoonmaker, Cathrine Miller; the Messrs. Case and Schoonmaker and Messrs. Charles Kyte, Wesley Abbott, James Middledith, Jr., Charles E. Faber, Dryden, John Brower, Charles Cook, Carl S. Brown, Frank Thompson, Charles Stillman, Allen Laing, Fred Fish, David B. Rushmore, Clarence Peck, Freeman, Fred Hebert, Howard Turrell and many of the members of the club.

German Reformed Entertainment.

The members of the Sunday-school of the German Reformed Church and their friends met in the Sunday-school room last evening at 7, and were entertained for two hours in a pleasing manner. The celebration was in charge of Rev. Mr. Hauser, who announced the numbers of the programme. The exercises opened with singing by the school, and the pastor then read a Scripture selection and offered prayer. The little ones of the school entertained the audience with clever recitations. Miss Nettie Kreitling sang "Scatter Sunshine". Her voice has many pleasing qualities. A delightful vocal duet by Miss Kreitling and Miss Lillie Zelsz was rendered. Probably the best part of the programme was the giving of the three tableaux at the close, "Shepherds from the Field", "Wise Men from the East", and "Blessing of the Little Children". Those taking part in them were Mrs. Utzinger, Peter Doeringer, Mr. Bechtel, F. G. Bach, J. Utzinger, Wm. Vanderweg, Miss Josie Fritz, Miss F. Sutterlein. Mr. Schroeder was the efficient organist. The scholars received books, candy and oranges, and all left for home much pleased with the entertainment.

Were They Afraid to Face the Traps?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—About 150 live birds were shot on the grounds of the Dunellen Gun Club Christmas day. Messrs. Carmen and Sisty of the Dunellen Gun Club were conspicuous by their absence from the sport. For one year they have been to every shoot held by the club, and have done some creditable shooting, but for reasons of their own they both declared their intentions not to shoot with the club Christmas day. Whether they were afraid to get up against the New Market contingent of shooters or not is a question. As Mr. Carmen was recently defeated by a New Market man, it appears that there may be some truth in the rumor. Mr. Sisty when asked about his absence claimed that he was suffering from neuralgia. But those who know Walter say that it takes more than that to stump him if he really wants to shoot.

NEW MARKET SPORT.

Grace P. E. Church Christmas.

The decorations in Grace P. E. Church yesterday probably excelled all others in Plainfield. In front of the chancel was a rude screen, and each column was encased with a three-foot band of greens, while in the back of the church a very handsome dado of greens showed to good advantage. The reredos, pulpit and lectern were prettily covered with holly, and in each arch hung large evergreen bells with silver tongues. The body of the church was heavily festooned with roping. The regular Christmas service was rendered. This evening at 7:30 the children's Christmas festival takes place. Carols will be sung by the school, assisted by a full boy choir and Miss Berg with the cornet. Following this the school will march to the chapel and enjoy the Christmas tree. Gifts will be distributed.

Cakes for Carmen.

Conductor Jesse Hetfield of the street railway received a large cake from Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, chairman of the soldiers and sailors work of the W. C. T. U., yesterday, which the employes appreciated very much. Those on the Somerset street branch also received a cake from kind friends, and they all wish to extend their hearty thanks for these kind remembrances.

—The Sunday-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church will enjoy their Christmas festival this evening.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. THE COTILLION CLUB.

Inaugural Meeting at the Home of J. M. Whiton.

MERRY WELCOME TO CHRISTMAS DAY.

All the Holiday Ingredients Abundantly Utilized, Including Holly, Mistletoe, and a Row of Stockings Over the Fireplace—Huge Dice Decide Dancing Partnerships—Santa Claus Visits at Midnight.

A happy Christmas party assembled Christmas Eve at the handsome residence of John M Whiton, 827 Central avenue, the occasion being the first of the Winter series of dances given by the Cotillion Club, the fair and popular hostess being Miss Nella B. Whiton, one of the members of the club.

The beautiful reception hall, library and parlors were festooned with garlands of holly and evergreen, and from the arch leading to the library depended a large branch of mistletoe.

From the elaborately carved mantelpiece over the huge open fireplace, hung stockings filled with bonbons, from which the party helped themselves throughout the evening.

Dancing was enjoyed during the early evening hours, after which an elaborate supper was served by Caterer Wiertz, in his accustomed faultless style.

Thomas VanBoskerck and Miss Nella B. Whiton led in the beautiful cotillion, which succeeded the banquet, and many novel and effective figures were introduced in the dances which followed.

Large hoops twined with evergreen were held by the men, through which the women danced in step with the strains of sweet music, stopping at a given signal and joining the favored ones in the dance which followed. Enormous dice were thrown from still larger baskets, and the man who was so fortunate as to match the fair damsel's throw claimed her as his partner as they "tripped the light fantastic toe".

Again, a curtain was hung in the archway, protruding through which were seen the masked faces of expectant gallants; and each beautifully gowned fair one in her turn selected from the galaxy of "counterfeit presentments" one whom she favored in the waltz which followed.

The favors in the german were many and novel. Particularly noticeable among them was a quaint conceit in the form of a set of Salem witches mounted on their broomsticks.

Soon the beautiful Dutch hall clock, whose history covers a period of over two hundred years, clanged forth the hour of midnight, and amid the ringing of bells and the vociferous tooting of horns, Santa Claus, whose name in real life is Alfred Streuli, waltzed through the portals, and, dancing through the spacious rooms, distributed gifts from his enormous pack.

His advent was a pleasant surprise to the happy party of revelers, and it was some time before the mirth occasioned by his merry capers subsided sufficiently for the dance to continue. The party did not disperse until 2 in the starry morning, one and all congratulating their fair hostess on the marked success attending the celebration, and expressing their delight at participating.

Throughout the evening Elliot's orchestra discoursed sweet music.

The guests, all of whom are members of the club, were: Miss Huntington, Miss Ginna, Miss Margaret Yates, Miss Harte, Miss Stewart, Miss Waring, Miss Reinhart, Miss Dumont, Miss Talmadge, the Misses Holly, Miss Elizabeth VanBoskerck, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Walz, Miss Durand, Miss May Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Alfred Streuli, the Messrs. Waring, Irving West, Archibald Henderson, Howard Beebe, Fred Walz, Clifford McGee, Edward Bloodgood, Marshall Adams, the Messrs. Shepard, Dr. Benjamin Hedges, Percy Stewart, Henry Opdyke, Frank Cokefair, the Messrs. VanBoskerck, Mr. Durand, Rowland Cox, Jr., Howard Huntington and Will Runyon.

The favors were distributed by Mrs. Daniel Ginna, and Miss Huntington.

The next party of the club series will be given in February by Miss Dumont of 151 East Seventh street.

Cedar, Boxwood and Ivy.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, was beautiful in its Christmas decoration yesterday. An entirely new plan was tried, and only cedar, boxwood and the English ivy were used. Shapely trees lined the aisle on either side, and as one looked through the vista thus made the white dossal at the Chancel was seen with careless wreathes of ivy over it. The front was beautiful with its glossy boxwood and its ivy cross. The carols and the music were excellently rendered, Miss Graves being organist, and Miss Yaeger was first soprano.

—The Sunday-school lessons for the last six months will be reviewed and illustrated with the stereopticon in the Crescent Avenue Church at 8 tonight. All interested in the lessons are invited.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—"A Texas Steer" is booked for Music Hall Jan. 21.

—The profit of the recent fair held in Grace M. E. Church was about $75.

—The Scott Printing Machine Works have closed down till after New Year's.

—Ever delightful Charles T. Ellis played "Casper the Yodler" to a crowded house in Music Hall last night.

—The directors of the First National Bank declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent, at their meeting yesterday morning.

—Someone has stolen the cover of the water-main shut-off box in the roadway at Belvidere and Woodland avenue, leaving a dangerous hole in the middle of the road.

—Of the 13 Crescent Wheelmen who started in their century run, 12 finished, and these have been presented with handsome silver souvenir badges of special design.

—The members of the East Third Street Mission will hold their festival this evening. Only the scholars and their parents will be accommodated, on account of the limited room.

—The Swedish congregation will celebrate Christmas this evening in the German Lutheran Church. It is thought that arrangements will be made for them to meet regularly in this church.

—Stationmaster J. A. Haynes came to the rescue yesterday by finding and bringing to Plainfield, after much telegraphing, the "Casper" scenery, which had been carried through to New York by mistake.

—Lemuel Williams, who lived in Plainfield about two years ago and worked for D. S. Roberts, was killed last week while working on a bridge in Lone Valley, Tennessee. He fell a distance of 200 feet.

—A new front is being put in Blair's Metropolitan stable on North avenue, by Mason W. C. Smith. Large plate glass windows will be used, and a partition will divide the present office, making two well lighted and convenient office rooms.

—Messrs. Stevens and Gavin, who have tied on fifty, the highest possible score in the contest for the fine breechloader offered by Charles Lister as first prize in his free-to-all shooting tournament, will decide the ownership of the gun at the range tonight.

—The fair committee made a final report at the meeting of the Sons of Veterans Monday evening, and showed that $158.87 had been cleared. There is yet some money to come in. The Camp will be installed Jan. 8, with the Post and Women's Relief Corps.

—Christmas service was held in the Church of the Redeemer yesterday morning when the rector, Rev. Jocelyn Johnson, preached a strong and effective sermon. The decorations were much admired. Friday evening the Sunday-school enjoy their festivities.

—A negress named Mrs. Williams, with four children, arrived in Elizabeth yesterday from Nova Scotia, to meet her husband. The latter did not make his appearance, and the police sent her to Plainfield. Constable Mattox found her at the North Avenue station. Later Sergeant Kiely sent her back to Elizabeth.

Christmas at Washingtonville.

The Christmas exercises of the Washingtonville Sunday-school were held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel last evening in the presence of a large and appreciative audience. Singing and recitations were the order of the hour, after which came the presentation of books and Christmas gifts to the younger members of the school. Later in the evening refreshments, consisting of cake and ice-cream, were served. The successful issue of the pleasant affair reflects great credit on D. L. Bonney, the popular superintendent of the school, as well as on the members of the efficient committee of arrangements.

Runaway Accident.

Mr. and Mrs. James Smith of Murray Hill, while on their way to spend Christmas with friends in Washingtonville, were thrown from their carriage on Diamond Hill, the horse becoming unmanagable through the breaking of a trace. Mrs. Smith received a deep cut on the head, and was otherwise severely bruised. Smith also was badly battered around the head and shoulders. Kind neighbors furnished a carriage and drove the sufferers home, Dr. Westcott being called to minister to their need. Their wagon was a complete wreck.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. AT THE HOSPITAL.

CHRISTMAS MERRILY CELEBRATED AT PLAINFIELD'S HOME FOR THE SICK.

Musical Entertainment Given by Kind Friends, Followed by Distribution of Gifts—Address by by President E. B. Clark.

A beautiful tree and an enjoyable musical entertainment made Christmas joyous at Muhlenberg Hospital. The tree, which was placed in the entrance hall, was prettily decorated with lighted candles, and festooned with tinsel.

A large delegation of the Board of Managers filled the reception room and halls, and, together with the patients, listened to the pleasant musical entertainment and the earnest address of President E. B. Clark.

First on the programme was a violin solo, beautifully rendered by Miss Nella B. Whiton, which was received with hearty applause. Miss Whiton responded to the encore with a selection from the opera of Henry VIII, which also was well received. Mrs. Freeman, organist of Grace Church, was her efficient accompanist.

E. B. Clark followed with an earnest address on the Scripture: "It is more blessed to give than to receive". The speaker expressed his hearty thanks to the Board of Managers, the kind women, and the generous public, without whose co-operation this splendid institution could not have been a success. Mr. Clark alluded in a most appreciative manner to the efficient services of the competent corps of nurses and assistants connected with the hospital, whose privilege it was to minister to the wants of the distressed.

A quartette, consisting of the Misses Morgan, W. R. Cock and Fredrick Pope, accompanied by Miss Whiton and Mrs. Freeman, rendered a beautiful song entitled "Sing, Sing for Christmas." They were followed by Elmer E. Runyon, who sang two Christmas carols. The quartette, with violin and organ accompaniment, sweetly rendered Came Upon the Midnight Clear", fittingly closing the musical feature of the entertainment.

The distribution of gifts to the patients, nurses and attendants followed, and the assembly dispersed with mutual expressions of pleasure at the success attending the occasion.

Smashed His Cycle.

A collision occurred Monday afternoon about 5:30 in front of The Daily Press office. William Chamberlain, painter, of New street, was coming down North avenue toward Park on his safety. Just before he reached the corner, a horse and buggy very suddenly appeared, turning in from Park avenue. William Durand was driving, a friend was with him. Mr. Chamberlain attempted to avoid a collision, but to no purpose. He saw that to save his own life he must jump and let the wheel go, which he did, and he just escaped serious injury. The wheel went under the wagon and was damaged.

Sergeant Kiely appeared, and, noticing Durand's condition, took his rig to Roberts's livery stable. Durand's friend took him away.

Mr. Chamberlain will claim damages.

The German Lutherans' Christmas.

The Christmas festival in the German Lutheran Church last evening was largely attended, and much enjoyed. A programme of singing and recitations by the scholars brought cheer to the hearts of all. The church was very prettily decorated with evergreens, and a large tree loaded with pretty things was an attractive sight. Each scholar received a present of candy and oranges at the conclusion of the programme. Rev. Edward Kionka was in charge of the exercises.

Helping Our Noble Coast Guards.

In connection with the soldiers and sailors work, a branch department of the W. C. T. U., a large box of useful articles, including several comfort bags which contained everything from a paper of pins to wearing apparel, also fruit, reading matter, etc., has been sent to the life-saving station at Seabright. This makes the second Plainfield box sent there. Mrs. M. C. Dobbins has charge of this department, and is assisted by several members of the Union.

—The attraction in Music Hall Dec. 28 will be "The White Squadron". The play is built on patriotic lines, and a deeply interesting story is developed. The stage is continuously filled with thrilling episodes and beautiful stage pictures. In the third act the vessels of the magnificent "White Squadron", under full steam and sail, are shown. Over 150 people are required to present this scene.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it, is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

M'GLYNN SAYS A MASS

After Eight Years the Priest Again at the Altar.

Greeted by Old Friends at the Church of the Holy Cross—Preached a Sermon on Peace—He Leaves in a Few Days To Take Charge of the Church to Which He Has Been Assigned.

New York, Dec. 26.—The Church of the Holy Cross, on Forty-second street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, had crowded pews aisles and passages. Numbers of persons were unable to gain admittance to the interior of the building.

The gathering and the general interest manifested by the worshipers were alike, due to the fact that the church was due tothe fact that the church was to be the scene of the reappearance of Dr. Edward McGlynn as an officiating priest.

It was nearly eight years ago that Dr. McGlynn was removed from the rectorship of St. Stephen's church by Archbishop Corrigan. The events which preceded his removal are still fresh in the public memory and give point to the interest shown in his reinstatement.

Many of the priest's old parishoners were present at the services yesterday. They were among the most determined to see and hear their old rector.

The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers. The white altars blazed with lights and the gleam of sacred symbols.

Three masses may be said by a priest on Christmas day. Dr. McGlynn availed himself of this trio of sacred privileges. Each of the services was as well attended as that of the early morning.

The deagon of the masses was the Rev. J. F. Smith, and the sub-deacon the Rev. J. J. McGee. Dr. McGlynn himself appeared to be in good health and high spirits. His face was flushed with excitement and his voice clear and resonant.

When he entered the church something like a murmur of joy and satisfaction ran through the congregation. At this point two or three women fainted with excitement.

After the first gospel was read Dr. McGlynn preached a brief sermon on the text, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." He said among other things that the peace of Christ was as priceless as it was satisfying.

"The peace that is promised us by the birth of Christ is not the ignoble peace that comes from self-indulgence, but it is the peace that is the result of victory over self, which vicory fallen man could never have obtained without the coming of the Saviour, who was born so many years ago in Bethlehem.

"Men had become so wrapped up in the gratification of every whim and passion that it was necessary that God should become man to redeem the human race and purge us from sin and give lights nd strength to our souls, so that the exultant spirit should rise triumphant from the ruins of a former self and rest forever in the peace of God."

After the mass quite a reception was held in the sacristy. The attendant scenes were of an affecting nature.

The Rev. Dr. McCreedy, rector of the church, was the assistant of the reinstated priest at St. Sephen's church. Dr. McGlynn will in all likelihood assume charge of his new church, hat of St. Mary's, at Newburg, the first week in the new year.

A number of his old parishoners and associates in the Anti-Poverty society presented Dr. McGlynn with a purse of $2,000 yesterday. The speech of presentation was made by Dr. Henry Carey, one of the stanchest adherents of the doctor.

A Band of Burglars Arrested.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 26.—The band of burglars who broke into David Slocum's house in Washington township a week ago and after maltreating the old man and his wife, robbed them of over $10,000, have all been arrested. Frank Anderson, the leader, and his brother-in-law, Ralph Vanauler, are in jail here. Jeremiah Casey is in custody in Patterson, N. J., and other members of the gang are under arrest in New York state. Anderson met Casey in the Meadville, Pa., jail and the plot was planned there, which led up to the robbery. A number of other arrests will be made to-day.

Feasted on Jack Rabbits.

Denver, Dec. 26.—Parson Tom Uzzel, of the Tabernacle, distributed among the poor of Denver 3,5000 jack rabbits that were killed in the great hunt at Lamar last week. Over 350 baskets containing rabbits, chickens, turkeys, fish and other good things for a Christmas dinner were sent to needy families fro mthe tabernacle. After all who remainder were divided among the benevolent institutions of the city.

Banker Richmond's Present.

Canajoharie, N. Y., Dec. 26.—A. G. Richmond, President of the National bank here, received a Christmas present in the form of commendatory letters from three hundred state bankers, to Gov.-Elect Morton urging the appointment of Mr. Rishmond as state superintendent of banks.

Torpedo Boat Goes Ashore.

London, Dec. 26.—A British torpedo boat, after destroying the wrecked vessel Lynx, was washed broadside on the rocks of Cornwall in a fog. She got off with the assistance of a lifeboat. She is leaking badly, her plates having been strained and a hole knocked in her port quarter.

SHOT DOWN BY A THUG.

John Robinson, of New York, Seriously Wounded and Robbed.

Rutherford, N. Y., Dec. 26.—John Robinson, a well-known New York business man, who resides in this place, was shot and robbed last night.

He had taken supper at Blake's restaurant and at 9 o'clock started down Park avenue for his home. He had to pass by the baseball grounds, which is in the lonely part of Rutherford, the road being lined with hedges, trees, and shrubbery. It was very dark, the night was cold, and Mr. Robinson trudged along with his coat collar turned up.

Just as he reached the north end of the ball grounds a short man, respectably dressed, stepped out from behind some bushes and called out:

"Hold up your hands, or I will shoot!"

Mr. Robinson, who is a large man and an athlete, made a grab for the highwayman, who sprang back out of his reach, and, instead of running away, drew a revolver from his pocket and fired point blank at Robinson, the bullet striking him in the leg.

Although wounded, Robinson made an attempt to chasethe burglar, who had started to run, and as the man heard Robinson's footsteps he halted and fired against his pursurer. He aimed at Robinson's heart, but the bullet went wide of its mark. The man then scaled a fence and ran across the baseball fields and was lost in the to his home, a short distance from the darkness. Robinson managed to get spot where he was shot, and a doctor was summoned, who extracted the bullet.

BURNS TALKS TO MINERS.

The English Leader Wants No Agitation Against Immigration.

Columbus, O., Dec. 26.—John Burns, the English leader, addressed a big meeting of miners at Nelsonville, in the Hocking valley. Ten years ago, he said, he had read accounts of the bitter strife in the Hocking valley, and it made him fee resentful toward the operators. He took advantage of the present opportunity to congratulate the miners on the result of that strike.

He criticised the American government and institutions, and said the miners were worse off here in many respects than in England. He did not think agitation against immigration should be encouraged. He believed strikes would become fewer, but would involve more people.

NO MORE NEGROES LYNCHED.

Troops Ordered Out for Brooks County Found No Work to Do.

Quitman, Ga., Dec. 26.—The trouble in Brooks county is over. The Valdosta Videttes were ordered here by the governor. Captain Cafferty, Lieutenants Staten and Pooples, Dr. Bass and Sheriff Thrasher at once visited the scene of the trouble. They found peace restored and the citizens assured them there would be no more trouble, so they came back to Quitman about 2 o'clock.

The negroes were killed because they were supposed to know the whereabouts of Waverly Pike, whose crime furnsihed the incentive to lawlessness. Good citizens of the county will do their utmost t bring to justice the men who are responsible for the trouble.

GOLD IN GREAT VEINS.

Leadville the Centre of Another Enormous Mining Sensation.

Leadville, Colo., Dec. 26.—The Leadville of the past will be forgotten in the Leadville of the immediate future. The gold production for 1894 from three producers will reach $2,000,000.

The recent strike in the Rex mine has developed a body of high grade gold ore thirty-six feet in thickness, while immediately beneath this is a body of lead silver ore of unknown depth.

In the Triumph mine the shaft has been sunk twenty feet in a body of rich gold ore with no bottom in sight. Many new prospecting and mining companies are being formed and there is the greatest activity in every direction.

BRAVE CHRISTMAS DAY

How the Rich and Poor Enjoyed the Occasion.

In New York City There Were Thousands of Christmas Trees for Poor Children and Hundreds of Dinners Given to Their Parents—With President Cleveland in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 26.—The president and the members of the cabinet spent Christmas at their respective homes.

At the white house it was children's day. The Cleveland babies enjoyed their first Christmas tree which was placed in the library. It was beautifully trimmed and decorated, Mrs. Cleveland putting the fininshing touches on it. The little ones were the recipients of many presents.

Preceding the dinner a luncheon was served to the children of the cabinet, who came to the white house to see the tree. Mrs. Perrine, Mrs. Cleveland's mother, was the only guest of the family at dinner.

Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle probably had the largest family party, entertaining their children and grandchildren. A part of the menu of the cabinet dinners was ducks killed by the president on his recent hunting trip in South Carolina.

The president and Mrs. Cleveland remembered all the employees of the house with turkeys and the servants receivd gifts in money.

New York, Dec. 26.—To tell the story in full of the Christmas celebrations within the territorial limits of Greater New York would be to repeat the tales of thousands upon thousands of happy households, and to relate the seasonable incidents that followed each other from the time the Christmas stockings were explored at dawn until the last merry dancers had ceased to celebrate the greatest of all holidays of the Christmas year. Father Knickerbocker was at his very best, and he proved a formidable rival to venerable Santa Claus himself.

Special Christmas dinners were furnished to thousands at the charitable institutions and church missions from the Batery to Harlem. At the headquarters of the Cremorne mission, the New York Bible and Fruit Mission and Five Points House of Industry, bountiful spreads were provided for the multitudes that gathered. The inmates of the House of the Friendless, the Children's Guardian society and the Juvenile asylum were provided with Christmas feasts of good things. Christmas celebrations were also held at St. Paul's Chapel, Hebrew Free School association, Temple Emanu-El; Christmas Convention, 190 Bleecker street; noonday prayer meeting, 133 Fulton street; dinner for homeless women, 215 West Twenty-fourth street; Seamen's Christian association, 665 Washington street; Sunday and Industrial Schools of Middle Dutch church, House of Refuge, Randall's Island, and other charitable institutions and reformatories.

The Christian dinner in Essex Market prison consisted of chicken, pork, apples, dumplings and coffee. Fifty-eight men and thirty-two women enjoyed the feast.

Great throngs of worshippers attended the services in the churches. Even the early celebrations attracted large congregations. Many of the interiors of the edifices were radiant with decorations of evergreens and fresh-cut flowers, and the altars were radiant with light and symbolic ornamentations. Within the altar rails were grouped tall palms and potted plants glowing with beauty.

NO FEAR FOR HAWAII.

Her Representative Says the Conspirators Have No Fight in Them

Washington, Dec. 2.—No concern or alarm is felt at the Hawaiian legation here from the reports of fresh plotting by the royalists to overthrow the Doyle government and restore Queen Liliuokalani. Mr. Hastings, the Charge d'Affaires of the legation, received telegraphic reports from his government via San Francisco, after the arrival of the Australia about ten days ago and the Arawa a week later, which say that everything is quiet.

Mr. Hastings fears no danger from the band of men who art now reported as having designs against the government, says that there is but one full native born in the list and asserts that there is no fighting spirit in them.

Six Old Keepers Dismissed.

Sing Sing, Dec. 26.—Warden Sage, who was recently appointed by Superintendent of Prisons Lathrop, is reorganizing the staff of keepers in the state prison here. The warden has dispensed with the services of Keepers Edward J. Canane, Thomas Corrigan, Andrew Hearn, J. J. Maher, James McLean and Thomas Ray, and appointed other men in their places.

Dreyfus Had a Confederate.

Paris, Dec. 26.—According to the police, a mysterious foreign titled lady has disappeared from her residence in Passy as a direct result of the trial of Captain Dreyfus. Detectives had been ordered to keep a strict watch on her, but she succeeded in eluding them. Dreyfus is said to have visited her house frequently.

Shearman Suspect Arrested.

Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 26.—George W. Depew, has been arrested at Salamanca, N. Y., on suspicion of being the murderer of Mrs. Shearman and Mrs. Davis. Depew was arrested on information furnished by a woman with whom he had been living.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

SENATOR DAVID B. HILL ON THE CLOTURE RULE.

Congressmen Who Failed of Re-election Turned Down so far as Appointments Are Concerned. Wire-wound Great Guns.

Most conspicuous of the happenings of the week in Congress was ex-Governor David B. Hill's speech in the Senate on the adoption of the cloture rule to prevent filibustering. He said that the sentiment of the country seemed to desire the adoption of some such rule. The demand for a change was not limited by any party environments. It was not sought merely to secure partisan advantages; but it reflected the deep conviction that time was unnecessarily wasted, that useful legislation at times was unreasonably obstructed, and that the conclusions of a majority did not find adequate and prompt expression. These views were widespread and could not longer be well ignored. He asserted that the privilege of unlimited debate in a legislative body was inconsistent with and destructive of the right and power of legislation. An inability to stop debate was an inability to legislate at all. It was a significant fact that some method of closing debate existed in the principal legislative bodies of every civilized Government in the world except in the English House of Lords and the United States Senate. But the House of Lords was surely not a body from which the United States Senate should pattern, especially in view of its loss of public confidence, its defiance of public sentiment, and its well-known general antipathies to progressive legislation in the interest of the masses. Its rules were a portion of its methods for obstructing popular reform. So far as the Senate was concerned, parliamentary reform was the need of the hour. The present afforded an opportune time for the accomplishment of the proposed innovation. The course was as open now as it ever would be for such a change. The responsible majority in the Senate should not abdicate its functions without such a change of rule as would be retained after the Democratic control of the Senate ceased. The measure of their fairness and wisdom now would be their surety for just treatment hereafter. No silly cry of "gag law," no false assertion of "suppressing debate," no idle clamor about "the tyranny of the majority"—which always ignored the tyranny of the minority—should be permitted to deter Senators from their plain duty in the premises. The continuation of "no cloture" meant compromise on every measure. It meant no legislation without the consent of the minority. It meant continued inaction to the end. If the first necessary step were taken the Senate's pathway would be cleared for action.

Many of the Democratic Congressmen who were turned down by their constituents at the recent election are complaining that they are ignored by officers of the Administration and contemptuously referred to as "back numbers." A prominent member of the House, who has served several terms in that body and is regarded as one of the leading Democrats, is quite severe in his condemnation of those public officials who disregard his recommendation simply because he is not elected to the next House. He says he has learned from several of his associates who failed of re-election that they are having a similar experience in the various departments. "We are told," said he, "that no further changes will be made upon the recommendation of Congressmen until after the 4th of March next. In other words we are given to understand that we have had all that is coming to us, and as we are to be retired in a few weeks, we are not regarded as of any further use to the department officials, and if there is any patronage to be dispensed it will go to those who are re-elected and to the newcomers.

Much interest will be felt in the final conclusions to be reached on the value of wire-wound guns for our service. Such guns are made in foreign countries, and it is certain that they resist very great pressures. At Woolwich they have been under construction all the way from the 12 pounder up to the 13 1-2 inch calibre. The 12 inch English wire wound guns weigh fifty tons. At least three of the modern battle ships are to carry such guns, two of them mounting 13 inch rifles, and a third, the Renown, 10 inch. All these are adapted for the use of smokeless powder. A 6 inch wire wound rapid fire gun, with a range of 7,000 yards, using cordite, is fired with extraordinary rapidity. The French seem less favorable to this form of construction, holding, according to one authority, that the guns are more liable to be weak in the breech. The latest of the American wire wound guns is the Crozier, invented by an officer of the Ordnance Department, and manufactured under the auspices of the latter at Watervliet.

Commander Joshua Bishop, who was retired several months ago upon his own application under the 40 years' service law, has just been restored to the active list by the President. No question as to the legality of the retirement was raised when it took place. Recently Commander Bishop made application to the accounting officer of the Treasury for back pay which he claimed was due him for a period of three years and one month from February 8, 1868, during which time he was out of the service, having been dropped for cause and subsequently restored by act of Congress. The accounting officers disallowed the claim on the ground that he had no connection whatever with the service during the period named, and that he was as effectually out of the navy as he would have been had he never held a commission. The Navy Department then discovered that it had made a mistake in ordering the retirement of Commander Bishop, having overlooked the fact that the time he was out of the service should have been deducted from the forty years he was supposed to have served. The legal authorities finally concluded that the retirement was illegal.

The sweeping civil service extension made by the President, in which the greater portion of the internal revenue service was placed under civil service laws, will be followed in a few days by an order reaching officers of much higher standing. The highest officials yet to be placed within the civil service law will be included, and all classes of divisions in the various departments.

CAYENNE ON THE FURNACE.

Laughable Experience of Anti-Temperance Advocates.

At 8 o'clock on Tuesday night the Town Hall of New Rochelle, N. Y., was crowded. There was nearly 500 people present, and Mr. Clarke, radiant in evening dress and with his face wreathed in smiles, sat on the platform ready to begin his lecture to prove that teetotalism was against the teaching of the Bible. Down stairs in the rooms of Relief Engine Company the members were completing arrangements for a minstrel show they are going to give: in the lockup 35 tramps were snoring peacefully, while in Police Headquarters Chief McGuirk and a half dozen of his men were sitting around and chatting. Up stairs in the County Clerk's office Judge Valentine was looking over some papers, while in another portion of the building Police Justice Tierney was busily engaged in writing. In the front of the hall, right beside the register through which the heat from below comes up, sat three of Mr. Clarke's children, Theodosia, who was going to recite later on, and two little boys, Roy and Joseph.

Mr. Clarke was much applauded when he got up and began his address. He had spoken about fifteen minutes and was getting warmed up to his subject, when little Theodosia began to sneeze. Then both of the little boys began to sneeze. Mr. Clarke shot awful glances at them, and, although visions of straps and slippers may have floated before them, they could not stop sneezing. Finally the two boys got up and made a bee line down the middle aisle. Some of the people in the front of the house then began to sneeze, and in a few moments almost every one in the audience had his or her handkerchief out and was vainly struggling to keep from sneezing. A powerful titillating odor was filling the room, but it had not yet risen to a level with Mr. Clarke's nose.

He didn't know what to make of the rumpus, but, nothing daunted, he kept on with his lecture, elevating his voice a little so that it could be heard above the sound of the sneezes. Finally the audience, half panic stricken, made for the door all at once. People almost climbed over one another in their haste to get out of the hall, and some were knocked down and trampled on in the rush. When the odor reached Mr. Clarke even his spirit was crushed, and 'sneezing and waving his hands in the air he bolted toward the door, through which the remnants of his audience, all sneezing, were struggling. Out into the street poured the sneezing host, and then, to their amazement, they found people pouring out from all sides of the building. Evidently the odor had penetrated every quarter, for everybody was sneezing and everybody was asking everybody else between sneezes what it all meant.

Judge Valentine came rushing down stairs, coughing and sneezing. Justice Tierney came behind him, behaving in the same fashion, while the members of the engine company, almost blue in the face from sneezing, came piling up the stairs from the basement. Chief McGuirk and his force were sitting in Police Headquarters when the odor struck them. They all began to sneeze at once. Between sneezing they accused each other of being funny, but the situation lost its humorous phrase when the mysterious odor showed an unmistakable increase in strength, and in great haste they sought the sidewalk, where they found the rest of the people who had been in the building.

The crowd had been re-enforced by pedestrians, who were wondering what 500 people, almost all sneezing, were standing in front of the Town Hall for. The unfortunates who had been inside the building were still wondering what the matter was when Mr. Clarke, pale and with dishevelled hair, waved his hands in the air and cried: "I know what it was. Some one threw cayenne pepper in the furnace. They wanted to break up my meeting. I know it; I know it, and——"

At this moment Mr. Clarke was interrupted by the most terrible howls from the inside of the building. It sounded as though a hundred men were swearing and yelling at once.

"Great Scott!" shouted Chief McGuirk, "the prisoners are all inside."

It was true. Thirty-five tramps, who had been arrested within two or three days, were locked up inside, and the odor had reached them. Chief McGuirk and three or four of his men rushed inside and in about five minutes they appeared again followed by the motley crowd of "Weary Walkers." The men were sneezing and coughing and two or three were lying on the floor of their cells, half suffocated. The crowd howled applause at the rescue of the prisoners. The policemen lined them up against the wall, and for an hour they were kept there, while men went through the building opening windows. At about 11 o'clock the smoke and odor had subsided enough to make life indoors bearable, and the tramps were hustled back to their cells.

The Carrier Pigeon's Instinct.

An interesting incident illustrating the strong homing instinct of carrier pigeons comes from the town of Dexter, in central Maine. Two of these birds were sold last summer by Mr. F. H. Hayes of that place to a fancier living in McKeesport, Pa., and were taken by the purchaser to his home. On November 24, three months later, they reappeared at their former home in Dexter. A letter received shortly afterward from their owner informed Mr. Hayes that he had kept the birds shut up until a few days before, when he let them out. They had at once mounted high into the air, circled, and then darted of in the direction of Maine.

A New Verb.

At last the word "parkhursting" from the verb "to parkhurst," has made its appearance. It is a natural consequence of boycotting, from the famous episode between Col. Boycott and his tenants, and other similar additions to the language, and the only wonder is that no one has thought of it before. Nevertheless, we could have well spared this expansion of our already copious vocabulary.—Providence Journal.

There has been much disturbance, in the press, because a young lady in Malden, treated by a Christian Scientist, did not recover. Did it ever occur to these people that persons who are treated by so-called regular physicians do not always recover from their illness?—Peabody Press.

Good spellers are often "stumped" when asked to write from dictation the following sentence: "It is disagreeable to witness the unparalleled embarrassment of a harassed peddler gauging the symmetry of a peeled pear."—Chicago Herald.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., DEC. 26, 1894

CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

THE SPOKESMAN OF THE PEOPLE

BY THE WAY.

—Young Benjamin Schenck of East Second street had three fingers of his right hand badly crushed this morning as he was about to step from a train through the careless slamming of the car door by one of the train crew.

—Mrs. Drake of Cottage place appeared before Judge Coddington this morning, charged with offensive conduct on Richmond street yesterday. She denied the charge, but was held in $100 bail to appear Saturday morning for a hearing.

—The music rendered at the Christmas festival in the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday under the management of George Hosking, will be repeated at both services on Sunday next. A large congregation was present yesterday and a liberal collection was contributed for church work.

—An employe of a local livery stable was seen yesterday afternoon at 4 coming along the road from Westfield minus his hat dragging a Christmas tree behind him. At last reports he has not appeared at the stable and some alarm is felt as to his safety.

—Genial and popular Frank Hedden, the well-known East Fourth street jehu, was the recipient Christmas Eve of numerous presents, notable among which was a cute little pig, whose head on being removed from its body, was found to contain a pretty china (not Chinese) baby. The boys are all whistling "I'm not it's father, I'm not it's dad".

—The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of the Church of the Holy Cross will be held Friday evening at 7:30 Great preparations have been going on for weeks past to entertain Santa Claus, who has promised to be on hand early and distribute gifts among the children. The Sunday-school continues to grow in numbers and enthusiasm. Rector Murphy and Superintendent Western are greatly elated over their good fortune.

Mason—Rosseter.

The marriage of Miss Lizzie Belle Rosseter, daughter of Mrs. Cecelia Rosseter, to Theodore Mason, took place Monday evening at 8 at the home of the bride, 127 Watchung avenue. Rev. Dr. C. B. Barnes performed the ceremony. John Higgins was best man, and Miss Mattie Mason was bridemaid. Mr. and Mrs. Mason received a very large number of useful and handsome presents.

The guests were: Mr and Mrs Mason, Frank Mason, Miss Alice Mason, Miss Mattie Mason, John Higgins, Mrs Clare, George Eckhardt, Miss Lettie Muirhead, Charles Sturtevant, Mrs George Tier, Mr and Mrs J Tier, Mrs G Townley, Mrs S Townsend, Austin Sturtevant; Mrs Sara Mitchell of Milton; Mr and Mrs Joseph Ferguson, and Miss Lottie Ferguson of Newark; Mr and Mrs Charles Bannister, and Miss Bannister of Newark; Mr and Mrs George Lines of Westfield; Mr and Mrs C W Lines, Mrs J H Stevens, Mr and Mrs J Ten Eyck, Mrs A Vail, and Miss M Hatfield.

Christmas at St. Mary's.

The services in St. Mary's R. C. Church yesterday attracted a large number of worshipers. A profusion of greens, tastefully arranged, formed the decorations, which were grouped principally around the altar. Special Christmas music was rendered by a full choir of sixteen voices in charge of Miss St. Leger, organist, and M. Cashen, director. Father Murphy preached an eloquent sermon at the last service.

St. Joseph's Church.

The regular services were held at St Joseph's Church yesterday, and for the first time in the history of the church high mass was held at 5 in the morning. Special music by the choir in charge of organist James Bailey was given. The decorations were artistically arranged about the altar, and according to the usual custom the crib was used.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

IMMEDIATE SUCCESS OF THE NEW OPERA "ELAINE."

Melba Holds the Good Opinions Already Won. Decadence of the Ballet. Mrs. Kendal's Caustic Criticism not Shared by Her Husband.

The new opera "Elaine," by Herman Bemberg, secured at once for itself a popular and unequivocal success. Its initial performance held the large audience which gathered in the Metropolitan deeply interested throughout its entire length, many portions of it receiving enthusiastic applause. The music is essentially French in style, the composer having studied with Massenet, and consequently becoming a disciple of the modern French school, which position indeed his birth would have been likely to assure him.

Identical characteristics are to be found in his opera, a certain reposeful flow of phrases with abundant power of melodic invention, a decided strain of poetic feeling, sensitiveness, refinement, sincerity, and climaxes, which if not immense or thrilling, are certainly effective. And withal, the impression left on the mind by "Elaine" is one of grace and beauty. It is replete with a certain poetic charm, and undoubtedly would gain in favor by repeated hearings. Melba has a most desirable role, one in which she appears to her best advantage. With longer familiarity she will broaden and improve her rendering, but even now it is a delineation not easily forgotten. In it her looks are most attractive, while the dying scene, which must be difficult to work up into forcible effectiveness, was admirably accomplished. Lancelot offers an equally excellent chance for the display of Jean de Reszke's art, so that a large part of his best dramatic effort was exhibited. The indifference of the public to the ballet in this city has been discussed frequently by the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House and the management. Nobody pretends to account for it, but it is an actual fact that, though the opera this year presents a better premiere of the ballet than ever, the audiences do not pay any attention whatever to her. As soon as the ballet come on the people lean back in their seats or turn around and look up toward the boxes, while in the boxes themselves conversation starts up briskly and eagerly. Even old opera-goers, who were at one time enthusiastic admirers of Mme. Cavalazzi at the old Academy of Music, glance indifferently at the ballet once or twice and then turn away. New York is unique in this respect, for Chicago and Philadelphia both admire the ballet, and it is still exceedingly popular in London and Paris.

A recent development in a theatrical way is the remarkable popularity of Mr. Kendal throughout the country. It will be interesting to see whether this sentiment is displayed in New York. Mrs. Kendal was at the outset of the career of this pair of English actors by far the more popular member of the family. She went everywhere, was cordially received and vigorously exploited in the newspapers, and was looked upon as a visitor of distinction and importance. Then came the remarkable series of interviews in which she retracted most of the nice things she had said about Americans and denounced the papers because of their hostile criticisms. This was received with more or less indifference in this city, but in the West, where local pride is very strong, the aspersions and criticisms of Mrs. Kendal were vigorously resented. In San Francisco both the papers and the public displayed undeniable enmity, and Mrs. Kendal closed an unsuccessful season in that city with a series of bitter comments about the people, and said that she would never go there again. Mr. Kendal has maintained a discreet and diplomatic silence, and the result has been that the public in the West has taken to applauding him vigorously, while Mrs. Kendal is received with more or less coldness. New Yorkers, however, are not particularly thin-skinned about the criticisms of theatrical people, so it is not likely that any particular interest will be displayed in the matter.

"The Road to Ruin" is the old comedy chosen by Mrs. John Drew for her week at the Grand Opera House. Her Widow Warren is justly regarded as a fine example of old-fashioned acting, quite as admirable as ever, and so intensely comic that it can hardly fail of keen appreciation in Eighth avenue. The company contains several actors fitted by practice to be seen with Mrs. Drew.

"Virginius" is another play brought forward. Wilson Barrett assumes its tragic role at the American this week, except that he will repeat "Hamlet" on Wednesday and Thursday. He is declamatory in his delivery of blank verse, and there is a bold assertion in his manner that carries him through such undertakings with his head up and his chest out. It is to be said for him, moreover, that he has ability sufficient to save his vaulting ambition from quite o'er-leaping itself.

Well-equipped actresses now our entertainers are Fanny Davenport, Rose Coghlan, Lillian Russell, and Mrs. John Drew. "Gismonda" has been put on the stage at the Fifth Avenue with no stint of outlay in money or work. The assertion that the scenic outfit is better than the drama has in Paris is quite credible. Miss Davenport unites abilities of acting and management with rare success. She is an American Henry Irving in that respect. This magnificent production of Sardou's play was directed by her in every detail.

A PRACTICAL TEMPERANCE TALK.

A Wall Street Bank Cautions Its Employees Against Saloons.

A reform in the habits of the employees has been instituted by the officers of one of the largest banks of Wall Street, and it is likely that all institutions that do not inquire into the personal habits of their employees, will hereafter do so, because of the many defalcations being brought to light against cashiers, clerks and book-keepers of monied institutions. The bank president in question thus explains the situation:

"The eyes of the community just now are on everybody connected with banks, as you know, and we cannot be too circumspect in our conduct. I used to stop in a little place just below here to get my cigars. Behind a screen in the rear of the cigar store is a bar. I never go there now for cigars, simply for that reason.

"We have fifty-five employees, and I have spoken on the subject thus far to fifteen of them. I have had a fatherly chat with them, and asked them if they would not abstain from visiting bar rooms and places to which bar rooms are attached, and in every instance they have given me a voluntary and verbal pledge that they would.

"That is all we want. You see," explained the white haired official, "one of our customers would come in here and say:

"'I saw one of your clerks in such and such a place drinking at the bar.'

"We consider that sort of thing a reflection on us more than anything else, and we desired to stop it.

"I told our boys all about it, and said that their visits to saloons or race tracks or other places of that nature would be noticed, and asked them not to go. We have been very frank with them, and they have been given to understand that if we learn they are not respecting our wishes they will be dismissed.

"I have no reason, believe me, to think that any of our clerks have been frequenters of saloons; quite the contrary," added the president. "We have taken the step simply on the general principle that men occupying positions in semi-public positions like banks ought to be particularly careful about their daily habits."—N. Y. Herald.

AS CRAFTY AS AN ALDERMAN.

Lo Buys Justice Just as His White Brother Buys Protection.

The Dawes Indian Commission was recently before the House Committee on Indian Affairs, and ex-Senator Dawes entertained those present for over an hour with a most interesting account of the condition existing among the five civilized tribes in the Indian Territory. Many of the Creek Indians are immensely wealthy. Senator Dawes was the guest of one of these.

"Why," said Mr. Dawes, "he owns the United States Court House and rents it to this Government; he owns the house the judge lives in and rents it to him; he himself lives in a much finer house than I do; he owns a large stud of Kentucky thoroughbreds, and took me out driving behind as fine a pair of these animals as can be found in the country. During our drive I asked him what he thought of the colored people down there.

"'Why,' said he, 'the colored people are pretty good people; one of them is our Supreme Judge, too. But I don't like him personally as I used to, because he didn't keep a contract with me once.'

"I questioned him further about this breach of faith, and this was his story:

"'The judge agreed with me,' said this wealthy Indian. In return for my influence in getting him on the bench, to give me one-half of the fees. He did this until a case came along in which the fees were $2,700, and then he went back on his contract.

"'I thought you said he was honest?' I objected.

"'Oh, so he is,' was this noble Indian's reply; 'but that's the way we do business down here.'"

Mr. Dawes also told a story of a lawyer who had a case in one of these Indian courts who received a note from the judge offering to decide the case in his favor for $400; also a note from the foreman of the jury who offered to give him a verdict for $40. He had such a good case that he paid no attention to the note. The other man won the case.

Mr. Dawes said he could multiply by the hour such instances as these which had come to his knowledge while in the Territory, and believed no better arguments were needed for the action he and his fellow Commissioners had recommended on the bill creating the new Territory of Indianola.

Something of Dreams.

Ariel could put a girdle round about the world in forty minutes, but he was slow compared with the most ordinary dream. Many stories are told showing the different count of time. Lord Brougham relates that he dreamed a dream of long continued action during a short doze while a droning counsel was pleading before him. Lord Holland fell asleep while listening to some one reading, dreamed a long dream, and awoke in time to hear the conclusion of a sentence the first words of which were in his ears when he became unconscious. Dr. Abercombie relates that a gentleman dreamed that he had enlisted for a soldier, joined his regiment, deserted, had been apprehended, carried back, tried, condemned to be shot, and at last led out for execution. After all the usual preparations he awoke with the report, and found that a noise in an adjoining room had both produced the dream and awakened him. Another dreamed that he had crossed the Atlantic and spent a fortnight in America. In embarking, on his return, he fell into the sea, and, having woke with the fright, he found that he had not been asleep ten minutes.

Holding Court on a Moving Train.

According to the Green Bay Gazette Judge Seaman of the United States Court presided over a novel session of court recently held in a parlor car while being whirled over the country between Forest Junction and Milwaukee at the rate of 50 miles an hour. United States District Attorney J. H. M. Wigman had several matters which he wished to have decided by Judge Seaman immediately. As the Judge lives in Sheboygan and spends his Sundays there Mr. Wigman conceived the brilliant scheme of intercepting Judge Seaman while on his way to Chicago and holding a session of court on the train. The Judge and the lawyer of the other side of the case were notified, and they met at Forest Junction. They assembled in one section of a parlor car and court was declared in session. When the train pulled into Milwaukee the court had completed its session and adjourned.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Henry Wise of Rice & Co. was confined to his home on Regent street, yesterday, by illness.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy was the recipient of two very appropriate Christmas gifts yesterday. He will tell you all about them when you see him.

A Christmas party was given by George Miller, young son of Wallace V. Miller of the Hotel Grenada, to which twenty-five little people were invited. A most happy time was enjoyed by all.

The North Plainfield committee made a most excellent appointment Monday in choosing F. A. Dunham as engineer to take charge of the local sewerage. He will commence the preliminary work at once.

One of the prettiest Christmas trees in the borough yesterday was at the residence of Superintendent Benj. R. Western in Washington Park. A large number of friends and relatives called during the day and evening and enjoyed the hospitality of the family.

Rev. Dr. Henry Blodgett, who has just returned from Pekin, is visiting his son-in-law, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards. Dr. Blodgett went to China in 1854, and has been connected since with the Congregational Missions located at Tien Tsin and Pekin, removing to the capital in 1864. He is the senior missionary of the mission. He returned to this country Dec. 8, and reports the war practically ended.

—Perennial is Plainfield. Christmas, like all the week before, was as a day transplanted from Spring. But this year's Christmas was no greener than usual. In twenty years there have been only nine Chistmases with freezing weather. Last year it was an early Autumn day, so far as the weather was concerned, and men walked out to recreate themselves without their overcoats.

"Well, did you vote?" said Mrs. Spudkins to her daughter, as the latter removed her wraps on election day in 1920.

"Why, mamma, I'll tell you how it it was," replied the earnest young girl. "A real nice young man—I suppose he was one of the election officers—came up and asked what ticket I was going to vote, and when I told him he said: 'But surely you are not old enough yet to cast a ballot, miss.' So what could I do but smile sweetly at the compliment and come away?"

AMERICAN WIDOWS.

SOME OF OUR WELL-TO-DO WIVES OF PUBLIC MEN.

Washington Has Attractions for Those Who Have Ever Lived there. Mrs. Logan is Surely the "Widow of the Regiment." Rumors of Nelly Grant Sartoris.

Washington engenders such a fascination for itself in those who have once tasted its charm, that they are seldom content to live elsewhere. There seems to be a mysterious factor in Washington life that decrees a rather short respite for official men, but is favorable to the longevity of the women. This mysterious agency, combined with the charms of Washington itself, may account for the large number of prominent widows making the capital city their home.

First and foremost as the one having the best luck and the most of it, is Mrs. John A. Logan. When one looks back upon her success it makes a wonderful story. It was only just before his last illness that General Logan ever acquired a home in Washington outside of a boarding house. The property purchased by him was the old Stone mansion, almost in the suburbs. It had pretty grounds, and was of picturesque, though somewhat dilapidated appearance. Since General Logan's death his widow has added to the old house and embellished it in costly style. There is a memorial hall, wherein the General's memory is kept green.

All in all, Calumet place is now one of the most luxurious homes in the capital. Mrs. Logan's carriages and horses are among the handsomest to be seen in the city.

Her money getting instinct must have been held in abeyance in General Logan's lifetime, but it has had a wonderful and substantial development since his death.

There is not an instance on record, except Mrs. Garfield's, where a memory has brought in such solid returns. At present Mrs. Logan is devoting her talent and time to the assistance of Bishop Hurst's university. She has undertaken to get $1,000,000 for this institution.

Apparently Mrs. Grant has been in an unsettled frame of mind as to her permanent residence. She has not yet determined upon the purchase of a house, but is staying with her daughter, Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, at the new home of the latter, in R street.

Mrs. Sartoris was a bride of the White House. Her marriage took place there twenty years ago. She left almost immediately for England, returning to the United States only for short visits to General and Mrs. Grant. Indeed, it was generally understood that love for her adopted country and its customs had entirely supplanted her affection for America. But this must have been an error, as the most of Mrs. Sartoris' widowhood has been passed in New York and Washington. She is very English in dress and manner. Pretty? Well, beauty is not an inheritance of the Grants.

Interesting rumors are afloat concerning Mrs. Sartoris. It is said she will soon again be a bride, this time trying her luck with a fellow countryman.

Although Mrs. Sheridan cannot be said to be in the bloom of even her second youth, she is very young as compared with Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Logan. Her eldest daughter, Mary, is now "grown up," and, although she will not bud out this year, her regular school days are over. Since General Sheridan's death his widow has continued to reside in the house, at Rhode Island avenue and Seventeenth street, that was presented to the General when he went to Washington as successor to General Sherman. The Sheridans were fortunate in the homes presented to them. Their gift house in Chicago is now very advantageously leased for a long term of years.

MRS. SARTORIS, MRS. GRANT, MRS. BLAINE, MRS. SHERIDAN, MRS. LOGAN.

Since her husband's death Mrs. Sheridan has never, in any way, appealed to the country for help financially. She has led a quiet, comfortable, dignified life, occasionally taking part in some exclusive social affair. She is a regular attendant at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church, and is always accompanied by her young son, Philip, who, when he arrives at the proper age, will go to West Point. Mrs. Sheridan long ago put off her widow's weeds. This, possibly, may have given rise to a rumor that she was about to re-marry.

Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Sheridan and Mrs. Logan may be called the military widows of the capital. In the believe of some of the resident foreigners of Washington Mrs. Logan is the only really military widow. Two years ago when the Grand Army encampment was held in Washington, a lady belonging to one of the foreign legations said to me:

"General Logan was the great man of your war. See how the war men honor his widow. She held the grand reception in the rotunda of your capital. I see all about pictures of Logan of his tomb, the memorial hall, etc. Every thing is Gen. Logan. I don't see or hear much about General Grant or General Sherman, or General Sheridan. It must be that General Logan saved your country.

And there is the widow Blaine, a woman who never made friends in Washington, but on the contrary, seemed anxious to show in what contempt she held its society. Mrs. Blaine has not yet returned to the unlucky old house in Lafayette square. The green shutters of the quaint brick dwelling are tightly closed and the ghosts of which the house is reported to be full, have it all to themselves. It was in this house that Walker Blaine, oldest son of the then Secretary of State died quite suddenly. His death was followed in little more than a fortnight by that of the eldest daughter of the house, Mrs. Alice Blaine Coppinger. Both were buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Georgetown. James G. Blaine was laid beside them a couple of years later. A blasted hickory tree is his monument.

In pondering over the tendency of the American girl to ally herself with the blue blood of Europe, and the responsive inclination on the part of the blue blood to give itself in exchange for American boodle, the wonder arises as to why the impecunious nobleman of ancient lineage seldom attempts to capture an American widow.

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS.

All Persons Whose Income is Over $3,500 Must Make Return.

The Secretary of the Treasury has approved the income tax regulations. Every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and every person residing or doing business in the United States, who has an annual income of more than $3,500, is required to make return, under oath, before the first Monday in March of each year. The first return is to include all income received in the year 1894, from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31. Guardians, trustees, and all corporations acting in any juduciary capacity are required to make similar returns. All incomes of $4,000 and over are taxable two per cent.

The person making return is required to make affidavit that he has included in said return all gains, profits, and income from every source received by him, or to which he is justly entitled for that year, and that he is honestly and truly entitled to make all the deductions entered on his return, and that he has truly answered the interrogatories set forth on said blank form.

The gross gains, profit, and income returned by persons are to include: Gross profits of any trade or business, wherever carried on; rents received or accrued during the year; profits from sales of real estate purchased within two years; farming operations and proceeds; money and value of all personal property acquired by gift or inheritance; premiums on bonds, stocks, notes and coupons; income from trade or profession not by stated salary and not heretofore enumerated; from salary or compensation other than that received from the United States; from salary or compensation paid by the United States; undivided gains and profits of any partnership; interest received or accrued from all notes, bonds, or other securities; interest on bonds or coupons paid of any corporation; dividends from corporations; income of wife or minor child or children; all other sources of income not above enumerated.

The deductions allowed on the return are: Four thousand dollars exempt by law; interest due and paid within the year; national, State, county, school, and municipal taxes paid, not including assessments for local benefits; amount expended in purchase or production of live stock or produce sold within the year; necessary expenses specified by items actually incurred in carrying on any business or trade; losses actually sustained during the year, specified; actual losses on sales of real estate purchased within two years; debts contracted and ascertained in the year to be worthless; salary or compensation over $4,000 from which the tax of two per centum has been withheld by disbursing officers of the United States Government; dividends included in the estimates of gross profits from corporations on which the two per cent. tax has been paid by such corporation.

Ball Clubs Migrate.

The only baseball team in the League which went South last year before the opening of the regular season was the Baltimores, and they came back at the beginning of the season in such splendid form that they won the championship. The Baltimore players are going South again this year, but this time they will not have it all their own way, for a number of the other League clubs have learned the lesson the Baltimores taught, and will also have a preliminary season of practice. The New York team will make a long jump in going as far as New Orleans. The Bostons and the Washingtons are going South, but only to North Carolina at the outset, and the St. Louis team will go to Hot Springs. Mr. Anson of Chicago has sent out a number of crafty and deep letters to various winter resorts, including Jacksonville and St. Augustine, and is waiting for somebody to invite his club into Southern territory with a guarantee that he will be able to play to expenses.

Where Women Attempt Deception.

The woman who can refrain from trying to cheat a railroad company by pretending her children are less than the age, when payment of fares can be demanded is worthy of a halo. I have been forced to the conclusion that it is the supreme test of feminine honesty,

I have seen women whose rainment gave abundant evidence of the depth of their pocketbooks unblushingly, bear false testimony when questioned by a conductor concerning the age of their progeny. I have seen a matron who had fortified herself against the tedium of a railroad journey by investing in a choice assortment of religious literature do the same thing and when detected or remonstrated with threaten to report the conductor for insulting them.

"When it comes to putting up a bluff," said one of these much abused officials to me, "a woman with two or three children can beat a man all hollow."

FORCED TO MOVE ON.

The Shameful Treatment of an Aristocratic Coachman by a Tramp.

The carriage drew up before a business establishment with a clang of silver plated harness and a clatter of the sleek horses hoofs. The footman jumped down and ran to the carriage door to help the ladies alight, while the coachman, as sleek as the horses, sat bolt upright on the box and stared at the statue of Sunset Cox. Then a dirty, shuffling, ragged tramp came along, holding himself and his clothes together and stopped beside the carriage.

"See here my bloke," he said, squinting up at the carriage, "move your wheelbarrow off the crosswalk. You're blocking the way, see? Move right along now or I'll have you arrested and you and your old shandredang run in."

The coachman looked around at the tramp out of the corner of his eye, while his face grew a fine old plum color with anger. The footman basely deserted his fellow servant at the tramp's first attack, and pretended to be watching the store door for his mistresses' return.

"Come now, said the tramp, taking an extra reef in his garments around the waist, you're right on de crossing, see, and I wants you to slide right off; and right away. I'm not going to spoil my patent leathers going round your bloomin' nags. I'm a lawyer, I am, and I know my rights. I can't sleep in your little bunkie and you can't block my crosswalk. So move on now or rip me open if I don't get a cop and have you arrested."

The coachman's neck pulsated with anger like a turkey gobbler's, and he half lifted his whip, but when the tramp opened his mouth to shout police, he changed his mind and brought the lash gently across the horses' backs. They moved on, the crosswalk was clear, and the tramp with a genial shrug all over walked along the sidewalk.

"I guess I won't cross over just yet," he said, "I've got a touch of gout same's Grovey, and my doctor tells me to keep in the sun.—N. Y. Sun.

Haymaking on the Plains.

The introduction of the scythe and mowing machine was a marked innovation in the agricultural system of New Mexico, where, in the ante-railroad days, the only haymaking implement was the huge plantation hoe, identical with the one used in ditching. With it bunches of grama grass were dug from the ground, whereafter they were carried by armfuls to stacks and thence carted to the military posts, where high prices were paid for this the only hay that could be procured. Much earth adhered to the roots of this fodder, and it was interesting to see the dexterous manner with which the experienced Government mule would get rid of this by seizing a mouthful by the grassy stalks and shaking the roots vigorously before absorbing the whole bunch.

Boston's Patriotic Postmark.

For the last month people receiving letters which passed through the Boston Post Office have noticed that the envelopes bore a new cancellation mark that resembled the American flag. The new design consists of a series of curved lines, instead of the five long parallel lines which have been in common use. At one corner is a bunch of stars, completing the resemblance to the flag. It is said by the Post Office people that new cancelling machines were necessary, and so this design was adopted. At present it is used only in the Boston Post Office, as it has not yet been adopted by the large offices throughout the country. It is a new idea, not more than a month old.

SLOWLY STARVING.

Surrounded by Plenty, but Dying for Food.

An Every-day Occurrence.—Our Friends Perishing Before Our Eyes.

A terrible experience for any one to go through, that of seeing some beloved friend actually wasting away before our eyes, unable to derive sufficient nourishment from their food to sustain life.

Medicine naturally becomes of little avail, and the various organs of the body, debilitated from a lack of nourishment, take on themselves the disease that was originally the cause of the "breakdown," and help hasten the end.

Such cases, though too prevalent, are happily becoming less frequent. The prominent physicians of to-day do things differently from those of twenty years ago. They first put the patient in a condition to stand the "siege," then enrich his blood, create for him new strength, and "build him up" generally. The patient is then in a condition to derive benefit from his medicine.

This is done by the use of Bovinine, the original raw food. It is an extract that contains the greatest amount of the life-sustaining and tissue-building properties of lean, raw meat, concentrated in the least possible bulk.

The advantage of this is obvious. A patient already greatly weakened by disease, needs to husband every particle of strength. A few drops of Bovinine will impart as much nourishment to the body as would be derived by a well person from an ordinary meal; and, in getting this nourishment, the stomach has been forced to do the least possible amount of work.

Bovinine, continued throughout an illness, greatly hastens recovery. Taken at the beginning of a wasting disease, it diverts the cause of the trouble by toning up the various organs, and getting them in a normal condition.

Bovinine is indorsed by 25,000 doctors. Its action is always beneficial, as a single trial will convince the most sceptical.

JEWETT IS BARRED OUT

Turkey Will Not Permit an American Enquiry.

United States Minister Terrell Informed by the Sultan That the Consul Will Not Be Allowed To Accompany the Armenian Commission—Expected in Washington.

Constantinople, Dec. 26.—The sultan has made his final reply to the application of United States Minister Alexander W. Terrell to have Milo A. Jewett, the United States consul at Sivas, Asiatic Turkey, make an independent inquiry into the reports of Turkish atrocities in Armenia.

The sultan positively declines to allow Mr. Jewett to accompany the Turkish commission appointed to inquire into the reports referred to.

Chefik Bey, judge of the court of cassation, and Djelaleddin Bey, of the court of appeals, members of the commission appointed to investigate the Armenian troubles, has left Constantinople for Erzeroum.

With them went the French delegate, M. Vilbert.

Washington, Dec. 26.—The refusal of the sultan to allow Mr. Jewett to perform the mission with which he was charged by President Cleveland was not unexpected at the state department.

For the past week Minister Terrell, acting under the pressure of the state department, has been urging the porte to permit the investigation. The reluctance of the Turkish government to accede to his request is accounted for by the formidable proportions to which the agitation in the United States in favor of intercession on behalf of the Armenians in Turkey has attained.

At first the porte was under the impression, probably having in view the outcome of previous investigations into alleged outrages by the Turks upon their Christian subjects, that the United States was so favorably inclined towards their side that the result of the proposed inquiry would not be harmful.

But the intensity of feeling displayed in mass-meetings and church assemblies in the United States has convinced the porte that it would be placing its interests in dangerous hands, and when it learned that the person chosen to make the inquiry was a son of an American missionary and a native of the very country where the outrages are alleged to have occurred, a negative was returned to Mr. Terrell's request.

It does not appear that there is any way of going behind this decision, for Mr. Jewett being refused permission to investigate in his capacity as an officer of the United States, could not undertake it safely as an individual.

Therefore, it is probable that this last action of the Turkish government ends definitely the participation of the United States, in the projected inquiry which will consequently be conducted by Europeans.

HER VOICE HAS RETURNED.

The Peculiar Affliction of an Ohio Woman Ends Curiously.

Columbus, O., Dec. 26.—Miss Mary Case, of this city, a prominent missionary of the First Congregational church, has just had a most remarkable experience.

Four years ago she lost her power of speech. She was at the breakfast table conversing with members of the family. Suddenly she became afflicted with hoarseness, but her power of speech did not altogether disappear until evening.

She resorted to the skill of the specialists and remedies suggested to her by the numreous callers at her home, but without avail.

A few days ago she paid a visit to the home of Samuel Bachteller, of the state board of public works. While there her voice suddenly rang out in tones clear and distinct. Utterly astounded she continued to test her voice and although not able at first to wholly govern it, practice has since enabled her to do so.

TEXAS IN EARNEST.

Papers for Standard Oil Official Honored by Florida's Governor.

Tallahassee, Fla., Dec. 26.—The requisition papers which Governor Hogg, of Texas, forwarded to Governor Mitchell for Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil, railway and hotel magnate, were duly honored to-day. The extradition papers were executed and mailed to-day to Governor Hogg, of Texas. It is supposed that as soon as the papers reach the Texas governor, he will send an officer to arrest Mr. Flagler and take him to Texas. It is said that Mr. Flagler is now in New York.

Cardinal Gibbons' Gift.

Washington, Dec. 26.—At St. Augustine church during the service it was announced that Cardinal Gibbons had proposed to remit to the church a debt of $10,000 which the church owes him, upon the condition that the congregation shall raise $2,500 by subscription, thus making the church a present of $7,500.

FATAL RAILROAD CRASH.

Fast Philadelphia Express Runs into a Wrecking Train.

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 26.—The first section of the last Philadelphia express on the Pennsylvania railroad crashed into the rear end of an Altoona wrecking train at the lower end of the railroad, two miles east of this city.

The wreck was caused by the telegraph operator leaving the two trains on the same block. He, thinking that the express train was running very late wanted to get the working train started as early as possible to clear the tracks at Spruce creek, where a big freight wreck occurred early in the evening. No person on the passenger train was injured.

The express train was running thirty-five miles an hour when it struck the wrecking train which had just pulled from the siding on to the south bund track.

The pasesnger engine telescoped the cabin car, which demolished the tool-car. One man, James Dunn, of this city, aged 45 years and married, who was sitting on a berth seat of the cabin, was struck by the engine and instantly killed. Eight others are fatally injured. The injured men all reside in this city.

SAW A CITY IN AIR.

Sarnia and Ferryboats on the River Reflected in the Clouds.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 26.—The citizens of Port Huron witnessed a very remarkable mirage here, showing the Canadian bank of St. Clair river for about thirteen miles and both banks from Maryville to what is known as McGregor's Point, a mile below the Oakland house.

By looking to the south, Port Huron people could see Sarnia reflected into the clouds and even the ferryboats as they crossed the river. The frame houses stood out boldly and made one of the prettiest panoramas ever witnessed.

Following along to the west, Stag island appeared, and from there to a point a mile below the Oakland house both banks of the St. Clair river were visible.

St. Clair city was clearly outlined upon the sky, and smoke could be seen ascending from the tops of several smokestacks. The mirage was visible for more than an hour.

MET A WATERSPOUT.

Steamship Gurly's Narrow Escape from an Ocean Monster.

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—The Norwegian steamship Gurly, Captain Taarvig, just arrived here from Port Morant, Jamaica, had a narrow escape from total destruction by being swallowed up in the center of a mammoth waterspout, to the southwest of Cape Hatteras.

The Gurly, after coming through the Crooked island passage, met with heavy northeasterly gales and tremendous seas, and had reached a position eighty miles south of Cape Hatteras. The weather came in squally and the sky indicated approaching bad weather.

A small white speck of peculiar formation loomed up at first in the northern horizon, growing rapidly in its proportions. It was a huge water spout making directly for them. The ship's head was put around almost west, while the ocean monster shot past, just clearing the star-board rail. It disappeared behind the southern horizon in a few minutes.

GERMANY NOT TO RECEDE.

Will Maintain Her Stand Against Importation of Our Cattle.

Washington, Dec. 26.—An agent of the department of agriculture now in Germany has been looking into the grounds for the German movement against American live cattle and dressed beef and has made a preliminary report to the department. Among other things he says:

"Additional time being required to prepare a complete report, I hasten to forward some information in advance of the report, as it may not only be of interest, but of immediate value to the department.

"The general opinion among the importers of American live cattle and dressed beef is that the German authorities will never recede from the position they have taken, unless they could be induced to revoke the prohibition order on condition that German veterinarians be employed to inspect the live cattle and dressed beef before loading for transportation to Germany."

SHE WAITED IN VAIN.

Suicide Ends an Old Maid's Romance in Pennsylvania.

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 26.—After years of vain waiting for her lover to return to her, hope died, and to end her sorrow Miss Miller, an aged spinster, shot herself in the head and inflicted a mortal wound.

One Christmas long ago Miss Miller's lover left her and as the day came with each recurring year the sorrowing woman has had a feast prepared and has sat awaiting the man who has never returned. The disappointment of succeeding years proved too much and Miss Miller sought to escape her grief by death.

SHE MAY BAR SUGAR OUT

Our Schedule Will Cause Trouble with Spain.

Officials at Washington Learn That the Cuban Trade Has Stopped Entirely—Demands Made by the Spanish Minister of Finance—Details of the Latest Coolness.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Interesting developments are expected to result from strained relations between the United States and Spain over the tariff. Spain has already placed the United States in the "first column," and Secretray Gresham has directed Minister Taylor to notify the Spanish government, that if the United States is not removed from the "first column" this country will retaliate. In official circles it is not believed that Spain will yield to the protests of Secretary Gresham.

In that event, if the secretary carries out his threat of retaliation, President Cleveland will ussue a proclamation closing American ports to the products of Spain. The first effect would be to shut out the enormous shipments of raw sugar from Cuba. It is said that Cuba furnishes seven-eighths of all the raw sugar used in American refineries. The other eighth comes from Louisiana and Hawaii, but it is said that it would be impossible to make up this seven-eighths now drawn from Cuba.

It is asserted, therefore, that the retaliation would close refineries and throw 20,000 employes out of work. This statement was made by a high official who is very apprehensive of the result of the proposed retaliation. He added that the ultimate effect of the warfare would be to advance the price of sugar from 3 to 6 cents per pound, thus making the public bear the burden.

In levying duties, Spain arranges countries in two columns. The "first column" includes those who have not entered into satisfactory treaty arrangements with Spain, and are debarred from the commercial benefits it grants. Until recently Brazil was the only country on the globe which Spain had put in this column. The immediate effect of Spain's action has already proved disastrous to the American trade in flour, and this trade has passed almost exclusively into the hands of Canada.

Under the old reciprocity arrangement with Spain, flour was shipped from this country to Cuba in great quantities. But when the United States tariff raised the duty on Cuban sugar, Spain responded by raising the duty on American flour. The "first column" duty on flour is $4.75, while the "second column" is $4. As Canada is in the second column she enjoys an advantage of 75 cents a barrel on flour, and this has proved ample to allow Canada to gain the Cuban flour trade.

It is understood that a question has been raised as to the right of the president to issue a retaliatory proclamation against Spain, such as Secretary Gresham has threatened.

This proclamation, if made, would be under a law of 1890 which authorizes retaliation against countries making unjust discriminations against the United States. But Spain claims that the American tariff puttting sugar on the dutiable list had the effect of placing this country in Spain's "first column" without any intentional discrimination on her part.

Under these circumstances it is urged that Secretary Gresham has no authority to invoke the retaliatory law of 1890. The contending views are now being urged between Minister Taylor and members of the Spanish cabinet, and definite results are expected this week.

SET ASIDE THE VERDICT.

Awarded $16,000 for the Western Union's Delay.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 26.—In the Federal court at Huntville Mrs. Ida Ross, widow of Robert C. Ross, who was shot and killed by the Skeleton boys at Stevenson several months ago, because of his alleged seduction of Annie Skeleton, has been awarded a verdict of $16,000 against the Western Union Telegraph company because of the compan's alleged failure to deliver to Ross a message warning him that the Skeleton boys were after him.

Judge Boarman set aside the verdict as being excessive. Mrs. Ross sent the telegram from Scottsboro to Stevenson, whither Ross had gone by private conveyance to take the train. The Skeleton boys overtook him at Stevenson and shot him to death.

FALLING STARS.

Shooting stars have played a large part in my life, and in our young days Annie and I found them our greatest joy. They served as an excuse to postpone the hour for going to bed; for, when we had been good during the day, we were permitted during the warm weather nights to stay out on the terrace and watch the stars falling across the heavens.

Oh! it was the best time of my youth when Annie came home to spend her two months' holidays with my mother, and we found ourselves together at Ormes, our property at Moulins.

Ah! those were jolly times with my little friend. Even to this day I cannot think without tenderness of the little garden we used to cultivate together, with its perfumed flowers, which seemed to keep for us their most delicious scents. And then the games of all sorts, the immense joy when, in the long evenings, we found ourselves together conversing like grown-up people on the terrace. We used to talk with that quiet aplomb that belongs to childhood, and we made the most audacious projects for the future, as if we two were the only persons on the face of the earth. What ridiculous projects they were, too, like brilliant meteors, brief and evanescent.

Then the years hurried on and carried away a big piece of our childhood. We were grown up, Annie and I, and there was no need now to resort to a ruse to postpone the hour for going to bed. But we had still kept up the custom of going out on the lawn and terrace to interrogate the sky and speak with the distant stars. We were about 16 years of age at this time, and I commenced to experience a singular delight in being alone with Annie by my side in the evenings.

Sometimes the night wind, playing with her golden hair, would blow it across my face, and I always felt a thrill of pleasure run through me when I felt their silken caress.

Then, at length, I had looked deep down into my heart and had read there that I loved her. But I was unable to tell her that this was the case. I was held back by a strong, an instinctive sense of delicacy, by an involuntary respect. Her big, blue eyes revealed such naivete and such innocence that it seemed to me simply sacrilegious to speak to this child of such things, and I therefore kept silent.

But soon afterward, with what seemed to me a strange suddenness, the child grew into a young girl, and the Annie of old, with her long skirts, her golden curls tied up in a knot upon her head, and a twinkle of mischief and coquetry in her big blue eyes, was now a young woman.

She possessed all the graces, all the charms, and all the attractions of her sex, and when in her company I felt like a timid, awkward schoolboy.

When we were alone in the evening upon the wide terrace I held my peace and was afraid to speak for fear of awakening in the still night air that rippling, little, scornful laugh of hers, and it was only to the shooting stars and meteorites that I dared to sigh my love. It was then decided that I was to go to Paris to pursue my law studies. It was my last evening at Ormes and I was going away on the following day.

As usual, we were together upon the lawn.

She had never seemed so beautiful to me before, so seductive, and also so affectionate, for, affected at the idea of our separation, she had said such nice things to me, that although they were insignificant enough in themselves, yet, coming from her, had engraved themselves forever in my heart.

Fighting against the trembling of my voice, I said to her.

"Annie, in a year when my holidays come round again, I shall be at your side once more looking at the stars. You will think of me—from time to time?"

For answer, she laughed her light, rippling little laugh, with that touch of scorn in it, and looked up at me with saucy, shining eyes.

Then a meteor shot suddenly across the sky above our heads, and I took Annie's hand in mine and said in a serious voice:

"It is said, Annie, that when one has a wish to make it should be made while a meteor flashes along the sky. I have just wished something, and—I hope that before long it may be fulfilled!"

Did she understand?

Her small hand trembled ever so slightly in mine, but there were no signs of emotion in her eyes or on her lips. It seemed to me—perhaps I was mistaken in the uncertain light—that I saw a sphinx-like smile on her mouth, and I said nothing more to her that night on the subject so close to my heart.

I went to Paris and devoted myself to my studies with all the energy of my nature. My leisure time I spent dreaming in my little working room.

Had I wanted other distractions there were plenty of them, but I made up my mind to resist all the temptations of my age, and I should have despised myself had I wasted my thoughts on anything or anybody else than Annie. I never ceased thinking about my little golden haired girl, and awaited with feverish impatience the approaching summer, which was fixed for my return to Ormes.

I began to enjoy the pleasure of return in advance. I saw myself walking with Annie again on the soft green terraces, holding her hand in mine and saying to her in the darkness which would conceal my blushes:

"Annie, a year ago I registered a wish beneath these stars that you might one day love me as I love you and have loved you all my life. You will wait another year for me, Annie, won't you? And then we will never be separated again."

Closing my eyes I imagined I saw my sweet fiancee drop her head upon my shoulder, and allowing me to print a chaste kiss upon her white forehead. This was my only pleasure, and the only dream I indulged in during the long hours of my work in Paris.

* * * * * *

At length this much longed for summer had come, and I was going back to Ormes.

Annie was there, more charming, more ravishing than ever, and in her eyes I saw gleaming a gayety and happiness which seemed to me a sure sign that she was pleased at my return and had given me her love.

The night came, and in a calm, unconcerned voice, I asked her to come out and look at the stars.

"Will you come and see if there are any falling stars to-night?" I asked her.

She followed me out upon the terrace, and when once again by her side I experienced a sort of giddiness. My heart began to beat as if it would break, and never before had I felt my love so strong, so violent, so irrepressible.

She was everything to me, my little friend of childhood, the sweetheart of my early manhood. All my aspirations were toward her, and she was my whole being, my very life! I would have knelt at her feet in the night on the terrace, and have kissed with passionate tears the lace of her long dress.

I attempted to speak, but in vain; the words died away upon my lips. It was she who first spoke, and in the deep silence of that beautiful summer night I heard her sweet voice say to me:

"I am so happy now that you have come home again. I have been waiting for you to tell you myself a very important piece of news, namely—that M. Herpin, the wealthy manufacturer, has asked me to marry him, and I assure you I would not have had my engagement ball without your being there!"

* * * * *

It was a warm night, just as in the olden days. Over our heads the falling stars gleamed brightly in the sky for a moment, and then died away in the unknown. It seemed to me that they carried away with them in their swift flight into the darkness all my love, all my happiness and all my dreams for the future. They also bore away on their wings of flame my faith, my illusions and a considerable portion of my youth.—From the French.

ABOUT JOHN BURNS.

The Labor Leader Calls Chicago "a Pocket Edition of Hell."

When John Burns arrived in Chicago half a dozen reporters met him to get an explanation of his uncomplimentary reference to Chicago as "a pocket edition of hell." He admitted having said it, but declared he qualified the statement with a complimentary reference to the Art Institute and to the Police and Fire Departments.

"My remark about Chicago," he said, was based upon what I saw in different parts of the city and the information given me by prominent labor agitators."

In regard to his criticism in Denver of the United States Constitution, Mr. Burns said that, considering all the changes that had been made in America since the pre-industrial period when the Constitution was framed, he considered there might advantageously be made some changes in it in accordance with the increased love of liberty of the American people. As it stood now it was the best constitution ever written, but that did not mean it could not be improved upon.

Mr. Burns gave this opinion of this country so far as he had seen it:

"Schools splendid, libraries excellent, jails too good, roads bad, streets worse, drainage the same, art museums good for the age of the country, corporations exacting, tyrannical and extravagant; railway travelling palatial for the rich, and better than anything I have ever seen for the poor; cut off the headlines of your papers and you have a good carcass left, but still too much of a journalistic slaughter house, municipal life considerably below that of Europe.

"I won't write a book. I will tell the people in my speeches, when I am face to face with them, what I think of them, and not, skunk-like, hide myself in a cloud of hostile dust. That's me—that's John Burns."

Kate Field Versus Cold Water.

Kate Field, a short while ago told the Third Ward Democratic club, which is conducting "a campaign of education" between elections, why prohibition is intemperate. There was a large audience in Arlington Hall to hear Miss Field. Among other things she said that in Maine men voted to allow their houses to be searched and their personal property infringed. "A man there," said Miss Field, "contrary to justice is held guilty until he proves himself innocent."

"A man who pays no attention to reason," said Miss Field, "and is moved to vote by a pretty woman, deserves to suffer from the effect of bad government all his life.

Atchison, Kan., under prohibition, Miss Field said, in one year spent five million dollars for groceries and one million dollars for drugs. Prohibition, she declared, had ruined the inhabitants of the Aleutian Islands, who now "drink Florida water and perfumery and any vile concoction they can buy. Alcohol is in everything. The Creator understood his work, and let us accept the situation.

"In human stomachs undigested food ferments and alcohol results. Every dyspeptic is a walking distillery. Must they be abolised? If so, a goodly number of our American race must perish. Total abstainers eat great quantities of sweets. These ferment, and the Prohibitionists themselves form a grand cordon of illicit distilleries." Miss Field said that the moderate use of both beer and wine both pure, and the eschewing of liquors would promote true temperance. High license and an uprising against adulteration will result in untold good.—Chicago Tribune.

Niagara Falls Hackmen Have Humor.

"I made an interesting discovery when I was at Niagara Falls," said a tourist. "It was that the hackmen there have a strong sense of humor. One afteenoon, when I was returning to my hotel with an empty purse, and tired out by the importunities of the thousand and one sharks who invest the village, I stopped to light a cigar. Thoughtlessly I struck a match against the wheel of a cab. Immediately the driver came running up to me and yelled:

"'Hi, there, that'll cost you half a dollar.' I was so nervous that for a moment I thought he was in earnest and stared blankly at him. 'Well,' he added, indulgently, 'I'll let you off this time.'

"Then he and the other jehus standing around burst into laughter. They appreciated their reputation."

Music Has Charms For Tim.

"Are you fond of music, Tim?" queried Ike Hill, the other day, of the gallant representative of "d'ate."

"Music is it?" quoth Tim. "Faith, an' I am that. I am that fond I could listen to a barrel organ all day. And, say, 'tis music, so 'tis, that makes a man satisfied wip th' ups an' downs of life."

"Then," said the unfeeling Ike, "listen to the band on your hat."—Washington Post.

A FORTUNE TOLD.

"Da——"

"Oh! papa, how can you?"

The old high baliff of Krohn pushed away the pretty little hand that his eldest daughter sought to place over his mouth.

"No," he said, "I will not keep quiet. I repeat that the whole custom of sending New Year's cards is a bad one, and it is time to put an end to it. What are the results of such nonsense.

"First, I get my mail bag an hour later than usual, and secondly it is crammed so full with the stupid stuff I can hardly get it open!"

At length the old gentleman's efforts was rewarded, the bag sprang open and he emptied its contents with impatience on the breakfast table.

"To Fraulein Katharina von Krohn," he read. "Are they all for you, Kathinka?"

"Don't be so unbearable, papa, and please don't call me Kathinka,"

The old gentleman replied to his daughter's request with an unintelligible growl and went on drinking his coffee.

"Just look what a lot there is for me!" cried Katharina, piling the letters up on the table in front of her and her face lighting up with pleasure.

"Are they all for you?"

"Yes, all. Now you can see what it is to be known as a beauty."

"And an heiress," added her father.

"Yes, and an heiress," she repeated thoughtfully.

"But is there nothing for my little Lili?" asked the father.

Katharina shrugged her shapely shoulders impatiently.

"Why, of course not. If a girl expects to be shown much attention she must be more pushing and important."

"And an hesress, too," was the father's laconic addition to the sentences.

"I really should be very grateful, father, if you would not allude so much to my money," was the rather curt protest.

"I can't help it, Katharina, when I see my Lili here, as beautiful as the flower that gave her the name, and—well, she is not an heiress, do you understand? That's the whole thing.

Katharina made no answer. She was busily studying the handwriting on the envelopes.

A young girl who had hitherto sat opposite to her in silence left her seat, went up to the high baliff and, putting her fair young arms around his neck gave him a kiss.

A world of love shone in his eyes as he looked at her with pleasure and stroked her soft cheeks.

"Never mind, Lili," he said slowly. "I am glad that you don't get such a pile of letters. I'm grateful, too, you're not an heiress. Perhaps then no one will take you away from me."

Tears came into the girl's eyes, for, though she said no word, yet the thought that no one had remembered her or cared enough for her to send her a New Year's card made her sad. But she forced herself not to cry and tried to conceal the few tears that would not be kept back by kissing her father again lovingly on the eyes and lips.

The High Baliff of Krohn, father of the two girls had married twice. His first wife, a lovely, proud but vain woman died soon after the birth of a little daughter and left her the whole of a large fortune. His second wife, daughter of a country clergyman, brought him no wealth but a sweet and beautiful disposition. When she, too, died after two years' married life, he felt so overwhelmed that he had never since wholly recovered from the blow.

It made Katharina feel annoyed to see her father so gentle and affectionate toward her sister, for she said with a sharp look at them both:

"What! kissing again! I cannot understand how you find pleasure in always lying around each others necks."

"You are out of sorts," Katharina," said her father. "One of the cards you expected has not come, perhaps. I would almost wager that among all those letters there is none from Baron Horn. Eh?"

Katharina grew a shade paler at these words.

"I certainly expected a card from Baron Horn," she replied, trying to conceal her annoyance. "He surely has sent me one! Are you sure you emptied the mail bag thoroughly?"

"Yes, I think so. But you had better look yourself; it would not be the first time that a letter has remained stuck in one of the corners."

"Ah! I thought so," exclaimed Katharina, pulling a crumpled letter out of a deep corner of the bag.

She glanced quickly and sharply at the address, and then with an exclamation of vexation let the letter hurriedly drop.

"Not from Baron Horn after all?" asked her father, picking it up, and yet—that is his writing. Heavens! why it's for you, Lili; it's addressed to you."

"Oh! impossible!" said Lili quietly, while a faint flush rose to her pretty cheeks. "It must be a mistake."

"By no means," returned her fatehr, smiling. "Here, open it. Let us see it. Oh, what a lovely card! Why, Katharina, where are you going?"

But the father received no answer. Katharina hurriedly gathered up her letters and left the room in a whirlwind.

Baron Horn was a young nobleman who had just returned from Africa. It was well known that he took great pleasure in visiting the Von Krohn family, and under all manner of pretexts took every opportunity to be with them. Of course every one thought that the attraction was the rich and beautiful Katharina, and she herself took particular pains to spread this view of the matter.

Accustomed as she was to a large number of enthusiastic admirers she had never for a moment imagined that the Baron could interest himself in her quiet, little sister, until she was reminded to-day in a rather unpleasant manner of the possibility of such a thing.

She read her letters through and became better humored.

"How stupid of me to get so cross," she said, as she smiled at her lovely face in the glass, "it is not possible that he favors Lili when he knows me."

There came a gentle knock at the door, and the servant girl came in and announced that the carriage was at the door.

Katharina at once remembered that Baron Horn had promised to go for a drive with her, and with this thought her face grew bright once again.

A charitable bazaar was to be opened in a neighboring town, and as the father was not able to go, Baron Horn had offered his escort to the two young ladies.

The Baron was as punctual as most lovers, that is to say, he came half an hour before the time, and found Katharina quite ready, to his great astonishment, for as a rule she kept everybody waiting half an hour at least.

Her purpose of frustrating a tete-a-tete between Lili and the Baron was completely successful, for she did not move from his side until they all three were ready to get into the carriage.

The father stood with beaming face on the doorstep and waved a fond farewell after them.

"This Horn is a very sensible fellow," he said to himself, "and I admire his choice. It will be very hard to lose Lili, but I would let him have her rather than any one else."

Although the bazaar was crowded, the arrival of Baron Horn and his two lovely companions caused considerable excitement, and they were speedily surrounded by acquaintances.

Among these was a Capt. Linke, a tall, blonde fellow, and one of Katharina's most sincere and faithful admirers.

"How glad I am to see you here," he said.

"Really? Why?"

"May I show you why? Please come with me. At the other end of the hall there is a fortune teller, and I want you to see what she will tell you."

"May we join you?" asked the Baron.

"Certainly. Come; we will all go together."

The mysterious room that held the fortune teller was reached. The fortune teller proved to be a little figure in the middle of a disc.

Round the disc were figures and numbers and slips of paper arranged. Anyone who wanted to see into the future paid a mark, set the figure revolving and took the slip of paper opposite which it stopped.

"Now," said the Captain, taking out his purse, "won't you try your luck?"

But Katharina refused positively to be a party to such nonsense, and inasmuch as Lili could not be persuaded either, the Baron asked permission to inquire of the oracle himself.

He set the figure in motion and took the slip of paper opposite which it stopped.

"Seek her hand and buy the ring. Thy life will be then full of joy," ran the words on it.

The Baron tried to catch a glimpse from Lili, but she appeared to be absorbed in the nature and character of the floor, and would not raise her eyes.

"Potz Blitz!" cried the Captain, turning to Katharina, "that is famous; you really must be persuaded to try it now. Or, shall I do it for you?"

"You may do it for me," she replied, in such sharp tones that everyone looked at her.

The Captain turned the figure and read the words: "Hast thou not often heard it said—" He hesitated; then tore up the paper and threw it on the floor. The conclusion of the sentence seemed to suit the many proposals that Katharina had received too well for him to read it.

"What was the rest, Captain?" asked the Baron in all innocence. But the Captain looked so displeased that the question was not pressed.

"I wonder what it was?" Lili whispered to the Baron.

"We shall learn later, perhaps," he replied. "But did you get my New Year's card this morning?"

"Yes," she answered, softly, with a blush.

"And do you remember what the fortune teller told me just now? If I buy a ring will you wear it?"

He drew a deep sigh of relief as he saw his answer in her happy, blushing face.

She lowered her eyes and said: "I don't know. You must first speak to papa."—From the German.

Mistaken as to the Man.

A slim faced man with a distressing cough was inspecting some trunks in front of a Michigan avenue store a few days ago when the proprietor appeared and asked:

"Looking for a trunk?"

"Yes."

"Here's the best $4 trunk ever made, and I'm the only one that sells 'em at less than $5."

"No good," replied the pale faced man with a sorrowful shake of his head. "One of these trunks wouldn't stand the journey from here to Jackson."

"What! I'll warrant 'em to go around the world! Take hold of one and bang it about and convince yourself."

"Do you give me leave to wrassle with one?"

"Of course I do. Take right hold."

The man with the distressing cough drew in a full breath, called out: "Schenneck-ta-day," as if warning a carload of passengers, and then reached for the trunk.

"Rip!" went one of the handles—"rip!" went the other, and as he stood it on end and upset it and flopped it back again one hinge broke loose and the cover split in two. With a twist of the wrist he gave it a slam-bang which completed the wreck, and, with a bow to the trunk man he joined the crowd and disappeared.

"Upon my soul!" gasped the proprietor, as he viewed the ruins, "but I made a big mistake in him! He's a baggage master instead of a dying traveller.—Detroit Free Press.

The Accommodating Man.

There is nothing like the heartlessness of a man. There is a pretty little bride here in Washington who is just coming to know that.

She fell out with her newly acquired husband the other day. I forgot quite what it was about, but it seems to me he had said something about a new gown of hers. At any rate, life was no longer worth living. She shut herself in her room and cried till her head ached. Then she bathed her eyes, brushed a fluff of powder over her red and swollen nose, and called icily to her husband:

"Fred," said she, "please bring me a spoon; I'm going to take poison."

"Yes, dear," answered the heartless monster from below; do you want a teaspoon or a tablespoon?" — Washington Post.

PLUCKY JAPANESE.

EX-MINISTER BINGHAM RELATES INTERESTING FACTS.

The Shrewdness of the Emperor and the Proverbial Goodness of the Empress. Corea's Natural Wealth a Bone of Contention.

John A. Bingham, at the age of 80, is one of Ohio's grand old men. For fifty years he has held an eminent place in the making of history, and forty years ago he began a long term of service in the Congress of the United States. He has outlived the master minds of his generation, but even in his old age he retains much of his fire and eloquence.

After twenty years in Congress during the most stirring era of this country's history, he retired in 1873. He was then fairly in his prime, rich in resources, overflowing with the inspirations gathered from friendships and struggles of war times, and he was loath to let go his hold on public life.

President Grant appointed him Minister to Japan, and to the surprise of those who knew the old man eloquent and his desire for distinction at home, he accepted. To their great surprise he remained in Japan twelve years.

In a recent interview Mr. Bingham said:

Referring to the present war I can see only one underlying design, and that is the infamous design of European powers to finally seize and parcel out among themselves the whole of China and eventually Japan. I say infamous because I have always objected to Europeans, particularly to English interference, with the governments of both nations, especially with Japan.

There is something else which may be a prime cause of this overwhelming desire of China and Japan to retain the mastery of Corea. The tradition goes that in one secluded and closely guarded province of the peninsula there are extensive gold and silver mines—a veritable Golconda, which supplies Japan with precious metals. I say a tradition because nothing absolutely correct could ever be learned about that wonderful province, so carefully is the approach to it guarded.

EX-MINISTER BINGHAM.

The Japanese are a wonderful people. They are a generous, brave, happy people. As soldiers they are ferocious fighters, especially in hand-to-hand conflicts. The history of their wars in the days of bludgeons and swords records awful carnage and terrific contests of man against man. Now when given civilized means of warfare their skill and ingenuity will avail most tremendously against the ancient and obsolete fighting methods of the Chinese.

Minister Bingham delights to talk of Japan, and is eloquent in praise of the Emperor. "He was a young man when he came to the throne," said Mr. Bingham. "And he is now but forty-one. I found him exceedingly modest, almost retiring and very devoted to his people. He is a man of splendid education and, though he speaks our language—or rather understands it—he never chose to converse with me in English. No, he considers it dishonorable and unpatriotic to speak in any language but the language of Japan. But that he does understand English and that he reads it I had ample means of knowing.

"As another illustration of his noble character, let me refer to the splendid system of free schools in Japan. The Mikado issued the edict that all children of the Empire should be taught free, and he saw that the provisions of his edict were carried out, until to-day the school system of Japan is equal to ours. The Japanese are not a rich people. They are really poor, but it is wonderful to see the contributions to the school fund made by those who could afford it. The rich proclaimed themselves in accord with the Mikado's edict, and gave generously that the system of schools might be gloriously perfected.

"When my term of office had expired the Emperor was loath to see us depart, and the Empress, good, noble little woman, made a speech in which she thanked us for goodness shown to her people.

"'We are sorry you are leaving us,' she said, sadly. 'Only one ocean divides Japan from the United States, and we wish you would come and visit us.'

"It was a touching, quaint little speech, which came from the heart and was an index to her beautiful character."

Thoughtless.

"That's about the most hopelessly foolish achievement of my existence," he moaned.

"What have you done?" asked his wife.

"And about the salary," said the actor.

"Well," said the manager, after a moment's thought, "suppose we call it $250 per week."

"All right."

"Of course you understand that $250 is merely what we call it. You will get $35 —Indianapolis Journal.

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

No, no these be not bad times. For is not Delmonico's so overcrowded at the dinner hour that you must wait in line for a turn to spent five dollars to satisfy the inner man? And think you there is a panic at hand when the Fifth Avenue Hotel turns away scores of people nightly, and the Waldorf is crowded from the Japanese room on the ground floor to the turret over the roof? What does all this mean? Simply that out of the East and West there has come to New York a multitude of rich people who have made their fortunes and are here to spend them. Nearly all of them realize that there are no pockets in shrouds, and so they are anxious to get the most that they can for their dollars here. The times are not hard. Stand on the corner of Twenty-third street and Broadway at 5 o'clock and watch the multitude as it passes by. If you are not satisfied and care to spend enough money to pass through the portals of the Metropolitan Opera House on an opera night you will surely be convinced, because you will find every seat on the floor occupied, every box thronged and grand opera given in New York as it is not given in any of the European capitals. You can sweep the circle of boxes with your opera glasses and see jewels worth a king's ransom; enough diamonds to fill a bushel basket, and rubies and sapphires to fill a hogshead. And such gowns! No, these be not hard time. It is the golden age of extravagence, an age, however, in which only rich men and rich women have their way.—N. Y. Advertiser.

The ways of some great men are peculiar. For months a commission has been looking into the condition of New York tenements. The commission has Richard W. Gilder, who edits the Century Magazine for a living and who writes sonnets and other things for a reputation. Several eminent social reformers have assisted Mr. Gilder. The commission has visited some of the worst tenements of New York, protected by policemen, have examined department officials of the city to their heart's content. The recommendations of the commission to the next Legislature are now fairly well outlined. A fairly good newspaper reporter would investigate and recommend pretty much the same reform after less than one day's work. In fact, some of them have done it. The commission favors the abolition of double deck tenement houses, more small parks, real fire-proof houses, winter baths for the poor. There is not a recommendation which New York newspapers did not long originate and fight for. But Mr. Gilder is a great man and a poet. The State may pay some attention to his recommendations.

The late Robert Louis Stevenson was tremendously interested in things that were going on about him at all times. On one occasion he arrived at the Desbrosses Street Ferry about five minutes before the express left for Washington, and was rushing into the ferry house, when a characteristic west side scene caught his eye. A huge and ponderous negress with a number of boxes and valises was leaving the ferry house when one of the ferry hawk cabman stepped up beside her, raised his hat with an assumption of great politeness, and, keeping step with her, began to murmur in her ear a very powerful argument upon the desirability of hiring a cab. The negress at first shook her head sharply, but this had no effect upon the hackman, a handsome and voluble little man, who varied his conversation by bringing a joke in every other sentence, and then roaring with laughter in a voice that rose upon the hubbub of West street. The negress listened to him for a moment and then started resolutely along. Then she stopped and listened again, and finally whenever the hackman laughed the silvery chuckle of the negress would come tropping in chorus. The mincing steps, exaggerated air of deference and the Bowery pantomime of the hackman were indescribably funny. Presently the pair came to a standstill the hackman continuing to joke and slowly relieving the negress of her bundless. Finally, after much hesitation she allowed the cabman to lead her triumphantly toward his cab. All the other cabmen who were standing in line some twenty feet away were chanting The Bowery, and when the negress walked toward the cab she kept step to the music. She turned around and looked apprehensively at the line of hackmen just before she reached the cab, but they all nodded to her and pointed their hands in the direction of the cab. Finally by the aid of vigorous boosting on the part of the hackman, she was placed inside the vehicle. The hackman then took a position of well-bred ease, leaning with one arm on the sill of the cab window, and lighted a big cigar while he talked with his fare. After this he climbed slowly to his seat, tipped his hat over until it rested almost on the bridge of his nose put both legs out straight over the dashboard and drove off amid the grinning delight of all the policemen, 'longshoremen, hackmen, and ferry employees in sight. Long after the cab had disappeared Mr. Stevenson stood hugging himself with his arms and looking with beaming eyes in the direction the cab had taken. His face during the whole episode depicted every emotion aroused by the scene. Finally he walked slowly into the ferry house to find that the Washington express had departed. But he was not at all disturbed by the news. He returned to the front of the ferry house and looked interestedly at the crowd of hackmen, as though wishing for another entertainment such as he had witnessed, and then went back to his hotel to wait for a later train.

MARRIAGE WAS NOT A FAILURE.

She Paid the Marriage Fee and Feasted the Wedding Party at Her Expense.

A young looking couple entered Justice Maes's office in Oakland avenue, Jersey City, recently, and several men who were sitting around smoking moved out of the way to let them pass up to the Justice's desk. The woman was evidently managing the business they had in hand. She told Justice Maes they had come to be married.

As soon as the knot was tied all the men in the court room saluted the bride. She produced a fat pocketbook from which she paid a liberal fee to Justice Maes, and then at her invitation the entire party adjourned to a neighboring restaurant, where they had a feast at her expense. She was exuberant in happiness, and after everybody had all they wanted to eat and drink she paid the bill, and tucking her husband under her arm, boarded a Newark avenue trolley car for the ferry.

FESTIVAL OF DAYS.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS HAVE A CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION.

Each Holiday of the Year Is Faithfully Represented, and Santa Claus Rewards the Faithful.

"A Festival of Days" was the programme at the Christmas entertainment of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church held in the church last evening. After an organ voluntary by Miss Jessie Utter, David E. Titsworth made a few remarks explaining the character of the entertainment.

The first day represented was New Year's Day, and Miss Elfe Randolph recited "Ring Out the Old, Ring In the New".

Easter was the next day. A large white cross trimmed with artificial Easter lilies was placed on the platform; and five little girls dressed in white, Grace Van Sickle, Louise VanSickle, Kizzie Neagle, Ruth Maxson, and Nellie Miller, carried the letters R I S E N, which they fastened on the cross after a short recitation by each. Then a chorus of girls, composed of the Misses Mertie Randolph, Ethel Moore, Marie Rogers, Grace Weeks, Eva Rogers, Edna Randolph, Isabel Randolph, Helen Rogers and Bessie Dunham, marched to the platform and sang the selection "Easter Lilies."

Decoration Day was represented by a campfire scene. William C. Hubbard was the sentinel, and paced back and forth back of a campfire, while a quartette composed of Frank T. Clawson, David E Titsworth, Arthur L. Titsworth and Frank S. Wells, rendered very effectively "Tenting Tonight".

The next was Independence Day. Six little boys, George Babcock, Bryant Randolph, Clarence Miller, Harry Rogers, Fred Gorton, and Robert Gorton, dressed in soldier costume, marched around the platform, while the audience rose and sang "America".

Three little girls, Miss Grace Weeks, Miss Bessie Dunham and Miss Edna Randolph, represented Thanksgiving Day. After a recitation by each, they all knelt down and offered a short prayer.

The last day was Christmas. After the song, "Merry, Merry Christmas, by the Sunday-school, Miss Nellie Miller gave a reading appropriate to the time. Another carol by the Sunday-school, and nine little girls, the Misses Marie Rogers, Bessie Gorton, Maggie Randolph, Edith Mitchell, Edna Randolph, Kizzie Naegal, Nellie Miller, Louise VanSickle and Grace VanSickle, told in a few words what each was going to give to Jesus.

After another carol, Santa Claus, in the personality of Marc Clawson, was announced and came in bedecked with drums, dolls, games and packages that were not to be opened until they were taken home. These were distributed to the delighted children. An envelope, containing money, was presented to Janitor John Naegle for his untiring efforts in behalf of the church.

The committee that provided the entertainment consisted of Miss Louise Lewis, Miss Ida Randolph, Miss Ernestine Smith, and to them is due a great deal of credit for the success of their efforts.

At the close of the entertainment the audience adjourned to the church parlors, where a bountiful supper was served. The tables were arranged in the shape of a square, and were very tastefully decorated.

This part of the evening's enjoyment was ably arranged by Mrs. Robert Gorton, Mrs. VanSickle, Mrs. George Stillman, Mrs. Charles Randolph, Mrs. Charles Dunham and Miss Lucy Dunham.

The ushers were Miss Mabel Mitchell, Miss Evelyn M. Lewis, Miss Violet Truell, Miss Ida Spicer, Miss Grace Lewis, Miss Louise Lewis, Miss Ernestine Smith, Miss Elizabeth Titsworth, Miss Nancy Randolph, Marc Clawson, Frank Hubbard, Charles Dunham, Harry Maxson, Frank Randolph, and Frank Smith.

Quite a number of the congregation was present, and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves, and pronounced it one of the most successful Christmas entertainments that has ever been held in the church.

Reviewed by Pictures.

A good-sized audience assembled in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church last evening and listened to the highly instructive illustrated lecture given by William D. Murray on the Sunday-school lessons of the first quarter of the New Year.

The pictures were excellent, and Mr. Murray explained them fully.

Walter Freeman and Harry Coward managed the stereopticon in their usual skilful manner.

—The sociable which was to have been held last evening in the Mt. Olive Baptist Church was postponed on account of the small attendance.

WILL DISCUSS GAME AND FISH.

New Jersey Fish and Game Commissioners to Meet January 5—Revision of the Game Laws to Be Considered.

The New Jersey Fish and Game Commissioners will hold a meeting in Trenton January 5, at which every interested person can have his say if he goes about it right. It is understood that the meeting is to be held for the purpose of getting a general view of the ideas of Jerseymen of sporting proclivities in regard to necessary changes in the game laws, and this conveys an assumption that the law of 1895 will be exactly right, the voice of the people, and beyond further tinkering. Everybody who has taken any interest at all in legislation of this kind knows how hard it is to reconcile different individuals, different localities and different opinions in regard to the importance of one species of game over another, and knows, too, that there is nothing to prevent a half-baked Assemblyman of the crop of 1895 upsetting all of the efforts of his predecessors of the early Spring of the same year. Game law tinkering and fish law tinkering will go on forever in a community in which the people rule and have the privilege of entertaining different ideas. The wide difference which exists was shown at the recent meeting of the New Jersey Game and Fish Association, at New Brunswick.

The convention of sportsmen was divided upon the question of Summer woodcock shooting, of Fall woodcock shooting, of squirrel hunting, although the general tendency was toward a general opening day for all game and one early enough to suit the gunners of both North and South Jersey. One man made trouble because he regarded the gray squirrel as the noblest aim of the sportsman, and thought that he could not get them after the nuts had fallen. Another man from the upper part of the State wanted an exception made in favor of woodcock, which would give the pot hunters and poachers an opportunity to shoot everything which runs or flies. A third thought that the grass plover were more important than the young quail and grouse, and wanted August and September shooting permitted in his particular field of sport, which, by the way, is not unreasonable, because plover do not take the gunners into the haunts of real game birds.

The commissioners will have to listen to all of these arguments and more, because an open meeting of this kind is bound to attract kranks. The committee of eight appointed by the commission, formed at New Brunswick a few days ago, will endeavor to see that there is a delegate from each county of the State present at the meeting of the commissioners next month.

The New Jersey Fish Commission has submitted the first report since 1884, and it is an interesting and business-like document, compiled by Howard P. Frothingham.

Orange County, New York, has passed a resolution to protect deer in the county from January 1 to the same date in 1900.

The West Jersey Game Protection Society has 300 dozen quail to put out in Salem, Cumberland, Atlantic and Cape May Counties in the Spring.

Twenty-nine deer were killed in New Jersey this Fall, if the reports from South Jersey are reliable.

TREE AT THE HOME.

Little Waifs Hold Happy Christmas Carnival.

Kind hearts and willing hands assisted in making happy the hearts of fourteen little waifs at the Christmas festival held at the Children's Home yesterday afternoon. A large tree covered with candles, from the branches of which hung many useful and substantial presents, was placed in the reception room, and round it the happy little ones gathered with faces aglow in pleasant anticipation of a generous share of the gifts hid away in its branches. Nor were they disappointed, for each in turn received several presents intended to keep their little bodies warm and also to satisfy the universal desire of all children for sweetmeats. Stockings and mittens, dress material and garments for the boys, as well as candies and fruit for all, were among the gifts sent by the generous public for distribution. Members of the Board of Managers were present, and handed down the gifts, and it was difficult indeed to determine who enjoyed the afternoon the most—the happy little ones or the women whose generous hearts had in so great a measure contributed to the success of the affair. Hearty thanks were expressed by the managers to the public whose generous donations were the means of bringing joy to many little hearts at this gladsome Christmastide, and could the donors have glanced into the room yesterday they would have felt doubly repaid for their kindness by the joyous sight. Certainly this noble charity is worthy the support which it receives. May the good work go on!

—The personal effects of the Y.M.C.A were removed to the new building today preparatory to the opening Jan. 1.

KRIS KRINGLE POSTOFFICE

SANTA CLAUS AND THE BROWNIES VISIT PLAINFIELD.

A Fairy Evolves Good Gifts from Huge Snowballs, and from Infant Class to Pastor All Are Remembered.

Never has Christmas entertainment in the Park Avenue Baptist Church been as successful as that held last evening in the Sunday-school rooms. Everything reflected great credit on its promoters. Despite the blizzard that was raging outside, the room was well filled with the members of the Sunday-school and their friends. "Santa Claus Up to Date; or, Kris-Kringle Postoffice", a cantata arranged by the united efforts of Miss Clara S. Whitfield and Edwin B. Day, was the programme provided, and heartily was it enjoyed by all those present.

The first scene showed the cottage of Santa Claus at the North Pole; and Mrs. Santa Claus, represented by Miss Clara S. Whitfield, and her children, Miss Marion Shotwell, Miss Alberta Levezay and Vanderbeek Shotwell, were awaiting the return of Santa Claus. After singing "Where is My Good Husband?", Mrs. Santa Claus told her children about their father and the number of letters he receives. She took some of these letters and read them. They were from people in the Park Avenue Baptist Church of Plainfield, and praised its greatness and goodness. A ring on the telephone near by announced a message from Santa Claus, saying that he would soon be home. Several other letters were read, and then Santa Claus again sent word to his beloved wife, who, after her husband had concluded, responded with the wife's usual good-bye, a kiss.

More letters, and another message announcing that Santa Claus would be home very soon, and Mrs. Santa Claus and her children sang "Oh We Love the Merry, Merry Christmas", while the curtain fell.

In the next scene Mrs. Santa Claus and her children set the table for Santa Claus, Mrs. Santa Claus still talking on the virtues of her wonderful husband. Suddenly two Brownies, Mr. Hill and David Runyon, entered, or rather fell in, singing "Two Little Brownies Here You See". They were warmly welcomed by Mrs. Santa Claus, although she was forced to keep a watchful eye on her table, to prevent the good things from suddenly disappearing. After numberless little pranks they told the loving wife that her husband had been appointed postmaster of the Kris-Kringle Postoffice in Plainfield, and at the same time Santa himself telephoned that he too had heard of the appointment. Another message to the Brownies told them that they were appointed assistants, and after finding there was "something in it", they rejoiced with Mrs. Santa Claus.

Just at this juncture Santa Claus himself came in with a great jingling of bells, and the next instant he and his wife were in a loving embrace, while the Brownies took turns in hugging the loving couple and one another.

After a wonderful dinner, the Brownies presented Santa Claus with his official appointment, and Santa Claus appointed them in turn. The scene closed with general rejoicing by all, while Santa Claus and his family united in the chorus "A Very Merry Band are We".

North Dakota was the next scene, with eleven little children, Retta Nash, Marion Shotwell, Edith Kerr, Alberta Livezey, Violet Van Winkle, Nellie Giles, Marion Dickinson, Vanderbeek Shotwell, Gordon Kerr, Harold Skaden, and Charles Hillyer, sitting on the floor wishing that Santa Claus would come. This scene closed with the famous "Nodding Song".

The Fairy of Happiness, Miss Lillian Richardson, appeared alone in the next scene. After calling her friends, the Brownies, she told them that Santa Claus had forgotten the little children in North Dakota and that they must get something for the children, which the promised to do. Miss Richardson completely captivated her audience, especially after her song of "Christmas Bells", which closed the scene.

The final scene was the Kris-Kringle Postoffice, and after Santa Claus had sent his audience into roars of laughter over his actions the Brownies appeared, each rolling a large snowball containing the "Good-Cheer Mail". They could not be opened, but the good fairy again appeared and told the Brownies where the key might be found. Soon they came tumbling back with it, and the snowballs were opened and the good things which they contained were distributed to the members of the Sunday-school.

A smaller snowball was thrown in for Rev. J. W. Richardson; it contained a green-plaster of very high denomination which Mr. Richardson said "Will draw very well".

The committee in charge of this novel and delightful entertainment was Edwin B. Day, Miss Clara S. Whitfield, Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Miss Elma Runyon, and George Hill. They are all deserving of great praise, especially Mr. Day, who has been untiring in his efforts to make the evening a successful one. How well he succeeded all who were present can testify.

Charles H. Hollinbeck, of Brooklyn made a delightful Santa Claus; his laugh especially delighted the children. The Brownies were also a great success their gymnastic feats and tumbling being certainly very fine.

Mrs. J. W. Richardson, Mrs. Shotwell, Miss Stella Shotwell and Miss Essie Thompson had charge of drilling the young people, and their efforts proved very successful.

THE WIFE TALKS.

Mrs. Gilbride Relates Her Side of the Cigar Store Trouble.

In conversation with a Daily Press reporter, Mrs. Benjamin Gilbride made the following statement regarding her husband's arrest and detention on the charge of embezzlement:

While the firm of Braham, Brown & Co. were in business in Philadelphia Brown, who was not a practical cigar maker, was frequently away from the store for a week at a time without giving his partner any knowledge of his whereabouts.

Braham (alias Gilbride) was the salesman of the concern, and several times was absent from three to four days while on his business trips. When Braham left for a trip during Brown's absence the store was left in charge of Ike Pereira, known in Plainfield as George W. Lodge, a cigar maker employed by the firm. On returning from one of these trips, in the latter part of September, Braham found that the store had been looted, not even an empty box being left. Inquiry at the express office developed the fact that the goods had been shipped to Plainfield several days previous.

Tracing the thief to this city, Braham was astonished to find that Pereira had negotiated for a store, representing himself to be the junior partner in the former Philadelphia firm of Gilbride & Lodge. Steps were at once taken by Braham to dispossess him, and on Oct. 23, "George W. Lodge" made affidavit before Justice Mosher that the property, stock and fixtures of the firm of Gilbride & Lodge were the sole and exclusive property of Benj. Gilbride and that he (Lodge) had no part in them whatever. Shortly afterward "Lodge" started on a visit to Philadelphia, and has never returned. His mother in Brooklyn, and his brother, a New York cigar maker, repudiate him, says Mrs. Gilbride, and speak of him as a thorough rascal.

The name Gilbride quoted in the firm name by Pereira when he arrived here was Mrs. Braham's name previous to her marriage, and was used by Pereira in the evident hope that Braham when he discovered his whereabouts would consent to become a partner in his wrongdoing. Rather than injure his business prospects by an apparent change of ownership, Braham permitted the signs and business cards to remain as at first. Mrs. Gilbride lays all the present trouble at Pereira's door, and feels sure that at the proper time her husband can clear himself of all dishonor. She will continue the business during Braham's absence.

Christmas Readings, and Refreshments.

The Sunday-school pupils of the Friends Society on Watchung avenue, and their parents, met in the meeting-house last evening at 7:30, and enjoyed their Christmas festival. Mrs. Adams and Miss Rachel Vail had charge of the affair, and were assisted by several other Friends. The programme consisted of the following recitations: "Christmas when I was a Boy", Charles Peterson; "Christmas Eve", Ethel Long; "Christmas Stocking", Anna Morrison; "The King's and the Fool's Christmas", Robert Mosher; "Welcome to Christmas", Harvey Morrison; "Far to the North", Horace Vail; "The Boy Who Helps His Mother", Harvey Vail; "The Wind and the Leaves", Frank Weigmann; "Christmas Time", Mildred Tyrell; "Christmas in Bethlehem", Charles Palmer; "Letter to Santa Claus", May Weigmann. This programme was concluded with a reading by H. G. Adams, "The Back Log; or, Ned's Little Game". The scholars then went upstairs, where they were served with ice-cream and cake, and later each received a box of candy. It was a happy event; and all, as usual, were delighted with the entertainment.

Miss Luckey Entertains.

Miss Mary Luckey entertained a number of her friends last evening at her home on East Fifth street. Games and dancing kept the young people busy for part of the evening, and refreshments were served. A song by Herbert Schutt and several recitations by Miss Mary Luckey were thoroughly enjoyed. Among those present were Miss Lucie Davis, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn; Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Lillian Glenn, Allen Taylor, Volney Green, Henry Brower, Alva Davis, Sydney Titsworth, Herbert Schutt, Robert Douglas.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

BILLS THE BIG REPUBLICAN MAJORITY MAY PUT THROUGH.

Gen. Sewell Believed to Have a Walkover for United States Senator—Chances of the Bill to Protect the Palisades.

The new Legislature will probably give some time to investigating the methods pursued in recent years in furnishing supplies to the State. One of the chief incentives will be the hope that something may be developed that will aid the Republicans in the Gubernatorial campaign next year. Bernard J. Ford of Newark, ex-superintendent of the Capitol, will probably be the first subject of investigation. Charges have been made that he was a partner in a mythical company that bought supplies and that loaded them on the State at exorbitant prices, and that he collected several fees for extra services while under salary. Mr. Ford says he is prepared to enter into a satisfactory explanation of all the business transactions he had with the State while in office. Another subject for investigation will be the printing of the annual reports of State officers and departments. The cellars of the Capitol are filled with these reports, which have cost thousands of dollars for the printing. There are packages of reports and Governors' messages in the German and Italian languages which have never been opened since they were received from the printer.

The chances for a short session of the Legislature are disappearing, in view of the many important subjects that are scheduled for consideration. The session will begin on Jan. 8. The Senatorial contest has apparently developed into a walkover for Gen. Sewell, and requires apparently only the formal declaration of the joint meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 23.

Some of the important matters to be considered, and which will consume considerable time are the Voorhees bill abolishing the county law Judges and lay Judges in the State and providing for county courts with a single law Judge, to be elected by the people; a bill by Senator Winton to protect from destruction the Hudson River Palisades; Gov. Werts's proposed law for the government of political primary meetings; amendments to the ballot reform law; a bill providing for the closing of the polls on election day at sunset; the amendments to the Constitution reported by last Summer's Commission and which would reorganize the higher courts and change the methods of practice in them; a proposed amendment to the Constitution providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, which will have the support of Gen. Sewell; a general law regulating fishing and hunting, which will be endorsed by the Fish and Game Commissioners of the State at a meeting in Trenton next Saturday, and which will probably make the same open and close seasons for the various kinds of game all over the State; a bill repealing or amending the township school law; the proposed amendments to the Constitution favoring the Swiss initiative and referendum system of legislation; a bill to restrict the operations of pound fishermen along the coast, which will come from the Monmouth County line fishermen, and others of local interest only, but which will consume much time.

The Voorhees bill abolishing the lower county courts is said to be scheduled for passage by the Republicans. It will be opposed by the more than ninety Judges in the twenty-one counties who will be affected, but as they are all Democrats their protests are likely to receive little consideration from the large Republican majority in the Legislature.

The proposition that the State shall condemn, purchase, and preserve the Hudson River Palisades is meeting opposition in some of the South Jersey counties, but Gov. Werts is expected to recommend such action in his annual message, and, as the treasury is in good condition, it is believed by the North Jerseymen that a suitable law will be passed.

A Mission Reading Room.

Arrangements are almost completed for keeping open the East Third Street Mission every day and evening, and providing wholesome reading matter. The plan will probably go into effect Jan 1.

—Constable Rockafellow, accompanied by three Freeholders, made an appraisement yesterday in Scotch Plains of the goods levied upon by him by virtue of a writ of execution on a judgment obtained by John Williams against Mrs. Anna Gwynett in Justice Newcorn's court.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

LIVELY BLAZE ON FIFTH STREET.

Poultry Life Endangered, But the Firemen Are Quick to the Rescue.

The alarm from Box 23 at 5:10 p. m. yesterday called the department to the house of H. W. Marshall, 416 East Fifth street, where a lively fire was in progress in the outhouses in the rear. One of these buildings is used as a hen-house, and twenty valuable fowls were rendered temporarily homeless.

A grape arbor runs from the hen roost to the rear porch of the house, and this was already ablaze when the firemen arrived. The presence of numerous small outbuildings and a barn in the immediate vicinity added to the alarm felt in the neighborhood until the fire was under control. Some little delay was experienced in sending in the alarm, but finally Miss Sadie Hand, whose mother, Mrs. Chas. H. Hand, had been the first to see the blaze, secured a key and, after tripping several times on the skirts of her house wrapper, reached the box and pulled the lever.

Little actual damage was done, and after the extinguishers had been used it was not found necessary to call for water. The fire is thought to have been caused by the carelessness of boys in lighting cigarettes or cigars in the hen-house, as the occupants of the property say no ashes had been dumped in the vicinity for two days.

Grace Church Christmas Prizes.

The attendance at the Grace P. E. Sunday-school Christmas entertainment last evening was very large, and all joined heartily in the exercises.

In the church an excellent programme of special music was rendered by a full choir in charge of Mrs. Freeman, and assisted by Miss Berg with the cornet. There were also interesting addresses by Rev. E. M. Rodman, Clarence M. Dunham and M. Gunnell. The scholars then marched to the chapel, where the Christmas tree was enjoyed, and prizes and gifts were distributed. Mrs. Freeman received many handsome presents, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Timpson were given a very pretty banquet lamp.

Those of the scholars who had approximated an average of 244, which is the highest, received prizes. They were as follows: F. Smith, Bessie Smith, William Praed, Julia Praed, Grace Crane, Emma Peterson, Donald Wright, Florence Hill, Maria Armstrong, Ada Armstrong, Rachel Rowland, Nelson Peterson, and Rufus Rowland, 244 each; Helen Pfender, 234; Clara Crane, 241; Clara Armstrong, 243.

Dr. Rodman spoke especially of Emma Peterson, who had not missed a Sunday at school in eight years, and every year her average was 244.

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Rodman, and the happy event was concluded.

A Young Philanthropist.

Big-hearted little Robert Crane of 315 East Second street, made glad the soul of Mrs. Martha Scott Christmas Day by presenting to her an order for a ton of coal and two pounds of tea. As stated in The Daily Press at the time, young Robert's heart went out to poor Mrs. Scott, who is nearly 80 years old and has for some time been in rather destitute circumstances, and after gaining the permission of his mother, he started a children's fair at his home, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to the worthy object mentioned.

The fair was very successful, and netted not only enough for the coal but sufficient to add two pounds of fine tea. The matter was kept a secret from Mrs. Scott until the proper time arrived, and then her joy and thankfulness to the kind-hearted little man were equaled only by the pleasure he experienced in making her so happy.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Elects.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing term at the regular council fire of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, I. O. R. M., last night:

Sachem—Chas. I. Young.
S. S—Dr. Geo. C. Bedford.
J. S—Chas. Conover.
Prophet—Elbridge H. Neal.
C. of R—John F. Wakefield.
Ass't C. of R—Asa D. Pope.
K. of W—John H. Blimm.
C. of W—E. M. Odam.
Trustee—Wm. Young.
Representative to Great Council—John H. Carney.

A large number was present considering the inclemency of the weather, and interesting remarks were made by visiting brethren.

Knights of the Maccabees.

The State Commander writes us from Lincoln, Neb., as follows: "After trying other medicines for what seemed to be a very obstinate cough in our two children we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and at the end of two days the cough entirely left them. We will not be without it hereafter, as our experience proves that it cures where all other remedies fail."—Signed F. W. Stevens, State Com.—Why not give this great medicine a trial, as it is guaranteed. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c.

IS NOT LIKELY TO PASS

Senator Teller's Views on the New Currency Bill.

Many Important Subjects Not Provided for in the Measure—Congressmen May Not Be So Willing To Champion the Bill—Immediate Action Necessary To Secure a Vote.

Washington, Dec. 27.—In an interview with Senator Teller on the Carlisle currency bill, he said that, notwithstanding the confidence expressed by Mr. Springer and other supporters of that measure, he did not believe that it would pass the house.

At one time he was apprehensive that, through the pressure of the administration, the bill might come to the senate, and steps were at once inaugurated by the silver men to interpose an opposition which would have been successful in preventing its passage by that body.

Inquiry, however, developed the fact that quite a number of democratic senators were indisposed to take the responsibility of fathering a measure which proposed to change the character and possibly impair the value of the circulating medium, while other democratic senators were outspoken in their opposition to the scheme in any shape or form.

"The weakness of the bill," said Mr. Teller, "is in the fact that the people will not be content to have a change of currnecy unless one dollar bill shall be as good as another dollar bill, and every dollar note is as trustworthy all over the country as the greenback, and all other government issues.

"This prerequisite the bill does not and cannot supply. The people have been educated up to this standpoint for the past thirty years or more, and it is a very dangerous matter to attempt to wean them from it and persuade them into accepting, in lieu of the present government issues, an experimental currency that presupposes contraction and expansion and fluctuation in value, or relegates them to what is known in banking pariance as 'ultimate currency.'"

Mr. Teller expressed the opinion that when congressmen who now favored the bill returned from their holiday recess, after having discussed the question with their constituents, they would not be quite so anxious to champion the Carlisle scheme.

The fact that amendments have been offered showed that projectors of the bill were endeavoring to change front under fire, and that was a confession of weakness, since it was impossible to accomodate such a measure to all shades of opinion.

Mr. Teller further suggested that some immediate action became necessary to supply the present deficiency in the treasury, that the people were tolerating the issue of bonds, ostensibly to maintain the old reserve only because the money raised was used to meet the current expenses, but there was a limit to their patience even in this regard.

A deficit existed for the present fiscal year of unknown magnitude, estimated at from forty to seventy-five millions, and, while Secretary Carlisle doubtless believed the new tariff bill would realize sufficient revenue for the ensuing fiscal year, that belief was largely founded upon speculative estimate and hope.

How the necessary revenue was to be raised to meet present outlays was an unsolved problem, but this congress should do something to check the increase of our interest laying debt through the threatened further issue of bonds.

ACTORS ON THE TRAMP.

Five of the Stranded "Slavery Days" Company Walking Home.

Derby, Conn., Dec. 27.—The "Slavery Days" theatrical company is stranded at Ansonia, where they played to a small audience. They were at Holyoke, Mass., Monday night before, and left without paying an $88 board bill.

The landlord followed them here and had their goods attached. They are all penniless, and five of the men started at noon tow alk to New York.

Armenian Refugees Fleeing.

London, Dec. 27.—A correspondent in Odessa says that numerous Armenian refugees from Moosh and Bulanlyk are arriving at Sarakamysh. They are on their way to Etchmiadzin. All are in wretched condition. The correspondent says that several conspicuous Armenians in Moosh have been forced to embrace Islamism to save their lives and property and the honor of their wives and daughters.

Certificates for Militiamen.

Albany, Dec. 27.—Governor Flower has ordered that handsomely engraved parchment certificates of award shall be struck off to accompany each long service medal to be presented to national guardsmen. The certificates will bear upon their face a fac-simile of the medal they accompany, whether it be the ten, fifteen, twenty or twenty-five year medal in silver bronze or gold.

Consul's Son Arrested.

London, Dec. 27.—A dispatch dated at Lorenzo Marquez, East Africa, on December 24, says that the son of James McIntosh, the United States consular agent who got into trouble by shooting a native burglar, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with the option of paying a fine of 1,000 reis daily, for resisting the police.

Dropped Dead at His Wedding.

Boston, Dec. 27.—John Hughes, of Louisville, dropped dead here a few minutes before he was to marry Mrs. Susan Livermore.

ON A MURDERER'S TRAIL

It Leads to Mountain Caves in a Dreary Woodland.

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 27.—Murderer Samuel Goldman, who shot and instantly killed Rufus Williams, at Lambertville, is yet at large.

A posse of men, armed with shotguns, are scouring Sourland mountain, where Goldman is supposed to be in hiding.

As Sourland mountain covers an area of about ten miles long and one and a half miles wide, it is believed it will be a number of hours before he is captured.

The mountain is covered with massive rocks, high trees and underbrush. There are several big caves in this dreary strip of land, and if Goldman is concealed there he may not be captured until he is nearly starved and searches for food.

The report that Goldman fled to Pennsylvania is denied by Detective Bitting, who closely folloded his tracks as far as the mountain, where the trail was lost. An inquest over the murdered man's body will be held.

TACKLED THE WRONG MAN.

Whitaker Kil ed One of His Assailants and Wounded the Other.

Moorehead, Ky., Dec. 27.—Henry Tyree and William Cole, both young men, went to the house of Jacob Whitaker while under the influence of whiskey.

They told Whitaker to leave or they would kill him, at the same time drawing their knives. Whitaker seized a pole axe and a desperate battle ensued.

Whitaker felled Tyree to the ground, splitting his head wide open and cutting him in several places, killing him instantly. He then turned on Cole and dealt him a fearful blow in the head, inflicting a wound that will doubtless prove fatal.

Whitaker came to Morrehead and gave himself up to the county authorities and was placed in jail.

CAUCUS OF DEMOCRATS.

Members of the House Will Discuss the New Currency Bill.

Washington, Dec. 27.—A caucus of the house democrats to consider the pending banking bill will probably be held immediately after the reassembling of congress on January. Mr. Springer (dem., Ill.), the chairman of the committee on banking and currency, said that he would strongly favor the suggestion of having a party caucus.

While the caucus might not be binding upon those present, the general effect would be good, and it would be better, in his opinion, he said, that the merits or demerits of the bill should be fully discussed in private before it is brought to a vote.

Mr. Springer said he had no doubt that the substitute reported by him last week will pass in the house by a fair majority.

JUDGE VAN FLEET DEAD.

The Vice-Chancellor Passes Away at His Home in Newark.

Newark, Dec. 27.—Vice Chancellor Abraham T. Van Fleet died at his home here. He was one of the best known lawyers in the state, and had for years held the office of vice-chancellor.

Abraham V. Van Fleet was born at Hillsboro, Somerset county, N. J., January 6, 1831. He was admitted to the bar in 1852, became a counsellor in 1858, and for many years practiced at Flemington. He was appointed vice-chancellor in 1875, being commissioned by Governor Runyon.

LOANS KOREA MONEY.

Fifty-four Japanese Killed and 368 Wounded Near New-Chwang.

Yokohama, Dec. 27.—The Japanese forces commanded by Field Marshal Oyama lost two officers and fifty-two men killed, and had twelve officers and 356 men wounded in the recent engagement fought with the Chinese troops, commanded by General Sung, in the vicinity of New-Chwang.

The Korean government has decided to borrow 5,000,000 yen from the Japanese government, and, in addition, the government of Korea will issue notes to the amunt of 15,000,000 yen.

Rice Opposes the Plans.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—Isaac L. Rice has issued a statement in relation to the Olcott-Earle plan for the reorganization of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company, in which he says he opposed the plan for many reasons, the most important of which he says are, "first, because it is based on delusive figures; second, because it makes an enormous increase of fixed charges prior to the general mortgage interests; and, third, because it provides a ridiculously inadequate treasury reserve."

Music Teachers Meet.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 27.—The sixth annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Music Teachers' association was opened in the opera house and will continue until Saturday. Governor Pattison gave a graceful welcome to the visiting musicians, which was responded to on behalf of the association by President Kurzenknaube.

Nubar Pasha Injured.

Cairo, Dec. 27.—Nubar Pasha, president of the council of ministers, was chased by a bull on his farm at Choubrah two days ago. In his flight he fell down an embankment and injured his back so severely that, his doctors say, he must recline in a chair or on a couch for two months.

RECEIVED BY THE POPE

Officers of the Detroit Are Presented to Him.

Brilliant Scenes at the Vatican After the Columbian Relics Had Been Returned—An Address by His Holiness—American Catholics and Their Condition His Subject.

Rome, Dec. 27.—The pope received the officers of the United States cruiser Detroit in the throne room of the vatican. The officers were presented by Mgr. O'Connell, who expressed in their name and in the name of President Cleveland, thanks for the papal participation in the Chicago exposition.

His holiness replied in terms of great affection, and praised the progress, activity and liberty of the United States.

The speech was delivered in quite a familiar, pleasant manner. His holiness commenced with all ceremony and inviting the officers to arrange themseves in the form of a half circle, in front of the throne. Then, speaking in italian, which was translated by Mgr. O'Connell, the pope said:

"I regret my inability to express in English how pleased I am to receive you who were entrusted by the American government to bring back the objects sent to Chicago."

"It is a source of great pleasure to me to recall that these relics were received with honor, and wer given a place of distinction. I am also highly gratified to perceive the care which the American government took to assure their safe return. I feel a lively satisfaction to see the progress which America makes daily among civilized nations, which it outstrips, though younger. But, while I am happy to see your nation advance in numerous branches of civilization, I am more particularly pleased to note her religious progress. The Catholic church flourishes, and I desire to see her more flourishing still.

"At the same time, though I express special, paternal solicitude toward American Catholics, yet it is with peculiar pleasure that I receive you, because you are Americans.

"I hope to publish in a few weeks an encyclical to the episcopacy of the United States and Montreal, conveying the sentiments of my especial affection for your country. In the meantime I bless you all, and when you return to your fatherland tell your families that the pope blesses them with the paternal affection which will accompany you in the midst of the fatigues of the long voyage you are about to undertake."

The last words of the pope referred to the Detroit's approaching voyage to China. All the officers of the Detroit, although there was only one Catholic among them, received the papal benediction kneeling.

The audience lated half an hour, and at its conclusion all the officers went to Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, and presented their compliments to him. Later the officers dined at the American college. The facade of that building and its dining-hall were decorated with the stars and stripes. Among those present at the dinner were United States Ambassador Wayne MacVeagh; H. R. Whitehouse, secretary of legation; the United States naval attache, General Hardin, and the Rev. Dr. Riordan.

MURDERED BY ROBBERS.

Unknown Thieves Shoot an Old Man To Secure $6.50.

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 27.—Jake Copp, 75 years old, a respected citizen, together with his aged wife, lived near Perkinsville, a village in Winston county, where they conducted a small mercantile business. After he and his wife had retired, two shots, one from a double-barrel gun and the other from a 44-calibre pistol, were fired simultaneously through his window.

Both shots took effect as the old man lay in bed, producing almost instant death. After assassinating the old man, the villains went to the store, broke in and robbed it, carrying off a supply of merchandise and $6.50 in cash that was found in the drawer.

After completing their work of murder and robbery an effort was made to burn the building.

Will Contest the Election.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 27.—A notice has been filed with the secretary of state by Mr. William F. Gates, of Lebanon, notifying the state senate of alleged false returns in the town of Waterford, whereby C. W. Reynolds (dem.), of Griswold, was declared senator from the Eleventh district. Mr. Gates was the republican candidate and claims that he was elected by 29 plurality. He will ask the senate to give him the seat.

Emptied His Revolver at Them.

Kansas City, Dec. 27.—Wesley George and James Rial were arrested for disorderly conduct and put in the city jail. George concealed a revolver in his clothes and a few minutes later began shooting indiscriminately. Hugh Sublett was shot in the side, Thomas Rose in the arm and Jesse Lamley, a boy of 16, in the hand. None will die.

Big Business Transfer.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 27.—The transfer of the property of Warner Bros., the big corset manufacturers, to the Warner Bros. company was filed in the town clerk's office. The capital stock of the new corporation will be $1,000,000. There will be no change in them anagement of the company.

Arrested for Murder.

Westfield, Mass., Dec. 27.—John M. Reagan, the Granville blacksmith who quarreled with and struck Timothy Rolian, was arrested at Granville by State Detective Pease and Deputy Sheriff King, of Westfield, on suspicion of having caused Rolian's death. Reagan made no resistance.

Vicar General Rooney Dead.

Toronto, Dec. 27.—Rev. Father Rooney, vicar general of the Toronto diocese, is dead.

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

Less Than Half a Bottle of Munyon's New Remedy Restored Him to Health.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co. of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25c. a bottle.

CHAPTER I.

What was called a union revival was in progress at the principal meeting house in Broomfield, an old and gullied village in the southwestern part of Missouri, and the exhorters, vigorous advocates of a change of heart and purpose, were warm in their work when the slight flutter of a counter excitement arose amid the congregation. Old Bill Aimes, strong among the exhorters, and who long had enjoyed the name of "Wheel Horse," looked toward the door and saw a strange young woman slowly and with long strides walking down the aisle. She was exceedingly tall and with a complexion that seemed to darken as she drew near, but she was not ungraceful and neither was her face wanting in attractiveness. Her tailor-made gown was a mark of ultra fashion in this out-of-the-way place; and her air, her swing of motion bespoke the forced independence of city life. She paid not the slightest heed to the gazes bent upon her, but with easy freedom took a seat and modestly turned her eyes toward the altar where the mourners in split and shivered accents were pitiably begging that the old Adam born within them might be cast out into utter darkness. And now the whisper went round: "Who is she and where did she come from and what is she doing here?" Some of the children climbed upon the benches to stare at her, and old Bill Aimes, always a bold man, looked straight at her and shouted his exhortation as though he would have her believe that she had arrived just in time to escape the awful fury to come. But the woman sat there not the least disturbed; and when the services were brought to a close she got up without looking about her and walked straightway to the tavern, a short distance down the street. It appeared that she had already engaged a room, for she walked upstairs without halting, and a few moments later a boy came down with a note in his hand. Bill Aimes was standing near the door of the hallway, and as the boy came down the old man called to him and told him to stop a moment.

"Boy, what have you got there?" the old fellow asked.

"A note, or something of the sort," he answered.

"What are you going to do with it?"

"She told me to take it to the editor of the Sentinel."

"Well, let me see it." The boy hesitated. "Let me see it, I tell you. Ain't I the mayor of this town, you young rascal, and ain't it my business to know it if any underhand business goes on here? Give me that thing."

The idlers who stood about applauded the mayor and the boy handed him the note. "Here, Alf," he said, speaking to a young fellow, "read this here thing. Left my buckskin at home and ain't got nothing to rub my glasses with. Read it." There was a titter

"BOY, WHAT HAVE YOU GOT THERE?"

among the idlers. "What are you fellers gigglin' at? Think I can't read? Hah? Is that what you think? Why, I gad—Lord forgive me for the expression—I read the Declaration of Independence at a muster before either of you was born. What does that thing say, Alf?"

Alf spelled and spluttered for a moment or two and then read the following:

"MY DEAR SIR: Meet me at once in the parlor at the hotel on important business. Respectfully, POLLY LOPP."

The old man took the note, looked at it, turned it over, looked at it again, folded it and returned it to the boy. "I don't understand it, but I reckon it's all right," he said. "Take it to him, and say, you, watch him when he reads it, and come back here and tell me how he looked."

It did not appear that the boy had more than reached the shanty where the paper was printed when they saw the editor coming hastily toward the hotel. To him the prospect of an important business conference no doubt produced a strange sensation. Year after year he had "scrapped" for a living in that village, printing funeral tickets, horse bills, and through his sheet urging his party to organize and overthrow the political enemy of his country. The idlers about the door of the hall made way for him as he approached, but the mayor, showing a disposition to block his path, asked him to wait a moment. The editor gave him a look of strong reproof. "I have no time for gossip," he said. "I have important business."

The crowd stood about the door, waiting for him to come down, and when he did those who were best acquainted with his sad and careworn countenance agreed that he looked years younger. Now, what could it all mean? The mystery was deepened.

"Jest hold on a minute," old Aimes called after him. The editor faced about and said: "Well, what do you want?"

"We want to know something that we've got a right to know," Aimes replied. "There's something goin' on here and we want to know what it is. You never saw that woman before, and why should you have important business with her? We don't know but she's some female anarchist come here to blow up these here American institutions."

The editor laughed, and for the first time since his defeat as a candidate for the legislature. "She's nothing of the sort," he said. "To tell you the truth she has just leased my paper for a year with the privilege of buying, and she assures me that it shall maintain its present high standard of morality and integrity. She takes charge to-morrow and you have nothing to fear from her."

"But where is she from?" Aimes asked. "We don't want women comin' in here among our folks without we know where they are from."

"She came from Chicago."

"What, and you are sure she ain't an anarchist? Look here, colonel, you ought to have gone a little slow in this matter. She might hoist the red flag at the head of your paper and then where would the country be?"

"No danger of that," the editor laughed, and off he walked, leaving old Aimes to stand there and wonder whether or not he should call on the woman and get a few points from her. He decided that he would, and upstairs he went. He looked in at the parlor door and saw the young woman sitting on the sofa with a book in her hand.

"AHEM! EXCUSE ME; MAY I COME IN?"

"Ahem, excuse me; but may I come in a moment?"

"Yes," the woman answered, putting aside the book. The old man entered, took a chair, moved it about and finally settled down near her.

"Putty hot," he ventured to remark.

"Yes, rather."

"Hotter than it was yistidy, I believe," he observed.

"Yes, or day before yesterday, either," she replied.

"I gad, I reckon you are right."

She slowly turned her head and looking straight at him said:

"You were exhorting in the church just a short while ago, I believe?"

"You are right. I always take an active part in our revivals. But we hain't done much this time and the meetin' closed to-day."

"I thought you were the man, and I am therefore a little surprised to hear you say 'I gad' after hearing you so fervently urge people to turn from frivolous ways."

Old Aimes puffed and fanned himself with his straw hat. The woman took up her book and looked at it. "Miss, I knock under. You are right. But I don't mean no harm by usin' such words, and I want to say they are the strongest I ever use. Bleeged to you for callin' my attention to 'em. But I have come to see you to ask you a few questions, and I hope you won't think them out of place, or anything of that sort, for you see country people pride themselves on bein' more respectable than most any other folks are, and the truth is they have to be mighty particular and all that sort of thing, which I hope you will understand without any trouble, and the questions I want to ask you are simply these here: How did you happen to come here and—"

"How did you happen to come here?" the woman broke in, raising her eyes from the book and mildly fixing them upon the old man. And she appeared to be making a study of him, his squint eyes, his purple cheeks, bushy eyebrows, fat nose; and she noticed that the bosom of his cotton shirt was unbuttoned at the top, revealing the grayish hairs on his chest. "But before you answer," she added, still looking at him, taking, it seemed, an enjoyable measurement of his discomfiture, "let me ask you if you would mind buttoning your shirt."

"I gad, miss," the old man puffed, "you are somethin' of a Tartar, I reckon. I've lived here all my life and have been mayor here for ten year and have wore my shirt this way every spell of hot weather, and you are the first one to tell me to button it; but dinged—excuse the expression, for it's the strongest I use—I say dinged if I don't do it. Now, miss, the shirt's buttoned, so go ahead with your rat killin', as the feller said."

"I have no rat killing to go on with. I merely asked you how you happened to come here."

"Yes, but blast my hide—excuse me for that expression, if you please, for it is about the strongest I use—you've got no right to ask me that question."

"Well, then, you have no right to ask me how I happened to come here."

"Miss, I tell you that I'm the mayor of this here town, but we'll let that pass. Would you mind tellin' me your name?"

"My father's name was Lopp and in remembrance of a great-aunt I was called Polly."

"Ah, hah, I reckon it was all right to ricollect the old lady and all that sort of thing, but from what I can gather from the papers Lopp is a sort of anarchist name, ain't it?"

"I have never known an anarchist of that name," the young woman answered, smiling.

"They may be, miss, but I don't like the name any too well, but we'll let that pass, as the feller said when he seed the wild cat." He was silent long enough to unbotton the top button of his shirt and then he went on: "We understand that you have leased the paper here, and we'd like to know why, for when a paper is leased there is generally some sort of ax to be ground, so I would just like to ask you what sort of ax you have brought with you?"

The woman threw down the book, laughed at the old man, and, clasping her hands back of her head, leaned back, still laughing at him.

"Miss, you are as much tickled as if there was a bug on you. Hah, don't you think there's a bug on you? I have generally commanded a good deal of respect among women folks and you needn't laugh at me any more than you can help, even if there's a bug on you, but what I want to get at and I'm going to get at it mighty sudden is this here: Before we can allow you to associate with us we must know somethin' about you, and it is as little as you can do to tell us what we want to know."

"You have asked me for my confidence," she said, looking at him with demure mockery, "the precious confidence of an unprotected woman, and oh, how willingly would I give it you but for the fact that I have not known you long enough. But I confess that you have invited my confidence by seeking to unbosom yourself." She looked at the old man's shirt and he puffed and buttoned it.

"Miss, I'll be slathered—now that is really the strongest expression I use—if you don't sorter git away with me. But won't you tell me somethin' about yourself?"

"Why, yes, I will give you my tenderest confidences."

"Oh, now, here, don't chaw me. I am the mayor of this town, I tell you, and if you are goin' to run a paper here you had better keep in with me. The city council takes ten copies and I could have them cut off at any time."

She raised her hands as if imploring him not to cut them off, and he, looking down at his shirt to see if it were buttoned, showed his yellow teeth, and continued: "Yes, you better keep in with me. Man tried to run a paper here once without keepin' in with me, and what do you reckon became of him?"

"Went to the legislature, I suppose."

"Hah! Who told you? Dinged if he didn't go there, but he left his paper dead as a padlock."

"I haven't anything to hide," she said "and I don't mind telling you that, having grown very tired of city life, I have come here to rest awhile, but not being able to rest without work I have decided to lease this little paper and play with it."

"Talk like a woman in a show, dinged if you don't. Not being able to rest without work is a new one on me; but we will let that pass."

"Just as well, I suppose. Yes, it is my purpose to live here a year, and then if I like the place well enough I may remain permanently."

"Ah, hah," said the old fellow, "that is to say, you mought git married and settle down here. Putty good plan, I reckon, for I hear 'em say that marriage is about played out in the cities. I have seed better lookin' women than you air, but then, I reckon, you mought do on a pinch, and you never can tell jest how soon a pinch is goin' to take place. My old woman has been dead about two year and I 'lowed after while that I mought pick up a chunk of a wife, may do so this fall if my corn down here on the creek turns out well."

"Your shirt collar is unbuttoned again," she said.

"YOUR SHIRT COLLAR IS UNBUTTONED AGAIN."

"Blast me if I don't go to the blacksmith shop and git me a horseshoe nail jest to accommodate you. So you are goin' to run the newspaper. Never hearn of a woman runnin' a paper, but I have hearn of 'em ridin' straddle and I don't see why a newspaper shouldn't come next."

"By the way," she said, "I should like to find some pleasant place to board. I don't care to stay at this hotel."

"You are talkin' sense, now, miss. Let me see: I live about a quarter of a mile from here—just an easy walk—and if you don't mind you may board there. My daughter Nell lives with me, and you'd like her. Oh, she eats more books than a sheep do straw, always a chawin' 'em, and you'd git along well together. She's too smart for this town, and you and her could trot together right well. Well, I'll send her over to see you. I reckon you are all right, leastwise you understand takin' care of yourself. Good day."

She arose and as he reached the door she called him. "What is it, miss?"

"Nothing, only I hope that you will not forget to go by the blacksmith shop."

The old man puffed and tramped heavily down the stairs, and at the bottom he found Alf and the other fellows waiting for him. "Don't put yourself to no uneasiness on her account, gentlemen," he said. "She can take care of herself, and if she can't, I gad, I can take care of her or come mighty blame nigh it; but I reckon that expression is a little too strong for a man that thinks as much of a revival as I do, and I ask the Lord to excuse me."

"But hold on and tell us somethin' about her," Alf insisted.

"I don't know a blessed thing about her except that she's all right, and that's all anybody need to know."

Shortly afterward a young woman called at the hotel, introduced herself to the stranger and said that following the advice of her father she had come to ask Miss Lopp to board with her. "We have a great, big old-fashioned house," she said, "and you may have all the room you want, so don't say you won't. Will you please not say you won't?"

The visitor had taken a seat on the piano stool and not ungracefully was slowly turning herself half round and then back. She was a comely girl and it was evident that she was the belle of the neighborhood; and it was also evident that she cared nothing for this distinction, that she had studied and read herself beyond any companionship that the village might offer, and that simply to be admired had long since grown tiresome to her. Miss Lopp never forgot that pleasing picture, the dark eyes half humorously pleading, the abundant hair caught up here and there as if by graceful and yet careless dips, the pleasing face and yet a countenance bespeaking strength of will—physical vigor and grace.

"You must not say you won't," the girl went on, giving Miss Lopp no time to answer, "until you know how much in need of a sensible companion I am. Father—and let me request you not to pay any attention to his strong expressions for he is really the best man you ever saw—well, he does everything he can to lighten my loneliness, but he can't do so very much, you know, being only a man, and I am actually hungry for some one to talk to."

"I don't see how I can resist so strong an appeal," Miss Lopp replied.

"There, I knew you couldn't say you wouldn't when you were brought to understand it all. And we'd better go now," she added, springing off the stool. "You shall have a large front room, but it has a rag carpet, woven half sentimentally by a woman that lives not far from here—by half sentimentally I mean that she thought so much of me she wove it for half price. But you don't mind that, do you?"

"What, the sentiment or the half price?"

"Why, the rag carpet, of course. I didn't know but you might expect velvet on the floor."

"My dear child," said Miss Lopp, "it was not the thought of a carpet that brought me into this neighborhood, and to tell you the truth I don't care whether the floor is covered with a rag or with sawdust."

"Oh, I just know that I shall like you, because you are not stupid with evenness of talk and kiln-dried manners. So come on and we'll go over right now."

And so Miss Lopp was installed in a large room in an old-fashioned house. Her two front windows commanded the drowsy village, the town cow that looked as though she had been patched, having so often been scalded by irate housewives; the prowling hog, the sport of every dog that found himself without amusement, the hitching rack where farmers' nags squealed and bit at one another. But the two other windows looked upon a garden, rose-tinted here and there, the dark shade lying between rows of high peas, a tangle of plum bushes, a long slope and a creek.

Mrs. Thomas S. Harris and son Roy, of Philadelphia, are visiting Mrs. Harris's sister, Mrs. George F. Meschutt of 326 East Front street.

Miss Mabel Wilson and Miss Minnie Smith of Putnam & DeGraw's will spend New Year's Day with friends in Junction, Hunterdon County.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reed of Bound Brook, Edward Dawe of Bridgeport, and Joseph Dawe of High Bridge, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox of West Front street.

Harry Kutner, for some time the capable and popular head of Lederer's millinery department, will sever his connection with that house Jan. 1, much to the regret of his many Plainfield friends.

Minerva Elects.

At a meeting of Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, last night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing month:

P. C.—Mrs. E. K. Cox.
M. E. C.—Mrs. B F. Moore.
M. E. S.—Mrs. I. H. Boehm.
M. E., Jr.—Mrs. E. T. Bowman.
M. of T.—Mrs. M. McComas.
M. of R. and C.—Mrs. A. E. Dawe.
M. of F.—Mrs. B. Thatcher.
P. of T.—Mrs. J Haberle.
G. of O. T.—Mrs. E. A. Egan.
Organist—Mrs. A. D. Pope.
Board of Trustees—Mrs. E. K. Cox, Mrs. J. Ford, Mrs. E. T. Bowman.

Two candidates were elected last night. The installation will take place at the next regular meeting, Jan. 8.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—Six inches of snow fell last night, followed by rain, and sunshine this afternoon.

—The Bethel Chapel entertainment set for tonight is postponed to next week Thursday.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. M., will elect officers at their meeting this evening. Other important business will be transacted.

—The Aetna Social Club failed to have their dance last evening, owing to the very stormy weather. It will probably be held at a later date.

—A larger stove replaced the small one in Justice Newcorn's store on West Front street yesterday. The rejected one did not thoroughly heat his office and store.

—A number of Plainfielders have received invitations to the first grand soiree of the St. Joseph's T. A. B. Society in Bound Brook Hall, Monday evening, Dec. 31.

—John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, will give their first reception and dance New Year's Eve in the Olympia. A very attractive dancing order will be furnished.

—Garrett Q. Packer, coming out of Demarest's grocery at 3:15 this afternoon, fell on the icy sidewalk and cut open his head. He was taken into Reynolds's pharmacy and Dr. Davis was sent for.

—At the meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last evening, arrangements were made for the joint installation of the Post, Woman's Relief Corps, and Sons of Veterans, Tuesday evening, Jan. 8.

—At the close of the short and important business meeting to be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening, D. A. MacPhie, the new physical director, will speak of the work of the physical department.

—Baggage Master Garreteon had a hand badly lamed this morning through a train hand's careless dropping of a trunk upon it. It was dressed in Mallinson's pharmacy, and genial Jerry is still on deck, as smiling as ever.

—R. R. McBurney, General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of New York city, writes to the manager of the Brown Musical Club as follows: "Let me thank you for the very delightful entertainment given by the club." They appear in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Saturday night.

—Lewis Cuff, a Short Hills Negro, has been complaining lately for having to support his stepson, Charles Vanderveer, who, he claims, won't work. He says he is tired of keeping a full grown man, and won't do it. He has interviewed several justices of the peace seeking information, and seems to think he has a good case for putting Vanderveer on the town.

—From "The White Squadron", to be seen in Music Hall tomorrow night, one can obtain a fair idea of life in Brazil, and the character of some of the people there. The play has a higher mission, however; it teaches the audience to love their country's flag. In the production car loads of scenery and several hundred people are used. "The White Squadron" is one of the most magnificent spectacular dramas on the stage.

—The Brown Students, who are to appear in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Saturday night, gave one of their delightful concerts in Paterson, and the Paterson News says: "The concert was a delight to all fortunate enough to listen to it. It was excellent throughout. If the association can get the students to come again they may be sure that the largest hall in the city will be none too large to hold the crowds that will go to hear them."

East Third Street Santa Claus.

There was a very happy gathering of children and parents at the East Third Street Mission last evening to celebrate their usual Christmas event. The following excellent programme was rendered:

Christmas Carol; Reading and Prayer by the Superintendent; Christmas Carol; Welcome Address by Eddie Britten; Advice to Dolls by Edna Kelly; A Word to Santa Claus by Lillie Gable; Christmas Song—Baby's Letter to Santa Claus, by Emma Ammon; Hippity Hop by Ten Little Girls; My Little Heart by Nettie Ammon; Dumb Bell Exercise by Three Girls; Ocarina by D. M. Gardner; Refreshments; Remarks by D. M. Gardner; Song of the Watches by Five Girls; Santa Claus is Coming by Katy Britton.

D. M. Gardner pleased all as Santa Claus and his comicalities were very funny, and he also distributed gifts to the scholars. Sandwiches, ice-cream and and cake were served to all.

Superintendent L. W. Randolph was presented with a very handsome book by the teachers entitled "The Elder Brother".

Unity Election.

The following officers were elected in Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., last evening:

M W—A W Ten Eyck.
C C—F Humpstone.
V C—J W A Bauersachs.
P—G Radford.
K of R and S—J W Hawkins.
M of F—J W Van Winkle.
M of E—B B Force.

Playing at Hearts.

A delightful heart party was given by Miss May Woodruff at her home on West Seventh street last evening. The rooms were prettily decorated with greens, by artistic hands. The feature of the evening was the series of games of hearts for prizes, which proved to be very interesting for the players. The prizes were captured as follows:

First—Three books, Friendship, Love, and Kisses—Miss Burt.

Second—French bisque—Miss Ferris of Brooklyn.

First—Gold pin, turquoise and pearl—Mr. Eagen.

Second—Silver key-ring—Meredith Dryden.

Booby prize—Brownie—E. I. Serrell.

After the games the balance of the evening was passed in dancing, which was concluded with an elegant supper served by Max Wiertz.

Those present were the Misses Burt, Florence Smith, Lulu French, Bessie Cornwell, L. Holmes, Genevieve Daniels, Alice and Jane Schoonmaker, Marion Dryden, Florence Williams, Nellie Taylor, Augustine Lissignolo, Margaret Vermeule, Kellogg, Burr, Hasbrouck, and Miss Ferris of Brooklyn; Charles Angleman, Arthur Serrell, Edgar Serrell, Blanchard Randolph, Charles Hazeltine, William Coriell, Arthur Freeman, Ted Freeman, Berry Eagen, Harry Williams, W. Thiers, F. L. C. Martin, Frank Richards, Meredith Dryden, Mr. Kilmer, and Mr. Negius of Bound Brook.

Music was furnished by Rogers.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

STORY OF THE EAST.

THE ARMENIANS WHOM THE TURKS MASSACRED.

The Jew Cheats the Turk; the Greek Cheats the Jew and the Armenian Cheats Them All. A Consul's Bravery Saves His Life from Brigands.

Like the Jews, whom they resemble very much in features, and to whom they are said to be primordially related through one of the lost ten tribes, the Armenians seem fully capable of taking care of themselves. It is a trite saying throughout the Levant that a Jew cheats a Turk, a Greek cheats a Jew, and an Armenian cheats them all. In the struggle for existence the Turks are heavily handicapped, being mostly ignorant and artless, and speaking their mother tongue alone, whereas the Armenians and native Greeks are clever, full of subterfuge, and acquainted with several languages. Honest and faithful to his pledged word, the Turk will work to the end of his days in order to discharge a debt, a quality of which the money lender takes advantage to offer him long and ruinous credits.

"If you wish to succeed," says an Anatolian commercial axiom, "trust the Christian to one-tenth, the Mussulman to tenfold his income." Thus trusted the Turk has no longer anything he can call his own. Deprived of all share in the seaborne traffic and in the industrial arts, he is being gradually driven from the seaboard to the interior, where little remains open to him except the guidance of caravans or a purely pastoral existence.

There was a time when the position of an Armenian was extremely precarious. He had to attach himself to some influential Turk to be insured of protection in case of need, but in return he was little more than a slave to his master. There was a time when an Armenian was compelled to dismount from his horse at the outskirts of a town or village and go through on foot. No "dog of a Christian" was allowed to walk past a walking Mussulman. But all this now is so radically changed that they are the objects of congratulation rather than compassion. They even have some rights not granted to their Moslem neighbors—namely, the right of appeal to foreign Ministers and Consuls, and the right to publish and circulate newspapers printed in their own language. Through the tolerant spirit of the Mussulman religion several hundred Armenians now hold lucrative and responsible positions under the Turkish government, one being even Minister of the Crown. More than this, they are allowed to follow out with the utmost freedom their own laudable enterprise in the matter of education. Good schools, besides those of the Protestant missionaries, have been erected in various parts of the country, and in many cases at private expense.

On a visit to the Sanassarean College, founded by an Armenian philanthropist of that name at the Armenian capital of Erzeroum, we were filled with surprise and wonder that such a well equipped and well regulated institution, with such a thorough course of training, was to be found in this out of the way corner of the globe. Our visit was the occasion for a performance by the school orchestra, consisting of twenty pieces, which rendered in admirable unison and harmony some very difficult selections from the European masters. The most remarkable feature, however, was a manual training shop, in a separate outlying building, where the students had made several omnibuses complete, and done some fine work in metal, such as combination locks and tools. In other words, the great feature of modern education, manual training, had found its way across the Asiatic border to this remote region, and strangely, too, in the very home of the ancient Chalybes, the original workers in metal, who forged instruments of bronze and iron when Europeans were polishing stones.

It is told of an English Consul at Erzeroum, and comes from our own Consular representative at Sivas, as strictly authentic:

The opening scene is in a rather unfrequented portion of Armenia, where the Consul, with an escort of half a dozen men, was traveling on some government mission. Toward evening the party stopped at a little village for refreshments. Here the Consul, being unavoidably detained, ordered his guard to go ahead, and after a short while started to overtake them. He had not proceeded far before he came to a lonely stretch of road running through a dense forest, where the dusk of evening deepened almost into darkness. Suddenly from ambush a troop of horsemen sallied forth and in less than a moment the muzzles of half a dozen rifles confronted him. There was no alternative but to yield to the situation. His captors, he soon learned, were a band of notorious brigands, whose depredations had frequently spread terror throughout the country. At the brigand camp he found that his bodyguard had already fallen an easy prey.

A paper was now drawn up and addressed to the nearest representative of the English government. They demanded a high ransom for the release of their prisoner, whose life was to be the cost of refusal. The axe in the chieftain's hand was raised to give the fatal blow.

"Englishman, will you sign?" echoed from the mountain sides and broke in trumpet tones upon the appalling stillness. With calm resignation the doomed man turned to the chief and said:

"No, sir; I will not ask the Queen to pay for my life. She has already paid me to fight, and I suppose that includes to die."

The axe was thrown to the ground and in its place was grasped the hand of a hero. The sun arose that morning to shed its rays of glory upon an impressive tableau, and to give a brighter lustre to the character of a brigand chief.

They Made a Deal.

"Excuse me," said the seedy man, sidling up to the well-dressed citizen. "If I don't mistake, you are going into the saloon to buy a drink or a cigar or something?"

"I am going to buy myself a drink," answered the citizen, with an accent on the pronoun.

"Oh, I didn't want to brace you for no ball. What I want you to do is to take this here nickel and ask me to have a beer with you."

"I—I don't quite catch on."

"I'll tell you: If I go in and drink with a fine, well-fixed man, like yourself, I kin afterward stand there and stow away all the lunch I want to. If I go in lookin' as I do, with my little old one nickel, I'd git throwed out before I had a chance to take more than four or five forkfuls of the beans and a sandwich or two."

The deal was made.

IT WAS THE HIGH F.

How Gerster Twice Reached that Difficult Note.

An old-timer told this anecdote of Gerster: "It was at the old Academy of Music, New York," he said, "and Gerster was the favorite prima donna. She was in particularly good voice that night, and when she started to sing the house was absolutely silent. In fact, the stillness seemed to increase as she sang, and when she got to the higher notes people seemed to have stopped breathing. Up and up she went, until finally I felt my heart beating violently at the fear that she would be unable to reach the limit she had set for herself. In an indefinite sort of way I noticed that other people around me seemed impressed with the same fear, but the singer never faltered. Clear as a bell her voice continued to mount, until finally it had struck the high F.

"It was such a wonderful feat that when she stopped the house remained silent. People were so overwhelmed that they could not recover in time to applaud. While this death-like stillness prevailed, a German in the top gallery, aroused beyond his self-control, shouted out, 'Got in Himmel, dot vas der high F!' That broke down the house, broke the spell under which we were all enthralled, and a whirlwind of laughter and applause followed. With her face wreathed in smiles Gerster ran off.

"That was not the climax, however, for, the enthusiasm being now let loose, the entire audience arose and shouted and insisted upon the singer's return. She came back, flushed with triumph, and started to sing again. Again her voice mounted up as it had before, and this time the suspense was even greater, because it seemed impossible that she should accomplish such a wonderful performance twice in the same night. But she was in magnificent voice, and never faltered once. In fact, the second trial resulted in a greater triumph than the first, and the second high F was clearer, fuller and more beautiful than the other. It was a memorable night. I do not believe that anybody who was there will ever forget it."

PROOF READING.

Some of the Accomplishments Required in Every Newspaper Office.

The Clinton, Mass., Daily Item thus plesingly gives the public an insight into one of the open secrets of newspaper offices.

If any of our readers are sometimes annoyed by seeing a word in these columns wrongly spelled, or a letter upside down, or notice that a comma has been supplanted by a period, they are invited to call at our office between the hours of one and three on any cloudy afternoon and assist in reading proof.

We will guarantee our critical friends a novel experience; with the foreman semi-occasionally peering around the corner, offering the quieting suggestion that we must hurry up or we shall miss the mails—with four genial compositors patiently awaiting for proof or copy—with the irrepressible telephone ringing vigorously its two-short-and-one-long demand for immediate attention—with a later comer buzzing the patient reporter at the opposite desk—while two nervous dogs are racing through the room—all this, more or less, with the understanding that grammar, orthography, punctuation and common sense must come out of the racket so thoroughly unscathed that the evening reader will discover no errors to speak of.

It will soon appear that the task is about as easy as it would be to sing,

"Twas a calm, still night," while simultaneously suffering the din of a peal of thunder, the crash of an avalanche, or the fury of a January blizzard.

A MODEL MAID.

Just How a State Dinner Should be Properly Served.

Neatness is an attribute indispensable, and one that tells its own tale, and should be observed in the dining room above all other places. Plain, neat clothing should be worn. The hair of the servant should be arranged as plainly as possible. A maid should always be well capped and aproned, and her shoes should be such as to render her walking as near noiseless as possible. A few rules essential to one who has the care of the dining room are given:

A waiting maid should not make her appearance in the dining room until after the guests are seated.

Napkins should always be folded as simply as possible. Fanciful shapes suggest the hotel and restaurant.

Always place tumblers to the right and fill only three-quarters full.

In setting the table the tines of the fork should be turned up and the sharp edge of the knife blade toward the plate, placing the fork next the plate.

Place the cup containing coffee at the right of each person; offer sugar and cream at the left.

Always in offering anything to a guest go to the left, allowing the person served to use the right hand.

Any dish from which a person helps himself must be offered at the left. Those from which the maid serves must be placed at the right.

Everything relating to one course must be removed before serving another course.

Always go to the right of each person to remove the dishes.

The waiting maid must be responsible for the proper heating of dishes before they are brought to the table.

Except in case of accident which she cannot remedy a maid should never speak to the hostess, who should be looked upon as a guest at her own table for the time being, and treated accordingly.

A maid who is watchful will never permit one guest to help another in the passing of food.

Avoid all appearance of haste, though one must move quickly in order to accomplish all there is to be done.

Her Choice.

He would have gathered in a her warm embrace, but she waved him back.

"No," she said imperiously.

"You crush my heart," he protested.

"Better thy heart," she answered, "than my sleeves."

The cuckoo rushed from the clock on the mantle and with a wild shriek directed attention the fact that it was now 11:15.—Detroit Tribune.

Rather Queer.

The art of making money leads
All other human passion,
And mankind gen'rally concedes
'Tis quite an honest fashion.
Yet, when a man to make the same
Has to the need arisen,
Then justice "tumbles to his game"
And sends him straight to prison.

Death of Emile Berckmans.

Emile C. Berckmans, a talented music teacher, died at 9 this morning after a year of illness, of dropsy, at the home of John M. Schorb, 115 East Front street. He was 60 years of age. He was born in Brussels Feb 25, 1835, and came to America in 1852. He came from a noble old family, his mother being a direct descendant of the painter Rubens. He has a brother, a millionaire, in Augusta, Ga. He leaves a small estate in charge of Executor Wm Craig. His wife lives in Brooklyn.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. —Another evidence that the Society of Friends is "progressing" is evidenced by the fact that window shades now adorn the windows of the Watchung Avenue meeting-house.

—Uncle Sam's Christmas express was so over-crowded that many presents did not arrive in the borough until after the Christmas-tree celebrations were over.

—On account of the snowstorm last evening the electric cars were run nearly all night to keep the tracks clear. Very little difficulty is experienced today, owing to the powerful snowplough and the liberal use of salt.

—The application of Charles Bock for a hotel license for Somerset street was renewed yesterday in Somerville, and laid over till Saturday.

A MOTHER'S DUTY

TOWARDS HER DAUGHTERS.

Suggestions Which May Help to Avoid Many Dangers.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Less than twenty years ago even the medical profession scouted the idea that young girls could suffer from the misery of uterus troubles.

That form of disease, it was claimed, came only to married women.

When Lydia E. Pinkham first sent out the news of her great discovery, there was no lack of harsh speech from those whose practice and opinions she set at defiance.

But when young girls by the hundreds were absolutely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then the tongues of the traducers were stilled, and faith was allowed to live in the hearts of the people.

Young girls are subject to this trouble. It robs them of the buoyancy of youth. It makes all effort distasteful.

It causes retention and suppression of menses, leucorrhœa, severe headache, waxy complexion, depression, weakness, loss of appetite and interest.

This being the condition of your daughter, what is your duty, loving mother?

Certainly you ought to know that these are all symptoms of the one cause of nearly all the suffering that comes to women; and to save your daughter you ought to begin that treatment at once, which for 20 years proved its power throughout the world.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and most natural remedy for women ever compounded. It will accomplish its work with certainty.

LORD CHURCHILL DYING

England's Brilliant Statesman Passing Away.

His Physician, Dr. Keith, Says He Cannot Recover and That His Death Is a Question of a Few Days—A Victim of Paralysis—Compelled To Retire from Public Life.

London, Dec. 27.—Dr. Keith, one of the house physicians in attendance on Lord Randoluh Churchill, said that the weakness of the patient was slowly increasing. He added that there was absolutely no hope, and that nothing could save the sufferer. His death was merely a question of a short time. A sad feature was that every effort made in behalf of the patient only tended to prolong such agony as he is now capable of feeling.

Lord Randolph Churchill had brief intervals of consciousness during the day. His wife is devoted in her attention to him, and rarely leaving his bedside.

There has been a constant succession of aristocratic callers at the Churchill residence, No. 50 Grosvenor square, and Princess Christian has sent a telegram to Lady Churchill expressing her sympathy with her.

Lord Randolph Churchill was the most brilliant member of the Marlborough family. He was the second son of the seventh Duke, an uncle of the present duke and a brother-in-law of the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough.

For years he was a remarkably successful member of the Tory party and a leader in the house of commons. He was noted for his oratorical powers and his ability to make and retain friends. In 1885 he became secretary of state for India under Lord Salisbury. His standing at court was high, Queen Victoria being especially fond of him.

Outside of politics, he was also distinguished in society and on the turf. It was owing to his sportsmanship that he won the heart of Leonard Jerome, then president of the Coney Island Jockey club, and subsequently, in 1874, the hand of his daughter Jennie with her large fortune.

Lady Randolph Churchill has always been as great a favorite in English society as she was in that of New York when her future husband met her.

It was about two years ago that Lord Randoulph Churchill broke down in the house of commons, and his strange actions were a great shock to his friends. An illness of three months' duration followed, during which his wife was his devoted nurse.

Upon his recovery he rested quietly, without attempting to re-enter politics. Lord and Lady Randolph Churchill visited this country for the first time in many years last summer, and then continued westward on a tour of the world, from which they returned, landing at Marseilles, only a few days ago.

This voyage was undertaken for the benefit of Lord Randolph's health, which was badly shattered. He was said to be suffering from nervous prostration brought on by overwork.

Lord Randolph Churchill has two sons, Winston Leonard, born in 1874, and John Henry, born in 1880.

CARLISLE NOT A CANDIDATE.

The Secretary Not Desirous of Returning to the Senate.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 27.—Those of Secretary Carlisle's friends who have counted on him for a candidate for governor or United States senator will be disappointed. The following letter has just been received here:

My Dear Sir: Your favor of the 7th inst., suggesting that my friends be permitted to present me as a candidate for the United States senate for the state of Kentucky was duly received. The friendly feeling which has prompted you to make this suggestion is fully appreciated, but I cannot consent to the use of my name as a candidate. If possible, I propose to take some part in the campaign in my state next year, in order to assist my political friends in reuniting the democratic party, but it will be with the distinct understanding that I am not an aspirant for any office. Very truly yours,

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

Death of a Polish Exile.

Washington, Dec. 27.—General Henry Korwin Kalusowski, aged 83 years, who died here Sunday, was one of the most prominent leaders of the Polish rebellion of 1830, and the Austrian insurrection of 1848. He was exiled with Louis Kossuth. He served in the federal army during the war between the states, and was for many years employed in government departments here. He was a native of Poland.

CONVICTS IN REVOLT.

One Dead, Another Wounded, and a Guard Badly Hurt.

Columbus, O., Dec. 27.—Following close on the Christmas festivities at the penitentiary came one of the most shocking ragedies that has ever occurred at the institution. One prisoner is dead, another wounded and a guard seriously injured.

Recently Warden James placed S. J. Temple, of Columbia county, one of the strictest guards in the institution, in the foundry.

The prisoners did not like Temple, and information was conveyed to him that three of the men had been making threats against him.

These were Joseph O'Day, a two-year forger from Cleveland; John Burke, a Loraine county robber, and John Bird, in for manslaughter from Franklin county.

Temple reported these three for making threats. Hearing of this, the trio lay in wait for him in the foundry. Burke seized him around the neck while O'Day struck him over the head with an iron bar. Guards Fulton and Butler rushed to Temple's assistance, while other prisoners in the shop flocked to the scene.

Temple managed to shoot through his pocket at Gardner, the bullet taking effect in the calf of the latter's leg. By his time the guards had succeeded in freeing Temple from the convicts.

O'Day turned to strike at Temple, when the guard shot him through the right lung. O'Day died soon afterward. Temple will recover from his injuries.

MURDER HIS "GOOD-BY."

Whitman Killed His Wife and Two Sons Then Killed Himself.

Burlington, Vt., Dec. 27.—William H. Whitman, of Winooski, a manufacturing suburb of this city, shot and killed his wife and two boys and then going upstairs shot himself, dying instantly.

Whitman is said to have been of intemperate habits, on account of which his wife separated from him and recently obtained a divore.

When he called at the house he expressed a desire to say good-bye to the children, of whom there were six.

On being admitted for this purpose, he had some words with Mrs. Whitman, and, suddenly producing a pistol, shot her and afterward the only two children present—boys aged thirteen and fifteen years respectively.

He then proceeded upstairs and committed suicide.

MANY PERSONS INJURED.

Trains in Collision on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad.

Waxahachie, Tex., Dec. 27.—As a result of a collision between two passenger trains one mile west of this city, seventeen persons were badly injured.

The west-bound Texas Central passenger train was slowly passing the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway crossing when the south-bound passenger train on the latter road crashed into the rear coach, striking it squarely in the middle and overturning it.

The passengers and seats were piled into a mass in the forward part of the car. An instant later the car caught fire from an overturned stove.

The accident was caused by the failure of the air brakes on the Missouri, and Texas train.

COUNTERFEITERS CAUGHT.

Nearly 300 Persons in Jail in Mexico, But Bad Coins Still Circulate.

City of Mexico, Dec. 27.—The authorities who are looking after counterfeiters in this city have made discoveries indicating that there is an organized colony of several hundred persons scattered about the city making and circulating spurious coin. Thousands of dollars have been successfully put in circulation within the last few weeks. Arrests of members of the band have been made almost daily, until there are now 280 of them in prison awaiting trial. The circulation of the spurious coin, however, continues.

Insurance Sharps Sued.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 27.—Charles Trafford and Edward Metcalf, identified with the insolvent Commercial Alliance and Columbia insurance concerns, have been sued for $600 by A. B. Crafts, of Westerly, a lawyer, formerly identified with the Commercial Alliance, who claims that the defendants wrote him a policy on his life when the company was insolvent and therefore secured money from him under false pretences.

Fire at a County Farm.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 27.—A very destructive fire occurred at the county farm, situated about two miles from this city. All the large barns and outbuildings were entirely consumed and it was with the greatest efforts on the part of the fire departments of this city that the county house was saved. The loss will aggregate about $10,000.

Big Increase in Earnings.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—Statement of the business of all lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad company: All lines east of Pittsburg and Erie for November, 1894, as compared with the same month in 1893 shows an increase in gross earnings of $177,704.77; an increase in net earnings of $211,424.96.

Monument to Annie Pixley.

London, Dec. 27.—Robert Fulford, the New York theatrical manager, has given a sculptor in this city an order to ecrect for him in Woodland cemetery, a beautiful mausoleum memory to his late wife, Miss Annie Pixley, the well-known actress and their son, whose remains are buried in the cemetery.

Died on the Train.

Peru, Ind., Dec. 27.—Martin Howery died suddenly on a Wabash train here and his remains are now awaiting orders from his home in West Newton, Mass.

Skater Drowned at Pembroke.

Batavia, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Burt Van Horn, aged 22, broke trough the ice while skating on Tonawanda creek, at East Pembrooke, and was drowned.

Saxton Takes His Oath.

Albany, Dec. 27.—Lieutenant-Governor Saxton took the oath of office in the department of the secretary of state before leaving for New York.

ANOTHER BANK ROBBED

The Bank of Commerce Is the Latest Victim.

Thirty Thousand Dollars Stolen That the Officials Know of by Clerk Carter—A Belief That the Amonnt Will Reach Double That—Confession of the Culprit Follows His Arrest.

New York, Dec. 27.—The detective bureau in police headquarters, received a telephone message from W. W. Sherman, president of the National Bank of Commerce, at 29 Nassau street, asking that a detective be sent at once to that institution.

Detective Sergeant Doran was dispathed there forthwith and on his arrival, was told by Mr. Sherman to arrest Edward R. Carter, transfer and coupon clerk, on the charge of being a defaulter.

The man was at once taken into custody and conducted to the Central office. Then he was brought before Justice Ryan in the Tombs Police court, who remanded him.

Carter is charged with appropriating $30,000 of the bank's money and, it is said, confessed his guilt. He is 44 years old and resided with his wife and two children, a daughter 22 years old, and a son 12 years old, at 246 Monroe street, Brooklyn.

For twenty-nine years Carter had been in the employ of the bank. He entered the service as a messenger and finally rose to the responsible position of coupon and transfer clerk.

According to the story he told the police, he began his peculations twenty years ago, at first taking only small sums.

He would say little about himself to the police and maintained complete silence as to what induced him to take the money and what he did with it, although he was not quite so reticent with the bank officials, as a statement made by President Sherman later in the afternoon shows. It was as follows:

"The National Bank of Commerce has sustained a defalcation by its Carter, amounting to $30,000. Carter was twenty-nine years in the bank, and began as a messenger boy, being promoted from time to time till he reached his present position.

"Among his other duties he was required to receive and pay coupons and maturing or called bonds. On comparing a balance the officers discovered a discrepancy of some $28,000 which he accounted for by claiming to have paid an error that amount of bonds before their maturity.

"When asked to produce the bonds, he was unable to do so and admitted his guilt. It is not learned that he speculated or indulged in any vices. He claims to have used the money in his living expenses.

"The loss, of course, is not a serious one, which has a capital of $5,000,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $3,500,000, but the defalcation is none the less distressing, as Carter had the confidence of all who came in contact with him."

Beyond this official statement no officer of the bank would say anything of the matter.

Carter lived modestly in Brooklyn and was much respected by all who knew him.

When his family were informed of his arrest his daughter hurried to police headquarters, this city, to see her father. She left the building in tears.

Raid on Prize Fighters.

Pittsburg, Dec. 27.—Superintendent of Police O'Mara has ordered the arrest of all prize fighters who have no visible means of support and directs that they should be charged as vagrants and treated as such. Jerry Marshall, the Australian negro, was arrested, but released on bail and will have a hearing this afternoon. The order was issued because Marshall and Jerry Sullivan, of Boston, had participated in a six-round bout a few nights ago before a select crowd. The Australian got the decision and a purse. The police got wind of the affair, having come off in the heart of the city, and Superintendent O'Mara issued the order to treat all prize fighters as vagrants.

Diphtheria Causes Uneasiness.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 27.—The unusual number of cases of diphtheria in Pawtucket is giving rise to some uneasiness. City Physician Frank B. Jenks says there are about twenty cases now in the city. There have been eleven deaths from the disease recorded this month. The cases have been mainly in houses where bad sanitary arrangements prevailed. It is not believed that the school houses are responsible for any case.

Gored to Death by a Pet Deer.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Frank Davis, a miller, of Fort Jackson, was killed by his pet deer. He left his house to feed the animal, which he had had for three years, and on his failure to return his brother started out to look for him. He met the deer with his head covered with blood, and later found the missing man dead in the barn, having been gored and trampled to death.

Killed by a Ram.

Butler, Pa., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Andrew Moore, of Center township, was knocked down by a vicious ram while she was going to the barn and the animal butted her to death. She was a widow, 60 years of age.

Killed by a Staten Island Train.

Port Richmond, S. I., Dec. 27.—An unknown man was killed at Tower Hill station on the Rapid Transit road while trying to climb upon the station platform. He had 6 cents in his pockets.

Silk Mills Resume.

Rockville, Conn., Dec. 27.—Belding Bros. & Co.'s silk mills, employing 400 hands, will begin running full time next week. The mills have been running short time for nearly a year.

Hatches Washed Ashore.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

EVERYTHING GOES SO LONG AS IT'S PRETTY.

Coats and Trimmings Discussed. Neckwear for Out-of-Door Use. Some Recent Costumes Accurately Described. Chiffon to Remain in Favor.

That mythical dame of fashion reveals the secret of her exaggerated fancies when she says that "if an ideally beautiful costume were once to become fashionable she would have to go out of business." Fashion must have some unreasonable features and border a little on the ridiculous in order to keep the wheel moving and possible changes forever in the perspective. Whatever else may be said of the present modes, they certainly deserve some approval for being so well proportioned. The sleeves spread out to correspond with the full skirts, collars are decorated with bows and rosettes to continue the effect of width, and hats are trimmed wide to complete the outline, giving an air of generous sufficiency to our costumes which leaves nothing to be desired in that particular direction. Skirts still continue to be close around the hips and wide at the bottom, and the only change which is promised for some time to come is that the back breadth shall be straight without the bias seam in the middle, and the fulness arranged in three box plaits at the waist. Bodices, which are mostly cut round, still have a monopoly of the dress decoration, for skirts are very sparingly trimmed when they are trimmed at all.

Even tailor-made gowns have some trimming on the bodice, if nothing more than three box plaits in front and one in the back. This waist has a belt and is worn with a skirt with one box plait, in the back, which is apparently a continuation of the one on the bodice, and gradually widens toward the bottom. Another pretty brown cloth bodice has one very wide box plait in front with three silver buttons, a plain seamless back, and a round yoke and neck band of pale green velvet covered with cream lace. The sleeves turn back in points faced with cream white satin at the wrist, and the skirt is quite plain.

Navy blue serge dresses are pretty, trimmed with wide white cloth galoon, embroidered in chenille and cut jet beads. A wide sailor collar, belt and neck band are made of this, and one band around the waist is very effective. An imported gown of green cloth is trimmed with dull gold, open work galoon over bias bands of dark red velvet. Embroidered cloths made up over a color, with yoke and sleeves of black mousseline-de-soir, tucked in clusters of five, are very fashionable, and plain cloths made with a velvet bodice and trimmed with fur are very elegant and dressy.

Fashion is more than generous in the matter of outdoor garments, for every kind and shape, from a long pelisse to an Eton jacket, is worn. Capes are quite popular as coats, and the most elegant ones are made of velvet, trimmed beautifully with jet and fur, and lined with handsome brocade, and are either very short or quite long.

An encouraging promise of fashion is that chiffon will continue in favor, and now that nearly every woman has possessed herself of at least one chiffon waist, it is cheering to know that it may have a long period of usefulness. Black chiffon trimmings, with an applique edging of cream colored lace and cream-white dots above, are very effective on silk dresses. Chene silks, with a cream ground and black satin stripes, are much worn for evening dresses, and satins are more popular than ever. The newest patterns in the brocades are immense flowers and conventional designs, one of which is a sunburst so large that it occupies half the width of the satin.—N. Y. Sun.

SUES FOR BEING PRAYED FOR.

Miss Kelso Objects to the Rev. Mr. Campbell's Prayer and Wants $5,000 for It.

The citizens of Los Angeles, Cal., are especially interested in a lawsuit that Miss Tessa L. Kelso, librarian of the public library there, has brought against the Rev. J. W. Campbell of that city for publicly praying for her. She wants $5,000 damages for what she considers his unjust intimations to the Deity in the presence of a large congregation, which were put forth in these words:

"O Lord, vouchsase thy safe grace to the librarian of the Los Angeles city library, and cleanse her of all sin, and make her worthy of her office."

For some time there has been some controversy over the character of the books to be placed in the public library of Los Angeles, and both sides have said sharp things. Some books that the devout members of the community thought ought to be excluded were put in the library, and at once there arose the voice of discord. It was heard in meetings and on the streets, and finally it became a theme for the pulpit. Miss Kelso has been and is highly esteemed in that city. When she was made librarian the choice was applauded everywhere as excellent, because of her training and her experience with library work in other places.

A local paper says if Miss Kelso should win her suit, the activities of the clergyman in the future will be circumscribed within very narrow limits. However heavily the burden of individuals that need divine assistance may rest upon his heart, he will have to speak and pray in such glittering generalities that both his auditors and the Creator will be puzzled to tell to whom he refers, or he will be liable to a suit for slander. Then will the prophecy be fulfilled which saith: "I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possessions," and to them the preacher of the future will have to confine his prayers, if Tesse wins her suit.

Embracing the Opportunity.

I. F. Morris of 413 East Twelfth street recently appealed to the humane society for protection from his wife. He is a sickly looking man, while she is a robust woman. Morris is smooth shaven; his wife wears a small black mustache. When Mr. and Mrs. Morris were taken to the Central police station. Mrs. Morris asked the Captain:

"How much is my bond?"

"Ten dollars."

She deposited $10 for her appearance in court and like amount for her husband's release.

"I don't want to get out," said the husband.

"Why not?" demanded Mrs. Morris.

"Because I want one night's rest," he said.

The jailer led him away to a cell.

A young woman of Butte, Mon., applied to a court there the other day for permission to kill her lover, who had jilted her. She thought she had a right so to do, but wanted to go about it legally and decorously. The Court was inclined to agree with her in the premises, but was obliged to dismiss her application.

[COPYRIGHT, 1894.]

The office of the newspaper was found in a jumbled state, with black and light types mixed together, but with the assistance of a boy who had long been an apprentice, a decent order was brought about, and from the very first number the paper showed an improvement. The paragraphs were written with a vigor that made the villagers wink as though their eyes had lighted upon something too bright for them; and the editorials on national and international subjects were set forth with that dignity which the farmer demands that his editor shall observe. A show of frankness soon wins the confidence of a southern town, and Miss Lopp became so evident a favorite that within a month after her arrival her paper had picked up an additional circulation of fifty copies, a marvelous growth, a newspaper miracle in Broomfield.

Nell soon learned to pick up type, and was therefore Polly's closest and most valued companion. They were rarely seen apart; they strolled in the woods like lovers, and together they begged contributions to the mite society.

One afternoon, as they were going home to enjoy the cool of the garden, Nell, swinging Polly's hand as they moved along, declared that she had never been so happy. "I feel that I am useful," she said; "I feel that I am the dearest friend of a woman who knows something. And do you know what I have been thinking of? I have been thinking that we ought to make a vow never to separate. I told father the other night that I should never marry, and if you will take up the same resolution why we will live together. There's the stage, and look, there are three passengers, men, and they are coming this way."

Polly made no reply, but, leaning forward, looked eagerly at the men. They had been looking about them, but upon seeing her they came quickly forward, and as they approached one of them called: "Hello, Polly!" and then each one said: "Hello, Polly!"

Several of the townspeople were within hearing, and they loitered near to see what might follow. Polly spoke to the strangers, and then requested Nell to walk on, that she would overtake her. Nell hesitated. "Won't you please walk on?" Polly insisted. "I'll soon catch up with you."

Nell obeyed, though not without muttering an objection, and Polly stood in the road, talking to the strangers. What could it mean? Why were they so familiar with her and why should she desire to see them alone? They turned and slowly walked toward the stage coach, which was to go out again at once, to take passengers to the railway ten miles distant, and Polly talked to them in low tones and then they all nodded and smiled. Nell and the villagers were watching them, and so was old man Aimes, and just as the three men had seated themselves in the coach, the old man, commanding the driver to wait a moment, walked up to the door and said:

"I am the mayor of this town."

"Sorry for you," one of the men replied.

"Well, by Satan's hoofs, I like that, but excuse the expression for it's the strongest I ever did use; but what do you mean by sneakin' in here without lettin' anybody know you was comin' an' sneakin' out again without lettin' anybody know why you did come? Now what have you got to say?"

"Shut the door, old man. Tra loo."

"Wait!" the old man commanded "Who are you and what did you want with this young woman?"

"Go on, driver. So long, old top." And off they went.

"Miss Polly," said the old man, turning toward the editor, "what do it mean?"

"MISS POLLY, WHAT DO IT MEAN?"

"Your shirt collar is unbuttoned again," was all she said.

That evening in the house of Squire Aimes there was a silent supper party. Nell's flowing friendship had been rudely checked and a sharp heel had been set upon the old man's dignity. And it looked as though a coolness must necessarily follow. The strangers had brought a mystery with them and had left it in the village, and in this mystery stood Polly Lopp.

Not a word had been spoken. Polly arose to leave the table. Nell looked up and her countenance was sorrowful, not so much that there might be a compromising mystery, but that it was kept dark from her.

"Goin', Miss Polly?" Aimes asked.

"Yes, I am through with my supper."

"But wait a moment. Now there's no need of foolishness between us; we are your friends and you ought to speak out. Them men comin' here and bein' so familiar like with you will cause a scandal, and it's for me to determine as the mayor of this town whether or not I can stand by you. But first you must tell me—never mind about my shirt bein' unbuttoned and all that sort of thing—you must tell me somethin' about them men. Now will you?"

"Yes. They came and they went away. That is all you need to know."

"Not be a slatherin' — excuse my strength—no, it ain't. Where did you know them?"

"I might have met them in a city."

"Hah, what's that? Might have met them in a city, but why? That's what I want to know. Didn't you hear one of them refer to me as 'old top,' and I've been ten years mayor of this town? Hah, didn't you hear that? And why, then, should you have met them in a city, or anywhere else?"

"When I probably met them years ago perhaps I was not aware that they were going to refer to you as 'old top.'"

Nell laughed, and the old man scratched his head. "Well, now, we'll say that you couldn't help meeting them," he went on, "but we can't say that you had to become so well acquainted with them as to let them call you Polly. I gad, I don't call you Polly, and I'm the mayor of this town and have been for ten years this comin' July, I gad. Hope the Lord will in the meantime excuse both I gads. Hah, now answer me that, will you?"

"All that you need to know, Mr. Aimes, you shall know in time."

"Hah, in time? But what will the people of this town think when they come to me to find out and I put them off with your sayin' that they shall know in time? I gad, miss, when the people of this town want to know a thing there ain't no sich thing as time—the whole scheme is an eternity until they find out, and unless they find out before the next election I'm beaten as sure as a horn, and I've been mayor so long now that I can't quit. Set down here now and tell us, won't you?"

"Not this evening. Nell, I'm going out into the garden."

Polly was sitting in the summer house when Nell joined her. They were silent for a time and then Nell said: "I am so sorry that anything should have happened. I was as happy as I could be until then. Tell me, dear, what it all means, and I'll promise to stand by you, no matter what it is, for I do think so much of you. I do, Polly, I love you,

"I WANT TO MARRY YOU, DON'T YOU UNDERSTAND?"

in fact, and now it does grieve me so to have anything come between us."

Polly took her hand and, holding it, replied: "There are many features of life in a city, and some of them might seem strange to you. That I should have become acquainted with those men was a happening; that they should have come to this place is another happening, and neither happening amounts to enough to cause any real uneasiness on the part of my friends. So I beg of you not to let it worry you."

"Oh, it doesn't worry me so far as I am concerned, but what will the people say? Indeed, what won't they say?"

"Nell, the view and the opinion of a village are necessarily narrow; here people are suspicious of strangers and are ever on the lookout for an opportunity to suspect one another, so it would be quite impossible for me to make an explanation that would be satisfactory to them."

"But, my dear Polly, you can make an explanation that will be satisfactory to me."

"Not now, my dear, but after awhile I will. Your father is calling you."

The old man stood at the garden gate, whooping the name of his daughter, and when she had come to him, having left Polly sitting on a bench in the summer house, the old fellow said: "Nell, go it into the house and stay there till I come, and when I do come I may have some mighty interestin' news for you."

The girl passed on without replying, and the old man joined Polly in the summer house. He sat down on the bench near her, fanning himself with his straw hat, and it was some time before he spoke.

"Hotter'n it was last night," he said.

"Hotter than it was night before last, I think," the woman replied.

"I gad, I guess you're right. You always raise me one; must have played poker in your time."

"But if I were to play poker I might not always raise; I might sometimes simply call."

"Gad, I believe you have played; but that ain't what I want to talk about. See this?" He touched his shirt collar and it was fastened with a horseshoe nail. "Been a threatenin' to git it for a long time and got it jest now in honor of you, don't you see? But it ain't nothin' to laugh at. Will you let me tell you somethin'?"

"Yes, I am going to sit here a few moments longer."

"Don't exactly like the way you put it, but I reckon it's all right." He was silent, fumbling with the nail at his collar; he sighed deeply, threw his hat on the ground, thrust his hands into his pockets and leaned back against the vine-woven lattice work. And in the twilight she could see that his face was hard-set and his countenance eager.

"What were you going to tell me?" she asked.

"Somethin' powerful important to both of us, but you'll have to let me git at it in my own round-about way. By this time the whole town is discussin' the fact that three men, strange men at that, come here and called you Polly. And mebbe in the mornin' they will tell you that you better git out. Then what?"

"I'll tell them to go to a place not on the school maps, but well located in spiritual geography."

"I gad, that's the way to talk to avoid strength, but it won't do to tell 'em no such a thing. There is a way by which the whole affair may be made smooth."

"It is smooth enough now," she replied.

"I'll be dinged if it is; it's as rough as a toad's back; but we can smooth it. Now here," he leaned toward her. "I say now here, you marry me and the whole affair will be settled, for they won't dare to talk about the wife of the mayor of this town. Hah, what do you say? You see that I've got about the best place around here, and I was down the creek yesterday evenin' and that corn is goin' to turn out monstrous, hah? You can go right down to the store and trade out ten dollars' worth at a snort, hah? Then Nell can help you right along in the printing office and it shan't cost you a cent. As I told you once before, you ain't so powerful good lookin'. Your face ain't got that saft look that it ought to have, but we can't expect everything of a woman from the city, you know. Oh, I know I'm gittin' old, but I bet a dollar that I can jump over that bean pole right yander."

"I'll take the bet," she replied.

"Hah, what's that? You don't want to see me jumpin' round in the garden path at night like a toad, do you? Wouldn't like to have it said that you married a man simply because he could jump over a pole, would you? Look, don't you see I have got this here horseshoe nail jest to please you? Look how I am putting myself out."

"But you haven't told me that you love me," she said, and in the gathering darkness he could see her looking down.

"Haven't I? Well I do. Love you well enough to let you go to the store and trade out ten dollars' worth at a snort, and if that ain't love, hanged if I know what is. Yes, I even love you more than that—I'll let you trade out fifteen. Now what do you say?"

"Mr. Aimes," she said, and her voice was low and sympathetic, "your earnest pleading warms my heart toward you, and it therefore grieves me to tell you that I am engaged."

"The horn spoon you say! But who to? But not to one of them men, I hope."

"No; not to one particularly, but to all three."

"The off ox you say! But you can't marry all three of 'em."

"No, I can't; but I can wait and see which one I really want."

"Miss," said the old man, catching up his hat and arising, "you come mighty near being the blamest creeter I ever saw."

He stood there fumbling with his collar; he took out the nail, held it a moment in his hand, and then, throwing it away, said: "Thar, I have flung my love and your honor out into bushes. Good night."

There was a great deal of talk in the village, and at one time it appeared that the mite society, for whose benefit Polly had so ardently begged a nickel here and there, would issue an edict against her; but the tide was finally turned by the president of the association, a widow with a business eye. She saw that to cut off the newspaper was to throw away a valuable adjunct, and so it was agreed that Polly might remain in the society and rest simply under a mild degree of suspicion. The question was discussed in the church, but the preacher, strong in his belief that church notices and abstracts of sermons should be printed, called a determined halt.

How much longer the affair might have been discussed, and into what remote and executive corners of affrighted virtue it might have been dragged, it would be difficult to say; but the arising of a new topic put it all aside. And this new topic was one of real excitement. Not far away in the hills lived a gang of desperate men, the Abe Peters boys, they were called. It was known, or at least it was strongly suspected, that they had robbed railway trains. Determined efforts on the part of the law had failed to bring them to justice. It was believed that they had formed an alliance with the Dalton gang, but this their leader denied, and offered, on condition of a pardon for himself and friends, to help the officers bring the Daltons into court or to kill them. This offer was accepted. The Daltons were killed or so badly crippled that nothing further was to be feared from them. Well, after this the Peters gang fought off the temptation to rob trains, but could not forego the pleasurable recreation of riding into a village now and then and shooting out the lights. So, just about the time the talk concerning Polly and the three men was sinking to a mere whisper of dying scandal, the Peters brothers rode into Broomfield, shot the town cow, wounded the prowling hog and shattered a lamp in the meeting house. This was the greatest outrage that had ever been put upon that part of the country, and old man Aimes, with his shirt unbuttoned, puffed up and down the street and swore that if anyone would go with him he would ride after the scoundrels. But everybody was busy. The sheriff was behind with his tax list, the constable wasn't feeling well; and while the citizens were discussing their inability to avenge themselves, Polly came up and said that she would go with Mr. Aimes.

"I gad," said the old fellow, looking upon her with admiration, "you'll drive me to the shop to get another horseshoe nail, but I think too much of you to see you put yourself in such danger. Let's wait awhile."

In the next number of her paper Polly scored the rascals, and this produced a scare. The people said that the Peters brothers would surely come back and riddle the town. And within a week afterward they did come back, shouting, galloping through the streets. In fright the people sought their homes. The marauders dashed about, firing. They galloped up to the printing office and fired at the windows. And then from the inside came a puff of smoke and one of the Peters fell out of his saddle. Then there arose a furious melee, firing right and left, but the steady hand within the office fired again and out of a saddle dropped another man. Suddenly there was a new excitement among the marauders, and from behind a goods box came the double roar of a shotgun. The Peters brothers, those not on the ground, ducked their heads and dashed away, and when Polly stepped out, Nell, with a gun in her hand, came from behind the box. "I was watching," she said, "and I thought you needed me."

CHAPTER III

Three men had been dangerously wounded, and the law, now brave enough, took charge of them. Polly and Nell were heroines. The president of the mite society called a special meeting in their honor, and old man Aimes made a speech, with his shirt collar buttoned almost tight enough to choke him. Now it was declared that Polly should never leave the village; and it was also avowed that if she wanted to be acquainted with three men from away off somewhere it was her right, and that it was nobody's business if she had chosen to engage herself to them.

One afternoon Aimes called at the office and told Nell to go home. "Go right on now and wait there till I come," he said, thinking to whisper to her, but speaking loudly enough to be heard out in the street. "Yes, right now, and when I do come I may have a mighty interestin' piece of news for you."

Nell went out and Polly knew what was coming. The old man sat down. "Little cooler than it was yesterday," he said.

"Yes," she replied. "Cooler than it was day before yesterday."

"Gad, I reckon you are right. Say, do you recollect that some time ago I told you about my field of corn down the creek? Well, you ought to see it now. Seventy-five or a hundred bushels to the acre. And you know that I told you that you might even spend fifteen dollars. Of course you recollect it, for how could a woman and as brave a woman as you ever forget it. Well, I have been thinkin' the matter over since then and I have come to the conclusion that you may spend twenty dollars at a snort. Now what do you think of it?"

"But you don't owe me anything," she replied.

"No, but I want to give it to you, don't you see—give it to you to spend at a snort, hah? I want to marry you, don't you understand?"

"Mr. Aimes, you are too brave a man to throw yourself away."

BOYCOTTING IS ILLEGAL.

New Jersey Decision in the Case of the Fight Against the Newark Times.

Vice-Chancellor Green in Trenton yesterday filed a decision that will be of interest to trades organizations. It is in the application of Thomas C. Barr, late proprietor of the Newark Times, seeking an injunction restraining the Essex Trades Council from carrying on a boycott against his paper.

A permanent injunction is granted, without costs. It restrains the Essex Trades Council, which is composed of representatives of different trade organizations, from distributing or circulating any circulars, printed resolutions, or other publications containing appeals or threats against the Times with the design of interfering with its business, and from making threats or using intimidation toward the dealers or advertisers in the paper tending to cause a withdrawal of their patronage.

The Newark Times suspended publication a few weeks ago. Its death was caused in part by the action of the Trades' Council, acting in conjunction with Newark's Typographical Union, which attempted to prevent Mr. Barr from using plate matter in his newspaper. Mr. Barr persisting, the union printers quit work and non-union men were employed.

The Trades Council took up the fight for the union, urged its members to boycott the paper, and attempted to persuade business men from advertising in it.

Church Lotteries Again Rebuked.

In charging the Somerset County Grand Jury, Justice Magie again called the attention of the grand jurors to the illegal liquor selling in the county, and explained the various ways in which the law could be violated. He also alluded to the question of gambling. He said that there was a distinct sentiment in the State in opposition to gambling in connection with horse racing. He thought that the public had overlooked other vicious forms of gambling, which were injurious. He called attention to the law in reference to lotteries, and said that this applied to all kinds of raffles, or where prizes are distributed by chance. It mattered not whether the object was charity or for churches. Innkeepers allowing such things were liable to indictment.

The list of causes of the present term of Court includes the following from Plainfield:

SUPREME COURT.

Aaron D. Thompson v. Lewis A. Hummer—contract. Chas. A. Reed; W. K McClure.

Wm. C. Kelly, Alfred I. Smalley and Newton B. Smalley v. Serapina Trajoni—ejectment. Craig A. Marsh; W. R. Codington.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Wilhelm Borchers v. Alexander Stieglitz—contract. J. B. Coward; J. D. Bartine.

Mt. Olive's Christmas.

The members of the Mt. Olive Baptist Sunday-school and their friends enjoyed their Christmas entertainment last evening, and the hearts of all were made glad by the happy event. A programme of recitations was participated in as follows: "Lazy Sheep", Sadie Doyle; "Village Blacksmith", Harry Kingslow; "Nervous Doll", Etta and Claude Kingslow; "Pastor's Sociable", Eddie Blair; "Prayers", Miss Connett; "Christmas Has Come in Our Home". Miss Gibson. This was interspersed with excellent music by the choir and school.

Santa Claus in the person of Mr. Young made his appearance, and distributed gifts to the little ones. Ice-cream, cake and candy were given to all members of the school, and all had a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Hard Work Getting Home.

George Bedford of the Scott Printing Machine Works, who has been in Pittsburg putting up presses for the past two months, arrived home last evening. He experienced considerable difficulty in getting here. In crossing the Allegheny Mountains, one engine and tender jumped the track, and in attempting to cross the mountain with one engine the train was stalled, and instead of reaching Plainfield at 11 yesterday morning it was nearly 8 last evening.

—The faithful letter-carriers, who are welcome daily visitors at Plainfield households the year round, will present their New Year's compliments Monday, and their handsome and useful postal annual. When yours is served, be generous with your reward, and preserve the book for future reference. The last page of the cover bears especially valuable information for every day in the year.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE CHORAL CONCERT.

FIRST OF THE SEASON A MOST GRATIFYING SUCCESS.

"The Messiah" Rendered with a Perfection that Wins Praise for Soloists and Chorus Alike.

The first private concert of the season was given by the Choral Society last night under perhaps, more favorable conditions than have ever before existed.

The society itself is especially well balanced this year, and is of increased numbers. Although some of the old faces are missing, there are still many who, as truly as the subscribers, have been its sustaining members through the past years. It is still under the leadership of E. J. Fitzhugh, who has so ably guided its members through all their difficulties since the society was first organized.

The composition which was so fittingly selected by the music committee for this Christmastide performance was Handel's oratorio of "The Messiah", which is dear to all music-loving hearts.

The quartette of soloists was exceptionally good, and all were ably fitted to sing the heavy oratorio music.

If there was a favorite it was Miss Gertrude May Stein, contralto, whose charming voice cannot fail to attract. Her rendition of "He shall feed His flock" fairly brought down the house, while "He was despised and rejected" stirred the depths of every Christian heart.

Mme Zipporah Monteith was very acceptable as the soprano. "I know that my Redeemer liveth" was rendered by her to the satisfaction of the proverbially critical Plainfield audience.

David G. Henderson, tenor, gave special satisfaction. He was so thoroughly at home with his part, that he was able to give an unusual degree of expression even to his recitatives. That beginning "Thy rebuke hath broken His heart", and the air following, "Behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto His sorrow", were especially satisfying; while the opening number of the oratorio, "Comfort Ye", made one feel that the success of the evening's performance was assured.

All who had been charmed with the singing of Conrad Behrens at the recent Philharmonic Concert, were looking forward to a rare treat last evening, although the oratorio of "The Messiah" gives less chance to the bass to rouse his audience than to any of the other soloists, while he has some of the most difficult solos. Mr. Behrens sang very satisfactorily despite the fact that he was laboring at a great disadvantage, having just received the sad news of the death of his mother, far away.

The choruses were rendered almost without a break. "His yoke is easy" and "For unto us is born" are worthy of mention, while the "Hallelujah Chorus" was inspiring. The society is indeed to be congratulated upon the success of its first performance of the year.

Music Hall Tonight.

"The White Squadron" will be the attraction in Music Hall tonight. It appeals to the popular taste by reason of its patriotic sentiment and character drawings.

The company carries several carloads of scenery, and the tropical beauty of Brazil is reproduced in all its splendor.

"The Congress of Nations" in Rio Janeiro to protest against the brigandage tolerated in Brazil forms the basis of the plot which unfolds a romantic love interest. The grand plaza in Rio, a pillaged monastery in the interior of South America, and the harbor of Rio, are among the principal canvasses. Another novel feature will be the representation of the American Navy under sail and steam. Stage ingenuity has been taxed to its utmost in this scene, and the result is a triumph. During the action of the third act over 150 people appear upon the stage.

—The 1895 calendars issued by The Daily Press are especially valuable in Plainfield, containing as they do the list of fire-alarm boxes revised to date. They have been liberally circulated by the regular carriers, but additional copies may still be had on application at the office of The Daily Press.

A WIDOW'S GRATITUDE.

Plainfield Boys Do a Noble Act of Charity in the West—An Answer to Prayer.

A magic-lantern exhibition was given at the home of Freddie Martin, Dec. 5 for a worthy western widow in need; and the earnest efforts of Freddie and his co-laborer in philanthrophy, Eddie Duck, resulted in the forwarding of $9, a most acceptable donation at the widow's home. Her heartfelt gratitude is interestingly expressed in the following letter, which is in itself a reward to the generous-hearted boys:

BALDWIN, Kan., Dec. 14, 1894.

Master Fred Martin and Eddie Duck:

DEAR FRIEND:—I feel I may address you as such, since the old proverb says "a friend in need is a friend indeed". You will wonder who it is that makes so free with your name, so I will tell you: I am a widow with two boys and earn my livelihood by sewing, and am very thankful to be able to do it, but sometimes the income is very small compared with the outgo. I attend the church and school of which Mrs. Sarah Bird [aunt of Fred Martin] is a member, and through her kind thoughtfulness and interest I have become the recipient of your generous gift of $9. I had been asking the Lord to supply a certain need which I saw no way to do, and He put it in the heart of a little boy away back in New Jersey to devise a scheme by which it is done. How wonderful are His works and His faithfulness to them that serve Him.

I judge from your deed that you belong to Him and that He is going to use you for His glory. In doing His work keep close to Jesus, watch for the leadings of his spirit and obey them and I pray that the Judge of the widow and God of the fatherless may be your portion and reward you abundantly.

Yours gratefully,

MRS. A. LAWRENCE.

Juniors Elect.

The officers elected at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening were:

They will be installed at the first meeting in January, when there will also be initiation.

Progressive Home Circle.

The first regular meeting of the Progressive Home Circle, which was organized a week ago, was held last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Karet on Park avenue, when a constitution and by-laws were adopted, and two new members admitted to the circle.

The rest of the evening was spent in playing whist and euchre.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Schwarz, Mr. and Mrs. I. Schwed, Mr and Mrs. J. A. Karet, Mrs. Kaerth, Miss Barrett, George Lederer, G. O. Strayer, M. Karet, Thomas Hughes.

The circle will meet every Thursday evening at the home of a member, when the time will be passed in a social way. Next Thursday evening they meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Schwed, Watchung avenue and Fifth street.

The officers of the circle are:

President—C. Kaerth.

Treasurer—Mrs. I. Schwed.

Secretary—G. O Strayer.

Met Death as He Avoided It.

Justice Chas. K. Moore of Fanwood has begun writing a biography of Jacob M. Clark, who was killed near Centreville last week. Mr. Clark was associated in civil engineering with Mr. Moore's father, Colonel James Moore, since 1832. Rev. F. M. McAllister, his pastor, in a biographical tribute to decedent, says of his lecture on the significance of the Great Pyramids, recently delivered both in Elizabeth and in Plainfield, that "it was an exhaustive treatment of the theme, in a lecture of two hours, which did not exhaust the audience. It is a coincidence that after our visit to Plainfield in haste to return to Elizabeth, we came to the double track at the station, but he refused to cross it while a train was on one track, saying he knew too much about railroads to run the risk, yet he met his death by just such a danger."

—The householder is always wanting something to add to the furnishing of his home, and will welcome the news that Boehm is giving away fine furniture with every purchase of $10, $15 or $25. This is enterprise unprecedented, but then Boehm is always doing unusual things, as is known to all who frequent his big bazar of bargains.

PASSED HIGH WATER MARK.

Over 3,000 Depositors, With $307,285.91 Deposited.

Last evening a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Dime Savings Institution was held and a most gratifying exhibit, as above, was made known, thus proving the fact that this most excellent institution is well managed and in a state of prosperity both gratifying to the Board of Managers and the 3,000 depositors, representing over $300,000. After Messrs. J. F. Hubbard, J. B. Coward and G. W. Rockfellow had audited the books and accounts a half-yearly dividend of one-and-a-half per cent. was ordered paid depositors after Jan. 1, and the annual statement of the institution was ordered published as soon as it could be made up by the secretary and treasurer. Messrs Jacob Voehl, Sheriff George Kyte and L. B. Woolston were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of L. E. Clark, one of the Board of Managers. Other routine business was transacted and the Board adjourned, well satisfied with the results of the year.

Oddities of Old Masters.

At the Crescent Avenue Church Wednesday evening, the Sunday-school lessons for the past six months were reviewed by the superintendent, W. D. Murray, in his usual lucid and effective manner.

The novel feature of the evening, as has already been briefly mentioned in The Daily Press, was the set of pictures illustrating that portion of the life of Christ which has been thus far studied. The pictures were mostly excellent copies of famous paintings and were brilliantly thrown upon a large screen by the oxy-hydrogen lantern belonging to the Camera Club. This was managed in a very satisfactory manner by Messrs. H. H. Coward and Walter Freeman of the club. In this connection the following comment is made: We feel obliged to regret that our friends, the Old Masters, on whom we seem to be dependent for illustrations of Bible history, should have lived and died so long before the present time of thorough Bible study and research, and that they should have contented, in so many cases, to substitute European models and scenery for those of the Holy Land.

So we have to be contented with men in knee-breeches at Matthew's "receipt of customs", Christ sitting in an arm chair while the "woman who was a sinner" annointed His feet (Mr. Murray calling attention to the inaccuracy of this picture) and toy canoes for the disciples' fishing boats. The woman of Samaria appeared at "Jacob's well" twice. Once it was at a small circular well curb and then at a square basin ten times as large.

Besides these more apparent discrepancies, the old painters often missed what we consider the true spirit of the sacred narrative as in the beautiful "Christ in the Temple" at the age of 12.

As studies of art, the views were most enjoyable, but as aids to instruction, it is probable that the word "pictures" alone would have proved more effectual.

Plainfield Always at the Top.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, with its large universal patronage, is especially proud of its Plainfield office, which, besides giving a service which for promptness and general satisfaction is unexcelled, is managed with such judicious good judgment and thrift that in point of net revenue to the company it ranks third at the top among all the offices of the company. This highly gratifying result is accomplished through the efficient personal supervision of Manager Chas. W. Runyon, who has surrounded himself with a most capable corps of assistants.

Gymnasium Work.

The Y. M. C. A. classes in physical culture under the instruction of D. A. MacPhie will open in the gymnasium in the new Y. M. C. A. Building about January 1. Young men who desire to join the class are requested to apply to the general secretary at the association rooms. Members wishing to secure lockers should make application at once.

An Editor's Tribulations.

(From The Dundlen Call.)

The editor was presented with four large roosters one day last week and it has taken all of his time since to keep them home. They are fighters and seem anxious to show their owner their fighting qualities.

—The Plainfield Common Council meets tonight to conclude its business for 1894.

Knights of the Maccabees.

The State Commander writes us from Lincoln, Neb., as follows: "After trying other medicines for what seemed to be a very obstinate cough in our two children we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and at the end of two days the cough entirely left them. We will not be without it hereafter, as our experience proves that it cures where all other remedies fail."—Signed F. W. Stevens, State Com.—Why not give this great medicine a trial, as it is guaranteed. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

A GORGEOUS SUCCESS IN THE COUNTRY CLUB CASINO.

Plainfield People Mask for a Holiday Dance, and Right Merrily Frisk the Hours Away.

The masquerade ball given in the Casino of the Union County Country Club last night was a delight to all attending. The genius and activity of Lewis G. Timpson, leader in the social enterprise, won such hearty favor that the society of the town spontaneously united in making it a glowing success. The lights were softened into a pink glow; the walls were hung with holly and other evergreen, and southern moss; the nooks facing the superb waxed dancing-floor were cozy with cushions and rugs; and in contrast to the frosty air of the snowclad outdoors The Casino was a scene of cheer and comfort.

The musicians occupied the stage. A novelty in Plainfield was the double orchestra. Elliott himself presided at the piano and played continuously, while one-half of his men rendered music for the dance and the other half alternated with restful selections. That was up to 12. At midnight the two orchestras merged into one, and up to 2:30 the dance went merrily on.

The balcony was reserved for onlookers, who saw a scene of gayety and animation, peopled as the floor was, after the grand promenade, with men and women in all styles of fantastic or beautiful disguise. Many of the gowns were rich; all of the costumes displayed originality and good taste.

Entering, the masqueraders were received by the committee, and saluted by lifting their masks, "not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith". Then, divesting themselves of wraps, they passed in and joined the merry revelers.

The supper, served by Max Wiertz, was faultless. The music was divine. Nothing was lacking for perfect enjoyment of the event. Aside from the regular supper, a private supper was given by J. W. Reinhart in the ladies' dining room, the participants being Mr and Mrs. Reinhart, Miss Reinhart, Mr and Mrs James P McQuaide, Mr and Mrs J T Scott, Mr and Mrs L G Timpson, Dr G W Endicott, E M VanBuren and H Page Guyton.

Mrs F O Herring had the most striking costume of the ball; she represented the U S Mail; her dress was covered with used envelopes and trimmed with stamps; she carried at her side an exact copy of a letter box, cleverly manufactured by her husband.

Mrs J W Reinhart appeared as pink domino; Mrs James P McQuaide, Summer girl; Mrs A Douglass Salkeld, red domino; Mrs J T Scott, bride; Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Summer girl; Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Swedish costume; Mrs W J Roome, Gypsy; Mrs T S Wheeler, Summer girl; Mrs Walter Wilkinson, flower girl; Mrs W L Saunders, Summer girl; Mrs J Frank Raymond, flower girl; Mrs Evarts Tracy, Gypsy; Mrs L G Timpson, Havanna; Mrs Irving H Brown, Princeton tiger in black and orange; Mrs Walter E Stewart, domino; Mrs Edward S Hooley, domino; Mrs Craig A Marsh, Watteau gown; Mrs Herbert Brooks, domino; Mrs B A Hegeman, Jr., Gypsy; Mrs R H Depew, fancy yellow dress; Mrs Corlies, fancy costume; Mrs Auguste Kleinecke, Summer girl; Miss Massett, Swedish costume; Miss Fairbairn, Greek costume; Miss M Johnson Gypsy; Miss Corlies, Summer girl; Miss A Johnson, Gypsy; Miss Murphy, Gypsy.

Miss Louise Dryden represented Night, in striking black gown with gold stars; Miss Mary Dryden, tambourine girl; Miss Annie Dryden, Summer girl; Miss Jessamy Harte, Summer girl; Miss Kathryn Yates and Miss Marguerite Yates, college girls, in gown and cap; Miss May Waring, Kate Greenaway; Miss Richardson, fancy costume of flowered silk; Miss Kathryn Reinhart, white silk fancy costume; Miss Reinhart, Quakeresses; Miss Manning, Little Bo-Peep.

L H VanBuren was a notable figure in real baby costume, with Mr Johnson as nurse; Auguste Kleinecke was a bold Hussar; Evarts Tracy, Highlander; Allan Worth, Harlequin; J Parker Mason and H W Corlies, monks; J W Bartindale, Captain U. S. Navy; R M Shepard, page; J Frank Raymond, knight; Edward L Hall, army officer; Dr Walter Wilkinson, sailor; McCready Sykes, Princeton student; W J Roome, master of the hounds; B A Hegeman, Jr., a handsome prince; Walter Place, clown; Howard Beebe, page; H A Patton and Edward Finch, college students; Marion S Ackerman, Alpine hunter; Rowland Cox, prince; Irving H Brown, college student; Marshall Adams and Thomas VanBoskerck, babes; George VanBoskerck, U S Navy captain; John Moore, Continental; L E Waring, clown; Peter B Matthews, Mephistopheles; Everett Dwight, Fred Reynolds, Gerald Lowe, Henry Lowe, clowns.

Joseph W Reinhart appeared as king and was a truly royal presence in red satin and ermine. James P McQuaide was a page; Mr Pearson, prince; F O Herring, Hebrew peddler, whose tray completed a perfect representation.

Others of the masqueraders, without distinctive titles, were: Mrs Henry D Brewster, Mrs E E Dorman, Mrs G Wharton Edwards, Mrs D T VanBuren, Mrs Massett, Mrs Gifford Mayer, Mrs Wm Sandford, Mrs O T Waring, Mrs J W Sandford, Miss Louise Depew, Miss Long, Miss Moore, Miss Randolph, Miss Kittie Stewart, Miss Place, Miss Minnie Brooks, Miss May Sandford, Frederick Huntington, F W Frost, F H Freeman, H Page Guyton, A Douglass Salkeld, Harry West, Jules Erickson, Alex Gilbert, H O Streuli, Henry McGee, Mr Parker, Wm P Hall, Edward S Hooley, T S Wheeler, Craig A Marsh, Herbert Brooks, Frank D Ely, Meredith Dryden, Albert Woltmann, A W Chase, W L Saunders, R H Depew, Stuart H Patterson, James Leonard, Dr Endicott.

The committee, Messrs. Lewis G Timpson, J T Scott, E M VanBuren, Augustus Shepard, Jr., O G Waring, Harry V Borden, Howard Huntington and F W Walz, were faultlessly attired in English hunting costume, with red coats, white riding breeches, and high boots.

The patronesses were: Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mrs Irving H Brown Mrs Rowland Cox, Mrs J Edgar Corlies, Mrs Geo Wharton Edwards, Mrs Howard O Fleming, Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs Benjamin A Hegeman Jr, Mrs Wm E Lowe, Mrs J Parker Mason, Mrs Joseph W Reinhart, Mrs Wm J Roome, Mrs Wm L Saunders, Mrs James T Scott, Mrs Walter E Stewart, Mrs Wm P Smith, Mrs Mason W Tyler, Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mrs Lewis G Timpson, Mrs G W VanBoskerck, Mrs Orville T Waring, Mrs George W Endicott, Mrs Frank O. Herring.

A WOMAN BADLY HURT.

Miss Woodcock Thrown from Her Sleigh Through a Countryman's Carelessness.

Yesterday afternoon at 3:30 as Rudolph Becker, proprietor of the Brunswick Hotel in Metuchen, accompanied by his aunt, Miss Woodcock of Germantown, Pa., were driving on Park avenue, a heavy wagon driven by a careless countryman crowded their sleigh against the curb, upsetting it, and throwing both occupants to the street. Miss Woodcock was quite severely injured, receiving a deep cut over the eye and having her arm broken in two places. She was taken into Leggett's pharmacy and Dr. Long was summoned.

The doctor found it necessary to take several stitches in the sufferer's forehead and to put her arm in splints. Miss Woodcock after a short rest was able to ride to the station, accompanied by Mr. Becker, who very fortunately had escaped injury.

Peter Bogart caught the runaway horse before it had done any damage.

Mr. Becker offers a reward for the apprehension of the countryman whose carelessness caused the accident.

An Efficient Service.

The largest Christmas express business ever handled in the history of the local office has been handled the past ten days by Manager Mills and his fifteen competent assistants. The enormous increase in receipts occasioned the addition of six more men and two extra wagons—one double and one single, making in all seven wagons and fifteen men. Even this force has been obliged to work nights and days and Sundays to keep even with the incoming carloads. Twice during the past few days caterers have shipped 3,500 pounds each to and from the city, and the total tonnage of matter handled has been something enormous. During all this rush Manager Mills has handled every detail of the work with satisfaction to all concerned.

Talking Socialism.

The Socialist-Labor party met last evening in Reform Hall and listened to an address by Mrs. Martha Moore Avery of Boston. Mrs. Avery is a very interesting, earnest and convincing speaker.

The speaker scored the Standard Oil Company, and an administration which would permit the ratification of any such treaty in the interest of capital as that which recently gave the "Standard" such unlimited privileges in Russia. Mrs. Avery earnestly and hopefully looks forward to the time when the working classes will awake from their lethargy and grasp the full importance of this great movement.

A Testimonial.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. DISASTER IN ITS COURSE

Great Damage Done by the Snow and High Wind.

Reports from All over the Country Tell of Wrecks and Heavy Loss of Property—Trains Stalled and Street Cars Blocked in Many Cities—Lives Lost in Gales at Sea.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 28.—The storm in this vicinity was the most severe since the cyclone of 1886. Wires of all kinds were torn from their fastenings. Market street was blocked with debris. Mayor Westcott formally requested the Camden Lighting and Heating company to not operate their lighting plant because of the risk of fire or loss of life should the current be turned on.

President Armstrong, of the company, coincided with the city and the plant was accordingly shut down.

The city is practically in darkness. At Seventh and Birch streets seven two-story houses were unroofed and several of the inmates were injured by falling bricks and plaster. Mr. and Mrs. William Shirley, who resides in one of the houses, had a narrow escape from death. They were awakened from their slumber by the chimney crashing through the roof and almost burying them beneath othe wreckage. Both were rescued, badly hurt.

Trees by the score were uprooted in different sections of the city. Along Hadden avenue in the neighborhood of the Camden baseball park the storm was severe and many trees were blown down.

New York, Dec. 28.—The severe storm which overtook this city will leave its marks for many days to come. From the Battery to the Bronx river the avenues of traffic are heavily covered with snow, followed by a steady downpour of rain, the whole resulting in miniature rivers and lakes.

When the sun, which throughout the day only occasionally appeared, went down, the mercury followed suit, falling rapidly. The lakes and rivulets became coated with ice, and the slush of the pavement gave place to hard, compact masses of snow.

Street-cars were stalled and many vessels were wrecked all about the rivers and bays.

Asbury Park, N. J., Dec. 28.—The storm continued with unabated fury, the wind shifting around to the southwest. The sea, however, did not go down. At the Seventh avenue pavillion the flooring was torn up, notwithstanding that the structure had but recently been strongly braced. As the waves struck the bulk-head the spray was thrown at least fifty feet into the air.

The life saving men say that the storm was one of the worst known for many years. From every point on the coast comes tales of disaster and wreckage.

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 28.—In crossing the meadows a funeral bearing the body of a child was caught by the tide and the mourners had to abandon the hearse. The horses became unmanageable and had to be cut loose.

The mourners were compelled to take to the tops of the vehicles to get out of th reach of the rising water. They suffered acutely from the stinging cold and wind.

A special train was sent to their assistance, but had to return for life boats to reach the imperilled people.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 28.—A veritable blizzard came upon this state and at various places the temperature is marked 12 to 16 degrees below zero.

The mercury dropped 34 degrees in twenty-four hours and is growing colder.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Dec. 28.—A snow storm almost equal to that of the famous blizzard of '88, has been raging in the Mohawk valley, about eighteen inches of snow falling. It has badly drifted, and Central, Hudson and West Shore trains are from three to four hours late, and some of them have been abandoned.

No freight trainsh ave been run. The Empire State Express, west-bund, was nearly two hours late when it reached this city. The storm is still raging.

Baltimore, Dec. 28.—Snow, sleet and rain alternately filled the streets with slush and impeded traffic. Three and a half inches of snow fell before it turned into rain.

All incoming vessels are behind time, and those scheduled to depart are delaying their trips.

The telegraph wires are in bad shape, but meagre reports from western Maryland cities indicate small blizzard prevailing there.

Hazleton, Pa., Dec. 28.—The storm is raging furiously here. Traffic is at a standstill, freight and coal trains having been abandoned, and passenger trains running two hours behind time.

All collieries have suspended, and 30,000 men are idle. A passenger train on the Lehigh Valley railroad ran into a snowbank at Penn Haven junction, deralling the train and wrecking the engine. Telephone and telegraph service is paralyzed.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 28.—Further reports from Carbondale say that the flood there was caused by drifting snow blocking a canal which runs through a portion of the city contiguous to the Delaware and Hudson railroad, and which is on low ground. Many houses and business places were flooded, causing heavy damage.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 28.—The schooner Charlie Stedman, loaded with paving stones, from Lance Cove, near Rockport, for Lynn, was discovered flying signals of distree off Realy House wharf, Nahant. The tug Alice and Louise went to her rescue and took off the captain and crew of three men.

Lock Haven, Dec. 28.—The first heavy snow of the season has fallen here and is about twenty inches deep. The snow is drifted in places to a depth of from four to seven feet. Trains are delayed and street-car traffic has been abandoned.

North Adams, Mass., Dec. 28.—Forty-five feet of the 105-foot chimney of the Briggsville woollen mill was blown down. The bricks crashed through the roof of the boiler house, striking and killing John Adams, the fireman, who was working about the boiler. When found he was terribly scalded, but death was probably instantaneous.

Clearfield, Pa., Dec. 28.—The deepest snow and severest storm in this county for years has been raging here. The snow is twenty-eight inches deep. No trains have reached her except on the Tyrone branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, which consumed two hours in coming from Carsensville, a distance of six miles.

Waverly, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The worst blizzard of recent years has raged here. A fine snow has fallen to the depth of twenty inches, and the wind is blowing a terrific gale. Trains are from one to five hours late. The country roads are completely blocked.

Glen Cove, N. Y., Dec. 28.—An unknown schooner was foundered off Matinacock point. It is believed that the entire crew were lost.

The schooner Viola went ashore at Matinacock point. The crew escaped in small boats.

Northport, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The schooner Izetta went ashore on Eaton's Neck, just east of the life saving station. The vessel was in charge of Captain Rowlins and a crew of five men. What became of them is not known.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Reports from all over the northwest tell of great suffering from the storm. The snow is piled high in several states and the thermometer in many places registers more than 20 degrees below zero.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 28.—The storm commenced in Newport with flurries of snow. The skies were cleared and the wind shifted to a southern quarter sweeping the shores with terrible seas.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The snow here has fallen to a depth of twenty inches. The trains are six hours late. The thermometer is four degrees below zero.

Lock Haven, Pa., Dec. 28.—The snow is drifted in places to a depth of from four to seven feet. Trains are delayed and street-car traffic has been abandoned.

Bridgeford, Me., Dec. 28.—The storm caused a general suspension of business here. The electric street-car line is closed. Trains and stages are all delayed.

CLOSED THEIR BUSINESS.

The Great Bond Syndicate Has Gone Out of Existence.

New York, Dec. 28.—Vice-President Garland, of the First National bank, has confirmed the news that the bond syndicate has been dissolved.

"It has been dissolved by mutual consent," said Mr. Garland, "the parties to the agreement having only agreed to hold the bonds for a month.

"In dissolving the syndicate the parties to it, took into consideration the unsettlement of the market for bonds, due to the offering to congress of the currency plan of Secretary Carlisle, which, by its provisions would have compelled the national banks to dispose of at least $200,000,000 in bonds on or before July 1, 1895. With such a possible block of bonds to come on the market the question of continuing the agreement to hold the bonds was not even thought of."

Mr. Garland said that the amunt of bonds still unsold aggregates about $20,000,000.

AMERICAN CHEMISTS MEET.

The Tenth Annual Convention of Their Society in Session.

Boston, Dec. 28.—The American Chemical society held the opening session of its tenth annual meeting in the Walker building of the Massachusetts institute of Technology. There are about seventy-five members in attendance, including D. H. W. Wiley, president of the society and chief chemist of the department of agriculture at Washington; Professor Edward Hart, of Lafayette college, Easton, Pa.; Professor Chales W. Moulton, of Vassar college; Dr. T. M. Drownor, Massachusetts institute of technology; Dr. Charles B. Dudley, Altoona, Pa.; Charles T. Pomeroy, Newark; W. D. Bigelow, Washington; Walter E. Smith, Providence, and James O. Handy, Pittsburg.

Masons Install Officers.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28.—The Masonic Grand Lodge of Pennslyvania held its annual communication here in the masonic temple. The grand officers who were recently elected were installed and numerous committees were appointed by the new grand master, Matthias H. Henderson. Among the thirty-seven district deputy grand masters chosen by the grand master are the following: William D. Gorgas, Harrisburg; Henry A. Tyson, Reading; Levi Huber, Pottsville; John K. Hayes, Williamsport, and Boyd G. Steel, Altoona.

Massacred by Indians.

Cusymas, Mex., Dec. 28.—Another crime has been committed by a band of marauding Yaqui Indians in the valley of the river of that name, in the western part of the state. They visited the ranch of Julio Cardenas and massacred the latter and his wife and two children. Troops overtook the Indians and had a skirmish with them. Several of the Yaquis were killed.

CHINA SECURES FOSTER

He Is Engaged To Conduct Peace Negotiations.

Mr. Harrison's Secretary of State Has Been Hired by the Wily Mongolians To Obtain Better Terms from the Japs—The Chinese Withdraw from New-Chwang—Other News.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Mr. John W. Foster has been requested by the Chinese government to go to Japan and meet the plenipotentiaries of the former government to aid them in their negotiations for peace.

He has accepted the invitation and expects to leave Washington within a day or two, sailing from Vancouver for Yokohama in January.

The Japanese government has been advised of the appointment and its minister in this city has expressed his satisfaction with it.

In official circles when the announcement became known it was taken to mean that from now until the peace negotiations are formally begun there would be a complete suspension of all hostilities between the armies of Japan and China.

From the fact that Mr. Foster's appointement was submitted to the Japanese government and approved by it, indicates that peace overtures were begun simultaneously with Mr. Foster's selection as the adviser of the Chinese government.

While the announcement is made that the "Japanese minister here" approves the appointment, it is recognized in diplomatic circles to mean that the minister voices the opinion of his government at home that the matter has been the subject of cable correspondence.

Mr. Foster has had an extended diplomatic career, having in addition to being secretary of state in President Harrison's cabinet, represented the United States at the court of Spain and more recently one of counsel of the United States in the Bering sea arbitration at Paris.

Mr. Foster's mission is taken as an indication that the Chinese expect to gain more favorable terms from Japan than has hitherto been considered at all probable. No one has doubted that Japan's ultimate terms had been made definitely known to China and that China, powerless to effect any further resistance to Japan's arms had fully consented to accept the ultimatum without delay.

As Mr. Foster does not intend to sail for more than a week as the voyage across the Pacific will consume two weeks more, nearly a month must elapse before the peace negotiations are fairly inaugurated.

London, Dec. 28.—A dispatch says that the Chinese army under General Sung having been defeated at Kung-Wa-Sei retreated to New-Chwang.

There they were joined by the troops under command of General Ma, and the combined force retreated to Tien-Chon-Ta, the town of New-Chwang, being completely evacuated.

The Chinese troops at Tas-Han-Lien are spreading their front and increasing the number of their banners in order to make the greatest possible display of strength. Japanese cavalry scouts report that 3,000 Chinese from King-Chow have reached Tas-Han-Lien.

The native officials at Shanghai and Ningpo are in a complete state of panic, fearing a Japanese invasion.

Chang-Chi-Tung, the new viceroy of Nanking, is inspecting the forts on the Yang-Tse-Kiang, and Commissioner Moorhead is sending new European drill instructors to the Yang-Tse-Kiang forts under the viceroy's direction.

London, Dec. 28.—A correspondent in Kobe says that Tsukuba Kan, with a body of marines, has dispersed the Tonghak rebels in Chollado, Korea.

The Japanese have dispersed also 6,000 Tonghaks in the province of Hwang-Haido.

Chancellor Van Fleet's Funeral.

Newark, Dec. 28.—The body of Vice Chancellor Van Fleet was removed from his home to Flemington after brief services by the Rev. Henry C. Vanderbec. The funeral will be held in Flemington to-morrow. There will be a meeting at which members of the bar throughout the state are requested to attend at the chancery chambers this afternoon to take suitable action. Chancellor McGill will preside.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC :.

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED :

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

WIND FILLED TIRES.

WILL THE PNEUMATIC CUSHION ENCIRCLE ALL WHEELS.

Interesting Experiments with Rubber-Covered and Ordinary Steel-Tired Wheels. The Advantages of the Latter on a Perfect Roadbed.

The pneumatic tire is not a new thing. It was made over forty-five years before there was such a thing known as a bicycle. It was applied to a carriage by a man named Thompson of New England. It was not until forty-five years later that the pneumatic tire was applied to bicycles. In 1845, when Mr. Thompson thought to make a pneumatic tire for a carriage, it was considered an absurdity too great to be mentioned.

I will first consider the matter of draught or road friction, and give you the result of some tests which I have recently conducted, and which are now made public for the first time. Two box buggies were employed, one having the usual steel-tired wheels, 44 and 48 inches in diameter, and weighing 250 pounds, the other having pneumatic-tired wheels, 32 and 44 inches in diameter, and the vehicle weighed 232 pounds. The cross diameter of the tires was two inches. An amount of weight equal to the difference was placed in the lighter vehicle, and care was taken to see that the front wheels of the two vehicles bore exactly the same weight.

The surface upon which this first test was made was a new, hard pine floor, and the wheels were drawn lengthwise of the boards. The amount of power required to move these vehicles under the following conditions was carefully noted by means of a registering spring balance. The vehicles empty, it was found that the power required to start the pneumatic tires from a standstill was four pounds, and the power required to haul them at a slow walk was three and a half to four pounds.

The power required to start steel tires was found to average but three pounds, and when started the power required to draw them was but one and a half to two pounds, showing an average difference of about fifty per cent. in favor of the steel tires.

Next, an obstruction 5-16 of an inch high was placed in front of and against the wheels of each vehicle. To haul them over this obstruction from a standstill required, in the case of the steel tires, 25 pounds; with the rubber tires but 11 pounds. Then they were drawn at a slow walk over the 5-16 inch obstruction, and it was found that the power required to draw the rubber tires was 5 pounds, and the steel tires 8 pounds.

The 5-16 inch obstruction was then placed in front of the wheels, and the power required to haul over it was 18 1-2 pounds for the rubber and 40 pounds for the steel tires.

Over the 7-8 inch obstruction the power required to haul the two carriages was 36 pounds for the rubber and 69 pounds for the steel.

To haul these two carriages empty over a moderately sandy road, the extreme power required for the rubber was 26 pounds, the same as when loaded on gravel with an average of 16. The steel-tired vehicle required an extreme of 40 pounds, and an average of 22.

With a load of 150 pounds, the steel tire required an extreme of 57 and an average of 40; and the rubber an extreme of 38 and an average of 16.

After these tests had been made over this particular piece of road, the rubber-tired vehicle was again tried, empty, and it was found that the hauling of it six times over the road had so improved it that instead of the extreme pull of 26 pounds, and an average pull of 16, the extreme was but 16, with average of 8.

If we had a perfectly true surface for a road, and perfectly true metal wheels, nothing better could be desired; but the words "perfectly true" mean, in the case of roads, an impossibility. Even the surface of the best race track is made up of small obstructions.

If the metal-shod wheel meets a gravel stone one quarter of an inch in diameter, and that stone is resting on a hard foundation, the wheel, with its entire load, must be lifted bodily one quarter of an inch high to pass over it, and this takes horse power; but when the rubber tire meets the stone, the vehicle is not raised perceptibly, if at all, but the stone is embedded in the rubber, while most of the weight is borne by that part of the rubber which is still resting on the ground; and the power required to go over it is only that needed to dent the rubber in one spot, or, if it is a pneumatic tire, to slightly compress the body of air which it contains.

There are four reasons why a pneumatic sulky is faster than the old style; and every one applies with more or less force to an elastic tire of any kind for any vehicle:

First—It draws more easily.

Second—Owing to the small diameter of the wheel, the sulky is much stiffer sidewise, and the soft tire stays on the ground and does not slew in rounding curves.

Third—When a horse is being crowded to his utmost limit, as all horses are supposed to be in a race, his nerves are under an intense strain, and he is kept near the point where he will no longer hold to the unnatural motion of trotting, but will adopt the run which comes perfectly natural to all four-footed animals. The noise and jar of any hard-tired vehicle when at speed has much to do with the action of any horse.

Fourth—The more securely and comfortably any driver is seated, the better attention he can give to the trotter, and a nervous driver tends to make a nervous horse.—The Hub.

FOX HUNTING IN THE SOUTH.

Holiday Fun in Dixie With Horses, Hounds, and Bushy Tail.

A holiday fox hunt differs from other fox hunts, mainly in the fact that the huntsmen have been at great pains to make certain of a quarry and greater to assure themselves that the quarry shall be one which can run long and well; that is to say, a red fox. The creature is not too plentiful, but all the fall, hunters and trappers have been alert to secure one alive and unharmed. Once caught, the animal has been put in a cage big enough to allow plenty of exercise, carefully fed and tended, so as to have him in prime condition. Then word is sent around that he is to be turned loose upon some famous course and all good men and dogs are welcome to come and follow him.

At least half the farmers keep hounds, in numbers from two to twenty. The master of a score is said to have a pack. Sporadic dogs are all very well, but they add nothing like the consequence to their possessor which appertains to him who owns the greater number.

Often fifty horsemen and a hundred dogs start after the fox as soon as he has got a hundred yards from the cage. A yelling scrambling huddle it is. Horses are as wild to be off as dogs or men. As Pug streams away they go after him, the dogs giving tongue in the wildest fashion. A few of the eager youngsters ride so hard that their horses almost thread on the dogs' tails. The older hunters know better. Chasing a red fox is work for all day—sometimes all night as well. One has been known to lead the hunt across three counties, running to death the stanchest and best dogs of the pack. The dogs themselves are of the black and tan or blue mottled strain. Here and there among them you see one with liver spots and lemon, denoting far away kinship to the fine fancy packs. They are lean as laths—not with the leanness of hunger, but of perfect condition.

Most of the horses are fine and sleek, with tapering muzzles and erect, slender ears, to proclaim at the least a cross or two of blood. They are wiry, well bitted and broken to the saddle gaits. Bridles have for the most part snaffle bits. The saddles are so high in the peak as to show the influence of the Texan model, and the riders themselves sit easily swaying, entirely at one with the creatures they bestride. Nowhere else in the world is there so excellent a type of rough riding nor one that, in my poor judgment, so well becomes the park parade.

Though they are out for a holiday, these riders have no holiday look, or at least have the look only in their faces. They wear old clothes, scuffed and smutched out of all smartness. It is well understood, you see, that Pug will lead them through brush and brake and brier; that there are fine chances of getting mired in the swamp, or being pitched headlong into a lurking mudhole. The hounds are running so fast they have not breath enough for full cry. On they dash, Riley's big blue Rattler leading, with Lady at his ear. They have swept through the second field. Pug has not lost his prescience. He is heading for the big creek, five miles away. Its bluffs abound in crannied caves, running and winding so deep in the earth that if once he gains them he is safe from all pursuit.

To reach them he must cross long breadths of open. Now the chase has crashed over another fence, into a wheat field. The young grain shows a faint green veil over the sodden earth, in which the horses sink fetlock deep. No wonder the pace begins to tell. Uncle Jack Johnston, free man of color, who came out with the rest boasting:

"Jack he gwine stay yere long de's dawg ter run," has already thought better of it and gone disconsolate away. The young dogs, too, begin to tait, albeit they have run scarce half an hour. The run has been a scorcher—their sappy muscles and puppy fat cannot endure it. But Rattler and Lady, and Music, the giant of black and tans, keep at it as though they had breath of steam, sinews of steel.

MADE BY OUR GRANDMOTHERS.

The Portiere of Fashion was the Quilt of Long Ago.

To have a woven woollen bed spread was a matter of family pride, especially so if the fleece came from one's own flock, and the house mother and daughters had carded the wool and spun the rolls.

These preliminaries accomplished, there followed serious consultation concerning the pattern to be selected, or perchance an entirely new one, to be designed by the most ingenious and skillful weaver within call; for such treasures were "to be handed down," a matter of no small moment in those days of thrifty housewifery.

Such an heirloom, blue and white, descended in course of years to a blue-eyed Dorothy, a namesake, from an ancestress three generations removed. It is still on duty, as strong and comely as of yore, not, however, as a coverlet for the best bed, ready for company in a corner of the ancient ample parlor of the old farm house, but given the place of greatest honor, swaying in massive folds as portiere over the archway of an entrance hall, "the most cherished souvenir under our roof tree," writes its proud enthusiastic owner; an oaken rod, finished with delicately carved acorns, fashioned with reverent touch by the master of the house, holds it well in place.

Edging the quilt is a bordering of vines, leaves, and flowers, some of them unmentioned in works of botanical lore; these so sway their stems and tendrils as to give space at the four corners to sweeping arabesques and labyrinthine windings perplexingly mysterious to follow.

Pretty well up towards the top one notes a basket of goodly proportions crowded with flowers—old-fashioned garden beauties with a sprinkling of much-coveted herb blossoms so dear to the hearts of our thrifty foremothers.

The grand centre piece, the head and bust of Washington, appears next, surrounded by a double border of simple white flowers, and between them, woven in Roman letters, just one word—Liberty.

Over the head of the chieftan wave two flags.

Below this pictured story of the Father of our Country stands an eagle with wide-mouthed beak; thirteen stars are above the war bird's head, and upon an outflowing banner is inscribed, E Pluribus Unum.—Harper's Bazar.

A Conundrum.

Kicksy—Wife, can you tell me why I am like a hen?

Mrs. K.—No, dear; why is it?

Kicksy—Because I can seldom find anything where I laid it yesterday.—Detroit Sun.

About Nervous Prostration

By H. C. CHAPIN, Editor St. Paul Pioneer Press.

"After a most thorough trial and receiving the most gratifying results, I am glad to testify in favor of

BOVININE

The Original Raw Food

"By it I was brought up with remarkable rapidity from a long siege of nervous prostration."

All Physicians Endorse It.

Bovinine is an ideal food—an unequalled nutrient. Is palatable to the most delicate stomach. Alone it will sustain strength for weeks. It makes new blood. It contains the largest amount of nutrition in the smallest possible bulk.

AN ACROSTIC.

Good cheer and comfort to your hearthstones all!
E'en such will surely come to those who call
On Front street, seven-forty-seven, West,
Regarding fuel worth the season's quest,
Good coal, good weight, good service here you'll find,
Exceeding promptness and attention kind,
Of "Lehigh", "Upper Lehigh", "Honeybrook", "Summit" and "Plymouth Red Ash" you will look
Throughout the world in vain to better see,
Each screened of "buckwheat" and of dust made free;
Vieing with all in care for lawns and drives
Each employe to win your favor strives,
Nor will you fail to find the prices here
Scaled at the market rates throughout the year.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. G. W. Endicott is ill with the grip.

Illness keeps Carl Kaerth of East Second street at home.

Dr. Glen is spending the holidays with his family on Craig place.

Miss Mary Brown of Hillier & Co., is suffering with a severe cold.

F. C. Phoebus of Bernardsville is visiting O. E. Wright of Leland avenue.

J. M. Carney has returned to his former position with the United States Express Company.

Nicholas Conover of Philadelphia is the guest of his brother, Charles Conover, for New Year's.

The Misses Green of Park avenue left for Washington yesterday for a ten-days visit with friends.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell and family returned today from 123 North avenue to 456 Orchard place,

Mrs. David McKelway of Philadelphia is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. G. Dalziel of Plainfield avenue.

W. H. Miner, who has been the Christmas guest of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Dupee, leaves for home tomorrow.

Mrs. James Baker of New York city is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Gross of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

Garret Q. Packer, whose serious fall was reported exclusively in The Press yesterday, was able to attend business today.

Mrs. Orville Stillman and son of Westerly, R. I., are spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. D. C. Green of Park avenue.

Owing to illness, Mrs. Edward B. Clark has been obliged to recall her invitations for the reception to be given at her home this afternoon.

The Misses Annie and Jennie Collins of New York are spending the holiday week with their sister, Mrs. J. H. Blimm of East Third street.

George Strayer and family arrived today from their home in Williamsport, Pa., and are the guests of Jacob Blimm of Somerset street.

Miss Mary A. Collier of East Sixth street will give a dance in honor of her guests, the Misses Ketcham of Brooklyn, in the Olympia Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Lynch returned to their home on Woodland avenue yesterday after spending the past few days with Mrs. Lynch's parents in New York.

Fred Truebelin, an employe of the United States Express office, went to Port Jervis yesterday to attend a holiday reception given by Congressman St. John of that city.

Mrs. MacLean of 35 West Seventy-third street, New York, gave a reception yesterday at which Mrs. Alven Beveridge of Plainfield assisted in receiving, and Andrew Carpenter furnished the music.

By the death of L. E. Clark, only three of the original Board of Managers of the Dime Savings Institution are left since its organization in 1869. Those three are E. R. Pope, J. B. Coward, Levi Hetfield.

John Naylor has been promoted to be asistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Somerville, to begin duty January 7. This is a deserved promotion of a faithful employe.

Rev. W. A. Alexander, pastor of Bethel Chapel, goes tomorrow morning at 1:17 on a business trip to Washington. He will return tomorrow night and preach a special season sermon in the chapel Sunday night on the subject "Fifty-two days' work".

The Daily Press is indebted to Ernest R. Ackerman, President of the Lawrence Cement Company, for a copy of the handsome calendar issued by the company for 1895. Its headpiece is a steel-plate of Napoleon Sarony's famous photograph of a majestic lion from real life.

T. J. Cahill, for some time the assistant superintendent of the Plainfield division of the Prudential Insurance Company, will take charge of the Salem territory for the company Jan. 1. Mr. Cahill during his residence in Plainfield has proved himself not only a competent insurance agent but a genial, whole-souled man whose friendship was fully appreciated by a large and constantly increasing circle of friends who recognized his sterling qualities and who wish him the best of success in his new field of labor.

CHINA TO EXPLAIN.

London, Dec. 28.—A despatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the United States Government has instructed Minister Denby to demand satisfaction from the Chinese Government for having violated the promise given in regard to the surrender of Japanese spies at Shanghai.

A Clerical Dinner.

A unique clerical dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbeek of Second place last evening, at which one of the pleasant features was the graceful, white-capped, half-kerchiefed, fluffy-aproned waitresses, who served the several courses of the dinner.

Soon after the guests had returned to the drawing-room the hostess entered at another door, accompanied by two stately young women, introducing them to their guests, divulging the secret that the one was the host and hostess's granddaughter, Miss Stella Shotwell, and the other her cousin, Miss Nellie Fanning, who has just returned from abroad, where she has been perfecting herself in music.

When the company's surprise had been thoroughly explained and heartily laughed over, Miss Fanning and Mrs Fanning delighted the guests with choice music.

Union Village Christmas.

The Union Village Sunday-school held their Christmas exercises last evening. The children had a tree; books and candies for the little ones; Bibles, neatly bound, for the intermediate classes Miss Sollman sang very sweetly several anthems, accompanying on the banjo. Wallie Kyritz played selections on the organ, Miss Sollman accompanying on the violin. Anna Smith, six-years-old, recited "The Doll's First Christmas".

A Tribute.

In the death of Col. Archer N. Martin of Summit, the loss is not to the locality in which he lived but also a loss to the State and the Democratic party of which he was a most earnest member. He was broad-minded and liberal in his views, and had the courage of his convictions. The writer saw much of him during his residence in Union County and can feelingly say that our State and party has met with a sad loss. J. E. M.

Chosen Friends.

Because of the dangerous condition of the icy sidewalks last evening only a few people were present at the meeting held for the purpose of organizing a lodge of the Order of Chosen Friends. William B. Wilson of Newark, the Supreme Councilor of the State, who was accompanied by J. W. Reed and L. Hopkins of Jersey City, explained in a clear and concise manner the plan of the organization and urged the formation of a branch in this city.

Lichtenstein & Co. Fail.

The failure was announced today of the dry-goods and millinery firm of Lichtenstein & Lons, with stores at 274-285 Grand street, and 62 and 64 West Twenty-third street, New York. The liabilities are now estimated at more than $400,000, while the assets are hardly one-half of that sum.

—Werner's popular clothing house tells a new and interesting story in the ad today.

—Dr. S. D. Keeney is delighted at the recovery of her lost fox terrier through a Daily Press ad.

—Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., elect their officers tomorrow evening, it being an adjourned meeting from Tuesday.

—Yesterday afternoon while D. N. Groendyke was driving through Park avenue with his little grandchild riding on a sled behind, the sled was upset in a bank of snow and the little one narrowly escaped injury.

—Borough residents claim that the North Plainfield Electric Light Company pays little attention to the lights in the suburbs, as Stone street and portions of Greenbrook road have been in total darkness for several nights past.

—The C. Y. M. L. will hold a reception and dance in their hall at Sixth and Liberty streets New Year's Eve. Refreshments will be served during the evening, and the good time always enjoyed at these gatherings is assured on this occasion.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—V. L. Frazee announces in The Press today a great assignee's sale of the entire stock of S. E. Flower's art store.

—Mrs. Anna M. Hamener, President of the W. C. T. U of Pennsylvania, and a gifted speaker, will speak Sunday, Dec. 30, in Music Hall at 4:15 p. m.

—Adam Blair is occupying A. D. Thompson's office at the Metropolitan livery stables until some improvements which he is making are completed.

—In a disorderly house raid in Newark yesterday one of the prisoners captured was a man styling himself Joseph H. Wilson of Plainfield. He was released.

—In the rooms which ordinarily are not reached by the heating apparatus of a house, the oil-heater stoves sold by Gavett will be found extremely useful.

—Owing to illness of leaders in the celebration, the Christmas festival of the Church of the Heavenly Rest was postponed from last night until tomorrow night.

—The sale of the Frazee property at Watchung avenue and Second street was begun today. After the bidding reached $2,000 above incumbrances the sale was adjourned two weeks.

—Three of Plainfield's robust young women, taking advantage of the perfect weather, went on a tramp Christmas Day. Being somewhat exhausted, they returned by train from Westfield in the afternoon.

—Now that it is a certainty that the Plainfield postoffice is to occupy a portion of the Babcock Building it would be a decided improvement to the city and borough if Duer street was opened to Madison avenue, according to the original plan.

—The Y. M. C. A. is vacating its present quarters and will be installed Jan. 1 in the first-floor stores of the new building. As soon as possible the entire building will be occupied, and the opening reception will take place a short time after Jan. 1.

—Rev. Wm. Humpstone, whose remarks at the Y. M. C. A. rooms were very much enjoyed last Sunday, will give at the same place next Sunday at 4:15 p. m., reminiscences of his work in England. Mrs. Humpstone has also been secured for vocal solos.

—The Church of the Redeemer will hold the Christmas festival of the Sunday-school in St. Peter's German Lutheran Church, corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue, this evening at 7:30. Members and friends of the church and Sunday-school are invited to be present.

—A woman who had been visiting in Plainfield said she must pay one more visit to Peck's store before leaving. On being asked by she must go there, she said: "I must have one last good-buy before going home." Evidently she appreciated the privilege of trading at Peck's.

—Henry Frisbie, ex-dog-catcher, was arrested yesterday afternoon on the charge of stealing Charles W. Ulrick's horse. He was released till Monday morning at 10, when his hearing takes place. He says he hired the horse, left it in Windham's stable for its owner, and that it disappeared while he was in Annandale.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

BABY BELL

Have you not heard the poets tell
How came the dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours?
The gates of heaven were left ajar;
With folded hands and dreamy eyes,
Wandering out of Paradise,
She saw this planet, like a star.
Hung in the glistening depths of azure
Its bridges, running to and fro,
O'er which the white-wing'd angels go,
Bearing the holy dead to heaven.
She touched a bridge of flowers—those feet,
So light they did not bend the bells
Of the Celestial asphodels;
They fell like dew drops upon the flowers;
Then all the air grew strangely sweet!
And thus came dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours!
—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

ARIZONA'S GIRL MINING EXPERT.

At One Time She Was the Only Woman in a Mining Camp of 1,500 Men.

"Arizona has the only girl mining expert in the world," said Major John Rawlins, of Phœnix, Arizona. "For years she has followed up all the new camps and passed judgment on mines. Her name is Nellie Cushman. Just now she is making a pull for the Harqua Hala mines. She has just been in Los Angeles and bought a restaurant outfit for the new camp, and while her employees serve bacon and beans to the flannel-shirted miners at $1 apiece, she will make her location and begin mining as usual.

"She is a wonderfully plucky girl. It is about nine years now since she first came to Tucson. She was originally from Dodge City, Kan., and could not have been more than 17 years old. She got to examining the ore as it came out of the Tucson mines, and was soon as good a judge of its value as her brother Jim, who was foreman and mineralogist in one of them. The boys in the Tombstone locality soon began to bet on her judgment, and found that she was a wonderfully good guesser, and hit it close every time. Her fame spread and miners, who, as you know, are always superstitious, got an idea that to have her around and enjoy her good opinion some way brought luck. She knew where to dig for ore, too, and some of the ore in the Contention was found by following her advice in running a drift.

ENGLISHMEN NOT IN IT.

Americans are Better Dressed and Better Groomed.

"Englishmen are not nearly so well dressed as are Americans," said a tourist who spent last summer in England. "And well dressed Englishmen are not, as a rule, nearly so well groomed as are our well dressed Americans.

"I am speaking particularly of the class which can afford to dress according to its desires, and not of the English people as a whole. For the latter point it is a fact that in no country in the world are the whole people so well dressed as in the United States. This, of course, applies to the towns, for in the country, elsewhere as here, folks wear old clothes from choice as much as from necessity.

"But the working people here not only have more money to spend in clothes, but take a much greater interest in having good clothes, and in their personal appearance generally, than do the people of the same class in any European country.

"The people who I have especial reference to now, however, are those who can well afford to buy good clothes, who really wear good clothes, and who, if they gave it a thought, would think that beyond doubt they were well dressed—the average run of men, such as you would meet any day.

So far as mere style goes, it is a different thing there from here, and we do not get many of our ideas and fashions in clothes from England, as I was quick to discover in my own dress this year, though many people think the latest London style is the latest thing.

"This year, at any rate, the latest thing in men's clothes in London would be about a year and a half late in New York Then, as a general rule, Englishmen like their clothes to hang more loosely than do Americans, and it is not the cut of the clothes on which I base my opinion altogether, although this is, to my mind, a great point in favor of the American. English tailors don't know much about fitting a man, except in the matter of a box overcoat, perhaps.

THEY PUMPED NOLL OUT.

He Is Sorry Now that He Has Told His Wife That Little Story.

Albert Noll, of Williamsburg, is very sorry now that he has told his wife any such fantastic story. He is 36 years old, and lives at No. 75 Meserole street, and there it was that an ambulance surgeon, three policemen and the municipal stomach pump made him sorry.

Noll is a porter, but he has been out of work for a long time, and his wife says that it is his own fault, as he looks for customers only in saloons. They had a row about it yesterday morning, and the porter got the worst of it. He left the house a thoroughly aroused man, muttering all sorts of things, intended only for his own ear.

He rushed into her room about two hours later, and exclaimed: "You will be sorry for this in a little while. I've been eating Paris green, and I cannot be alive long. When I am dead you'll wish you'd treated your Bertie a little better."

Then he lay on the lounge and began to emit convincing moans, intended to soften the heart of Mrs. Noll. At first she was incredulous, but the wailing became so loud that she was convinced. But, instead of folding him in her arms and forgiving him, the woman rushed out into the street and collected all the policemen she could find. They came and peeped at the man. One of them, who had taken a course of "first aid to the injured" lectures, felt his pulse, looked at his tongue, and observed oratically: "Symptoms of arsenical poisoning, without a doubt."

Along came Ambulance Surgeon Guilfoyle, with the municipal stomach pump. By this time Noll thought the joke had gone far enough, and said that his story of taking poison was all a lie.

"Don't you believe him, gentlemen!" cried Mrs. Noll. "He's as foxey as he can be. Pump him out and make sure?"

The man kicked and howled, but the policemen held him down, and after a sharp struggle the municipal stomach pump began its task. There wasn't any arsenic or anything else in Mr. Noll's inside more poisonous than frankfurter sausage and beer. To make sure that the Paris green had not dodged the pump Dr. Guilfoyle made Noll swallow a gallon of warm water with mustard in it. This was pumped out of him, and then his interior was drenched with a few quarts of ice cold salt water, in order to be perfectly certain.

Before Dr. Guilfoyle left he said to Noll grimly. "Don't monkey again with poisons, my friend," and the policemen, grinning, carried out the municipal stomach pump.

Noll wasn't arrested. He lay weak and limp on the floor. Mrs. Noll told the policemen she would "fix" him, and she sat there waiting for him to get better.—N. Y. Herald.

PARSON CARTWRIGHT'S WOOING.

It Began at a Dance Which He Turned Into a Prayer Meeting.

McKendree College at Lebanon, Ill., has been presented with an interesting relic in the shape of a pair of saddle bags in which the famous itinerate preacher, Peter Cartwright, carried his Bible and hymn book in his horseback travels in southern Illinois.

Parson Cartwright was a well known character in early days and his pulpit eloquence is still recalled by people who lived in southern Illinois 50 years ago. His eloquence swayed multitudes of people at the old time camp meeting in Egypt. When thoroughly aroused by interruptions and abuse the parson became a veritable giant in strength. He would spring upon the bully like a tiger and give him a thrashing that was never forgotten. After the bully was licked the pugilistic preacher would suddenly change into a ministrating angel of mercy and dress the wounds of his victim. He would then offer up a devout prayer for the salvation of the man's soul, and if he did not make a convert, which he usually did, he effectually disposed of a disturber.

A romantic story of Peter Cartwright is related in connection with his early days as a preacher. When a boy in his teens one night he stopped at a country house in southern Illinois for the night. The comfortable old fashioned farm house was prepared for a country dance. By the time young Cartwright had eaten his supper the largest room had been cleared for dancing.

The pretty black eyed daughter of the host walked straight up to the stranger and asked him to lead in the dance. The remarkable beauty and winning manners of the farmer's daughter for the moment mystified the youthful parson and he allowed himself to be led to the centre of the room. Before the set was complete, however, the parson had time to collect himself.

When the musicians commenced to tune their fiddles the parson dropped upon his knees and began to pray. There was mirth at first but before it was closed there was tears in the eyes of those who at first felt inclined to laugh. The result was that the proposed dance was turned into a revival meeting, and many of those present professed religion then and there. The farmer's pretty daughter who choose the parson for her partner in the dance that night, afterward consented to be his partner in the journey of life. —Detroit Tribune.

Her Reasons.

The woman—If there is one word in the language more than another that I am heartily sick and tired of—a word that is the very block and obstacle in the path of argument or reason—a word that seems to me to have been created out of nothing to fill a vacuum that never existed—a word that all men condemn, and no woman can look upon except as a constant reminder of her innate lack of logic, that word is because, and I, wish to goodness it were expunged from every dictionary in the world.

The Man—Why?

The Woman—Oh—er—er—er—because. —Detroit Free Press.

A good story is told of a number of boys who were playing one Saturday in front of an Episcopal church. The rector suddenly came out of his parsonage and told the boys to be quiet in front of the Lord's house.

"That is all right, mister," said the boys. "The Lord is not here to-day. He is down the street at the Jewish synagogue.—Jewish Messenger.

BEFORE THE WEDDING.

The Ecstatic Visions of the Young Lady on the Eve of the Nuptial Day.

The invitations have been sent out and in a few days the bride-elect is to be led to the altar. The ushers and bridesmaids have been selected, the trousseau is well under way and the presents begin to pour in.

Each gift is just what she wanted She fairly revels in the sight of the best man's card lying loose in the delicate satin-lined case.

But not less lovely to her seems the little set of fruit knives, the gift of a friend whose family has met reverses of fortune since they were in the young ladies' school together, whilst she goes into transports over the Japanese vase a near neighbor has presented in person.

The mail brings a letter from the fiancee's cousin, a captain in the regular army stationed at a remote post in Arizona. In the letter is a check for fifty dollars with which the captain hopes she will purchase some trifle for her own personal adornment. Quite overcome by this evidence of generosity she sings his praises in extravagant terms for half an hour.

She is bothered a little when a "duplicate" present arrives, but consoles herself by hoping that it can be exchanged for something of equivalent value.

Another ring at the door. This time it is the dressmaker with the bridal gown. Again it is tried on and one or two minor alterations are suggested. The dressmaker heaves a deep sigh of relief as the fiancee struts up and down her boudoir voicing her satisfaction. Then all the members of the household are summoned to survey her in her finery.

Papa is so nervous over it all. Every morning and evening he is obliged to walk the length of the drawing-room and back, with his daughter on his arm, keeping in step to the spirited strains of the "Wedding March," rather jerkily rendered on the piano by an older sister, who has determined to live a life of single blessedness.

Papa is not a very apt pupil, and the more he practices the stately step the less certain he feels of being able to master it in time for the momentous event—only a few days off.

On the day before the event rehearsal takes place in the church. With the sonorous organ to guide him, papa really does splendidly. He is to carry his high hat in his left hand, and dispelled now are all his fears as to what he shall do with his right hand, which he has been instructed to tuck gracefully in the breast of his frock coat.

The afternoon rehearsal affords considerable enjoyment, for the minister is witty and keeps the bridal party in a merry mood.

Night comes and mamma is anxious for the fiancee to retire early, so she will be sure not to miss her beauty sleep. But the latter protests that going to bed so timely—on this the last night of her maidenhood—is quite out of the question.

It is close on to midnight when she at last withdraws to her downy couch. But for hours sleep eludes her. She thinks of the dear home she is leaving and tears fill her eyes.

But Jack is so good and kind. And ere the silver shafts of morn penetrate the chamber the fiancee lies in the arms of Morpheus, dreaming affectionately of Jack, who is coming to-morrow to bear her away to Hymen's land.—Leon Mead, in Truth.

Never Touched Him.

"It's no use," she said dejectedly, "I've simply got to suffer."

"What's the matter?"

"Young Mr. Slogo called last night. I endured his society patiently until in self-defense I was forced to remark: 'Really, Mr. Slogo, I'm very much afraid it is getting late.'"

"And what did he do then?"

"He simply smiled and said that women are naturally timid."—Washington Star.

HAS POWER NOW TO ACT

Spain To Let Cuba Arrange Sugar Revenues.

To Avert a Threatened Tariff War and Secure Free Entry Here of Her Exports Spain Will Make Concessions in the Antilles—No Parliament or Right To Make Laws.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The government of Spain, to avert the threatened tariff warfare between Cuba and the United States, has under serious and favorable consideration the cession to Cuba of the privilege of arranging her own revenue budget, including tariffs with the United States.

The negotiations now progressing at Madrid are partly on these lines, but the state department authorities are proceeding, nevertheless, with their retaliatory plans, as they do not believe Spain's concessions to Cuba can be carried out and made beneficial to us for some months to come.

It is said that Spain will be careful not to reliquish her sovereignty over the island, nor permit this to become the first step toward Cuban independence. For that reason the contemplated privilege will not include full home rule.

There will be no Cuban parliament with independent authority to make law, similar to Canada's colonial system under Great Britain. On the contrary, the general purposes is to give Cuba advisory powers.

While Spain would thus retain complete sovereignty over Cuba, both commercial and political, it is suggested that the home government would, as a rule, approve Cuba's revenue budget with the United States.

In the present tension betweeen Spain and the United States, the Cubans are solicitous of retaining their American market on sugar, and it is urged that for this reason the local officials undoubtedly would advise a lowering of tariff duties against the United States.

It is believed that Spain's approval would follow almost certainly, her approval in reality being largely a formality designed to show her purpose of retaining sovereignty over the island.

While it is recognized in official circles here that this change doubtless would be beneficial to the United States, it is feared that such extensive changes in the relations between Spain and Cuba cannot be made within a reasonable time, and that before the United States can thus secure a reduction of tariffs our trade with Cuba and Porto Rico will be injured.

The total reduction in our exports to Cuba for the year since the lapse of the reciprocity agreement will amount to not less than 50 per cent.

SEVEN MILES IN A STORM.

John Connors Obeyed the Dictates of a Vision in a Nude Condition.

Derby, Conn., Dec. 28.—John Connors, a wealthy citizen, left home, clad only in his undershirt and walked seven miles through a foot of snow in a blinding storm to the home of his uncle, Michael McEnerney, in Orange, where he was found by a searching party.

He is in a critical condition. He said an apparition appeared as he was retiring and told him his Aunt McEnerney was ill, and he left for her house immediately.

One hour before he left his home Mrs. McEnerney had a severe stroke of paralysis and is fatally ill. Connors is subject to temporary aberration of the mind.

BOYS WERE BUTCHERED.

A Student Gives More Details of the Armenian Massacre.

New York, Dec. 28.—Diogenes Mennippe ran away from Constantinople in September last and arrived here on the steamship Veendam. He tells a remarkable story.

Mennipe was a student at the American college at Marsovan, Armenia. He said that during the past two years over twenty fellow students were called for by the soldiers of Turkey, and who, presenting a "furman" or order, took them away. They were barely ever seen again, and subsequently, evidence tending to show that they had been cut to pieces or drowned would be discovered.

A short time before he fled, two buildings occupied by female students of the college were burned to the ground by the Turks, who invariably went unpunished.

Dr. Herrick, the English professor at the college, appealed to the English authorities, and the British parliament has made a formal demand for the persons of two professors who were kidnapped by the Turkish soldiers.

The boy is a handsome, intelligent chap who speaks English thoroughly. He is at present under the care of the Baptist Missionary society of this city.

MADE NO PROMISES.

Secretary Herbert Denies the Story of Carnegie's Armor Plates.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Secretary Herbert said regarding the report that Carnegie had offered to pay in defective plates:

"Mr. Carnegie came into my office and said he had seen my testimony before the naval committee of the senate and indicated that if the matter was to go on he would make a proposition; that he was willing to do anything that was fair.

"I told him the testimony had been published by the senate committeee, that he could get a copy of it; that I had given it as my opinion that the Quay amendment providing that the $140,000 should be returned to his company in case the plates named should pass the ballistic test, ought not to pass; that the fine had been imposed upon the company upon the ground that it had not made the plates as much better than what those tests indicated as it could have done.

"I told Mr. Carnegie that so far as the department was concerned the payment of that fine was considered as final."

BOOM FOR HORSE FLESH.

The Newark Banquet Being Imitated All over the Country.

New York, Dec. 28.—The horseflesh banquet recently given by Dr. R. S. Hopkins, a veterinary surgeon of Newark, has become a topic of national gossip, and he is getting commendatory letters about it from all over the country.

One from North Carolina tells of a planter of that state who, after reading of the affair killed his burro and salted the meat.

The North Carolinian remarked that if horse meat was good in Newark donkey ought to be fit to eat in North Carolina. He had a Christmas dinner of donkey.

BOMB FOR M'VEAGH.

Dynamiters Apparently Try To Blow Up the Ambassador.

Rome, Dec. 28.—A bomb exploded in front of Palazzo Plombino, near the official residence of United States Ambassador Wayne MacVeagh.

The explosion took place while Mr. MacVeagh's Christmas reception was in progress. No damage was done. The dynamiters are thought to have aimed at blowing up the place and MacVeagh's house, where he was entertaining many foreign diplomats and rich Italians.

Food for Starving Nebraskans.

Baltimore, Dec. 28.—Secretary Hoke Smith has telegraphed as follows to Mr. Richard H. Edmunds, in regard to the suggestion made to send a train load of corn and meat to the Nebraska farmers, who are suffering because of the short corn crop: "I cordially commend your plan for sending corn and meat to western Nebraska. Southern farmers have raised more of both this year than their section will need. I hope your suggestion may be executed."

Danced on His Body.

Bay Minnelli, Ala., Dec. 28.—A most brutal crime was committed near here. Tim Thompson, a tiny negro boy, was asked to dance for the amusemnt of some white toughs. He refused, saying he was a church member. Jim Jostling knocked him down with a club and then danced upon him. He afterward shot the boy in the hip. The boy is dead and his murderer is still at large.

FOR AN EXTRA SESSION

Springer Favors It if the Currency Bill Fails.

The Chairman of the Committee on Currency Explains the Provisions of the New Bill—Should It Fail To Pass Before Congress Closes an Extra Session May Be Called.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Chairman Springer, of the committee on banking and currency, is greatly incensed at the criticism of the new currency bill. He says that most people oppose it because they are not familiar with the results it is to obtain.

"In the first place," said Mr. Springer, "the Carlisle bill proposes for security of the circulating notes of national banks, instead of United States bonds, a guarantee fund consisting of legal tender notes or currency certificates to the amount of 30 per centum of the circulation applied for; also a safety fund to be raised by tax of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum upon the circulating notes until it reaches 5 per centum of the whole circulation, and as a further security a first lien upon all the assets of the bank and upon the amount which may be realized by the double liability feature of the national banking law.

"It must be observed here, that the guarantee fund of 30 per centum, the assets of the bank and the personal liability of the stockholders, can only go to the payment of the circulating notes of the bank which issues them.

"But the 5 per cent. guarantee fund raised by a tax upon all the circulation of the country, is a common fund out of which the notes of any failed bank may be paid. This is the guarantee fund, the assets, and personal liabilities of the stockholders are not sufficient.

"Thus, on circulation of $200,000,000 the present national bank circulation, the safety fund will amount to $10,000,000 and this whole fund could be drawn upon to pay the notes of any bank that failed.

"This security, together with the others mentioned, is deemed by the safest financiers and bankers of the country as simply sufficient to secure the bill holders under any circumstances even in the time of panics and universal financial disaster."

Replying to a question in what respect did this bill differ from the Baltimore plan, Mr. Springer added:

"What is known as the Baltimore plan was adopted by a convention of the national banks of the United States held in Baltimore in October last.

"The Baltimore plan recommended by this convention provides as security for the circulating notes of national banks, only a safety fund of 5 per centum upon all outstanding circulation, a first lien upon the assets of the bank and upon the personal liability of the stockholders.

"If these sums are not sufficient, the government of the United States is to pay any deficiency by promptly redeeming the notes. But the government is to be reimbursed out of the 5 per cent. safety fund as soon as it is replenished by a taxation of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum upon the circulation of all banks.

"In short, the absolute security of the Carlisle plan is 30 per centum greater than that provided by the Baltimore plan, and as the bill is now amended the banks under both plans will be liable for all losses which may occur to bill holders, which are to be paid out of the safety fund when replenished."

Regarding the possibility of the bill to pass, he said that it would be eighteen months before relief can be obtained. He advocated under such circumstances an extra session of congress, and said the president would call one, if this session closed without financial legislation.

IMPEACHMENT ASKED FOR.

Police Corruption Laid Bare in the City of New Haven.

New Haven, Dec. 28.—The investigating committee of the police department reported that there has been lack of vigilance and efficiency of police in preventing and suppressing various forms of gambling and other vices, and especially in the enforcement of the Sunday liquor selling.

The committee find no evidence of general or systematic corruption. When this had been read a statement from Mr. Newman Smith was submitted, charging Commissioner Gilluly of abusing his office and advocating his impeachment and removal.

Stockman Ezell Shot.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 28.—A sensational shooting, the result of a feud, took place near this city in which H. Clay Ezell, one of the most prominent stockmen in the state was fatally wounded by P. M. Ellis. A number of shots were exchanged and both Ellis and his wife were slightly wounded.

A FLYING MACHINE.

SECRETARY LANGLEY OF SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTE THE INVENTOR.

The Aeroplane Flies Three Hundred Yards and Looks Like a Bird. Two Screws Driven by Steam Act as Propellers while Wings Sustain the Thing in Its Flight.

A week's work with Secretary Langley's aeroplane is declared to have demonstrated the possibility of aerial navigation. The apparatus was made to fly three hundred yards with a steady, even movement, propelled by a small but swiftly revolving pair of screws.

Although the new flying machine at a distance looks much like a very large bird, its wings do not flap. They are set in a fixed position, and so inclined that by the rapid movement through the air the mechanism will be supported as is a kite. When the device has been perfected and adapted to practical use the wings will be made to move for the purpose of guiding the aerial vessel's course, just as an eagle moves its pinions while sailing.

Illustrated accounts of the model on which the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute was then at work appeared in several papers last year.

The new flying machine is twelve feet in length over all, and eight feet wide measured across the front wings. There are four wings, and the caudal pair—if they may be so termed—are little more than half the size of those attached to the body. But for the fact that the two pairs are separated by an interval of several feet the nerveless creature might be described as a monstrous butterfly.

The fine white cloth of which the wings are in part made is stretched over a light framework of numerous closely set veins or ribs, adding to the likeness. The aluminum body is very light, weighing only about two pounds. It is nearly four feet long, and the width is almost half the length, giving it a decidedly chunky appearance. In transverse section it would approximate a circle.

The propelling power is steam. It is applied through the agency of a little copper boiler and engine within the aluminum body, giving motion to a pair of wooden screws placed at the postern end of the body. The little engine is marvellously light and powerful for a mechanism so reduced in size. The propeller's blades are hardly thicker than paper. They are about a foot long, one piece to each, and hum like a hive of bees.

UNWILLINGLY JOINED THE CHASE.

Dragged Along by a Bull Dog in His Mad Pursuit of a Cat.

A spinster of the emancipated woman type was leading a bull dog by a chain and evidently enjoying the terror which its presence inspired among her weaker sisters, who were still bound in the chains of conventionalism. The bull dog, with the listless good nature peculiar to his species, paid no attention to anybody or anything until a predatory cat essayed to cross the street a few feet in front of it. If there is one thing more than another that a bull dog is death on it is a cat.

The situation is instantly reversed. The bull dog was leading the emancipated woman a mad chase across the avenue in pursuit of the feline, that stood not a moment on the order of its going. The street was crowded with vehicles, and it was only because that kindly providence which tempers the wind to the shorn lamb and the fall to the drunken man happened just then to be taking a keen interest in the fate of that woman of advanced views that her life was preserved. As it was, the recording angel must have had a particularly busy two minutes taking stenographic notes of the oaths that were uttered by excitable Jehus as they threw their horses on their haunches.

On the opposite side of the street the cat sped down a flight of steps leading to an areaway and hopped onto a window sill, where it was beyond the reach of its less agile foe.

The woman, either because she wouldn't or couldn't let go the chain, was lugged down the same steps, narrowly escaping a fall, and for five minutes she stood there tugging vainly at the chain while the dog strained and leaped and barked in fruitless efforts to get within biting distance of puss.

The crowd gathered around enjoyed the woman's discomfiture. Not a man offered to assist her.

"It just serves her right," remarked a pretty girl to her companion. "She ought to know better than go around with such a horrid brute."

All the women present were evidently of the same opinion. A policeman, attracted by the crowd, finally came to her rescue, and by main strength pulled the dog up the steps, while the terrified cat made tracks for parts unknown.

Self Control.

There is no person more to be admired than the woman who is thoroughly mistress of herself. The one who is calm under excitement, brave in emergencies, dispassionate, assuredly possesses most noble qualities of both mind and heart.

Yet you cannot for a moment imagine that she has acquired them wholly as an inheritance. Natural disposition may indeed sometimes lay the foundation for this enviable control over one's words and deeds, but a rigid course of self-training must always rear the superstructure.

A woman who allows herself to fly into a state of nervous excitement in the presence of an insect or a mouse cannot hope to preserve her equilibrium in the face of a sudden disaster. One who habitually gives way to fretfulness or fault-finding cannot think to form for herself a well balanced character, neither can she expect to have entire health of body or mind.

The increase of nervous and mental maladies among members of the gentler sex should lead their sisters to reflection. The troubles which have overtaken so many may also overwhelm others, unless they take timely warning. In nine cases out of ten habitual self-control may be the preventive of nervous disorders and of insanity.

A woman who would be really well, and who would exert a helpful influence over her friends, must learn to moderate her task and her pleasures, to avoid worry, and to cultivate a resolute calmness of demeanor.—Harper's Bazar.

CINDERELLA IN REAL LIFE.

Good Fortune of Little Zelda Sanders, the Child Actress.

Zelda Sanders, a child actress who made so charming an impression upon her audiences when she appeared last season as Cinderella that she was invited to the White House as the guest of Baby Ruth, has found in Mr. Lucky Baldwin, the California millionaire, a friend whose power and munificence almost cast into the shade the resources of a fairy godmother. She has become his pet, and he has undertaken the guardianship of her future. He has promised to educate her at the best school in San Francisco and perhaps to settle upon her part of his immense fortune. It was Mr. Baldwin who persuaded her parents to take Zelda from the stage for the present and give her the advantages of an education such as his means could procure.

Zelda, who is now 11 years old, was only two years before the public, but in that time she became widely known as one of the prettiest children on the stage, and also as a most thorough going and persistent opponent of Elbridge T. Gerry. Two years ago Zelda was merely a very pretty little blue-eyed girl, who lived in Brooklyn and went to Sunday school dutifully. Zelda is the only child. Her entrance into the world of stage people was in itself almost dramatic.

One oppressive hot Sunday in July, 1892, she was taken by her mother to the closing meeting of the Christian Endeavor Convention at the Madison Square Garden. Dressed all in white and with the declining sun glorifying her lustrous hair and setting off the exquisite delicacy of her complexion, she made a picture which quickly caught the eye of an enterprising theatrical manager away back in the crowd. Keeping her in sight, he elbowed his way through the crowd to her side and learned her name and address. Shortly after a small part was given to her in a juvenile production of "Pygmalion and Galatea." So naturally did she take to the footlights that a regular course of stage instruction was arranged for her.

Zelda soon became known to fame for her acting, but Mr. Gerry interposed his veto. While she was fighting the Gerry society in the courts, Zelda also determined to educate public opinion. In the winter of 1893-94 she called a meeting of stage children, and organized an Anti-Gerry Society. Considerable worriment was provided for Mr. Gerry by sending delegates to Albany to get the society's powers curtailed, and by using periodical manifestos bewailing the lot of stage children, and referring to Mr. Gerry as a despot and tyrant.

Zelda was present at a hearing before Justice Van Brunt at which her mandamus case was argued. After listening impatiently to Mr. Gerry's arguments for some time she surprised and amused the court by running eagerly up to the bar of justice and saying to the Justice with great earnestness as she shook her finger at Mr. Gerry:

"Oh, Judge, don't you believe him; he's a bad man."

As Mr. Gerry went out she scowled at him savagely, but he stopped and kissed her. This demonstration gave her a better opinion of him, and when in the following spring he sent her from Paris a magnificent talking doll she relented in her antagonism, and a few days later the Anti-Gerry Society was formally dissolved. The members present immediately formed the Baby Ruth Sunshine League, with the object of raising funds for poor children's summer outings. Ruth Cleveland was honored with the Presidency, but Zelda Sanders was the active manager, as Vice-President. A number of entertainments were given by the League with considerable success, and largely through its efforts a site was secured at Lakewood for the poor children's summer home.

At the end of the season Zelda went to Saratoga, and it was there that she met and captivated Lucy Baldwin. She danced for him, she recited and sang to him. Her natural aptitude and accomplishments and her sweetness of manner won him at once. As the friendship grew she was never happier than when driving in the Baldwin carriage or sitting beside the millionaire at some entertainment. For his part the old man's life was lightened and brightened by the entrance into it of the little actress straight from fairyland. No expense was considered by him in procuring anything that would please his little friend. As the time drew near for Zelda's departure Mr. Baldwin grew moody and preoccupied. He felt that he had grown fonder of her than he had realized, and that he would greatly miss her. When the day before the final parting came, he took Zelda for a farewell drive. He spoke little all the way. The child was grieved by the gloom of her friend, and at length Mr. Baldwin noticed tears glistening in her eyes.

"What are you crying for, Zelda?" asked the millionaire gently.

"Because you're so unhappy," she replied.

Mr. Baldwin's half-formed plan became a resolution.

"My child," he said, drying her tears, "would you like to go away out to my California home and let me send you to school and make you a rich young lady when you grow up?"

"Oh, yes, indeed I would," she replied, and then she added, "if mamma could go, too."

That night the matter was talked over with Zelda and her mother, and it was settled that they should wait at their New York home until Mr. Baldwin notified them that the arrangements had been made.

Zelda's head was not turned by the great good fortune which had come to her, and to only a few of her most intimate friends did she confide the secret that she might soon be transplanted to the Pacific coast. Sometimes she almost fancied that her friendship with the millionaire was part of the fairyland of "Cinderella," and then she would toss her curls and say:

"Well, if I play Cin again this winter this will all be rehearsal any way, won't it?"

Not many days ago there was a ring at the door, and a very prosaic and unfairy-like messenger boy handed in a telegram which read:

Come at once. Will meet you in Chicago. BALDWIN.

The next day Zelda and her mother were on the way. When they reached Chicago Mr. Baldwin was there and the two firm friends were delighted to see each other again.

"Now look here, don't come a twittin' of me," he said. "I was goin' to help you shoot them fellers, but, hang it, Nell took the gun and slipped away with it before I could get to the house. I can't run as fast as I could at one time."

"But I saw you running through the street and a deer couldn't have been faster."

"You are right, and I was runnin' for the gun."

"But you were not running toward your house."

"No, of course not, for I knew that Nell had tuck my gun and I was goin' after another one. And it's a good thing for them that I didn't get it. But let us git down to business. I have been thinkin' the matter over and I have come to the conclusion that I can't git along very well without you and I know Nell can't. Why, look here, you ought to be a mother to that girl, hah? Didn't she risk her life to help you? And ain't such courage as that deservin' of a mother? It's easy enough to be a mother to her."

"Yes, but I can't very well be a mother to both of you."

"The horn spoon! I don't want you to be a mother to me; want you to be a wife to me."

"I think a great deal of you, Mr. Aimes."

"Bleeged to you, I gad."

"And I will break my engagement to those three men and engage myself to you for one year."

"Cut it down and I'm with you."

"All right, we'll say three months."

"And will you swear you won't fool me?"

"I'll swear that I will not break the engagement unless you are willing."

"But here, you won't cut up no caper in the meantime that will cause me to draw off, hah? All right now, it's a go, and I'll tell that old woman to weave another rag carpet." He stopped at the door, turned about and remarked: "Ain't quite as chilly as it was yistidy."

And before she could reply he had lunged out into the street and was hastening to tell his daughter of his happiness. When Polly reached home, just as twilight was tangling itself amid the dead vines in the garden, she found Nell standing at the gate, waiting for her. The girl was nervous, and she opened the gate with a jerk.

"What have you told father?" she asked, when Polly passed through the gate. "Don't go into the house just yet; wait here a moment. What have you told father?" she repeated.

"POLLY, WHAT HAVE YOU TOLD FATHER?"

Polly stood there, laughing at her, but she grew more nervous. "It is nothing to laugh at," she said. "You told me, or that is you agreed, that we should never marry and that we should live together."

"Don't be worried; I was only joking with him."

"But, Polly, that was no way to joke with an old man. He is one of the best men in the world, and all that, but you don't want to marry even the best man."

"It will work out all right, Nell; don't worry over it."

"But how can it work out all right?"

"Wait, and you shall see."

"Yes, and that's what you said about those three men, and that hasn't worked out all right yet. I have tried so hard to understand you, Polly, but sometimes I just can't. Why do you wish to mystify me? Haven't I always been frank with you?"

"Yes, too frank, perhaps."

"That's what I sometimes think myself. But here comes father."

The old man came out, wearing a horseshoe nail mounted as a breastpin. "Father," said the girl, "if I were you I would take off that fool thing and throw it away."

"Throw away my betrothal pledge, hah? Not much. You go on into the house and Polly and I will walk down and look at that bottom field of corn by moonlight."

"I don't care to walk this evening," Polly replied. "I'm tired."

"All right, we'll wait till some other time; but say, you might let me kiss you once just for luck."

"No, you've had luck enough. By the way, there is a clause that I must insert in our contract, and that is this: If you speak to me again or to anyone about our compact the engagement shall be instantly broken. There, not a word or I'll break it right now."

To observe the new clause required on the old man's part a strong exertion of will; and sometimes, in babbling about his bottom field of corn, he approached near the danger line. News of the engagement got out, but the old fellow swore that he had told no one; but he had been seen talking to the president of the mite society, and it was known that she had spread the report. And she said many things that were not complimentary to Polly; said that she had come to Broomfield merely to catch a husband. She even stopped Polly in the street and asked her when the marriage was to take place.

"It seems of deep concern to you," Polly replied.

"Oh, not at all, I'm sure. I just merely happened to think of it. I don't care if you marry him to-day, I'm sure. He's nothing to me, goodness knows. And so far as that's concerned, I could have married him long ago. I suppose the match will be very suitable. He's getting old and you're not so very young yourself. Those city women have a knack of hiding their age, too. Oh, yes, I should think that you are very well suited. It's nothing to me, I'm sure."

"Good, and I hope that you will accept an invitation to my wedding."

"Oh, I am the last person in the world to go to weddings. Of course if it's a romantic affair I don't mind going, but a cut and dried marriage never did catch me. Oh, by the way, what will those three strange men think?"

"I don't know, but I have invited them to the wedding."

"Miss, I must say that you are about the curisest critter I ever saw, and it strikes me that the less a body has to do with you the better it will be for 'em."

Several months passed, and the expiration of the lease was approaching. And so was the time set for Polly's marriage. The bottom field had yielded lavishly and the old man wore a new homespun suit. "You know we had a sort of a contract," he said to Polly one evening.

"Yes, but if you speak of the engagement I'll break it."

"I gad, you've got me wound up in a close place. I'd like to ask you if it ain't about time you was gettin' your dress ready, and all that sort of thing."

"Look out now, Mr. Aimes."

The old man ducked his head as though a stone had been thrown at him. "All right, miss, but don't forget to blow the horn when you are ready."

It was morning, and Polly and Nell were sitting in the parlor at home, Polly had said that as the lease was about to expire there was no need of going to the office. "We will wait," she said, "and let the owner of the paper come here if he wants to see us."

"Do you think of taking it again?" Nell asked, with a touch of sadness in her voice.

"No, I think not."

"So then you are in earnest about marrying father."

"No, I think not."

"You think not? Don't you know?"

"Yes, I think I do."

"Polly, you have one of your mysterious fits to-day. What's the use in keeping up this foolishness? Tell him that you can't marry him. You have let it run on so long already that he has gone to the expense of getting a new suit of clothes."

"Yes, but he hasn't any more clothes now than he needs."

Nell sighed and. Polly looked dreamily out into the garden. "Your coming and your stay has been a romance to me, Polly, and now it must end." She sat with her elbow on a table and meditatively and deftly was touching her hair. The sunlight, streaming through the high window, fell upon her, illumined her, and the sad glow of a wish-dream was in her eyes. Out in the road, dodging about, stalked a young man, a smitten clown, dying to catch a glimpse of her. "Yes, your coming was so strange a romance, bringing to me a mind that I could admire, and now the music must end in a dry crackle."

Polly went to her, leaned over her, kissed her. "Your romance may not end," she said. "But suppose that I should tell you that your romance had been brought by a circus woman."

"You a circus woman? I didn't know that they were so noble and brave."

"I did not say that I was a circus woman, but suppose I were one; and suppose those three men came to persuade me to go back into the ring."

"Oh, you are clearing up one mystery. Go on and you may clear up another."

"But is there any other mystery to clear up?"

"Oh, not exactly a mystery, but how are you going to satisfy father that you should not marry him?"

"Oh, probably he will laugh at the idea to-morrow."

"But why should he when his mind is now so set upon it? Do you think that he will decline to marry you because you have been a circus woman?"

"No, not particularly."

"Oh, you are becoming mysterious again, Polly. Why don't you be absolutely frank with me?"

"I will be, but not until after twelve o'clock to-day."

FIRE DEPARTMENT HORSES.

It Costs the City of New York $100,000 to Keep Them.

The prescribed height for horses in the New York Fire Department is between 16 1-2 and 16 3-4 hands, and the minimum weight is 1,300 pounds. The Fire Department does not buy horses outright, paying for them on delivery, but keeps them on probation in the service of the department at the training stables for one month. There the horse is tested as to health and speed, and at the end of the month the Fire Commissioners have the right to reject any horse not sound or suitable. About forty-five per cent. of the horses sent to the training stables are rejected.

There are exclusive of the fireboats 56 fire engine companies in New York, a majority of them requiring two horses, and some of them three, in addition to which the hose tenders require one or two horses each. There are trucks, nearly all of which require three horses, and in addition to these are the horses required by the fire chiefs, the Commissioners, the fuel wagons, water towers, and the relay. In all there are about 400 horses constantly in the service of the New York Fire Department. It loses by death about fifteen a year, and by the sale of horses no longer serviceable about twenty. The maintenance of the equine department of New York's fire service costs a considerable amount in a year. The item of forage is $50,000. The item of horseshoeing is $15,000. Additional horses cost $24,000. The hospital and training stables with medicines included cost $10,000. These four items foot up $99,500, so that it may be said, in a general way, that New York spends $100,000 a year for the care, keep, and renewal of its fire horses exclusive of the salaries of attendants, and the interest on the money which the city has invested in horses. Stablemen at the training stables receive $2 a day. The foreman gets $1,500 a year.

ELECTRIC CHURNS.

Some of the Many Wonderful Electrical Devices Exhibited at Budapest.

Electricity not only rings doorbells, lights houses and cooks food, but it sweeps the floors, washes the dishes, blacks boots and shoes, and so on through the whole catalogue of domestic operations. If no machine has yet been invented to dress and to feed a man, it is only because the inventors have been so busy that they have not got around yet to the electric valet and the electric knife and fork.

If any one thinks there is any exaggeration about this he ought to have attended the exhibition of machines of this sort that has just closed at Budapest, Hungary. This exhibition, which was organized by the Hungarian Commercial Museum, was a great success, and probably will result in greatly increasing the use of small electric motors for domestic purposes. All sorts of curious electrical machines were exhibited, including wood-working and metal-working machines, clothes-washing machines, sewing machines, ventilators, ice-making machines, blowers and looms. These different machines were run by thirty-alternating current motors and forty-two continuous current motors. Thus the contest between these two types of current which has been waging almost since the first introduction of electricity may still be said to be carried on on even terms, the advantage being a little in favor of the latter.

One of the most interesting machines exhibited was an electric churn, of which the motor was of the alternating current type.

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.

The Nice Sense of Pitch Possessed by Six-year-old Marie Edwards.

A brown-haired girl, whose head barely comes above the keyboard of a piano when she stands beside it, is the centre of attraction for Chicago musicians just now. It has been generally agreed that little Marie Edwards has a gift which would be coveted by some of the most eminent musicians, and that in her perception of tone and in her natural sense of pitch she is a phenomenon. At a private meeting of expert musicians, where she was brought by her father, one of the company struck a high note on the piano where the tones are mere unmusical clinks.

"That is G sharp," said Marie, who was climbing upon a chair in a corner.

"And what are these?" said the musician, as he pressed down a number of keys at the lower end of the scale.

The little girl scarcely paused before calling out the names of each of the tones struck. Then followed a series of tests, which would have disconcerted 99 out of 100 of the adult musicians of the world. Intricate chords were struck—some of them were simply discords—and in every case the child picked out each of the tones buried in the puzzling mass of sounds. One of the party then whistled a few notes and she named them one by one, a reference to the piano verifying her judgment in each case. The same feat was repeated with a violin and with various musical instruments.

The extreme delicacy of her perception may be understood when it is known that if the same note is struck on two pianos varying but slightly in pitch she can tell which instrument is the more correct.

Good Out of Populism.

Senator Peffer is to be credited with a thoroughly sensible bill which, being introduced thus early in the session, ought to become a law. He wants the disreputable and expensive custom of Senatorial funerals done away with. He sees no reason why the death of a Senator should be the occasion of a pleasure trip across the country, with champagne and other drinks ad lib. for the "mourners." It may possibly be true that the death of certain Senators would be fit occasion for public rejoicings, but it is surely not decent to express that joy in a costly Senatorial "jag" accumulated at public expense.

Poetical but Impracticable.

The modern Enoch Arden avocation received a setback in the local courts yesterday when a woman was granted a divorce from a husband who had been mysteriously missing for 28 years, but who returned to find her happily married for the second time. The Enoch Arden idea works all right in poetry, but when it comes to every day practice the men who stay at home and meet the duties of the fireside as they arise stand by long odds the best show with society, as well as with courts and juries

TARS AFLOAT AND ASHORE.

Sailors are Not Always at Sea. How the Time and the Pay are Divided.

The landlubber idea, so prevalent and so erroneous, that navy officers spend the greater part of their time "rocking in the cradle of the deep" "far out upon the the sea," with semi-occasional glimpses of port, obtained when repairs to their vessel or supplies are needed, is offset by the record of the United States Naval Register.

Upon a survey of each officers' time of sea service, shore duty, or unemployed, it would appear that rear admirals are usually credited with from twenty to twenty-five years sea service, from fifteen to eighteen years of shore duty, and from three to seven years as unemployed. With regard to the rank of the commodore the proportions are very much the same.

The time of captains at sea and ashore is pretty evenly divided, on the average, though there are some wide variations, in some cases from one to eleven years in idleness. One of the recently appointed commodores was at sea fifteen years and six months, on shore duty thirteen years and six months, and was unemployed ten years and four months.

Commanders have had from nine to sixteen years at sea, from one to sixteen years' shore duty, and from one to eleven years unemployed. Lieutenant commanders have proportionately the same experience in duty. Lieutenants of both grades have had from six to eighteen years at sea and from three to eleven years on shore, with periods of idleness of from one to four years.

An officer is usually sent to sea for three years, after which he is assigned to shore duty for a similar term. It not infrequently happens, however, that one year of this "sea" duty is spent at the docks in the navy yards, where war ships are detained while undergoing various alterations suggested by navy board of inspection. Shore duty is frequently extended by the Navy Department upon application.

Pay is from $200 to $1,000 a year more at sea, according to rank, than ashore. This inducement leads many officers who need the money to seek sea service. To put a man on waiting orders means a loss in pay of from $400 to $2,000 a year, and it is regarded, if continued for a long period, as a punishment for minor misdeeds.

THE LONG-LIVED ENGINE.

It Outlasted Its Master Because He Kept It Better than Himself.

I once had a curious and instructive conversation with an engineer who then had charge of a large stationary engine. It was a beautiful engine and worked as true as steel could work. The man surprised me by telling me it had been at work nearly ninety years. "And do you know," he added, "it has had eight masters; I am the eighth who has had charge of it; the others are all either dead or worn out, and yet it goes on as if it were as young as ever. Very strange, sir, isn't it, that an engine should live so much longer than a man, and it is not hard work for us, either, or exposed work, for the room is always warm and comfortable, and the place is, of course, clean and light."

"What did the men die from?" I asked.

"Well, three or four, I am afraid, died of drink, another of bad temper, another of worry, and so on, but the engine went on all the same."

The fate of the engine, its long life and continuous industry puzzled the man. He often in his lonely hours thought of it, and wondered how many men would follow him before the engine began to break down.

It did not puzzle me. That engine did work a good many hours a day truly; but it was equable in its work; it never ran loose; it was true in its vocation; it was bright as a new pin, clean in every point; it was served with best but simplest fuel food; it had its furnace tubes clear; it was saved from friction by having its parts properly oiled, and it drank nothing but water. So it lived on through nearly three generations, with a good chance of living through three more; it was allowed, in fact, to make the most of its physical life.

Its masters did not make the most of their lives; they might have been somewhat industrious, but they were not so orderly, so true, so steady, so clean as they made the engine; they had not learned so well how to find the best food and drink for their own labor as had been found for the engine; they did not make the most of their lives, and therefore they stopped, but the engine went, still merrily, on its way.—Sir B. W. Richardson in Longman's Magazine.

THE CITY WATER.

Councilmen Make a Sweeping Investigation.

Evidence of Shrinkage in the Supply at the Netherwood Wells---Danger of Contamination---Plainfield Must Protect Herself.

The subject of Plainfield's water supply was given a most exhaustive review in the Common Council meeting last night; and food for grave thought and immediate action was provided, in the report of the sweeping investigation conducted by the Committee on Water and Sewerage. The investigation was in response to the warning uttered by the Mayor in his message, and the report emphasizes and expands that warning. The point of it is that the Water Supply Company in serving communities other than Plainfield and its sister borough is endangering not only the adequacy, but also the purity of the drink drawn from Plainfield's "underground river". The committee points the danger, and Counselor Marsh points the way to abolish it.

The report is long enough to occupy many columns of The Daily Press. It deals largely with geological estimates and legal quotations. Therefore The Press has abridged it for the prompt and clear understanding of the general public, who have not time to wait for its publication in pamphlet form, nor patience to follow its intricate detail.

The paragraph in the Mayor's message which precipitated the committee's action is as follows:

"Another question which sooner or later may be of importance to the people of Plainfield is connected with the Water Company. This company, or its promoters, have undertaken to furnish Fanwood, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle and Elizabeth with water drawn from our own source of supply. How long this drain can continue without being seriously felt by our people is a question worthy of serious consideration. At the present time, danger may not be imminent, but the natural increase in the population of the places referred to may in time result in an insufficient supply for our purposes. I recommend that during the year some action be taken by your honorable body to obtain information, both as to the extent of the danger referred to, and as to our legal rights in the premises."

The committee says:

"* * * * The water for our industrial and domestic uses is obtained from the loose, porous sand and gravel, and from the open fissures in the rocks underlying any given watershed. * * * * It is estimated that in a free open soil such as underlies Plainfield, about one-fourth of the rainfall percolates into the ground, and the balance is taken up by evaporation and vegetation, or runs off over the surface to streams and ponds.

"* * * * The 'underground river' from which we obtain our supply of clear and wholesome water is of purely local origin—the rainfall over an area of about 10 square miles—and the volume of flow is subject to the variations of the seasons of average or excessive rainfalls, of ordinary dry weather or severe drouths. This 'underground river' takes its rise near Springfield, and, flowing in a southwesterly course parallel to the Watchung Mountain, gathers volume from the steep sides of the mountains on the right and from the lesser slopes of the 'short hills' on the left, until it passes the corner of the terminal moraine at Netherwood, where it broadens out to the southeast and in a wider and presumably shallower stream finds its way through gravel and shale to the Raritan river. * * * *

"The area of the watershed tributary to the wells of the Plainfield Water Supply Company at Netherwood is about five square miles. The red sandstone underlying this area has been furrowed deeply in places by glacial action: bowl-like depressions similar to what is seen on the surface among the 'short hills' have been formed, as also rock mounds, the counterpart of surface topography. These irregularities are overlaid by the 'boulder drift' composed of small boulders, gravel, sand, shale, and clay, and it is through this material that the 'underground river' flows in its course to the Raritan.

"If we allow 25 feet as an average depth of boulder drift above the rock, and 15 feet as an average from the surface of the ground to the water table, there is 10 feet depth of saturated gravel and shale from which the total yield of water must come. The total volume of water held in suspension in the interstices of a gravel bed such as that of the Plainfield watershed, extending over five square miles and ten feet deep, is 3,136,320,000 gallons, allowing 30 per cent. of the total cubical contents to be water. This volume is moving in a stream the entire width of the valley, and cannot possibly all be intercepted by a single pumping system. Allowing one-third of it to be intercepted at the Plainfield Water Company's wells, gives 1 045,000,000 gallons as the permanent storage basin to be drawn upon. At 2 000,000 gallons per day pumped, there is a supply for 522 days, or less than one and one-half years, after which time the supply would have to be provided from the water which soaked into the ground from the rainfall.

"If we allow 12 inches of the annual rainfall as reaching the storage area, it will amount to a daily yield of 2.875,000 gallons. But only about one-half of this can be depended on for a permanent supply, hence the amount available will be less than 1 500,000 gallons per 24 hours During the dry months, from May to September, the ordinary rainfall never reaches the saturated bed; it is therefore from the storage basin, or the so-called 'underground river', that the supply is drawn in these months. As the storage basin is drawn upon by pumping, the level of the water table is lowered; after a time the yield becomes so lessened that the pumps must be lowered, and this is what occurred at the Plainfield Water Supply Company's pumping station in the dry season of 1891, when the water table was lowered six or seven feet and necessitated lowering the pumps 8 ft. 1 in. below their original position. Engineer Brush, in referring to this necessity, stated that it was an indication 'that the supply was not inexhaustible'.

"To explain this effect of pumping upon the ground water more fully: At the normal volume of the 'underground river' the water table, representing the surface, maintains its permanent slope and its distance from the ground surface; when pumping begins, the water falls at first rapidly, afterwards more slowly, until, if the discharge of the pump be uniform, a point is reached where the water is supplied at exactly the same rate as delivered by the pump, and therefore pumping can go on indefinitely, but if the pumping is forced the water line sinks, and in doing so assumes the shape of a flattened, inverted cone, of which the pumping well is the apex, and the absolute depth of the cone cannot exceed 30 feet below the surface of the water in the saturated bed. The average suction lift of the pumps of the Plainfield Water Supply Company was 20 to 28 feet during the original tests; and within a year after commencing to pump, the natural result of pumping—lowering the water table—occurred. The immediate area subject to the influence of the pumps is presumably a circle with the centre of the well for its centre, but in the case of a system of gang wells such as those of the Plainfield Water Supply Company the form will be that of an ellipse, and allowing for a depth of 50 feet the area of the influence will be about 100 acres; the westerly limit will be about 200 feet west of Leland avenue, and the easterly limit about at Terrill road; the sides of the ellipse will be distant about 1,100 feet on each side of the pumping station; allowing 25 feet depth, of the saturated bed, gives 35,000 000 cubic feet of gravel, or 66,500 000 gallons of water On account of intermittent pumping, time is allowed daily for a partial refilling of the area of influence, but as consumption increases so is the time of pumping lengthened, and as the water in the cone (or pyramid) is lowered, the discharge is diminished proportionately as the head is diminished.

"If the pumping be kept up at the rate of maximum yield, the cone of influence will eventually be emptied, when no water can be obtained until after such time as it can be partly or wholly replenished from the natural rainfall reaching the saturated bed. There may be, however, water below this limit of suction; and to reach it, deeper and larger wells must be driven and the pumps lowered to within 30 feet or less of the surface. The old wells of the Plainfield Water Supply Company were driven 40 to 45 feet deep, but it has become necessary to sink new and deeper wells to the north of the old line of wells.

"From our investigations thus far we can state:

"1. The source of the Plainfield Water Supply Company's supply is local.

"2. Tests of numerous dug wells from the water-works eastward and northward over the watershed along Front street, Terrill road, Martine avenue, and at Scotch Plains, give evidence of a lowering of the water table, and consequent lessening of the storage basin.

"3. Inquiries disclose the fact that several wells eastward of the water-works have been deepened within two years

"4 There has been general complaint of lowering of water in all the wells in the city and vicinity.

"5. The action of the Water Supply Company in lowering their pumps and boring wider and deeper wells indicates exhaustion of the storage supply.

"While we do not find that there is immediate danger of an insufficient supply for the needs of this city, reasoning from the experience of other localities with an underground supply, the records of which we have examined, the inference is that the probability of a very much diminished supply in the near future is imminent.

"There is, however, a consequence of excessive pumping which directly concerns the people of Plainfield. In the slow percolation through sand and gravel, water is very thoroughly filtered, and is delivered to consumers in safe and wholesome condition: the action of forced pumping is to create a more porous condition of the soil, and, indeed, to create open channels through which the supply of water will be temporarily greatly increased, but at the expense of its purity and wholesomeness: as every drop which reaches the pumps has passed downward from the ground surface through the intervening strata, so must the supply be more or less contaminated at the start by the condition of the soil through which it passes. It is a fact that in the Plainfield watershed are barnyards, manured fields, cesspools, privy vaults, and cemeteries, and a portion of the rainfall which soaks through these is pumped into the pipes of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and delivered to consumers. Thorough filtration is secured by slow percolation, although absolute purification is not: if a series of channels is induced by forced pumping, is it not clear to any intelligent person that the danger arising from the delivery of possibly contaminated water is greatly increased?

"The remedy for this condition of our public water supply is to secure a sufficient watershed as free from contaminating influences as possible and take from it only such supply as is needed by the citizens of Plainfield and such adjoining communities as can safely be supplied."

Appended to this is an exhaustive opinion from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, giving no hope of successfully attacking the constitutionality of the Plainfield Water Supply Company's charter, but stating:

"I am clearly of the opinion that the company cannot lawfully take and divert and convey to any place outside of Plainfield and adjoining towns water for public or private use, whether from streams on the surface or streams underground, or from any other body of water to any extent whatever, and this irrespective of the question whether Plainfield's supply would be damaged much or little, or not at all.

"* * * It is equally clear in my opinion that apart from liability to pay for service actually performed by the company and accepted by the city, the contract in question does not estop the city from invoking any remedy based on the alleged unconstitutionality of the city's charter, or any alleged act of the company in the exercise of its franchises, rights or powers. Furthermore, any taxpayer of the city, who has not been barred by laches, would be at liberty * * * to have the validity of the contract reviewed by the Supreme Court on certiorari. * * * The city of Plainfield is not by the contract in question deprived of the power to obtain a supply of water for any municipal purposes through means other than the instrumentalities of the said company."

At the close of Counselor Marsh's opinion, the committee says:

"* * * * Your committee in conclusion recommend that in view of the importance of the matters under consideration, and the few days left before the expiration of the term of the present Council, the report of the committee and the opinion of the city's legal adviser be referred to the next Common Council."

The report is signed by George H. Frost, E N. Erickson, S. A. Ginna, Committee on Water and Sewage, and is dated Plainfield, N. J., December 28, 1894.

The Common Council listened to its reading with grave attention; and, after adopting by resolution the recommendation of the committee urging action by the incoming Council, ordered 500 copies of the report printed in pamphlet form.

A NETHERWOOD FESTIVAL.

The Children of St. Stephen's Joyously Celebrate Holy Innocents' Day.

"The dear little Church on the Hill" was filled with children and the parents of the children last evening at 5 The terra cotta interior of the church was full of light and happy faces; and amid the Christmas decorations stood a Christmas tree, fifteen feet high, covered from top to the lowest branch with beautiful ornaments, the gift of a Brooklyn friend of the school, and with numberless wax candles The generosity of Anthony R. Dyett supplied the tree itself.

Miss Maude Lord was the organist of the festival. The children first sang "Ring Out the Bells for Christmas", and "Hark! A Burst of Heavenly Music". Later in the brief service they gave "List! List to the Chime", and "The Christmas Tree". The brief address of Rev. S. P. Simpson was followed by a joyous outburst of young voices in "Hark! the Angels Singing". The training of the children was a triumph of Superintendent Jaffray Phillips, who assiduously labored to make the most of the one hundred voices in the school.

The distribution of the presents occupied fully thirty minutes. Besides the chief presents addressed to the scholars, a box of oranges, given by Capt. Hand, and 120 boxes of candy were distributed The beautiful lacquered candy boxes were the gift of Stephen A. Ginna, who generally succeeds in doing good by stealth, but who, in this instance, will be compelled to accept the thanks of the people of Netherwood. Special prizes were given to Clara Winterlich who brought in eight scholars, and to Laura Christiansen who brought in seven more. For attendance, prizes were presented to Christine Frederickson, Fritz Siebold, Osmond Noel, Dorsey Hyde, Willie Beal, and Albert Finch.

The Sunday-school has prospered finely during the present year, and now numbers 103 scholars. The infant class, in charge of Mrs. Loeser, is easily the banner class of the school. It numbers 29, and the attendance is generally up to 25. The other teachers are: Mrs. Beal, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. Howard, Miss Leake, Miss Maude Lord, S. Seabury Guion, N. P. T. Finch, and Superintendent Phillips.

The sewing class, made up from the school, has an enrollment of 26 girls. It meets on Saturday afternoons, and is under the care of Mrs. Beal, Mrs. Loeser, and Miss Anthony, assisted at times by other women. From their earnings with the needle the class put on the Christmas tree a purse containing $10 50, a gift to the treasury of the Sunday-school.

SANTA CLAUS AT HOLY CROSS.

Novel Electrical Effects at the Annual Christmas Festival of the Sunday-school.

The annual Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of Holy Cross Church took place in the parish building last evening, a large gathering of friends joining the children and teachers in the enjoyable exercises. There were the usual cheery carols, a short service and a brief, happy talk by the rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, after which, to the accompaniment of a mighty jingling of sleigh-bells, old Santa Claus himself burst upon the scene and inquired for Superintendent Benjamin R. Western. It appeared that the benevolent old saint had been so pleased by his evening with the Holy Cross children a year ago that he had expressed the desire to be on hand again, and so the superintendent wrote him a letter of invitation for this occasion and here he was, with his ruddy cheeks, his ermine robes and the arctic icicles still fringing his reverend whiskers. A neighboring barn was placed at the disposal of his reindeers and The Press man who went over to interview the team and get their impressions of Plainfield found them the most affable and altogether engaging span of reindeer he ever met. Some few doubting ones in the audience were foolish enough to imagine that the features of Santa Claus bore a strange resemblance to those of Horsley Barker, the Front street medicine man, but the children said they knew better, and they ought to know. The good saint presided grandly over the distribution of a motley host of pretty and useful gifts, not to mention an inexhaustible supply of the sweetest confections, and then, remembering an important appointment for midnight at the North Pole, hurried away with a parting promise to show up again next year.

The most interesting feature of the affair, perhaps, was the novel and elaborate electrical display arranged by C. P. Sebring. An immense arch at the end of the building, bearing in gilt lettering a Christmas sentiment, was brilliantly illuminated by electric lamps and surmounted by a large Bethlehem star. In the centre and points of which glowed beautiful incandescent globes. The two tall Christmas trees were lavishly studded with nodding lamps of many colors and the effect of the whole was one of original and unusual beauty.

Beside the rare array of costly presents for the children, there were handsome gifts for the rector and his wife, and for each member of the church choir.

NOT YET FINISHED.

Common Council Finds It Has Its Hands Full of Work.

FINAL MEETING DEFERRED TO '95.

Last Night's Session Largely Devoted to the Auditing of Claims and the Hearing of the Report on Water Supply—Judge Coddington Rebuked for Constituting Himself a Disbursing Department.

The only absentee from the session of the Common Council last night was Councilman Millington. The meeting was a protracted one, and as the business was not concluded for the year it was decided to hold another session in the new year.

Petitions were received and referred to the proper committees for a crosswalk at the corner of Sixth and Washington streets, a fire hydrant at West Sixth and Arlington, a hydrant at the Grant avenue neighborhood of West Eighth street, and apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate.

The report of Wm. A. Coddington, City Judge, was received for the year, showing 519 arrests; 93 were committed, 193 fined, 170 released under suspension of sentence, 35 dismissed or discharged, 18 held in bonds, 6 were unsettled, and 4 appealed. The money received from fines was $920 86, and from back fines $8. The expenses were $228 27, including $36 for "stovepipe and so forth". The reading of this item made the councilmen open their eyes in surprise, remark being made that it would have been cheaper to move the chimney; and the Finance Committee through Mr. Dumont reported on it later in the evening in words of disapproval. Said Mr. Dumont: "The City Judge seems to have constituted himself a disbursing officer, and we think he has no right to order supplies without warrant. We recommend that the City Judge file with the City Clerk vouchers for the account submitted, and that in the future no bills be paid except after examination and audit as in the usual manner." This was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Frost for the Sewerage Committee reported that 17,411 feet of pipe had been laid, with about 10,000 more to do; that the engineer had been directed to stop construction for the season after the 110 foot gap on Putnam avenue should have been closed up.

The report on the water supply was received and disposed of as fully told in other columns of this issue.

Petitions for fire hydrants and crosswalks were reported back and laid on the table for the action of the incoming Council. The bond of Constable Rockafellow was referred to the Corporation Council for investigation. The matter of the apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate was referred to the new Council, Mr. Dumont stating that the opening of the highway through the property was progressing, and that action on the petition could soon be taken. $3,000 was ordered borrowed for the sewer fund, $3,000 for the fire fund, and $5,500 for the general fund. The contract for the street lights was renewed with the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company to Nov. 1, 1895. Street lamps were ordered placed as follows: one on West Fourth street between New and Liberty; two on Church street between Front and Third; one on Division street between Sixth and Seventh; one on Arlington avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets; and two on Madison avenue east of Ninth street. The ordinance amending the dog ordinance was adopted on final passage. A vast pile of bills, aggregating about $9,000, was audited and ordered paid. The Council adjourned to meet Friday night, Jan. 4.

Brown Boys Tonight.

The Brown University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs appear in the Park Avenue Baptist Church tonight. They have during the holidays been greeted with very appreciative audiences in Connecticut, New Jersey, New York city, and Philadelphia, singing and playing before 1,500 people in the Y. M. C. A. course in the latter city, Christmas night. They delighted a large and enthusiastic audience at Somerville last night. All music lovers should attend tonight's concert.

Methodist Revival.

In the Methodist Episcopal Church special revival meetings will begin tomorrow. The services of a quartette of young men of Drew Seminary have been secured. They have had considerable experience in evangelistic work, in which great success has been secured. They will sing at the services tomorrow, and conduct the evening meeting. The meetings will be held every evening next week, with the exception of Tuesday.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S Armstrong, Manager.

SANTA CLAUS CAPTURED.

Methodists Also Have a Merry Christmas Celebration.

The Christmas festivities of the Sunday-school of the First Methodist Episcopal Church were held in Vincent Chapel last evening. In opening, the Sunday-school sang a Christmas carol "Crown Him". Miss Gertrude Sharp acted as pianist. The singing was led by Mr. Bond. The pastor, Rev. C. B. Barnes, offered a prayer, which was followed by the doxology and the carol "Christmas Time" sung by the school.

Miss Edna French delighted the audience with the long and beautiful poem "The Knight and the Page".

The carol "Gleam On" by the school concluded the preliminary exercises, after which followed the principal part of the programme, the cantata entitled "The Capture of Santa Claus". The platform was arranged to represent the interior of a house with a large open fire-place in the rear. The mother, Miss Rita Pond, and her children, Miss Cora Harris, Miss Carrie Mulford, Roland Horne and Donald McGee, discussed various ways of spending a pleasant Christmas, and even went so far as to put on paper thinking caps to assist in their discussion. The caps had the desired effect, and the mother was suddenly inspired with a plan to surprise and capture Santa Claus. This plan was finally adopted and away went the happy family to prepare for the capture, singing, just before they left, the carol "Santa Claus Will Soon Be Here". Then the chimney elves came tumbling in and began to hurriedly tell each other of the good traits in the characters of the children. Before leaving they decided to pin notes on the children's stockings which had been left hanging at the fireplace. These notes were to Santa Claus telling him that the children were exceedingly kind and that nothing he could leave would be too good for them. Away went the elves, and soon Santa Claus entered and read all the notes. He was very much pleased and had set his pack down preparatory to filling the stockings, when suddenly out rushed the mother and her children and securely bound Santa Claus in an armchair. Here he was safe, and the children crowded round asking him many questions about himself and wife which he answered very willingly and promised that if they would release him he would fill their stockings with the best things in his pack. Of course, the children were wild to free him, and the chimney elves were called upon to assist in filling the stockings. During this busy scene one of the elves suddenly disappeared, returning in a moment, however, with Jack Frost, Everett J Peck. He left none of his cold behind and the elves began to shake and shiver, and at last fanned some warmth into their rather chilly friend, while he granted their many requests to make fine coasting and good skating, and numerous other things dear to the boyish heart.

Suddenly there appeared a new band, the fairies. They sang a carol "Fairy Band" and disappeared as suddenly as they had come. The elves now brought in a snow man which they had captured. He sang a selection, 'I am a Fellow of Snow," and then retired with the chimney elves. A Christmas carol by the family followed, which was favorably commented upon by Santa, when the elves returned bearing a large package. After numerous guesses failing to reveal its contents Santa bade the elves to open it. It contained many presents to the happy elves. The fairies now appeared with the elves. A closing carol was sung by all—"Good-Bye, Dear Santa Claus"—and the curtain was drawn.

The school sang the carol "Sing to the Saviour", after which Jas. W. Jackson, the Sunday-school superintendent, gave a short talk. He said that with the church in its present condition, just freed from debt, it would not be fitting to give any elaborate presents to anybody, but in the name of the Sunday-school, he now presented Mr. Bond with a parlor-lamp, for his kind services rendered during the past year. Mr. Bond thanked Mr. Jackson, and the Sunday-school, and said he would always think of them when he lighted the beautiful lamp. Mr. Jackson now announced that the entertainment for visitors was over, but the school would each receive the usual inseparable Sunday-school Christmas gifts, a box of candy and an orange. The children enjoyed this part of the programme immensely, as Mr. Jackson predicted they would. The candy was distributed by Mrs L M French, Mrs N Y Hull, Clifford McGee, Arthur Crone, Miss Gertie Sharp, James Joy, Mr Bingman, James Jackson, and George B. Cornwell, Lewis Dunavan, the Santa Claus of fifteen minutes before, gave each person an orange, for a Christmas gift, as they passed out of the door.

The committee, under whose able management the entertainment was conducted, consisted of Miss Minnie French, Mrs Clark, Miss Margaretta Barnes, Mrs N Y Hull, Miss Gertrude Sharp, and Mrs L M French.

The programme in the entertainment for the younger children in the afternoon consisted of a recitation, "The Day Star" by a number of the primary department, and the same cantata rendered in the evening.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

ABSOLUTELY PURE

BUSINESS OF THE YEAR

Dun's Report Gives the Details of Our Trade.

Wages Were Higher in Many Commercial and Manufacturing Interests, But Fewer Hands Were Employed—A Gradual Improvement over 1893 Noted.

New York, Dec. 29.—Dun's review says that the failures in 1894 were 14,292 against 15,242 last year. The liabilities were only $163,238,404 against $346,792,889 for the same time.

Manufacturing failures number 2,756 against 3,422 last year, but liabilities were only $64,491,287 against $176,982,091 last year. The trading failures with liabilities of 11,314 against 11,512 last year, $87,899,057 against $130,062,333 last year.

Wages actually paid in November are compared with working hours in establishments throughout the country and in about 50 branches of industry, the average being 236.4 hours per hand this year, 218.4 last year, and 243.2 in 1892.

The wages paid in these establishments in November was 16.33 per cent. more than in November, 1892. Thus the decrease in purchasing power of the working force is found to be due mainly to decrease in number of hands and hours of work, rather than to reduction of wages paid per hour.

Holiday trade has scarcely met expectations. Purchases have been numerous, but smaller than usual in amount and more confined to needful articles, thus anticipating ordinary trade. The volume of business represented by clearing house exchanges is 7.7 per cent. larger than last year, but 21.8 per cent. less than the year before, and the daily average for December has been 7.1 per cent. more than last year, but 25.2 less than the year before.

In spite of some sensational losses on western roads, the earnings of all railroads reporting for December are 2.9 per cent. greater than last year, but 11.6 per cent. less than in 1892, and the east-bound tonnage from Chicago for three weeks has been 126,206 against 219,946 last year.

But in west-bound tonnage and on southern lines the comparison is more favorable. It affects other important industries that railroads have taken only 500,000 tons of rails for renewals this year, against twice as much ordinarily required.

Wheat has declined half a cent, though western receipts have been only 1,712,908 bushels, against 3,109,833 for the same week last year, but since August 1 receipts have been a little larger than last year, and the visible supply is the largest ever known. Exports in December from both coasts have been a little larger than last year, but for the crop last year about 20,000,000 bushels smaller. The crop will reach 515 million bushels, which will leave for export, with stocks brought over, more than 200 million bushels, of which 75 million bushels have gone abroad.

The price of cotton has not changed, but the fact that receipts from plantations this monh ave beeen greater than in 1891, while stocks in sight here and abroad are larger than at the same date that year, is an obstacle to any rise.

Revision of prices for cotton has been the controlling feature since the great auction, and wide sheetings have been marked own about 10 per cent., while changes all along the line are expected. Very little has been done in woolen goods, all waiting for developments after January 1, when new duties take effect.

Low grade overcoats already opened show little change, and in dress goods one or two cases of slight advance are noted. Sales of wool this month have been 17,896,800 pounds against 13,049,197 last year, and 21,302,300 in 1892, and Ohio XX has sold at 17 cents.

The market for iron and steel is waiting, but the reduction in wages at the Edgar Thompson works, averaging 15 per cent., plainly indicates the same difficulty which is seen in other quarters, that the demand in consumption does not answer to the increase in production of pig iron. The shipments of rails for eleven months are reckoned only 700,000 tons, of which only 200,000 is for new roads. It gives some encouragement that the Bethlehem works have a contract to make armor plate for Russia, but the order for cast pipe for Japan is still in doubt. Prices have scarcely changed during the week, though Bessemer pig and billets are if anything a shade weaker.

Shipments of boots and shoes from Boston have been 640,471 tons in the past two months against 584,239 in 1892 hiherto the largest year, but the difference about prices still checks operations.

Money is still coming to this city in a steady stream, and exports of gold for the week are expected to be about $2,500,000. The dissolution of the bond syndicate, on the ground that the pending currency bill has destroyed the market for bonds, is the most important event in financial circles, and is liable to have results of some consequence. For commercial loans the demand has slightly increased, though not only as might be expected at this season.

Declared Her Will Void.

Willimantic, Conn., Dec. 29.—Judge Wheeler has declared void the will of Diantha Fitch. This deprives three churches in this city of a $5,000 a year income.

Churchill Has a Quiet Day.

London, Dec. 29.—Lord Randolph Churchill has had a quiet day and has kept his strength fairly well.

AN ARCHBISHOP PROTESTS.

American Missionaries in Armenia Need Protection, He Says.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.—A largely attended mass meeting was held in Association hall to protest against the Turkish atrocities practiced upon the Armenian Christians recently. The Rev. George Dana Boardman presided.

Archbishop Ryan, who was the principal speaker, said that it would not do for the nineteenth century to let atrocities of this kind pass unheeded. "We," he continued, "independently of our humanity, protest because American interests are there—missionaries and others, who demand our protection."

Vienna, Dec. 29.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that at the last meeting of the Turkish cabinet the ministers virtually adopted a new plan of government for the districts of Erzeroum, Van, Bitlis and Moosh.

The plan is that the four districts be joined in a single province over which a Mussulman governor, appointed by the sultan, shall rule five years.

The Mussulman would be succeeded in the governorship by christians who are not Armenians. The gendarmery would be recruited from the districts in which it would serve, and would be commanded by a general named by the sultan.

The local revenues would be retained by the province, excepting one annual contribution to the porte. The judges would be elective, and local ministries of education and public works probably would be formed.

Odessa, Dec. 29.—A southern Russian paper declares that sufficient confirmation of the American outrages has been furnished to justify the powers in demanding the disbanding and disarming of the Kurd regiments and the Hamidie cavalry. Such a request, it says, would only be tardy reparation for the negligence of the powers in permitting Turkey to moblize these regiments of incorrigible brigands, which were intended solely to scourge Armenian malcontents.

WILLIAMS BEFORE LEXOW.

The Inspector Gives Some Queer Testimony Before the Committee.

New York, Dc. 29.—Inspector Williams' examination is nearly, if not quite, closed, and to the last he was defiant in his denials of the charges of corruption which have been made against him. He did not hesitate more than once to give the lie direct to Mr. Goff. A part of the testimony which Inspector Williams gave was his declaration that William M. Fliess had paid to him about $6,000 for nothing.

He had denied under oath that he had been interested in the whiskey concern, of which Mr. Fliess is the president, but he declared that out of friendship Mr. Fliess had carried stocks for him and had paid to him what had been derived from the stock transactions.

Mr. Williams said he had never invested a dollar in speculation and had had no account with Mr. Fliess. He denied that the alleged stock transactions were intended to cover corrupt transactions.

HE WORE TOO MANY SUITS.

Evidence of the Shearman Murder Closing About Depew.

Salamanca, N. Y., Dec. 29.—It appears likely, in the light of recent developments, that the much sought Shearman-Davis murderer has been found in the person of George Depew, who first was thought to be a common tramp. These suspicious developments are the discovery that Depew wore three suits of clothes.

In the pocket of the inner suit he had a butcher knife and a handkerchief, from which traces of blood had been partly washed as with cold water. The measurements of his feet correspond with the footprints, and his general appearance with the man seen fleeing from the Shearman homestead. He has been taken to Jamestown to undergo examination.

Buffaloes Loose in Buffalo.

Buffalo, Dec. 29.—The big brown buffalo bull and his female mate that have been confined in the zoological gardens at Delaware park trampled down the trellis fence surrrounding their inclosure and escaped. They cavorted round the park meadow for a time, then struck out for Main street. They led the police a merry chase until Captain Kress, of the Twelfth precinct, cornered and lassoed them. They were led back to the park, where they were tethered with cables until a more secure pen can be built.

Made a Minister His Heir.

Baltimore, Dec. 29.—Harry A. Leendon, a noted Maryland and Pennsylvania horse thief, has died in prison. He left a will bequeathing his savings to a minister. Leendon's mode of operating was decidedly novel. He would steal a valuable horse, substitute a broken down animal and set fire to the barn. He finally stole a valuable unshod colt and left in its stead an old horse. The finding in the ashes of the animals shoes led to Leendon's arrest.

Danger of a Coke Strike.

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 29.—All hope of the fomation of a coke syndicate in the Connellsville region has been abandoned. After January 1 the rate of wages will remain as it is now instead of advancing, as was promised the workmen. Some signs of a strike are therefore visible. The movement for the formation of a syndicate was started by the leading operators and all favored it but W. J. Rainey, who refused to entertain the idea.

BURNS WAS DENOUNCED

Coal Operators Attacked His Methods Here.

The English Leader Was at the Meeting of Operators and Had Made Application for a Seat When He Was Roundly Censured and Refused Admission to the Hall.

Pittsburg, Dec. 29.—The opening session of the joint convention of the operators and miners of the Pittsburg railroad coal district was marked by several sensational utterances, in which John Burns, M. P., the great commoner of England, came in for a stirring rebuke, delivered in stentorian tones by Colonel W. P. Rend, the well-known coal operator of Chicago, and owner of several mines in the Pittsburg district.

The other feature was a plain but forcible statement of the situation in Pittsburg mining districts, as presented by John McBride, president of the united mine workers, and president-elect of the American Federation of Labor, in which he openly avowed that the conditions were worse than prior to the general strike. Mr. Chapman suggested that John Burns, who was yet in the lobby, should be invited to a seat in the convention. When a motion to this effect was made, Colonel Rend arose and said:

"Mr. Chairman, I object to the courtesies of this convention being extended to Mr. Burns, who is here for the double purpose of discussing labor matters and also of slandering and villifying American institutions.

"Mr. Burns is a stranger in America; it is, therefore, befitting that he shall observe the decencies and proprieties of the position that he occupies. These proprieties he has constantly violated by his malignant attacks upon our institutions. I would advise that Mr. Burns would return to the country from which he came and criticize the customs, manners and institutions of his own land, which he will find infinitely more deserving of his criticism and abuse than anything he can find here.

"I know it is the custom for "blarsted Britishers" to indulge in improprieties similar to those again which I protest in the case of Mr. Burns. It is about time for American manhoood to resent the offensive conduct of these men."

As Colonel Rend resumed his seat there was an unbroken silence. Mr. Burns, who stood listening all the time, moved just a little from a steadied position he had assumed at the beginning. Chairman Chapman, just a trifle confused, arose, and put the motion to seat Mr. Burns. It was carried, there being but one dissenting voice. Colonel Rend had voted "no." Not having a voice in the convention, Mr. Burns had to remain silent.

Colonel Rend again secured permission of the floor and for half an hour addressed the meeting, telling the story of the dispute between miners and operators, and the cause leading to the differences. Then followed President John McBride, with his address.

The question was left to a committee consisting of three operators, three miners and three disinterested citizens of Pittsburg. This committee will not meet inside of two weeks and in the meantime the district rate will remain 55 cents, the price adopted by the railroad coal operators' association.

Secretary McBride said the miners in this distirct made less than $1 a day, and that if the operators would not try and arrange a living rate, it was impossible for miners to strike to uphold the district rate, as they had no money to live on. The miners that worked for less than $1 a day could not support themselves, not to mind those that would be willing to go on strike for a uniform rate.

An Alleged Tripple Murder.

Robeline, Dec. 29.—According to a report received here three women were murdered in Vernon parish Christmas day. Two men got a neighbor who had money to go hunting, instructing their wives to kill and rob the neighbor's wife while they were gone. The women, who had disguised themselves as negro men, did so, but were in turn killed by a peddler.

Seward's Mansion To Go.

Washington, Dec. 29.—The gloomy old mansion in Lafayette square where the murderous assault was made upon Secretary Seward the night of President Lincoln's assassination will be torn down. It was here that James G. Blaine died, and where Key was shot by General Sickels. The building is to be replaced by a handsome opera house.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Dec. 30. Supremacy of Love the Topic.

SCRIPTURE READING.—I Cor. xii, xiii, xiv.

No argument is needed to convince one of the presence of selfishness in human nature, and that corruption, lust, hatred and malice are powerful factors in society. That purity and disinterested affection and real love can survive in the prevailing conflict seems at first sight doubtful. That they can hold their own, make headway and conquer the evil appears impossible. Yet this is the sober fact, and here lies all the ground of encouragement for mankind. Force and fraud are not the most powerful agents in earthly affairs. The visible is not the most real existence. Agnosticism is not the highest wisdom. Pessimism is not the truest philosophy. Selfishness is not the deepest happiness and perfection. The three strongest elements in operating in human affairs are faith in the unseen, hope for the yet unattained and love for that which has need. "Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, and the greatest of these is love." The wisdom of God is comprehended in some degree through a study of the material universe. Natural science has to do with the works of God. But a lifetime can be spent in the workshops of Deity without ever coming to personal acquaintance with the Master workman Himself. Spiritual insight through faith reveals a world of truth and fact impenetrable to powers of sense. No study of history or current events can give assurance that mankind will ever attain to moral excellence or any individual reach the goal of spiritual purity and perfection. Facts might seem to warrant fear of the opposite and despair of human virtue and heaven. But, in spite of all, "hope springs eternal in the human breast." "We have as an anchor of the soul a hope both sure and steadfast and entering into that which is within the veil, whither as a forerunner Jesus entered for us." More influential than either faith or hope in shaping character, companion of these two and completion of all needed powers, is Scriptural charity. The nature of Deity as wisdom and power is revealed through His works, but He is more than all such words express.

The deepest and most adorable attribute of God revealed to man is that of love. The term is undefinable in words. No language of earth expresses its nature or imparts its possession. It is known only as one becomes conscious of its presence as a personal experience. Much can be known about it by observation, but to know it one must feel the emotion as an inner movement of his own being. God knows it in Himself and displays it in the incarnation of Jesus Christ and outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Its essence is a desire to help and to bless others. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Jesus Christ came to seek and to save the lost and gave His life a ransom for the many. We are like Him not by merely doing to others as we would that they should do to us, but we must possess the mind of Christ and in spirit love our enemies, do good to them that hate us and pray for them which despitefully use us and persecute us.

The Mother Soul.

Some of the most horrible prisons are those found in certain parts of Russia. One of the worst of these was filled with unruly men and abandoned women. Harsh discipline had prevailed and was thought to be necessary. The longer it was continued the more depraved and desperate the prisoners became until the officer in charge needed to be a disciplinarian of the sternest sort. The commandant's wife was young in years and an enthusiast in the matter of reform by kindness. All her efforts, however, had no more effect on the women than the harshest measures. Walking in the prison yard one morning, her baby carried in the arms of a nurse, she became frightened as the women catching sight of them crowded around with wild gestures and excited cries. Preparing to defend her child from their violence, she was greatly astonished to find none offered any harm, but all broke into raptures, crying: "Oh, the darling! Isn't he the innocent? Let me hold him!" The vilest of them, looking into the sweet, pure face, were subdued, and tears ran down their cheeks. The promise that the one who behaved best during the week should hold the child for half an hour, had more effect in reforming them than all other previous efforts combined. Innocence was irresistible. The mother heart in the women had been awakened and went out in love to the pure and helpless infant. How unfailingly is the instinct of motherhood in woman awakened by the needs of babyhood!

Significance of the Movement.

The remarkable growth in recent years of the young people's societies in the various Christian denominations is often commented upon. No such thing has ever before been witnessed in the history of the church. Coming, as it does, at the close of the nineteenth century, it promises to powerfully affect the life of the church and world in the opening years of the second millennium of Christianity. The beginning of this century was characterized by atheistical tendencies in literature and immoral practices in society. Very few students in the schools and colleges were Christians even in profession. The prominent peculiarity of young life in our land today is its earnest pursuit of high ideals in art, literature, politics and religion. Piety has replaced apathy and open hostility.

Progress.

The growth of the League is steady and healthy. On the 1st of November last 13,500 chapters had been chartered and 3,000 junior chapters, with a total membership of 1,000,000.

No indulgence of passion destroys the spiritual nature so much as respectable selfishness.—George Macdonald.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 30 Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Looking backward.—Ps. cxlv, 1-21. (An experience meeting.)

As the children of Israel were encamped in the land of Moab, about to enter the land of Palestine, Moses pointed their minds backward as well as forward, recalling to their minds the wonderful goodness of God and impressing upon them the importance of keeping their covenant with God. This was very appropriate, because it was an important milestone in their lives. All such occasions should be used in the same way, and perhaps the most common of such occasions today is the close of the year. This is the popular period for looking backward and reviewing the past life. But many use it simply to review their own lives and to see how they may be improved or how they may profit from the experiences of the past. But there is another who should be taken into consideration, and that other is God. It is specially fitting and appropriate that upon such occasions we should recall the manifold goodness and mercy of God. This Psalm cxlv is a psalm of remembrance and praise to God and may direct us in a similar act.

1. David praises God for his fame and honor in the world (verse 1-8). "Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised, and His greatness is unsearchable. One generation shall praise Thy works to another." The name of God is honored in the world. Few men will blaspheme the name of God. The wonder is not that there are so many atheists in the world, but so few. Of all the great men of any age only a few are pronounced infidels. This is a matter of great satisfaction, and we should praise God for it.

2. David praises God for His goodness (verse 9-12). "The Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works." We can all testify to the goodness and mercy of God. As we look over the past year, although there may have been trial and hardship or even misfortune or want, still we can testify that the Lord is good. Even in the affections of God there is goodness. "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to His purpose." We should remember the goodness of God and praise Him for it.

3. David praises God for his kingdom (verses 13-17). And if David praised God for his kingdom in his day how much more should we in this day, when the kingdom of Christ has actually been set up in the world!

4. David praises God for his saving mercy (verses 18-21). Above and over all things we should praise God for His mercy shown toward us in Jesus Christ, by which we are saved.

Bible Readings.—Ex. xxxiv, 6, 7; Num. xiv, 18; Deut. iv, 7; Ps. lxxxvi, 5; xcvi, 4; c, 5; ciii, 8; cxlvii, 5; Isa. xxxviii, 18-20; Nah. i, 7; Gal. vi, 7-10; Eph. v, 16; I Thess. v, 15; I Tim. i, 17; vi, 18.

The Meaning of Tithe.

Mr. George R. Denise in the Iowa Endeavorer explains that the tithe does not mean "one-tenth of what is left after we have used up half of our income on ourselves, but one-tenth of our net business income. I myself tried giving a tenth of what I could save above all expenses, but I frequently found that there was not enough left to divide up into tenths. It was not satisfactory to me and certainly was not to the Lord. It is not enough to give one-tenth of what we do not want or of what we do not need, but let us give as Jacob gave. You remember he said, 'Of all that Thou shalt give me, O Lord, I shall surely return the tenth unto Thee.'"

Guilt and Retribution.

Disobedience to such laws is sin and iniquity and unrighteousness. The disobedient is, by the very act, ungodly and a sinner and an enemy of God and the good. He is a dangerous person, one who needs reform and regeneration, and he is guilty before God. As sin against God, disobedience deserves retribution. It should be punished because it is sin. This presents the question.—Evangelist.

Ever With Us.

Remember that vacant chairs are those that to mind and heart never can be empty. Our departed ones are those that never leave us. Those whom we can see no more with physical eyes are those from whom we are never absent. —Rabbi J. Leonard Levy.

Christian Endeavor Briefs.

A Methodist Protestant Endeavorer of a certain town in Pennsylvania, being thoroughly in earnest, recently made a gift to his society of the money he had saved by shaving himself.

A Sunday school superintendent of Birkenhead, England, testifies that he has never lacked a volunteer teacher for a class. He has only to appeal to the Christian Endeavor society, and the need is supplied.

Since the Cleveland convention one of the Cleveland Floating societies of Christian Endeavor has held 19 open air gospel services, at which they have distributed thousands of pages of tracts.

The first Christian Endeavor church to be built by the Cumberland Presbyterian Christian Endeavorers, under the direction of their denominational board, is to be located in Portland, Or.

The Hon. S. B. Capen of Boston has accepted the chairmanship of the local committee that is to have charge of the preparations for the international convention of 1895.

Seven years ago the Chicago Christian Endeavor union was founded, with 15 societies. It now numbers 380 societies, with a membership of 17,000. Its great size has made it necessary to divide it into ten divisions, the presidents of which, together with the general officers of the union, constitute the executive committee.

The Endeavorers of the Presbyterian societies of Kansas support Miss Palmer as their missionary in Japan.

Consumption.

The incessant wasting of a consumptive can only be overcome by a powerful concentrated nourishment like Scott's Emulsion. If this wasting is checked and the system is supplied with strength to combat the disease there is hope of recovery.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does more to cure Consumption than any other known remedy. It is for all Affections of Throat and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Wasting. Pamphlet free.

Trinity Church Entertainment.

Yesterday afternoon one hundred and fifty members of the infants Sunday-school class of Trinity Reformed Church participated in an enjoyable entertainment and social at the church. After prayer and concert singing by the school the following excellent programme was rendered: Recitation, Bessie Randall; piano duet, Violet Beerbower, Isabelle Edwards; recitation Beulah Rogers; piano solo, Lucy Coriell. recitation, Eva Dunavan; song by a double quartette consisting of Gertie Tier and Jennie Thorn, soloists, and a chorus composed of Violet Beerbower, Lucy Coriell, May Anthony, Eva Dunavan, Alice Mariner, Isabelle Edwards; recitation, May Wilson.

The various numbers on the programme were beautifully rendered and the young people merited the hearty applause which followed each selection.

Mrs. J. M. Tier deserves great praise for the excellent training of the children.

Adjourning to the class rooms, an hour was pleasantly spent in games and merry chat. Refreshments were served and each member of the school received a box of candy. In the evening the larger pupils were entertained by a beautiful series of stereopticon views selected by J. E. Hepburn of Richmond street. Views of England, the Continent, New Zealand and our own country were shown, and many novel and amusing mechanical pictures were introduced for the special benefit of the young people. After the lecture candy was distributed and a sociable rounded out the enjoyment of the occasion.

Warren Chapel.

Warren Chapel was filled with scholars and their friends last evening who gathered to have a good time, which they did. Around the platform was a pretty arrangement of evergreen trees in arches; between each hung a large star and in front were the words "We wish you a Merry Christmas." The programme opened with instrumental music by C. G. Davis, Lindley Hillman and Gilbert Lovell, violinists, and Mrs. Lovell pianist. This was followed with a doll drill by May Seader, Edith Squires, Florence King, Grace Stevens, Mamie and Lizzie Davenport, Jessie Stites, Rosie Rhodestein, Edith Demarest and Tillie Coddington.

Miss Wilder then gave a pleasing instrumental selection, which preceded a a recitation, "The Dreadful Mistake," by Frank Whitely.

Another selection by the quartette was enjoyed, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. McKelvey, then made a few remarks which were listened to with much interest.

"A Christmas Day" was pleasantly sang by Allie Gallaway. A very enjoyable number was the musical sketch by Willie and Uriah Welsh, Theodore Koller, Chester and Allie Gallaway, George Leeds, Frank Whitely, George Staats and George Pope. A recitation, "After Christmas", by Tillie Coddington, concluded the programme, and the usual distribution of candy and presents was made.

Pleasant Evening at Whist.

The regular bi-monthly session of the Watchung Avenue Whist Club was held last evening at the residence of L. B. Woolston on Fairview avenue. A very pleasant entertainment was afforded, during which refreshments were served and social chat enjoyed as the game progressed. Mrs. F. M. Slater was the fortunate winner of the first prize while the booby prize was captured by Mr. Woolston who was anxious that all the honors should remain on Fairview avenue. The club consists of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitenack, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Slater, Mr. and Mrs. Messerschmidt, Mr. and Mrs. John Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston.

Congregational Cheer.

Although the temperature was almost zero, it could not check the enjoyment of those that attended the Christmas entertainment of the Congregational Church last evening. The church was decorated with evergreens, and a large Christmas tree, very prettily trimmed, stood in one corner.

The entertainment commenced with an instrumental trio "Song Without Words" by Tschaikowski, acceptably rendered by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organ; Mrs. M. E. Dwight, piano; and P. Ludwig Conde, violin.

Prayer by Rev. C. L. Goodrich followed, after which a quartette, composed of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss E. A. Whiting, Stacy R. Raynolds and Robert Clark, rendered the selection "The Sweet Refrain" by Fairlamb. Arthur Robinson then sang "Jesus Once Was a Little Child". This was his first appearance before an audience, and he certainly distinguished himself. Miss Amy Emmons next gave a recitation, "Pecola". "Luther's Cradle Song" was pleasingly rendered by three little girls from the primary department, Miss Laura Baker, Miss Ethel VanZandt and Miss Ethel Lorton.

"Harry's Christmas Message" was recited by Harold Nomer in a way that called forth the applause of everyone.

The quartette next rendered another selection "Heaven's Angelic Choir", by Ashford.

"Bethlehem's Star", a recitation and song, was charmingly given by Miss Marion Dwight, Miss Mildred Day, and Herbert Gisentzer.

A recitation, "A Grenada Serenade", by Miss Katherine Dwight, was greatly enjoyed.

Another instrumental trio, "Der Freischutz", by Von Weber, concluded the programme, after which the gifts to the primary and confectionery and oranges for the older scholars were distributed. All were invited to remain for a period of social converse.

The instrumental music was very fine and was greatly enjoyed by everyone present. The children who took part in the entertainment showed that they had been well trained and took the parts assigned them very satisfactorily.

The Baptists' Christmas.

The Primary department of the First Baptist Sunday-school held their Christmas entertainment yesterday afternoon, when a programme of music and recitations was rendered, the following taking part: May Batchelor, Harry Woodland, Edna Lewis, Helen Armstrong, Violet VanWinkle, Anna Morrison, Gussie Allen, Marguerite Serrell, Jerry Manning, Ada Mershon, Maude and Myra Emmons, Nettie Weiss, Edna Oakley, Hazel Grant, Clyde Slater, Minnie Serrell, Edith Ga-Nun, Carrie Bird, Susie Woodland, Ella Serrell, Ethel King, Hattie French and Ursula Krewson. M. Stairet of New York then gave a Punch and Judy show.

"Santa Claus Is Coming" was sung by Wallace Pierce, and preceded the advent of that jolly character in the person of Frank Jones, who delighted the hearts of the little ones by presenting them with gifts.

The scholars of the First Baptist Sunday-school were entertained last evening by Mr. Stairet of New York, who gave some clever shadow pictures and delighted all with ventriloquism. The singing of Christmas carols and distribution of candy added to the enjoyment of all. Howard Case was the pianist, and was assisted by Robert Barnes with the violin.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle at L. W. Borough License Fees, $700.

Application has been made to the Somerset County Court of Common Pleas to increase the price of hotel and saloon license to $700, the same as charged in Plainfield.

The Mayor and Council have by resolution instructed Borough Counsel Reed to press the matter and he says that it is probable the Court will increase the fee. If this is done it will largely increase the revenue of the borough, which now receives only $250 for each license.

Pruning a Big Claim.

The Courts at Somerville have been occupied all this week in trying a suit brought by Architect Provost of Elizabeth for $8,000 for services as architect rendered to the late George J. Seney in building the Hotel Somerset at Bernardsville. The case is still unfinished.

The plaintiff's lawyers are Judge Gilbooly and ex-Speaker Bergen. The Seney estate is represented by Hon. A. A. Clark and Charles A. Reed of this city. The latter have already succeeded in striking out of the claim about $4,000. The trial will be continued next week.

A REMEDY OF GREAT VALUE.

In an article on proprietary remedies which appeared in a recent issue of the "St. Louis, Mo., Medical Brief," Prof. Willard H. Morse, M. D. F. B. S. Sc., of Westfield, N. J., says. "One notable instance in point of efficacy is offered by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy which has earned reputation as curative of Bright's disease and other affections of the kidneys." In concluding the article, Dr. Morse says. Manifestly therefore, treatment of the kidneys and bladder, both preventive and curative, calls primarily for the exclusion of all factors causative of functional derangements. Diseases of the kidneys demands reestablishment of normal functions, destruction of the micro organism causing the disease and repair of the ravages. These three demands are fulfilled by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—it reinstitutes and regulates the renal functions, it destroyes the causal germ and repairs the broken down tissues.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an unfailing specific for such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, biliousness, dyspepsia, kidney and liver complaints. In Bright's disease, diabetes, urinary troubles and the sickness peculiar to women, it cures where all else fails.

Church of the Redeemer.

The Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer had a delightful time last evening, when their Christmas tree was illuminated. The school assisted by the choir sang pretty carols and Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone made an interesting address to the scholars. A distribution of candy and oranges were made to all. The members of the choir received handsome sterling silver book-markers, and the rector was substantially remembered by his people in the gift of $100. This church and school are growing very rapidly and success is attending their efforts to do good.

DOWN THE CHIMNEY.

St. Nicholas Does Not Neglect the East Front Street Congregation.

The Christmas entertainment of the First Presbyterian Church was held last evening in the Sunday-school rooms. A cantata, "Mary's Stocking; or, A Swedish Christmas", entertained the audience for most of the evening, after which Santa Claus appeared, and the presents were distributed.

The exercises opened with a carol by the school "Ring Out the Bells for Christmas". Prayer by Assistant Superintendent Ladd followed, a violin solo by Wm. McKillop was very artistically rendered, and after another carol by the school, "Hark, What Mean Those Holy Voices", the cantata began.

The curtain rose on an old Swedish kitchen with a broad fire-place and chimney at the back of the room. A band of Fairies composed of Miss Belle Williams, Miss Etta Havens, Miss Margaret Abbott, Miss Gertrude Abbott, Miss Mollie Templin, Miss Flossy Martin, Miss Cora Van Dale, Miss Isabelle Lane, Miss Florence Morrison, Vincent Miner, Edwin Templin and Weeley Messersmith sang the opening chorus "Christmas Chimes." A recitation, "What Happens Elsewhere," was next given by Miss Mary Luckey in her usual excellent manner, and the scene closed with another verse of the opening chorus.

The next scene showed the mother, Miss Grace E. Overton, sitting before a table awaiting the return of her children. They soon came, and after being welcomed home by their mother, Mary and Hilma, impersonated by Miss Mildred Ulrich and Miss Beatrice Miner, sang a very pretty duet entitled "Scatter Spruce", Will Hetburn, representing John, the boy of the family, joined them and they all sat down to a supper of cookies. At the mother's suggestion a Christmas carol "Stars are Twinkling", was sung, after which the children said good night.

After the singing of "Fairies Hasten" by a hidden chorus, the next scene showed Mary alone, the rest of the family had gone to church while she was asleep. Examining her stocking that she had left the night before she found it empty. A kind neighbor, Miss Charlotte Cave, stepped in at this juncture and cheered Mary with the knowledge that the good fairies might yet appear. Distant singing attracted their attention, and they listened while a chorus, accompanied by the organ, sang "Hail! Hail! Thou Beauteous Smiling Morn".

The distant music was very beautiful, and the audience greatly appreciated it, as was shown by their hearty applause. A solo, "Will Christmas Never Come to Mary?" by Mary, concluded the scene, and the kind neighbors departed, while Mary returned to bed.

Silently the fairies glided in and deposited several baskets of presents on the edge of the platform.

The mother and her children returned from church, and Mary from her room; great was their surprise and delight at finding the numerous presents, and together they sang "See the Gifts". The fairies again appeared, and everyone united in the closing chorus "Rejoice."

There were dolls for the girls, and bagatelle boards for the boys, and a kind word from Santa Claus for everyone. George Stevens took the part of Santa Claus, and certainly made a very excellent one, his kind and jolly manner winning for him the hearts of the people.

The characters in the cantata were all well represented, Miss Overton acting her part to perfection, while the singing of the children seemed especially good.

Henry B. Lounsbury then announced that although Santa Claus does not usually appear in Sweden, he would on this occasion. Soon he was discovered at the top of the chimney, from which he kept his listeners in roars of laughter at his bright and witty remarks. He then descended, and began distributing presents among the children of the primary department.

While Santa Claus was distributing gifts to the primary department, boxes of candy and oranges were passed to the rest of the school. Superintendent Henry B. Lounsbury delighted all the teachers with copies of a Sunday-school memorandum book and calendar arranged by himself.

The committee who so successfully planned the evening's enjoyment consisted of Miss Sue Peck chairman, Miss Abbott, Miss Bittenbender, Miss Williams, Miss Ouedell, Miss Smith, Miss Dayton, Miss Lane, Charles Davis, and Augustus Searing. They certainly deserve great credit for the very successful entertainment they provided.

—Yesterday noon William Van Sickle's sleigh driven by Milford Gilles was overturned on Prospect avenue, scattering meat and provisions. The horse was caught on Park avenue, near Seventh street.

ONE WAY OF "PUBLISHING".

Water Supply Reports to be Printed in Pamphlets That Will Never Be Read.

The Common Council in deciding last night to have the publication of the water supply reports done by means of pamphlets adopted a plan that is ordinarily very successful in limiting the circulation of important public documents. The courthouses and capitols of the State and country are full of the junk of such accumulated supplies of pamphlets. There is just one way to get reports into the homes and the hands of the people, and that is through the newspapers. Five hundred pamphlets held by the City Clerk to be called for will have an actual circulation of possibly one hundred. For about the same money, or possibly less, the report could be officially published in the Plainfield daily newspapers, reaching every home in city and borough, and giving widespread circulation outside of the town. If the Common Council wants the report to get into the possession of the taxpayers, it should authorize its publication in the official papers, and then the taxpayers would get a return for their money; printing the pamphlets is a needless waste.

Exciting Runaway.

A roan mare driven by Mr. Douglass of 33 Washington avenue broke away this morning at the corner of Washington and Willow avenues, throwing out Mr. and Mrs. Douglass and their daughter.

The runaway ran to Front street, crashed into Rickert's truck, and frightened a horse attached to Smalley's sleigh. The Smalley horse jumped into Albert Hedden's hack, containing Mrs. J. W. Jackson and a nurse and child, all of whom escaped injury.

The shaft of the sleigh tore a hole in Hedden's vehicle, and the horse was injured, being pierced in the breast by the carriage spring.

Blair's mare continued down Front street to Sandford avenue, where it encountered a hack driven by Tom Stevenson, who was conveying Mrs. Leland of Sandford avenue to the North Avenue station.

The hack was badly scratched in the back, and broken glass from the window fell in a shower upon the occupant, who, though frightened, escaped injury. Continuing on her way, the mare cleared herself from the sleigh, and was stopped on North avenue by Judge Coddington, and taken to Blair's stable where she was found to be quite badly scratched. The sleigh is almost a complete wreck.

Santa Claus at Home in Grace.

A unique Christmas entertainment was held in Grace M. E. Church last evening when the scholars gave a cantata entitled "Santa Claus at Home". Those taking part were:

Girls—E Most, S Winckler, M Garey, A Conroy, E Loomis, N Valiant, M Stevens, A Van Horn, M Hoagland, E Taft, A DeMott, F Conroy, B DeMott, E Doeringer, F Voehl, C Pangborn, A Marsh, and A Morse.

Boys—R Martin, E Loomis, G Schuck, F Shepherd, H Vetterlein, C Shepherd, A Gulick, E Pearson, F Voorhees, B Schuck, J Valiant, J Carney, A Pangborn, H Voehl, A Uzinger, F Conroy, S Biker, R VanNest, S Benner.

Winnie Carroll very ably took the part of the Queen and John Steiner was the ever-welcome Santa Claus. Miss Grace Carroll as the accompanist was excellent. The distribution of presents and candy made glad the hearts of all.

TELEGRAPH TICKS.

Battalion Chief John J. Bresnan and Assistant Foreman John L. Rooney were killed by falling walls at a West 24th street fire in New York this morning. Others were injured.

Forty-one people were burned to death in Silver Lake, Ore., Christmas Eve, and 16 others terribly injured.

Ex-Senator James C. Fair died of asthma last night in San Francisco.

—The Bock license case was today adjourned in Somerville for two weeks.

—The year's death roll, crowded out of this issue, will appear in The Press Monday.

—H. M. Stockton has purchased the valuable team of sorrel cobs formerly owned by Chas. J. Fisk.

—Dr. Manning and his coachman were thrown from their sleigh on Front street this morning, narrowly escaping serious injury.

—During the past year under the direction of Street Commissioner Robert Meeker 12,345 lineal feet of sidewalk and 9,280 feet of curbing have been laid. This makes about two miles and a half of flagging and two miles of curbing.

David Weaver pleasantly entertained his fellow-workers in Woolston & Buckle's at his home on Manning avenue last evening. The painters quartette, consisting of Omer Moore, Clinton Shannon, Henry Waldron and David Weaver, rendered several musical numbers, which were heartily appreciated, and Mr. Moore favored with recitations. Bountiful refreshments were served.

Monroe Ave's Christmas.

In the Monroe Avenue Chapel a very interesting time was had last evening. The exercises opened with the singing of carols by the school, and a prayer by James McGee.

The primary department then entertained the audience. A vocal duet, "Jesus was a little child", by H. VanDorn and Lillie Cockley, was prettily rendered. After a recitation by Irene Aldrich, a solo by Aaron Brower, and a solo by Ella Rogers, the little ones marched off the platform to the delightful playing of the Washington Post. Mrs. MacDonald had them in charge.

A feature was a dialogue; scene, Santa Claus. Those taking part were: Santa Claus, L. C. Bateon; Angel, Edith Burt; Romeo, Samuel Beekman; Fairies, Miss E. Haff, Ada VanDorn and Clarence VanDorn.

Walter McGee made a few remarks of regret at the slight attendance, and after the school sang a carol all the scholars received candy and oranges. Miss Charlotte Beekman was the efficient pianist.

Hope Chapel's Santa Claus.

Hope Chapel, as usual, gave their school an enjoyable Christmas entertainment last night, which opened with an acrostic, "God Bless Our Sunday-school", by the following girls, all dressed in white: Flora Roseberry, Kate Bodine, Pollie Hall, Nellie Hall, Lillie Duckworth, Florence Weston, Minnie Hartfelder, Ella Simpson, Robina Morning, Cora and Ella Hand, Lizzie Johnson, Mamie Porter, Clara York, Emma Foster, Bessie Walls, Alice Ashworth, Maude Uzinger, Agnes Morning, Helen Higgins. Miss Hunter had full charge, and deserves much credit. Recitations were made by Josie Cook, Bessie Walls, Flora Roseberry, Mary Porter, Emma Foster, Alice Higgins, Katy Bodine, Mary Duckworth. The above was interspersed with singing by the school of Christmas carols, and a most delightful time with Santa Claus, in the personality of Fred Andrews, who made a clever Santa. Candy and presents were given by him to the scholars. Mrs. W. H. Hall received a handsome umbrella from her class.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Crescent Christmas.

Last evening in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church Mr. Haviland of New York, a clever illusionist, entertained members of the Sunday-school and their friends with his amusing feats.

A plentiful supply of ice-cream, cake and sweets was served.

—The Christmas tree and Sunday-school festival in Bethel Chapel last night was a musical and present-giving delight to all. The Silver Leaf Quartette ably entertained.

—While returning from Dunellen last evening, the sleigh containing Wilson F Fulper, his wife, daughter and Gerry Kelly, broke down, and they were obliged to continue homeward on foot.

—The city would save money by having the night policemen make faithful record of street lamps out of service. The number unlighted nights makes a total of many hours each month, and the city is entitled to reduction in its electric-light bill for the service not rendered.

—Yesterday afternoon before Judge Newcorn the jury returned a verdict of $32.50 damages in the action of tort brought by Mrs. Lizzie Zimmer against Wm. J. Pierson and his wife Catherine Pierson for maliciously causing her discharge from the employ of the International Fur Co.

—Jerusalem Lodge, Jerusalem Chapter, Anchor Lodge and Trinity Commandery, have united in renting new and elegant lodge rooms on the fifth floor of the Babcock building. They move in April 1. The rooms are among the finest in the State, embracing lodge room, reception, parlor, smoking, banquet rooms, armory and a well appointed kitchen.

AID IS NEEDED AT ONCE

Nebraska Farmers Are in Desperate Straits.

The Board of Home Missions Has Investigated Their Condition and Makes a Report Showing That Food and Fuel Is Nearly Exhausted—Starvation Threatens.

Boston, Dec. 29.—The Congregational Home Mission society, a national organization, is in receipt of special correspondence from Nebraska, confirmatory of the published dispatches that have received editorial comment in many papers, relating to destitution in that state. The society aids many churches in Nebraska and has done so during this entire history of the state, beginning at Omaha. It aids many churches at the present time in Perkins county, among them the church at Grant, which is on the railroad. The pastor of this church says:

"This is the second year of extreme drought and almost total crop failure in this county. All lines of business are extremely depressed and it is almost impossible to raise money on the field, as ther will be destitution among the people of the county during the coming winter."

The Rev. H. Bross, of Lincoln, superintendent of Congregational church work for Nebraska, writes as follows:

"I see no other way but for us to do our part of this relief work. Many of our people there are needy and our pastors are willing to undertake the work of distributing, so we shall try to keep it going."

With reference to the effect of this condition of things upon the church work in that state, Mr. Bross says:

"The difficulty which has been found in so many of the churches to raise money on their pastor's salary on account of the crop failure has made such largely increased appropriations necessary to carry forwad the work as it was planned one year ago, that the board has seen no possible way for the present year but to combine a number of small churches under one pastor.

"There are fields that in ordinary times would become self-supporting the coming year, but with the utter loss of crops they are heavily in debt to their pastor and must close their houses of worship and give up unless extra aid can be granted.

"The inability this year on the part of the churches to raise their portion of the minister's salary has resulted, in several cases, in pastors trying to get through the year on a beggarly sum rather than leave their flocks or make a piteous plea to the ome Missionary society for increased aid.

Pastors are economizing in every way in order to get through the year. The heroism of faith and sacrifice may carry a family through a single year, but it is utterly out of the question that this condition of things should continue. Some of our churches are settling with their pastors by giving them their notes due in one or two years and thus mortgaging the future to meet, in some way, the exigency of the present."

HE WAS IN JAIL 34 YEARS.

Curious Criminal Record of the Oldest Prisoner in America.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Daniel Finley, who murdered his wife in the Seventh ward of New York city thirty-four years ago and was sentenced to life imprisonment in Sing Sing, will be a free man on New Year's day.

He has served the equivalent of fifty-seven years, minus time allowance for good behavior. Finley is now 86 years old, and has not long to live. His relatives interested Assemblyman Dinkelspell in his case and the latter secured for him a full pardon from Governor Flower. Finley is said to be the oldest prisoner both in years and length of service in the United States.

Suicide of a Music Teacher.

Boston, Dec. 29.—Henry C. Rice, a young music teacher, who recently came from St. Louis, and who has been living at St. Botolph hall, on St. Botolph street, killed himself by shooting himself through the head. The cause of the young man's act is unknown. His business has not been very brisk, however, and this may have caused him to become despondent.

Panama's Ports Will Close.

Colon, Dec. 29.—Panama and Colon will on the first of January next cease to be free ports. A decree has been issued ordering that on and after that date a duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem be collected on all imports. Protests against this action have been made by the Panama Canal company and the Panama Railroad company.

Shot and Killed His Father.

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 29.—W. W. Coleman, a well-known merchant of Baldwin, was shot and killed by his son Otis, a youth of 18 years. The elder Coleman began to abuse his wife, and when about to beat her, the son grabbed a double-barreled shot-gun sent a full carge of buckshot into his breast at close range.

Died from Hydrophobia.

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 29.—W. H. Lindsay, an aged citizen of Bedford, has died from hydrophobia. About six months ago a rabid dog in the neighborhood of Clay's crossing bit several horses and cattle, and all of the animals were taken with hydrophobia and had to be killed. The dog was owned by Lindsay, who had a wheelwright shop at Clay's crossing and it bit him before it was killed.

Corruption in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—The civil federation has decided to appeal to the Illinois legislature to send a committee to Chicago empowered to probe into every public office about which there has been any question of crookedness.

Three Cottages Burned.

Lake Pleasant, Mass., Dec. 29.—Fire starting from a defective chimney burned three cottages here. The loss is about $2,000.

Left for Halifax.

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—Lady Thompson and family left for Halifax.

POPULISTS IN SESSION.

Meeting of the Leaders and Executive Committee.

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—Twenty-five members of the people's party national executive committee and 270 party leaders met in conference in the assembly room of the Lindell hotel under Chairman Taubeneck, of Illinois. Less than a quorum was present and the committee surrendered the room to a conference of the 270 leaders, who chose General J. B. Weaver, of Iowa, as chairman.

The conference adopted a rule that their mission was only an advisory one and that all resolutions acted on by them should be submitted to the national committee. President Boyd and a committee from the Merchant's exchange, invited the visitors to hold their next national convention in this city. Action on this will be had in committee.

The national committee still lacking a quorum met with the conference. It was decided that a call of states was the best means of geting an exchange of views. This early developed the fact that the Omaha platform without change would be indorsed. Manning, of Alabama, retold the Kolb-Oates contest and denounced democrats for again wielding the whip and shackles of old time slavery.

FAVORS THE CHANGE.

Mr. Sperry Explains His Views on the Currency Question.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 29.—Congressman Sperry, of Connecticut, member of the house committee on banking and currency, will return to Washington to-morrow to attend to important matters before the committee.

In an interview he said, regarding the financial situation: "If the present congress should pass an act refunding the greenbacks and treasury notes, it would go a long way toward restoring confidence in the public credit, and would undoubtedly have an immediate and beneficial effect.

"The government now receives its entire dues in silver and paper money, and it is an open question upon which men of good judgment differ as to whether or (if the greenbacks and treasury notes were funded) the government would then receive in its ordinary business sufficient gold to meet its gold obligations."

BRENNAN'S GHASTLY FIND.

Returning Home He Discovered His Wife and Sister Dead.

Norwich, Conn., Dec. 29.—Michael Brennan, a farmer living in the town of Sprague, returned from Baltic to find his wife and sister both dead in an upper room.

The bed was partially burned and Mrs. Brennan's hands and arms were also severely burned. It is thought Miss Mary Brennan, aged 70, while smoking in bed, set the clothes on fire.

She called Mrs. Michael Brennan, who was 60 years of age, and partially blind, to help put out the fire. On entering the room Mrs. Brennan closed the door, the room filled with the dense smoke, and although the women succeeded in extinguishing the fire, they were both suffocated.

SLINGERLAND'S BOOM.

Candidate for Superintendent of Public Buildings at Albany.

Albany, Dec. 29.—General William H. Slingerland is said by politicians here to be the most prominent candidate for the office of superintendent of state public buildings.

Mr. Slingerland is a civil engineer of high repute and is also an experienced architect, and it is urged that this combination of practical ability makes him an unusually strong man.

The necessity is urged of placing a man of exceptional character in charge of the new capitol and Mr. Slingerland is not only unobjectionable to the different factions of the republican party, but is highly acceptable to the reform element.

After the Western Appraisers.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Acting under orders from Secretary Carlisle, Assistant Appraiser William McKinney, of New York, held a conference with the importers here, which marks the beginning of a rigid examination of appraisers' offices of several important western cities. Tea importers of Chicago and New York have for some time complained loudly of the offices in question.

Serious Boiler Explosion.

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 29.—The boiler in Maynard's lumber mill exploded with terrific force, wrecking the building and burying the engineer, Creighton Billings, in the debris. Billings was rescued and brought to the hospital seriously injured.

Dr. Forbes' Check Not Stolen.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 29.—The check for $8,000 reported stolen with the letters in the mail bag for Hartford in the New Haven railroad station, was not stolen. It came here by another mail and was delivered to Rev. C. H. Forbes, to whom addressed.

His Body in the Snow.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 29.—The body of Cristopher Benson, a track walker on the Elmira, Cortland and Northern road, was found buried in the snow. It is supposed he was struck by a passenger train.

France Building Gunboats.

Paris, Dec. 29.—The French government in constructing with all possible activity twelve gunboats and forty-six barges, which will be sent in sections to Madagascar for the use of the French expedition.

Blown into the River.

Huron, Pa., Dec. 29.—While crossing the Lake Shore bridge here during the big storm Gilbert Jamieson was blown into the river. The body has not been recovered.

Justice Divver Exonerated.

New York, Dec. 29.—The trial for malfeasance in office of Police Justice Divver ended here with the acquittal of the accused.

Rev. Dr. Wright Dead.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Rev. Henry Wright, one of the oldest preachers in the Troy conference, died suddenly at his home in Clifton Park

HAVE SAILED FOR JAPAN

China's Peace Envoy Leaves To Begin His Work.

He Left Tientsin for Tokio Where He Will Open Negotiations and Wait for ex-Secretary Foster—War Correspondent de Guerville Denies the Massacre at Port Arthur.

Shanghai, Dec. 29.—Peace Commissioner Chang-Yin-Huan, president of the board of revenue and formerly minister at Washington, has left Tientsin for Che Foo, and is expected here on January 6, when he will join Peace Commissioner Shao-Yao-Lien and go to Tokio.

Boston, Dec. 29.—B. Kobayashi and T. Watanabe are at the Thorndyke hotel. Mr. Watanabe in conversation said, speaking of the conflict between Japan and China, that the war feeling pervades the country people as strongly as it does the people of Tokio.

"Paris is France," said Mr. Watanabe, "but Tokio is not Japan. The war feeling throughout the nation is not the reflex of Tokio sentiments; it is an inherent patriotic impulse that sways all classes—nobles, merchants, artisans, farmers and even coolies throughout the entire empire.

"On the war question there are no political parties. Volunteers to the number of 50,000 were anxious to join the army, but only the regulars have been used so far. Chinese arrogance has been suffered so long that every Japanese is eager to wipe out remembrance of insult.

"You Americans can hardly appreciate the extent of the zeal manifested. Everybody gives liberally of whatever property he owns, provisions, clothing, money.

"One merchant named Mmsuka, in the province of Isle, gave enough to estblish a new arsenal. The government now has on hand munitions of war sufficient to supply 200,000 men for five years.

"The sentiments is strong that there can be no peace till Pekin falls, and if necessary Japan stands ready to fight England or Russia besides."

Washington, Dec. 29.—Ex-Secretary John W. Foster, who is about to start for the east to assist the Chinese peace commissioners in the negotiations of terms of peace with Japan, called at the state department and had an interview with Secretary Gresham respecting his mission. Mr. Foster has lately returned from a trip around the world, and spent considerable time in China. He is very well acquainted with one of the Chinese peace commissioners.

New York, Dec. 29.—Mr. A. B. C. Guerville, war correspondent for Frank Leslie's Weekly, denies the stories of the massacre of Chinese at Port Arthur. He says:

"The day before we left Kinchin the population confessed that two Japanese spies had been burned to death in that city, after passing through the most terrible tortures. It was under the impression made by this dreadful tale that we began our march on Port Arthur.

"On the 19th, about ten miles from this place, the whole army passed in front of a ghastly row of the remains of some of their comrades, wounded on the 18th and killed by the Chinese. Killed! No words could express in what manner, and no paper would allow me to publish the frightful mutilations made upon these bodies. Heads, hands and feet had been chopped off; the stomachs ripped open, and other parts cut out.

"When the Japanese took the city by assault a number of the inhabitants who had not escaped, together with the soldiers, defended the streets. They were armed with German repeating rifles and used express cartridges with explosive bullets—a thing no civilized nation would ever do.

"The wounds made by these were terrific, horrible and the fury of the Japanese soldiers knew no limit. They charged through the city and killed many.

Bishop Felcher Hurst President.

Washington, Dec. 29.—The session of the American Society of Church History has ended. Bishop Felcher Hurst was re-elected president. Several vice-presidents were elected and many interesting papers read, after which Rev. Samuel Macauley Jackson, of New York, secretary of the society, spoke of the high and interesting character of church literature during the past year. The time and place for the next session will be left to the decision of the executive council to be determined in future.

Found Dead in a Room.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—A man supposed to be Frank E. Darrow, was found dead in a hotel on Randolph street. It is thought the man was suffering from quick consumption. He had letters on his person addressed to him at the Soldiers' home, Washington, Indianapolis and Decatur, Ill.

Anarchist Mowbray Arrested.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.—Charles W. Mowbray, the English anarchist, became too inflammatory in his remarks in addressing a meeting here and the police arrested him on the charge of using incendiary language and inciting to riot. Mowbray was locked up.

Radcliffe Mills Burned.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 29.—A disastrous fire at Long Hill, six miles from this city, destroyed Ratcliffe mills on the Pequonnock river. The mills were controlled by an old estblished concern that manufactured woolen goods.

Denounced the Arbitrators.

Massillon, O., Dec. 29.—The miners of this district adopted resolutions denouncing the finding of the arbitration board to settle wages in this district as an outrage and not in accordance with the evidence.

Gin Kills a Child.

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 29.—A 4-year-old son of Henry Boule, a weaver, employed at the Wamsutta mills, died from the effects of gin.

Dr. Penniman Was Installed.

"There you go again, leading me out into deeper and darker water, but I suppose I must accept your terms. Who is that out there that keeps gazing in here?"

"Some fellow desperately gone on you. Shall I go out and knock him down?"

"Goodness, no; he is doing no particular harm. But I wish he would go away."

"You don't like admirers, do you?"

"The right sort of admirers, yes; but to be admired by ignorance is a cheap victory."

In Polly's eyes was the light of strong admiration as she looked at the girl. "You surprise me nearly every day," she said. "I did not expect to find so bright a creature in this dingy place."

"Oh," Nell laughed, "you think I am bright just because the place is dingy. It doesn't take much of a butterfly to look pretty when it settles in the mud."

Polly was silent, meditative; and when she spoke again there was in her voice a new tone, a tremulous sadness. "I am one of the shrewd children of the world," she said, "and you are a clover-scented child of the meadow, but, simple as you are, yours is a wisdom that I could never reach. There's that idle fellow leaning on the fence. Shall I drive him away?"

"I wish you would tell him that he is annoying me. No, it might hurt his feelings."

This made Polly laugh so loudly that the fellow, thinking that the women were making fun of him, strode away. "One to contemplate your tenderness," said the woman of the world, "would scarcely think that you had ever turned loose a double-barrel shotgun amid a lot of men."

"Oh, I did that for you, and if I had thought that the fellow out there was annoying you, I should have driven him away long ago."

"My dear, I might take that as a rebuke," Polly replied, "but I won't," she quickly added.

Nell got up, brushing the sunbeams out of her eyes, and walked about the room. "I feel so strange to-day," she said. "Something must surely be going to happen. I wish that editor would come over here and beg you to take his paper for another year."

"Perhaps he couldn't induce me to take it."

"Oh, but you are not thinking of going with the circus again, are you?"

"You shall soon see what I intend to do."

"But don't do anything to separate us." Polly had begun to read a newspaper. "Did you hear what I said? Now what can be in that paper to interest you so?"

"I was just reading about a peculiar organization that I happen to know something about. Some time ago an old man, a crank, died in Chicago, having willed his money to a club, or rather to several trustees who were to form such a club as he should name. It was to be called the Test club and was to have but thirty members. When a candidate should apply for membership, a test was to be imposed upon him, and, if he carried it out faithfully, he was to be admitted as a member and thereafter share in the dividends arising from certain investments; and as the dividends were large there was a rush for membership. And I see by this article that a woman demands the right to apply for membership, vowing that she is willing to undergo any test that may be imposed upon her."

"What nonsense," was the girl's comment. "A woman ought to know that so soon as she gets out of her real sphere she is robbed of her force, the power that she should wield over men."

"I don't know much about the power that women wield," Polly replied, "but I don't think that a woman would make a good ringmaster."

"A ringmaster, Polly? What do you mean?"

"Why, a ringmaster in a circus."

"Oh. But why should you so frequently refer to the circus? I just believe that you intend to run away and leave us."

"I think not. By the way, what time does the stage come in?"

"The first one comes at a little after eleven. Why do you want to know?"

"Oh, I just happened to think about it."

"But why didn't you happen to think about it before?"

"And for that matter," Polly quickly replied, "why don't we happen to think about everything before?"

They laughed at each other, and Nell, seizing her friend, pretended that she was going to put her out of the house, but Polly, taking hold of her arms, gave her an easy upward swing and stood her on a chair. "Gracious alive," Nell cried, springing down; "how strong you are. Did riding a horse in a circus make you so muscular?"

"Perhaps riding a horse was not all I did. I might have handled cannon balls."

"I should think you did. Oh!" she suddenly exclaimed, looking through the window: "yonder come those three strange men."

Polly arose and glancing at the clock said: "I am going to my room, and you must entertain them until I come down. I won't be long."

"But let me tell them that you don't wish to see them. They will persuade you to go away with them."

"No; tell them that I shall be down in a few moments."

She hastened upstairs. The men came to the door. "May we come in?" one of them asked.

She invited them in with a certain stiffness of manner, and when they had sat down one of them asked: "Where's Polly?"

"Miss Lopp has gone to her room. She will be down soon. Do you wish to see her on very important business?"

"Well, rather."

"But if you have any word for her why can't I take it?"

"Oh, I guess we'd better see her."

"I hope you won't persuade her to go away."

"Ah, you have become friends, I take it."

"Yes, devoted friends."

"Nice girl," said the man. "A little coarse, but—"

"She is not coarse, sir."

"No? All right, then. I thought she was. Don't know very much about women myself, but I thought she was a little coarse."

"I should think, sir, that you would strive to be more of a gentleman than to call her coarse. She is the noblest and bravest creature in the world."

"That so? Never saw her tried. Is that her stamping around upstairs?"

Nell made no answer, and they sat in silence. After awhile they heard Polly coming down the stairs. The stair door opened and out stepped—a man. Nell uttered a sharp cry and covered her face with her hands. The man approached her, and bending over her said: "I was a candidate for admission into that club and the test was that I should be a woman for one year."

"Oh!" she sobbed, "and I have told you things that I should not have told anyone."

"Yes," he replied, still bending over her; "and you have shown me the purest mind and the noblest heart that man has ever found." He leaned further over and whispered to her, and the face that she turned up to his was radiant with a confused happiness. Just at this moment old Aimes stalked in. "Where's Polly?" he asked. "Why, what's the meaning of all this? Hah? You don't mean—"

"I have been Polly," a man said, bowing to him; "but now I am George Hadley, and this daughter of yours, the sweetest woman that lives, is to be my wife."

"A man, hah? A man from fust to last? Well, say, now young feller, I knowed it all the time, and I was jest waitin' to see how long you could keep it up. I've been mayor of this town too long to be fooled, I tell you, hah?"

THE END.

A TRICK EXPOSED.

How Life Was Put Into a Dead Man for a Purpose.

One of Daniel O'Connell's earliest displays of acuteness happened shortly after he was called to the bar. In an intricate case, where he had been made junior counsel more as a compliment to the family than from any other cause, the question was that of the validity of a will. The instrument was drawn up in proper form, and the witnesses swore that it had been legally executed.

One of them, an old servant, was very loquacious, and O'Connell, in examining him, allowed him to talk on, hoping he would say too much. The man had already sworn that he saw the deceased sign the will.

"Yes," he continued, "I saw him sign it, and sure there was life in him at the time."

This expression was repeated so frequently that O'Connell was led to believe that it had some peculiar meaning. He fixed his eyes upon the old man and said, gravely:

"You have taken a solemn oath, before God and man, to speak the truth and the whole truth. The eye of God is upon you. The eyes of your neighbors are fixed upon you also. Answer me, by the virtue of that sacred and solemn oath which has passed your lips, was the testator alive when he signed the will?"

The witness was struck by this solemn manner of address. His lips quivered, his limbs trembled, and he faltered out the reply:

"There was life in him!"

The question was repeated in a yet more impressive manner. Again he trembled and stammered forth his stock phrase.

Finally, by dint of clever leading and suggestion, O'Connell drew from him the fact that a pen had been placed in the dead man's hand, and the legatee himself had guided it and traced the signature. But to meet the exigency of legal questioning, a living fly had been placed in the dead man's mouth. Thus was "life in him" at the time.—Youth's Companion.

EVENTS OF THE YEAR

BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE MEMORABLE ANNALS OF 1894.

Work of the Devouring Element—Cyclones and Earthquakes—The Personal, Sporting and Miscellaneous Record—An Index of the Past Year's History.

The year 1894 is made memorable at home by the enactment of a tariff and income tax law; the great Pullman boycott and railroad strike, with their accompanying tumult and mob violence; the Samoan imbroglio, the Bluefields incident and the new Chinese-American treaty. The leading events abroad were the great Yellow war, which has raised grave problems as yet unsettled; the death of the czar and the interference with British interests by the French in Africa. There has been no great epidemic, and while the king of terrors and terror of kings is never idle the death roll is not unusually large. The white wings of peace have been spread over our own country, and the discussions and events in the realms of finance, industry and labor will serve to hasten a solution of these problems:

BULLY BACHELORS.

THEY JUST CAN'T LOSE WHEN IT COMES TO BOWLING.

Tried Hard to Throw the Game Saturday Night So That There Would Be a Series of Three, But the Married Men Could n't Be Coaxed to Win.

There was the usual happy assembly at the Park Club Saturday evening to witness the second game between the Bachelors and Benedicks. Notwithstanding the cold, the women were out in full force, and assisted throughout the game by their hearty applause. Two familiar names were missed on the score-board, and two familiar faces were absent from the bowlers. Both sides were equal sufferers.

S. A. Hegeman, the genial captain of the Benedicks at their former contests, was confined to his house with a cold, which, though not sufficiently severe to cause any alarm, prevented its possessor from leading his confreres to possible victory on the alleys.

The Bachelors suffered in like manner by the absence of Geo. C. Worth, whose score of 167, the highest made by the Bachelors during the game of Dec. 22, was such an important factor in the victory of the Bachelors on that occasion.

Saturday's game was replete with interesting features, the star bowling of Van Buren for the Bachelors bringing him a shower of applause each time he stepped to the alley.

Great was the amusement and hearty and long-continued the laughter as a select chorus rendered "Down on the Farm", "Sweet Marie", and other catchy songs at frequent intervals during the progress of the game.

In the third frame the score was 474—393 in favor of the Bachelors, but in the next frame the Benedicks put on their fighting clothes and steadily mowed down the lead, not, however, quite enough to lead at the wire, though it was neck and neck down the homestretch. At this point, when every pin was important, the Garrison finish of Van Buren, above mentioned, brought forth round after round of well merited applause, resulting almost in an ovation to the skilful bowler.

After the excitement had subsided, music and dancing in the assembly hall, pool and billiards in the spacious room adjoining the alleys, and social chat in cozy nooks, rounded out the evening's pleasure, and it was late when the happy party dispersed.

The next game in the league series is called for Friday evening, Jan. 4, at the Elizabeth A. C. alleys in Elizabeth, and the home team will try conclusions with the Columbia Club of Hoboken Jan. 10 on the Park alleys.

Saturday evening's score:

BACHELORS.		BENEDICKS.

Proved an Alibi.

Saturday evening at 7:30 a hearing took place before Justice Mosher in the case of Chas. W. Uirick against Henry Frisbie.

Frisbie was charged with selling a horse and wagon which he had borrowed from Uirick. Frisbie's evidence proved to the satisfaction of the judge that the horse was taken from the stable without Frisbie's knowledge or consent, and the case was dismissed. Walter L. Hetfield appeared for the defendant.

There is much rejoicing among Frisbie's brethren over his having been able, as he puts it, "to prove an albino".

Business Misfortune.

D. M. Gardner, baker, of 41 Somerset street, has turned over his business to his landlord, Alexander Thorn, to satisfy a chattel mortgage. The failure of Mr. Gardner will be received with sincere personal sympathy by his many friends in Plainfield. He has worked hard and conscientiously to make his business a success, but since May he has lost $1,000. He announces his intention of paying his creditors dollar for dollar as soon as he can get work.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. ATTACKED BY NEGROES.

Charles Hastly Has a Thrilling Night Encounter.

ASSAULTED IN A LONELY SPOT.

As He Was Going Home from Work, Passing the Junction of Brook and Westervelt Avenues, He Was Attacked by Two Powerful Men, and Left Lying Insensible in a Snow-Storm.

A bold assault has just come to light.

It was committed last Wednesday evening about 6, upon Charles Hastly of 52 Brook avenue, who was returning to his home from his work in Edward Love's wall-paper store, corner of Watchung and North avenues, where he is employed in the block-cutting department.

He walked up Front street as far as Elm, and then went down Elm as far as Brook avenue. As he was crossing Westervelt avenue on Brook avenue, he was startled by a noise, and on looking around had time to see two large burly negroes in the act of leaping upon him.

One jumped in front of him, and clutched his throat, while the other attacked him from the rear.

They struck him several times, rendering him unconscious.

It was snowing hard at the time, and nobody was passing in that neighborhood.

Mr. Hastly was left lying insensible on the ground, and the negroes escaped.

It was some time before he regained consciousness, and then it was with difficulty that he reached his home, which is but a short distance from where the assault occurred.

On reaching home, he told his wife of his experience, and she called Mr. Whalen, their nextdoor neighbor, who with his family went in and gave assistance.

One of Hastly's eyes was badly bruised and swollen, there was a bad mark on his face, and he felt sore and lame about the body.

On searching his clothes, he missed nothing, though he had considerable money and a valuable gold watch.

Every since the assault he has been confined to the house.

As it was very dark at the time of the assault, Mr. Hastly does not believe he could recognize his assailants

Broke the Christmas Toys.

Gilbert Thompson, a Race street Negro, was arrested by Chief Pangborn Saturday for the third time this year.

Last Friday night he attended Grace M. E. Sunday-school entertainment, where his 11-year-old sister attends. After their return home he became ugly and broke her toys, gifts which she received at the church.

The Chief, who was sent for, arrested him. Justice Crosley placed him under $150 bonds, for the action of the Grand Jury, and Thompson was taken to Somerville.

Thompson has a bootblack stand at Hui's barber shop on East Front street.

Delight for Housekeepers.

The annual sale of housekeeping linens at B. Altman & Co's is an event of much pleasure and profit to the women of the metropolis and suburbs. This firm has a reputation for reliability that marks it as a standard of honest dealing, and the special sale which begins Wednesday will attract a throng of buyers who want to supply themselves with the best in woven whiteness for bed, bathroom, or table. Linen made by the leading houses will be offered at sacrifice prices, and the great store at 18th and 19th streets and Sixth avenue is sure to be the centre of trade activity from Wednesday on.

Judge Coddington's Report Was Misread.

City Judge Wm. A. Coddington tells The Press that his annual report was misread Friday night. The item objected to was for stove and pipe for same, damper, zinc, and other essentials, and not for stovepipe as read. The outfit for which he paid $35 is worth $50 as it stands. He further adds that in paying court expenses from the amount of fines received he has merely followed the custom that has hitherto prevailed, and in fitting up the city court room he had the authority and sanction of the proper committee.

Glee Club Success.

The concert given by the Brown University Glee Mandolin and Banjo Clubs in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Saturday was one of the most enjoyable musical events that a Plainfield audience has listened to this season. The audience was large and appreciative. Yesterday the Glee Club assisted at the services in the church.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds a Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WORK OF THE GYMNASIUM.

Physical Director MacPhie Writes on Calisthenics.

All must work, all must rest, and work, and rest must be supplemented by healthy recreation. For recreation is the great relief from the wear and tear of life—the oil as it were that lubricates the machinery, prevents friction and makes the wheels run more smoothly. And not only so but it renovates the exhausted energies and fits them to resume their work in the most appropriate way and with the least expenditure of time.

It may either consist in variety of employment, amusement, sports and the like, but of whatever description, its essential function, so to speak, is to provide a frequent and appropriate change or organic activity.

Does it pay to have a clear head, a large breathing capacity, a vigorous body and a good sound night's rest? We all answer very readily, yes. If we have a habit at all let it be of taking exercise regularly, without depending on feeling, as sometimes we feel like taking too much at other times not enough and still others not any.

Constant health and strength will follow as naturally as daylight follows darkness, if we exercise every day we eat, work or study.

The dumb bell drill as performed in the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium is, I believe, the most perfect arrangement of calisthenics which has yet been devised. It makes an equal distribution of action of all parts of the body. No undue exertion is put upon any special part and unnecessary fatigue is avoided. Rest is judicially accomplished by change of action, but there is no movement inserted merely for its negative value as relief, but each exercise has its positive use. Especial attention is called to the sequence of the exercises. They are at first gentle and easy, gradually becoming more vigorous and grow quite so toward the end. No sudden or violent demand is made upon the heart or lungs. First there is brisk action of the extremities which increases circulation.

The "oxygen hunger" thus created is satisfied by the breathing exercises which come next in order.

The whole calisthenic drill with dumb bells, bar bells and Indian clubs, is well contrived to correct the multiplicity of deficiencies and malformations which are well nigh general among members when they first come to the gymnasium.

"Drooping heads, cramped chests, round shoulders and weak backs" are common defects we have to deal with. These malformations are usually the results of unsymmetrical muscular development. When we find shoulders have gone forward, we prescribe exercise to strengthen the muscles, which will put them back where they belong.

"Stretching exercises" come in as an important part of the drill. The tendency of a muscle developed by hard contracting exercise is to grow shorter; at the same time it increased in thickness and firmness. Stretch work elongates anterior muscles and renders the thorax more flexible to the influence which is brought to bear upon it. D. A. MACPHIE.

BLAZE IN THE KITCHEN.

Arthur P. Miller Saves Himself from Burning Out.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miller, living on West Third street, came near being burned out of their home yesterday noon. Mrs. Miller left a few clothes near the kitchen stove to dry, while she went upstairs to attend to some household duties. Soon afterwards she noticed the smell of smoke, and going to the kitchen found the clothes in a blaze.

She called her husband, being very much frightened, and by the time he arrived the clothes were burning rapidly. A curtain hanging near was consumed, and in his attempt to throw the burning clothes outdoors Mr. Miller almost upset a kerosene lamp into the blaze.

The mantel near the stove was considerably charred, before Mr. Miller subdued the fire.

Dr. Lighthill's Removal.

During his residence in this city Dr. Lighthil has made a host of grateful friends by his cures of difficult and obstinate cases, and his home on Crescent avenue is constantly visited by sufferers in search of relief. The skilful physician finds his list of patients constantly increasing, and the number of cures correspondingly grows. Dr. Lighthil has now removed to 132 Crescent avenue, a few doors west of his former location. He may be consulted daily for all cases of disease.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WINTER SURF BATHING.

Capt. Baker Finds Pleasure and Health in His Plunges into the Icy Breakers.

All Plainfielders who have been to Asbury Park, and their name is legion, have noted the rugged form of Captain Abram Baker, father of Vincent W. Baker of this city, and have heard that he bathes in the ocean the year round. The all-the-year story is an exaggeration, but the wonderful extent of the Captain's bathing season has attracted the attention of the Philadelphia Press, which reports as follows:

At Asbury Park there are several cold-water bathers. The most persistent is Capt. Abram Baker, a Fourth Avenue cottager. Last week, when the temperature was down to 42 degrees and the temperature of the ocean was 40 degrees, the captain, rigged out in the bathing-suit he wears during the Summer, emerged from his bath-house on the shore front, ran down to the strand, went into the surf, took a header, swam out for twenty-five yards, came to land again, and, shaking the nearly freezing water from his hair and beard, hurried to his bath-house for a vigorous rub down.

When he reappeared, dressed for the street, but without an overcoat, his face was aglow with a color like a rose. The only persons who shivered and shook and seemed supremely miserable were the spectators under their overcoats, and not the intrepid captain.

Capt. Baker has enjoyed his Winter ocean baths for nine years. He says: "I commence to bathe in the ocean on the 1st of April of each year, and generally keep it up until the 1st of January, or the middle of the same month. I would continue it longer, but 'Founder' Bradley's bath-houses, being the same that are used in the Summer, are rather cool. From the 1st of April to the 1st of July," he continued, "I take a bath daily; in July, August and September I bathe twice a day, but remain in the ocean not more than ten minutes.

"During October and November I bathe in the sea once a day during December and January once or twice a week, according to the weather. I have been nine years bathing in this manner. I am now nearly sixty-nine years of age, and I do not doubt if I had commenced thirty years ago I could bathe all the year. I wear two flannel shirts in Summer and Winter and very rarely wear an overcoat."

Capt. Baker last Winter enjoyed a dip in the ocean when the water was at the freezing point and the air eighteen degrees. That these winter baths are beneficial is evidenced by the fact that he has not been confined to his bed by illness in over twenty years. His rugged constitution is the result, he claims, of the "glorious climate" of California, he having journeyed westward in '49, when the gold fever was epidemic.

ON TO SPRINGFIELD.

Lively Sleighing Party in Capt. Hand's Big Box on Runners.

Twenty-five young people of Plainfield crowded into Capt. Hand's capacious box sleigh Saturday night for a strawride.

A bugle and numerous tin horns enlivened the journey. Despite the clouds and the cold, the young people thoroughly enjoyed their ride on the county roads to Springfield and return. The party was chaperoned by Miss Hallie VanDeventer and Miss Long.

The merry party consisted of Miss Eleanor F Van Deventer, Miss Grace E Overton, Miss Edith L. Burt, Miss Florence R Beale, Miss Lucie P Davis, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn, Miss Mary Luckey, Miss Elizabeth Allis, Everett Peck, Wilbur F Cornwell, Henry W Brower, Philip Suffern, J Vincent Rittenhouse, Walter B Rittenhouse, Charles B Morse, Henry B Drake, George A Horne, Nathan Lane, Jr., Raymond A McGee, Robert Douglass, Alvah Davis, Ernest Suffren, and Sydney B Titsworth.

Drew Students at Work.

Interesting revival meetings were held in the First M. E. Church yesterday at which time Messrs. Raymond, Harper and Andrews of Drew Theological Seminary were present and assisted by their singing. Owing to the absence of one of the quartette, L. S. Bond filled the vacancy.

In the evening Mr. Raymond made an excellent address, as did also Mr. Andrews. The services will be continued every evening this week, excepting tomorrow evening.

ROSES, LILIES AND HYACINTHS.

Four Hundred Society People Enjoy the Event, and a Select Company Participate in the Subsequent Progressive Euchre Games for Prizes.

One of the smartest and most delightful functions of the present social season was the reception given by Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman at her beautiful residence on Ninth street, Saturday afternoon. Over four hundred of Plainfield's society leaders assembled to honor the fair hostess, and at their departure showered congratulations on her for the pleasure afforded them at being present. The spacious reception hall, parlors, and music room, were beautifully and artistically decorated with garlands of smilax and huge clusters of American Beauties, Easter lilies and hyacinths. Twined in graceful profusion on staircase and wall were festoons of beautiful trailing asparagus, intermingled with smilax. The beautiful banquet hall was done in white and green, a novel and strikingly artistic effect being given by an enormous basket, entwined in green, and filled to overflowing with gorgeous white hyacinths. From the massive candelabra radiated garlands of green, and under the artistic canopy thus formed stood the beautifully gowned fair ones who presided at the bountiful board.

In the large reception hall stood the fair hostess, and beside her her mother Mrs. F. H. Wills, and the beautiful Miss Ada Cox of New York, who received with her.

As the arriving guests passed through to the banquet room, where Mrs. Evarts Tracy and Mrs. Ernest Ackerman presided over the samovars at each end of the table, they were served by Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Gertrude Walz, the Misses Bessie and Nina Morgan, Miss Annie Cook, the Misses Catharine and Margaret Yates, Miss Harriet Halloway, Miss Molly Lawrence, and Miss Margaret Tracy.

After the departing guests had bade adieu, dinner was served to the hostesses and the women who assisted at the board during the reception, merry jest, piquant bonmots, and pleasant repartee, seasoning the elegant repast.

In the evening the guests to the number of forty assembled to enjoy the fascinations of progressive euchre, and many were the amusing features which marked the progress of the game.

The honor of winning the women's first prize fell to the lot of Miss Ada Cox, who received a beautiful fan, while a similar award for skilfulness among the men was captured in the shape of a dainty silver whisk, won by Rowland Cox, Jr. The next in skill among the fair ones was Miss Maria Morgan, who received a silver handkerchief holder for the belt. The second honor among the men was in the shape of a beautifully chased silver match safe, of which Lewis G. Timpson is the fortunate possessor. Mrs. Evarts Tracy won the consolation prize, which was a copy of the Oliver Wendell Holmes beautiful year book, while the grandstand finish of Louis Waring secured for him the gentlemen's consolation prize, a tasty bronze inkstand.

At the conclusion of the game, supper was served; and the happy house party, once more congratulating their host and hostess on the brilliant success attending the event, filled the waiting carriages and were driven home.

The affair served but to emphasize the long established fact that Mrs. Ackerman is indeed an ideal hostess.

Railroad Accident Over The Mountain.

The 8:25 a. m. express on the Morris County branch of the D. L. & W. jumped the track at Millington and crashed into a freight standing on the sidetrack from which Adam Betzold was unloading beer grains. Mr. Betzold was hurled through the air, and landed in the snow some distance from the track, with a broken shoulder-blade, a bruised body and splintered arm. His escape from instant death was miraculous.

One of his team of horses was killed, but no other fatality occurred. The express bumped along the sleepers some distance, shaking up and frightening the passengers, but the coaches remained right side up.

—R. Henri Strange will give his dramatic, elocutionary, humorous and song recitals in Bethel Chapel next Thursday evening, January 3, which was to have been given last Thursday.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Write it 1895.

—The Daily Press will not be published New Year's Day.

—Ring out the old, ring in the new, come and let Peck show you what good goods are.

—The women of the First Presbyterian Church will meet in the church parlors Friday afternoon at 3:30.

—Work was begun Saturday on a wall at John Leal's School, to be 125 feet deep. I. L. McVoy has the contract.

—A regular meeting of Gazelle Engine Company will be held Wednesday evening, for business of importance.

—The Commercial Palace will be open late this evening. Beginning January 2, it will close as usual, 7 p. m., and Saturday nights at 10.

—Doane & Edsall will not close their store until late this evening. Commencing Tuesday evening, January 2, they will close at 7 as usual, and Saturday nights at 10.

—Charles F. Stephens of West Second street won the double barrelled shot gun which was being contested for at Lister's, North avenue. His score was 44 out of a possible 50.

—At the close of the Wednesday and Friday evening prayer meetings in the First Presbyterian Church the Session will meet to receive those who are about to join the church.

—A woman had a bad fall on the walk in front of the property at the north corner of Second and Church streets last evening. The icy walks should be attended to without delay. Capt. Grant says he will arrest all offenders.

—This issue of The Daily Press contains the valuable record of deaths of the year, crowded from the issue of Saturday, and besides the wealth of other New Year's matter gives the opening of a story appropriate to the holiday of the morrow.

—Capt. and Mrs. Hand wish thus publicly to thank the firemen for their prompt and efficient work in saving their house and furniture Saturday night. Mrs. Hand is especially thankful, and very earnest in praising them for very reful manner of doing their work.

—The annual of the mail carriers will be distributed by the faithful letter men tomorrow. It is a valuable book for all the year, and the carriers deserve generous recognition for their services. The last cover page of the annual is especially commended to the consideration of the discerning public, as it contains something for every day of the year.

—The people of Plainfield are daily reminded by the record of its columns that The Daily Press alone in Plainfield can be depended on to keep them faithfully posted in important municipal matters. The Press on Saturday was the only Plainfield newspaper that gave a comprehensive and comprehensible digest of the councilmanic committee's report on the water supply. Those who looked to other sources for the momentous matter looked in vain till they read The Press. A faithful newspaper is of more public worth than a mere partisan organ. The Press prints all, for all the people, and is not compelled by party or corporation dictators to suppress the news. If it concerns Plainfield, it's in The Press.

Merry Christmas in Heavenly Rest.

The Christmas festival of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which was postponed on account of the violent storm Thursday, took place Saturday night in the parish house on Clinton avenue, and all the little ones who would not have been allowed to venture out on Thursday were able to attend and have a gay, merry time. The handsome well-light parish house was filled. The curtains in front of the tree were kept closed until after the carols, songs and recitations were rendered. Then the beautifully decorated tree was disclosed and the distribution began of beautiful little booklets, pretty candy boxes and oranges. The children of the Sunday-school and sewing-school shared alike, and many extra boxes and oranges found their way to visiting children among the throng. It was altogether a bright and happy time.

The Bank Stays.

The report that the First National Bank directors had purchased the Babcock lot at the corner Front street and Madison avenue, is denied in every detail. They have not yet decided about remodeling the present building, but will probably do so.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dismondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

BIG BLAZE AT ALBANY

The Famous Delavan House a Mass of Ruins.

Two Women and a Man Jumped from a Window—Narrow Escape of Several Guests—Mr. Heilman, of Brooklyn, Will Probably Die from His Injuries.

Albany, Dec. 31.—The Delavan house proper was gutted by fire last night. There were 100 guests in the house at the time. All escaped, although two women and one man who jumped from the third story window into the street on the Steuben street side were badly injured. They are:

Mrs. H. F. Fookes, wife of the agent of the National Cash Register company, of this city, formerly of Dayton, O. Benjamin Heilman and his wife, of Brooklyn, who were on their wedding tour.

Mr. Fookes was badly burned, but will recover. His wife was internally injured and will probably die.

Mr. Heilman was badly burned about the chest and internally injured. He will die. His wife is badly burned about the face, her nose being split open, and she was cut on the ankle. She will recover. The injured were taken to the City hospital.

The speakership fight was on in its intensity when the cry of fire rang through the corridors.

The headquarters of the candidates were on the first floor over the lobbies, otherwise the large crowds which filled the corridors and rooms would not have so luckily escaped.

The fire started in the basement on the Broadway side, directly under the elevator shaft, and spread with the rapidity of lightning. No one had time to save anything above the main floor, and before the affrighted guests and politicians had emerged upon the streets the flames had broken through the roof.

The elevator shaft was adjacent to the Broadway stairway and the flames cut off the egress of the guests in the northern end of the hotel, in which nearly two-thirds of the guests were located.

Those who were not able to get past the elevator shaft, so as to pass down the main stairway on Steuben street, were without hope of escape for some minutes until their way was directed to the servants' stairway, in the north section of the structure.

It was some time after the alarm sounded before the department responded.

Meanwhile every effort was made to save those who were in the upper stories. E. A. Manchester, the postmaster of the assembly, came down a rope on the Broadway side from a fourth-story window and escaped with no injury except to his hands.

E. W. Arnold, of Rochester, also reached terra firma in this manner. Edmund Walsh, a porter, who, as soon as he heard the cry of fire, went through the house, alarming the guests, found his escape cut off on reaching the upper stories.

He succeeded in getting out on the roof of the centre annex and with Edwin Murphy, another employe, was rescued with the aid of ladders. Walsh's hair was singed and his hands and arms were badly burned. He was taken to the hospital.

A man and his wife who were on the same roof would not let each other be saved until the firemen carried them down the ladder.

Mrs. Zeh, of Hillsdale, Columbia county, who only last week was removed from the hospital here to the hotel, was carried out by ex-Congressman Henry G. Burleigh, of Whitehall, Judge C. B. McLaughlin, of Port Henry, and Deputy Constitutional Convention Compiler McGonigal, who wrapped her in his great coat.

Mrs. Moore, the wife of Mr. Moore, of Henry & Moore, the proprietors of the hotel, was sick abed and had to be carried out.

Mrs. Fookes jumped from the third-story window, above the main floor, on Steuben street, striking on the roof of the balcony on the main floor, and rolling off onto the sidewalk, a fall of sixty feet.

Mr. Heilman jumped from a window on the same floor, but jumped clear of the balcony, falling on a snow bank. Mrs. Heilman also jumped, but struck the balcony, and likewise rolled off into the street below. All three came down, it seemed, almost together, Mrs. Heilman's fall being broken somewhat by striking on the heads and shoulders of three men who were passing.

Mr. Fookes availed himself of the rope fire escape in his room and lowered himself down as far as the cornice of the window below his floor. There he showed his noble fortitude in being able to stand for a period of some ten minutes before a ladder could be run up to him. He descended it alone. The spectators in the street below him were no doubt responsible for his not jumping.

The flames, fanned by the high wind, spread with frightful rapidity and it was soon seen that the entire building was doomed. But little of the effects of the guests of the hotel was saved and the loss will be very heavy.

Incendiary Fire at Danvers.

Danvers, Mass., Dec. 31.—An incendiary fire at midnight destroyed the entire interior of J. E. Crosby & Co.'s factory at Tapleyville. Loss on building $4,000; insured. Loss on stock $20,000; insured for $15,000. James Maines, a fireman, was seriously injured.

Senator-Elect Gear Much Better.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The condition of Representative and Senator-elect Gear, of Iowa, shows such great improvement that it is believed he will soon be able to resume Congressional duties.

ANOTHER SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Fred Vigel in Custody on Suspicion of the Shearman Murder.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Fred Vigel, wanted in Jamestown on suspicion of being the murderer of the two Shearman women in Busti, has been arrested at the home of his brother-in-law, John Lachner.

Suspicion was directed to Vigel by the testimony of George Ploss before the coroner's jury at Jamestown on Thursday. Ploss testified that on the day of the murder he went to the funeral of the Shearmans, who were killed by a train a few days before, with a cousin, Fred Vigel by name. The two drove from Ploss' home to the place where the funeral was held. When they arrived there Mr. Ploss says he let the cousin have the team to go to Lakewood. He remained at the funeral, and after it was over cut across lots to his home. When he arrived home he found the cousin had reached there before him, and had put the horse out. The animal was reeking with sweat, as though having been hard driven. On the way Ploss had met the boys who gave the alarm, and he at once went over to the Shearman house and learned the news of the murder. This was on Saturday. On Monday Vigel told Ploss that he had seen Silas Natterson, the Lake Shore detective, whose home is at Dunkirk, and that gentleman had given him a job to go to Buffalo and hunt up a man, accordingly he left.

Vigel has made a statement denying having committed the crime and says he is able to prove an alibi.

RECEIVED BY THE POPE.

Prince Lobanoff Presents an Autograph Letter from the Czar.

Rome, Dec. 31.—Prince Lobanoff, the czar's special envoy, has been received by the pope. After presenting to the pope an autograph letter from the czar, Prince Lobanoff said that he was happy to fulfil an office which enabled him to express his veneration for the pope and to convey the good will of his majesty the czar, whose policy was a pacific one. The pope replied that he always supported the principles of order and peace, such as inspired the czar.

The audience was held in the presence of the papal court and lasted ten minutes. Afterward the pope and Prince Lobanoff were closeted together for three-quarters of an hour. In the evening Cardinal Rampolla, the pontifical secretary of state, gave a dinner to Prince Lobanoff, M. Izvolsky, the Russian representative at the vatican, and a number of cardinals. M. Izvolsky will give a similar dinner to-morrow.

SPECULATION HIS RUIN.

Bookkeeper Rossman Short $14,000 in His Accounts.

Hudson, N. Y., Dec. 31.—William F. Rossman jr., bookkeeper in the Hudson River National bank, of this city, is under arrest charged with grand larcency in the first degree. An examination of the books kept by Rossman showed a shortage of about $14,000. The money making up this amount was taken from time to time, and, it is claimed, was expended in stock speculations and fast living.

Rossman has admitted the theft and has been locked up to await an examination, which has been set down for to-day. The prisoner has been employed as a bookkeeper in the bank for several years, and was not suspected until recently, when his accounts were found crooked.

LI HUNG CHANG OUSTED.

Viceroy of Liang-Kiang Appointed to Command of the Chinese Forces.

A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says: "Gen. Nodzu, who commands the Japanese army in Manchuria, reports that the natives have been greatly influenced by the clemency of the Japanese, and that many residents who had fled from their homes are returning with their families and are willingly assisting the invaders."

St. Paul's Church Dedicated.

Washington, Dec. 31.—St. Paul's Catholic church was dedicated in the presence of an unusual and imposing array of ecclesiastical dignitaries, headed by Cardinal Gibbons and Mgr. Satolli, papal legate to the United States. The sermon was preached by Bishop A. A. Curtis of Wilmington, Del. High mass was celebrated by Mgr. Satolli, assisted by Rev. Edward Didier of Baltimore.

Negro Labor for Mexico.

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 31.—A. Williams, of Atlanta, Ga., better known as "Peg" Williams has signed a contract through W. H. Ellis, representing the Tiahuiviolo Plantation company of Mapiamia, Mexico, to furnish the company 300 laborers. The negroes will be obtained from Georgia and Alabama. Williams claims he will export 100,000 negroes from the southern states to Mexico this winter.

THE ENTIRE CREW LOST

The Bark Osseo Wrecked Off Holyhead.

Twenty-four Souls Perish in Sight of Land—Heroic Efforts of the Life Saving Crew—Not a Vestige of the Vessel Remains—Wreck of the Norwegian Ship Frey.

London, Dec. 31.—The British bark Osseo was wrecked in a gale off Holyhead yesterday, and with her perished her entire crew of twenty-six men.

The Osseo was driven ashore back of the Holyhead breakwater. Her signals of distress were first heard by the coast-guard about 4 o'clock in the morning. At that time it was pitch dark and great waves were washing over the breakwater, while the wind was blowing a living gale.

How the accident occurred is not exactly known, but it is surmised that an extraordinary high sea lifted her when she was quite close to the breakwater and dashed her upon it. She struck amidships, and immediately began to break up, the sea pounding at her furiously the moment she became stationary.

The guard, in spite of the great danger of being washed into the sea, proceeded carefully along the breakwater and, having rigged up the rocket apparatus, began firing life lines in the direction of the wreck. The faint light of the rockets soon disclosed the fact that the vessel had broken in two amidships and that the mainmast had fallen, crushing the lives out of several of the crew. A few survivors could be seen clinging to each half of the vessel, and their piteous cries for help could be heard above the roar of the storm.

After many failures the coast-guard succeeded in firing a line over the wreck, but by that time all on board had perished. A life-boat vainly tried again and again to approach the wreck.

Not a vestige of the bark could be seen this morning and there is no prospect of any salvage. Several bodies have been washed ashore. The Osseo was a bark of 1,359 tons. She arrived at Falmouth on Dec. 15 from Taltal, and had been ordered to Androssan.

The Norwegian ship Frey, Captain Hansen, from Darien, while riding at anchor off Troon, was dismasted. Her crew was taken off in a life boat. The boat capsized and one man was drowned. The other fifteen reached shore safely. The Frey has since dragged her anchor and gone ashore at Devil's Dyke, four miles from Ayr.

A dispatch from Londonderry says that nothing has been heard of the Mississippi and Dominion line steamer Sarnia, which lost her rudder at sea, and which, after being taken in tow by the Anchor line steamer Anchoria, was dropped about one hundred and thirty miles west of Tory island, owing to the heavy weather, which made towing dangerous.

STORM RAVAGES IN COLOMBIA.

Houses Demolished and Railroad Bridges Washed Away.

New Orleans, Dec. 31.—Capt. Mathison, of the Norwegian steamship Yumuri, from Santa Maria, United States of Colombia, reports that fearful rains have fallen on the coast of Colombia. The village of Gaira, five miles south of Santa Maria, was washed away by heavy floods and about fifty persons were drowned.

In Santa Maria between forty and fifty houses were destroyed and a large number damaged by the flood. The railroad tracks and bridges on the Santa Maria road leading out to Rio Frio have been washed away, and it will require six months labor to rebuild the road and bridges, as the bed of the road, as well as the track, has been destroyed.

Decides in Favor of the Soo.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 31.—Judge Smith has filed a decision in the suit brought by the Soo railway against the Home Insurance company of New York, giving the plaintiffs judgment for $28,000 with 7 per cent. interest since March 9, 1892, and costs. The judgment covers half the loss in the burning of the Soo railway's elevator at Gladstone, Mich., Nov. 29, 1891. This is the second trial, an appeal having been taken the first time.

Revolution Brewing in Guatemala.

Quetaltenango, Guatemala, Dec. 31.—The entire western section of Guatemala is in a state of excited unrest. Small bands of discontented citizens, which are secretly organizing now, will soon form the basis of a revolution. The only question to be decided is as to who shall be the leader to unite the small bands into one.

Water Works Sold by the Sheriff.

Keokuk, Ia., Dec. 31.—The plant of the Fort Madison water works have been sold to Alexander New, representing the committee of bondholders, for $41,000 in satisfaction of a judgment for $255,000 in favor of the Central Trust company of New York.

Diphtheria at Portsmouth.

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 31.—Five cases of diphtheria were discovered here. The fact was reported to the board of health, who immediately quarantined the house. It is hoped that further spreading of the disease will be prevented.

Chinaman Commits Suicide.

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Lee Ling, a Chinaman, age 18, who has been a prisoner in the county jail here since Nov. 19, on a charge of assault, committed suicide in his cell by hanging himself with a rope formed of twisted cotton.

Earthquakes Continue in Sicily.

Rome, Dec. 31.—Earthquakes continue to be felt in Sicily. The town of Rometta in the province of Messina, has been greatly damaged, very few of the houses being left in a habitable condition.

Secured Their Creditors.

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 31.—The N. B. Carlstein company, general merchants, have filed chattel mortgages for over $100,000 securing H. B. Claflin of New York and other creditors.

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirtyfifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c. bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

If you would find the warmest spot in a little village, on a cold day, watch the old codgers and see where they congregate. That's what the stray cats do, or perhaps the codgers watch the cats. However that may be, it is safe to follow either, for both may be depended upon to find the open door where comfort is. They would probably lead you to the rear end of the village store, the tobacco-stained drawing-room where an old stove dispenses hospitality in an atmosphere like unto which, for genial disposition, there is none on earth so unfailing.

From November to May the old stove in the back of Chris' Rowton's store was, to its devotees at least, the most popular hostess in Simpkinsville. And, be it understood, her circle was composed of people in good repute. Even the cats sleeping at her feet, if personally tramps, were well connected, being lineal descendants of known cats belonging to families in good standing. Many, indeed, were natives of the shop, and had come into this kingdom of comfort in a certain feline lying-in hospital, behind the rows of barrels that flanked the stove on either side.

It was the last day of December. The wind was raw, and cold, and of a fitful mind, blowing in contrary gusts and throwing into the faces of people going in all directions various samples from the winter storehouse of the sky, now a threat, a promise or a dare, as to how the New Year should come in.

"Blest if Doc' ain't got snow on his coat. Rainin' when I come in," said one of two old men who drew their seats back a little while the speaker pushed a chair forward with his boot.

"Reckon I got both froze and wet drops on me twix' this an' Meredith's," drawled the newcomer, depositing his saddle-bags beside his chair, wiping the drops from his sleeves over the stove, and spreading his thin palms for its grateful return of warm steam.

"Sleetin' out our way," remarked his neighbor, between pipe puffs. And then he added:

"How's Meredith's wife coming on, doctor? Reckon she's purty bad off, ain't she?"

The doctor was filling his pipe now, and he did not answer immediately. But presently he said, as he deliberately reached forward and seized the tongs and lifted a live coal to his pipe:

"Meredith's wife don't rightfully belong in a doctor's care. She ain't to say sick. She's heartbroke, that's what she is, but of co'se that ain't a thing I can tell her—or him, either."

"This has been a mighty slow and tiresome year in Simpkinsville," he added, in a moment, "an' I'm glad to see it drawin' to a close. It come in with snow an' sleet, an' troubles, an' seems like it's goin' out the same way—jest like the years have done three years past."

"Jest look at that cat, what a dusty color she's got between spots. Th'ain't a cat in Simpkinsville, hardly, thet don't show a trace o' Jim Meredith's maltee—an' I jest nachelly despise it, 'cause that's one of the presents he brought out there—that maltee is."

"Maltee is a good enough color for a cat ef it's kep' true," remarked old Pete Taylor. "Plenty good enough ef it's kep' true, but it's like gray paint; it'll mark up most anything it's mixed with, and cloud it."

"I reckon Jim Meredith's maltee ain't the only thing o' his thet's cast a shade over Simpkinsville," said old Mr. McMonigle, who sat opposite.

"That's so!" grunted the circle.

"That's so—shore ez you're born," echoed Pete. "Simpkinsville has turned out some toler'ble fair days sense little May Meredith dropped out of it, but the sun ain't never shone on it quite the same—to my notion."

"Wonder where she is?" said McMonigle. "My opinion is she's dead, an' that her mother knows it. I wouldn't be surprised ef the devil that enticed her away has killed her. Once a feller like that gits a girl into a crowded city and gits tired of her there's a dozen ways of gittin' shet of her."

"Yas, a hundred of 'em. It's done every day, I don't doubt."

"See that stove how she spits smoke. east wind'll make her spit any day—seems to gag her."

"Yas," said McMonigle, chuckling softly as he leaned forward and began poking the fire, "she hates a east wind, but she likes me. Don't you, old girl? See her grow red in the face while I chuck her under the chin."

"Look out you don't chuck out a coal of fire on kitty with your foolin'," said old man Taylor, and then he added:

"She does blush in the face, don't she? An' see her wink under her isinglass spectacles when she's flirted with."

"That stove is a well-behaved old lady, reg'larly gits religion, an' shouts whenever the wind's from the right quarter—an' I won't have her spoke of with disrespect," said the doctor.

"Ef she could tell all she's heard, sittin' there summer an' winter, I reckon it'd make a book—an' a interestin' one, too. There's been cats and mice born in her all summer an' birds hatched; an' Rowton tells me he's got a dominicker hen thet's reg'larly watched for the fires to go out last two seasons so she can lay in her. An' didn't you never hear about Phil Toland hidin' a whisky bottle in her one day last summer and smashin' a whole sittin' o' eggs? The hen she squawked out at him, an' all but skeered him to death. He thought he had a 'tackt o' the tremens, shore—an' of a adult variety."

"Pity it hadn't a skerrt him into temperance," remarked the man opposite.

"Did sober him up for purty nigh two weeks. Rowton he saw it all, an' he give the fellers the wink, an' when Pete hollered he ast him what was the matter, an' of co'se Pete he pointed to the hen that was kitin' through the sto'e that minute, squawkin for dear life, an' all bedaubled over with egg; an' sez he: 'What sort o' dash blanketed hens hev you got round here, settin' in stoves?' And Rowton he looks round and winks at the boys. 'Hen,' sez he, 'what hen? Any o' you fellers seen a hen anywhere round here?'

"Of co'se every feller swo'e he hadn't saw no hen, an' Rowton he went up to Pete and he sez, sez he: 'Pete,' says he, 'you better go home an' lay down. You ain't well.'

"Well, sir, Pete wasn't seen on the streets for up'ards o' three weeks after that.

"Yas, that stove has seen sights and heard secrets, too, I don't doubt,

"They say that nigger, Prophet, used to set down an' talk to her same as ef she was a person, some nights, when he'd have her all to hisself. Rowton ast him one day what made him do it, and he lowed that he could converse with anything that had the breath of life in it. There is no accountin' for what notions a nigger'll take."

"No, an' there's no tellin' how much or how little they know, neither. Old Proph', half blind and foolish, limpin' round in the woods, gatherin' queer roots, and talkin' to hisself, didn't seem to have no intelligence, rightly speakin', an' yet he has called out prophecies that have come true—even befo' he prophesied about May Merelith goin' wrong.

"Here comes Brother Squires, chawin' tobacco like a sinner. I do love a preacher that'll chaw tobacco.

"Hello, Brother Squires!" he called out now, to a tall, clerical old man who approached the group.

"Hello! What you doin' in a sto'e like this, I like to know? Th'ain't no Bibles, nor trac's for sale here, an' your folks don't eat molasses and bacon same ez ds sinners, do you?"

"Well, my friends," replied the parson, smiling broadly as he advanced, "since you good people don't supply us with locusts and wild honey, we are reduced to the necessity of eatin' plain bread an' meat—but you see I live up to the Baptist standard, as far as I can. I wear the leathern girdle about my loins."

He pointed to the long, soft leather whip which, for safe keeping, he had tied loosely about his waist.

"Room for one more?" he added, as declining the only vacant chair he seated himself upon a soap box, extended his long legs and raised his boots upon the ledge of the stove.

"I declare, Brother Squires, the patches on them boots are better'n a contribution box," said McMonigle, laughing, as he thrust his hand down into his pocket.

"Reckon it'll take a half dollar to cover this one," he added, as he playfully balanced a bright coin over the topmost patch on the pastor's toe.

"Stop your laughin' now, parson. Don't shake it off! Come up, boys! Who'll cover the next patch? Ef my 'rithmetic is right, there's jest about a patch apiece for us to cover—not includin' the half soles. I know parson wouldn't have money set above his soul."

"No, certainly not, an' if anybody'd place it there, of co'se I'd remove it immediately," the parson answered with ready wit. And then he added more seriously:

"I have passed my hat around to collect my salary, once in awhile, but I never expected to hand around my old shoes—and really, my friends, I don't know as I can allow it."

Still he did not draw them in, and the three old men grew so hilarious over the fun of covering the parson's patches with the ever-slipping coins that a crowd was soon collected, the result being the pocketing of the entire handful of small coins by Rowton, with the generous assurance that it should be good for the best pair of boots in his store, to be fitted at the pastor's convenience.

It was after this mirth had all subsided and the codgers had settled down into their accustomed quiet that the parson remarked, with some show of hesitation:

"My brothers, when I was coming towards you awhile ago I heard two names. They are names that I hear now and then among my people—names of two persons I have never met—persons who passed out of your community some time before I was stationed among you. One of them, I know, has a sad history. The details of the story I have never heard, but it is in the air. Scarcely a village in all our dear world but has, no matter how blue its skies, a little cloud upon them—a cloud which to its people seems always to reflect the pitiful face of one of its fair daughters. I don't know the story of May Meredith—or is it May Day Meredith?"

"She was born May day, and christened that-a-way," answered McMonigle. "But she was jest ez often called Daisy or May—any name thet 'd fit a spring day or a flower would fit her."

"Well, I don't know her story," the parson resumed, "but I do know her fate. And perhaps that is enough to know.

"The other name you called was 'Old Proph,' or 'Prophet.' Tell me about him. Who was he? How was he connected with May Day Meredith?"

He paused and looked from one face to another for the answer, which was slow in coming.

"Go on an' tell it, Dan'l," said the doctor, finally, with an inclination of the head toward McMonigle.

Old man McMonigle shook the tobacco from his pipe, and refilled it slowly, without a word. Then he, as deliberately lit it, puffed its fires to the glowing point, and took it from his lips as he began.

WALTER IRVING CLARKE, Managing Editor.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., DEC. 31, 1894

CITY EDITION. 4 O'CLOCK.

FOR PLAINFIELD'S PROGRESS.

Magruder's Recapture of Galveston.

On New Year's day, 1863, the dashing Confederate general, "Prince" Magruder, effected the recapture of the city of Galveston from the Union forces. For two months preceding that date Commander W. B. Renshaw, U. S. N., had held the city under menace of the guns of his little flotilla, consisting of the Harriet Lane, Owasco and Clifton and the ironclad Westfield, all lying in the channel off Kuhn's wharf, with an auxiliary of 300 Massachusetts soldiers bivouacked on the wharf and protected on the land side by a chasm in the flooring, where planks had been removed to form a parapet.

Magruder massed a column of infantry and artillery in front of the wharf during the night of Dec. 31, with his cannon trained upon the Harriet Lane and upon the camp of the Massachusetts men. The signal gun was fired at 4 o'clock the morning of the 1st. The gunners of the Harriet Lane, being alert, answered with a shower of iron hail, and the Owasco soon joined in, driving the Confederates from their pieces. Under cover of the artillery duel a band of Confederates swam around the ends of the wharf, bearing scaling ladders and planks with which to bridge the chasm overhead. They were finally repulsed by musketry fire from the plank barricade and canister from the boats. Meanwhile the Confederate naval contingent, led by the cotton clad packets Neptune and Bayou City, steamed up in rear of the Union fleet. The Bayou City opened on the Harriet Lane, but at the second shot the gun exploded, killing her captain. She then used her ram upon the Lane, which had meanwhile sent the Neptune to the bottom.

Magruder's sharpshooters on the Bayou City plied their rifles upon the Lane, which soon fell a prey to boarders, but not until her chief officers, Commander Wainwright and Lieutenant Edward Lea, had been killed, both in close combat, and her crew driven below. To add to the disaster the Westfield ran aground and was blown up by order of Renshaw, who perished in the explosion. The Owasco and Clifton then sailed away, and the Massachusetts men surrendered. GEORGE L. KILMER.

Jackson's New Year's Victory.

The 1st of January, 1815, ended with a blaze of glory resting over Jackson's improvised army at New Orleans. During the night of Dec. 31 the British had placed in position 30 heavy cannon behind ramparts constructed of earth and hogsheads filled with sugar. The artillerists assigned to work them were the best naval gunners of the fleet. Jackson had ordered a review of his troops for New Year's day, and luckily a heavy fog obscured the opposing lines until 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when the sky cleared and the British guns opened with terrific execution, driving the review columns to their quarters. Jackson's 20 pieces answered promptly, and an artillery duel raged for two hours at 600 yards, the 50 pieces making an average of two shots a second. Not until the enemy's fire slackened did Jackson order his gunners to rest. The moment the smoke lifted it was seen that the formidable British line of the morning had disappeared. In its place lay a formless mass of broken guns, crushed hogsheads and heaps of loam, with the British soldiery who were to have stormed Jackson's batteries crouching in the ditches and the depressions of the plain.

The hero of the day in the American camp was the wealthy merchant volunteer, Judah Touro. He carried shot from the magazine to the guns for Captain Humphrey's battery and was struck in the thigh by a 12 pound ball. Although the surgeons despaired of his life, he was saved through the devotion of a comrade, to whom he bequeathed one-half of his large fortune.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Much Smoke.

What seemed to be a serious fire was discovered at James Conneely's liquor store at 7:15 this morning. Smoke filled the saloon and the rooms above, and poured out of the windows. Investigation showed that a wire holding the long stove pipe had broken from the ceiling, allowing the pipe to fall to the floor. No damage was done.

The Star Gazer.

Joe Ott's new piece, "The Star Gazer", written for him by Franklyn Lee, coming to Music Hall, matinee and night, Jan. 1, is what is denominated "an astronomical farce comedy", which lays more claim to plot than does the average farce comedy. Joe Ott takes the part of Prof. Jupiter

Mars, an astronomer in search of a comet. While he is engaged in this lofty pastime he in turn is pursued by Mrs. Orbit, a widow with a penchant for comets and the mother of daylight Orbit, who is heiress to several millions providing a missing heir does not turn up. "The Star Gazer" was written for the purposes of amusement, and as a vehicle for that which entertains will fulfil its mission.

He Was Very Dry.

Yesterday, about noon, a man attempted to gain admittance to the Crescent hotel, and, finding the front doors locked, he gave a lunge against one of them and broke two large windows in the door. The crashing of glass caused the family living upstairs to raise the front windows to ascertain the cause. They only saw a man running toward Front street. There is no clue whatever as to his identity.

Fined Molly.

A neighborhood quarrel, culminating in the arrest of Molly Stevens by Policeman Frederickson at 8 p. m. Saturday, was tried before Judge Coddington this morning. Mrs. VanFleet, a neighbor of the Stevenses, accused the prisoner of using foul and indecent language toward her and her children. Counter-charges were made by "Molly", but the Judge, after weighing the evidence, fined her $3 or twenty days. She will probably pay.

New Year's Don'ts.

Don't fail to receive New Year's day with a smiling face.

Don't usher in that day by declaring you are growing old.

Don't sent word you are out because New Year's calls are out of fashion.

Don't neglect to send a bonbon box to your best girl.

Don't receive an old friend gloomily on that day.

Don't trust to new 1895 and slander old 1894.

Don't fail to send New Year's greetings to those far away.

Don't think you may meet your fate in 1895. Perhaps it will be better to miss him.

Don't be unfriendly. Do all the good you can, and don't slander anybody.

Don't turn over too many new leaves for 1895.

Don't be unhappy about anything. Be a philosopher.

Don't deride the new year.
Don't make the day unhappy.
Don't lose your temper.
Don't fall in love.
Don't declare you hate men.
Don't celebrate too much.

Old Scotch Practices.

At New Year's in Scotland children make calls upon their older friends and sing in front of the house, after the style of Christmas carols:

Get up, gude wife, and shake your feathers.
Dinna think that we are beggars.
We are children out for play.
Gie's oor cakes an let's away.

Of a different class are the men who, wearing disguises, call begging upon their richer neighbors and shout:

Get up, gude man; be na sweer,
And deal out bread as long as you're here.
The day will come when you will be dead.
You'll neither care for meat nor bread.

To Get the Best Husband.

A very pretty custom was that of tasting the "cream of the well," the first drink from spring or well on New Year's morn. The first pail of water drawn, "the flower of the well," insured positively the best husband in the parish to the water drawer.

Twall struck—two neebour hizzies raise
An liltin gued a sad gate.
The flower o' the well to our house gaes,
An I'll hae the bonniest lad yet.

FIRE AT CAPT. HAND'S.

His Furnace Overheats the Floor Beams and the Firemen are Routed Out.

The alarm at 1:12 a. m., yesterday called the department to Wm. Hand's house at 518 Park avenue. Stillman Randolph, the popular driver of the Hook and Ladder truck was the first on the scene and the other aparatus followed in quick succession. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace. As the house filled with smoke the occupants were aroused from their slumbers and rushing to the dining room found the mantelpiece and carpet ablaze. The firemen quickly laid a line of hose and water was called for but was not turned into the house, the extinguishers proving sufficient to subdue the flames. The damage was nominal. Officer Cooney experienced some difficulty in ringing in the alarm as the hook at first refused to work and many were aroused from their Sunday morning naps at 9:30 when the readjustment of the mechanism caused the box to send in another round.

BY THE WAY.

—W. H. Rogers rode a bicycle today over the snow.

—All the druggists in town will close from 1 to 6 New Year's afternoon.

NEW YEAR THOUGHTS

WHAT THE DAY HAS BEEN AND IS NOW.

The Superstitions and the Calling Practice—Why the Custom of Making Calls Has Abated—A Day of Freshness and Recovered Hope.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, though not Jan. 1 always, has been celebrated religiously or socially from time immemorial. The ancient Romans consecrated it to Janus, who, it was thought, controlled all beginnings and made sacrifices to him. They exchanged gracious greetings and wishes and gave presents to friends and kindred. The church condemned its social observations and turned it into a religious festival. The Hebrews, the Chinese and other peoples, pagans and nonpagans, regard it superstitiously, attaching the utmost importance to its celebration.

We Americans in the last quarter of the nineteenth century are supposed to be wholly free from superstition. But are we? Not a few of us still imagine that there is something auspicious in New Year's day; that as we begin the year we may so close it. We are solicitous, therefore, to resolve to relinquish bad habits then, under the impression that we shall relinquish them altogether. In other words, we determine on that day to turn over a new leaf, as we have probably determined for many previous years, and there our determination and reformation end. This is exactly the way the old Romans acted more than 20 centuries since, which proves that we have not advanced much in reasonableness, despite our assumptions to the contrary. It is a problem whether men who continue in mature life to yield to their weaknesses or fail to rectify their faults are capable of correcting themselves. Whether capable or incapable, they rarely do so. Their good resolutions seldom bear fruit. They terminate, for the most part, in words, in promises to themselves, in mockeries of performance. What a man is at 40 he is apt to remain. No amount of New Year's resolves will help him who is not full of virtuous endeavor. Jan. 1 dawns brightly to the mind, but the succeeding days conclude dismally as to achievement. Nevertheless its recurrence must ever be pleasant. If it does not bring accomplishment, it at least brings hope, and hope nerves us to bear our burdens, to discharge our duties. Then welcome New Year's. We dearly love to think that the cares and troubles of the old year, which so largely spring from our temperament, will not invade the new one.

Originally New Year's was intended not for a universal, miscellaneous calling day, without motive or propriety, into which it ultimately degenerated. It was intended for a day when men who had been prevented during the year by business or any condition of circumstances from keeping up their friendship or acquaintance with women they liked or esteemed should make social atonement for apparent neglect and renew their pleasant relations. The idea was excellent and commendable, as was the custom, and before this city grew to be such a Babylon the calls were agreeable, often delightful, to makers and receivers. But the city became too big, and the community that assumed to represent society in some manner, more or less remote, became too heterogeneous. The custom was grossly abused. Many men and women thought only of the number of calls, ignoring quality for quantity, and sometimes the scenes indoors and outdoors waxed disreputable from overindulgence.

The better sort of people, repelled by the license prevalent, refused to "receive" any longer. The smart set who had long believed calling too "common"—they declared, with their pretense of superiority, that it had grown vulgar—set themselves and their influence firmly against it. They refused to see visitors on that day and soon after shut up their houses and fled to the country, thus setting the seal of fashion on their last decision, which speedily met with social approval. The fact was that respectable folk had got tired of the extreme to which calling had been carried, and the coarse, objectionable class could not sustain it alone. So the whole thing fell to pieces here, and there is no probability of its reconstruction in the immediate future.

The custom extended long ago to other cities and is still followed. But as the metropolis makes the mode its duration is doubtful. New Year's is yet a holiday—holidays are always wholesome—and business of all kinds is suspended. Sons, husbands, fathers, now stay at home, instead of racing about town, tiring and boring themselves to little purpose, and they are gainers, along with their families, by the change. New Year's in its old guise has passed away. But New Year's with its quiet, domestic accompaniments has come to remain. The world moves. And New Year's is still New Year's, with its sense of freshness, repose and recovered hope.

THE NEW AND THE OLD

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE ON THE LESSONS OF THE DAY.

He Suggests Turning Back Old Leaves Instead of Turning Over New—The New Year Fetich—A Fitting Present—A Welcome Call.

The old year is dead. Long live the new! Jan. 1 is not materially different from any other day of the year, but it seems the more important because it appeals to our hope and our imagination.

Such hosts of people have a kind of superstition concerning Jan. 1 that it might be called, as April 1 is, All Fools' day.

The greatest "call" ever made in the western hemisphere was not on Jan. 1, but on Oct. 12, 1492, when Columbus discovered a new world.

An old proverb says, "What you are on New Year's day you will always be." This, in a sense, is true, but it is equally true of any other day.

Nature would seem to be opposed to the custom of calling on New Year's, since she generally makes the day very unpleasant, as if to discourage the practice.

The Romans dedicated January to the god Janus, who was represented as two faced. To be two faced is to be hypocritical. Did they intend to intimate, satirical rogues, that the people who made visits, exchanged presents and good wishes were insincere and double dealing?

An analytic New Yorker, who used to make it a duty to pay social visits on Jan. 1, when such visits were in vogue, arose one New Year's morning determined to "call on his friends." The phrase set his analytic faculties in motion, and he concluded that he had but one friend. So he staid at home and called on himself.

The most fitting present perhaps we could make on New Year's would be to give the devil his due.

The old Romans named the presents exchanged on New Year's strenæ, whose derivative meaning is strength. If we could only give strength on this day to our weak fellow mortals, what a blessing it would be to them and to us and all the world!

Strenia was a Roman goddess who, according to Augustine, gave cheerfulness to work and also presided over New Year's presents. If any goddess could give cheerfulness to work in this discontented age, how many statues we should raise to her and how zealously we should invoke her influence!

This is the day when many of us who perceive that we have committed various follies and are generally derelict to our obligations believe that we ought to turn over a new leaf. We do turn it over repeatedly, but if we examine the new leaves impartially we will find that they are no improvement on the old. This is likely to irritate us and to make us think that we do about as well as we can anyhow. We are all inclined to believe when our will is weak that circumstances have conspired against us. It is astonishing how much we help circumstances.

Turning over a new leaf is usually little else than making promises to ourselves that we never keep.

We forget at each recurrence of the New Year that it will soon be the old year, and that at its close most of what we meant to do will still remain undone.

New Year's is a day when most of us hastily review the previous 12 months with an ardent prejudice in our own favor. We decide, on the whole, that we have been pretty good fellows, readily forgetting or explaining our errors of omission and commission. But such slight infringements as we have made of morals and rectitude we resolve to correct, and we are so satisfied with our resolve that we seldom attempt to alter our conduct at all.

If a man, instead of turning over a new leaf on New Year's, would turn back some of the old leaves on any day, read them without bias and take them to heart, he would become stronger and better.

The majority of us make a fetich of New Year's. We decorate it with crimson patches of vain regrets and tawdy rags of hollow repentance and declare ourselves reformed.

Everything new appeals to us as opposed to and different from the old. And we naturally, though unwisely, expect from the New Year what the old has not brought, unconscious that the new will not bring it either.

The fact that every people from the ancient Egyptians down to the practical Americans have either worshiped or observed New Year's is merely added evidence that the whole human family lives on hope. Hope is a divinity enshrined in every heart, whose very pulsations depend on such enshrinement.

It is not strange that the citizens of this republic have looked with dissatisfaction and disfavor on 1894, one of the hardest, gloomiest, most disastrous years in our recent history. We have reason this time to welcome New Year's as the harbinger of better days, as an earnest of prosperity and content. It is entirely safe to say that 1895 cannot be worse than its predecessor.

Since people have ceased to make calls on this day they remain at home, they declare, and get acquainted with their own families. If they should get better acquainted with themselves, it might be well, but it would scarcely add to their gratification.

Instead of talking today about turning over a new leaf, which must be by this time a pretty old leaf, we should perform some act of kindness, some deed of humanity. One such performance is worth a thousand promises.

To begin the year with uniform courtesy and consideration for every one with whom we come in contact is the fittest observation of the ever welcome day.

If we would all try to do what little good we can for those more unfortunate than ourselves, the New Year would be better than our most sanguine expectations depict it.

The old year is always as much discredited and condemned as the New Year is overrated and idealized.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

Puritans Worked on New Year's.

The sole record of the observance of the New Year by the Pilgrims in the new world named New England was most prosaic, most brief, "We went to work betimes." Many of the good Puritan ministers thought the celebration or even notice of the day in any way savored of improper and un-Christian reverence for the heathen god Janus. Yet these English settlers came from a land where New Year's eve and New Year's day were second in importance and in domestic observance only to Christmas. Throughout every English county New Year's eve was always celebrated; in many it was called by the pretty name of Singing e'en, from the custom which obtained of singing the last of the Christmas carols at that time.

Temperance Progress.

The W. C. T. U. service in Music Hall yesterday afternoon at 4:15 was interesting, and largely attended. Mrs. Anna M. Hammer of Philadelphia made the address, and her remarks were much enjoyed. The music was a feature, especially the solo singing of Miss Campbell of Metuchen. These meetings are increasing greatly in attendance and interest, and the W. C. T. U. feel much encouraged in their work.

FESTIVAL AT POTSDAM

How the Royal Family Is Sponding the Holiday.

The Christmas Trees at the New Palace and the Presentation of Gifts—Rowdy Jollity Does Not Prevail Among the People as It Has in Former Years.

Berlin, Dec. 31.—Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather of the past few days it is admitted that the holiday trade has been as good, if not the best in the last few years.

The usual Christmas festival opened in the new palace at Potsdam with the customary presentation of gifts.

Every member of the imperial family had an individual fir tree, cut in the Potsdam wildpark and set up in the Shell hall under the emperor's personal supervision. The size of the trees was graduated carefully according to the importance and age of the possessors. Later the emperor and empress entertained a few intimate friends at a dinner in their private apartments.

At a matinee performance given at the emperor's command for the amusement of the imperial princes and the other children of the court, the house was not half filled, although open to the public. This shows a great decline of interest in the doings of the imperial family, as usually these occasions have attracted great crowds.

A noteworthy feature of the people's holidays this year has been the absence of rowdy jollity which prevailed in former years. The custom of street carousals seems to be dying out and the police records, which once swelled enormously late in every December have been thus far as meagre as in the middle of July.

The first national congress of German miners, in session in Essen, voted for an eight hour day, reform of the laws to prevent accidents, and appointment of mine inspectors independent of the mine owners. They recommended after short debates the abolition of child and female labor, the suppression of the system of piece work, and the nationalization of all German mines. The social democratic bias of the delegates was shown plainly by their hostility to the Christian Miners' association, a concern which mixes theology and socialism in its constitution and forbids the membership of avowed social democrats. The delegates agreed that religion, politics and trade unionism should be kept distinct, although resolving in almost the same breath that social democracy and infidelity were essential principles of trades unionism. At the close of the Polish miners' conference in Breslau, the delegates avowed openly their adherence to the social democracy and prepared a plan of agitation which will be extended over all the districts of Posen and Silesia. While proclaiming the spread of socialism in the cities, the speakers deplored the indifference of the rural population to socialistic appeals. This population is Catholic and has turned a deaf ear to the social democratic attacks upon their faith. It has shown persistently its detestation of the agitators from the cities and has clung to the priests for advice. Dr. Leser, delegate from Cracow, urged the attention of the socialistic campaign to Austrian Silesia. Private emissaries, carrying literature and argument into the workingmen's homes, he thought, would be the best means of spreading socialism among the Austrian Poles. The German police decided that Leser was a dangerous man and conducted him to the Austrian frontier, after notifying their Austrian colleagues that he would bear watching. The next time he opens his mouth in public, he will be clapped into jail.

It was remarkable that neither the Esson nor Breslau congress debated the anti-socialist bill. There were occasional allusions to the government's repressive programme, but no attempts to consider it seriously.

William Liebkncecht, the social democratic leader, said in an interview that, while unwilling to predict the immediate future he was confident the anti-socialist campaign would eventually help his party. "What a giant like Bismarck failed to accomplish," he said, "Lilliputians like Hohenlohe, Niquel, and Koeller will find utterly impossible. I cannot believe that the emperor will risk such a coup as the dissolution of the reichstag and the abolition of universal suffrage, but the social democrats are prepared for any event. I feel confident that the anti-socialist bill will not pass in its present form."

Liebknecht spoke also of the government's proposal to prosecute the social democratic deputies who refused to cheer for the emperor. The defeat of this proposal, he said, was a hard blow to the government and the blow would be repeated if the chancellor should try the same thing again.

Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe expects to go to Friedrichsruh on Wednesday. The appointment of his son, Alexander, to be councillor of legation, has worried the radicals who say the councillor is honor bound to resign his seat in the reichstag. The Kreuz Zeitung explains that the appointment is merely honorary, brings with it no salary, and therefore conflicts in no way with the councillor's legislative duties.

With the adjournment of the French chamber, the excitement of the Dreyfus scandal has been allayed temporarily, although more friction is expected after the reassembling of the deputies.

Princess Gisele of Bavaria has gone to Troppau to see her daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, who ran away to marry Lieut. Baron Seefried. The Princess Elizabeth is on her first childbed and has been watched for days by her husband's mother. In Munich the meeting of the mothers is expected to result in a reconciliation. It is hoped that Prince Leopold can be persuaded now to forgive his runaway daughter and let her return to the Bavarian court where she always has been a favorite. Baron Seefried, who is a lieutenant in the Austrian army, has lived since his marriage in seclusion in Troppau.

THINKS IT BETTER TO WAIT.

Appointment of a Supervising Architect Will Be Delayed a Few Days.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Secretary Carlisle has decided that he will not appoint a supervising architect of the treasury until about the middle of January, at which time he thinks the re-organization of the architect office, which goes into effect to-morrow, will be in smooth working order.

Any friction that may develop in the changed conditions he thinks can be better adjusted by the old men familiar with the working rather than by the introduction into the office at one and the same time of a new head and a new system. When the new architect is installed he will find the office moving along smoothly, and he can devote himself, as is contemplated by the new organization, to the technical and scientific work of the office.

Mr. Charles E. Kemper, the chief clerk, and for the past two months the acting supervising architect, has resigned his position, and his resignation has been accepted. He has been appointed by Secretary Carlisle executive officer in the bureau, and will have absolute charge of the office force, and will have nothing whatever to do with the purely scientific work.

All the old chiefs of division with the exception of Fred Knowlton, of Maine, and E. W. Combs, of Kansas, have been retained, and these two were dropped only because their divisions were consolidated with others.

APPEAL FROM LABOR.

Help Asked To Carry the Debs Case to the Supreme Court.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—At a meeting of the representatives of several labor organizations held at the Briggs house, an appeal was formulated and addressed to all labor organizations asking for contributions of money to pay the expenses of carrying up the contempt case of Debs and the other officers of the American Railway union to the United States supreme court.

The appeal says that the case has already cost $25,000, that it will cost a large additional sum to carry it to the supreme court, and that there are absolutely no funds on hand for this purpose. In order to carry it up it will be necessary for the defendants to allow their sentences to be cumulative and to serve double as long a time in jail as they would otherwise. The document declares that the various decisions in this case covering the abuse of injunction proceedings and defining conspiracies to stop the mails are so broad, sweeping, and unjust that they will be tantamount to suppressing by the strong arm of the law all the labor organizations in the country.

INSPECTOR M'GRATH'S REPORT.

It Is Highly Complimentary to the National Guard.

Albany, Dec. 31.—The annual report of Inspector-General Thomas H. McGrath has just been filed. He compliments the national guard on the degree of competency which it has attained, and says that during his service in the department he has seen it grow from a disorganized body to a grand institution.

The inspector holds to the belief he took in his last report regarding field music. He maintains that the organizing of corps of field musicians for regiments and battalions would be beneficial. Regarding uniforms he thinks that a better appearance could be attained by having the dress coats made single breasted. The report generally is highly complimentary to the national guard.

DIVED UNDER THE ICE.

Daring Rescue of a Young Lad by Frank Adams.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 31.—Frank Adams, a seaman gunner in the diving class at the torpedo station, performed an heroic as well as daring act in rescuing Harry Ferris who had skated into an air hole at Easton's pond. Several skaters stood by and watched young Ferris as he rose to the surface and disappeared again, but none offered him assistance. Adams was at a distance and upon arriving at the scene he stripped off his outer garments, broke the thin ice around the hole, then dived for the lad, bringing him up insensible. He took young Ferris to the firm ice where they were hauled out. Ferris was soon restored to consciousness.

Arrested for Misrepresentation.

Meriden, Conn., Dec. 31.—Frank Dimock, a farmer of South Washington, Mass., is held on a charge of taking a boy from the state reform school under a misreprsentation. Dimock requested a week's leave for a boy name Albert Ladd. He said that the boy's sister was seriously ill. Afterwards it was discovered that the boy was working upon Dimock's farm in Massachusetts.

Drowned While Skating.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 31.—Albert Blais, 16 years of age, was drowned in the Blackstone river near Berkeley yesterday. He with several friends who were skating, ventured too near the channel, when the ice gave way. The body was recovered.

His One Hundredth Trip.

New York, Dec. 31.—Captain Karlowa, who is in charge of the Hamburg-American liner Prussia, just arrived in port, is celebrating his one hundredth voyage across the north Atlantic, having reached the century mark on this last trip.

Death in the Flames.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 31.—A telephone message from Newaygo briefly states that a farm house three miles from that village was burned last evening and that three persons were burned to death.

Pooling System To Be Renewed.

London, Dec. 31.—It is reported that some of the Atlantic steamship lines have conferred at Cologne and resolved to renew the pooling arrangement as to passenger fares for 1895.

Biddeford City Building Burned.

Biddeford, Me., Dec. 31.—The city building here was completely destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000; insurance, $30,000.

M. Decroix Dead.

Paris, Dec. 31.—M. Decroix, senator for the Loire-Inferieure, is dead.

NEW YEAR FESTIVITIES

The Reception at the White House To-Morrow.

No Change in the Customary Programme—Mrs. Cleveland's Mother Will Help Entertain—Mrs. Grant Unable To Receive the Comrades of Her Late Husband.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The festivities of New Year's week in Washington according to all the indications will be marked by more than usual brilliancy. There has been no change in the customary white house programme. President and Mrs. Cleveland the latter assisted by the ladies of the cabinet will receive the diplomatic corps, the officers of the army and navy (of whom many of the highest rank are now in the city), the judges of the supreme court, senators and representatives in congress and others, in the beautifully redecorated portion of the white house from 11 a. m., until 2 p. m. Mrs. Cleveland's mother, Mrs. Perine, remains her guest and will participate in the reception. The scene is certain to be a brilliant one, with the usual accompaniments of tropical plants from the white house conservatories and excellent music by the Marine band. Secretary Gresham will give the customary noonday breakfast to the diplomatic corps, in the Arlington annex, the house formerly occupied by the British minister. The wives of the cabinet officers and also now the families of the justices of the supreme court will subsequently hold receptions. Notwithstanding hard times "open house" will be very generally kept in society circles in Washington and moderating weather holds out a prospect of favorable climate conditions.

The widow of Gen. Grant has indicated to the Union Veteran legion of this city in response to a request to appoint an hour on New Year's day to receive them, that she is not prepared at present to emerge from her ten years' seclusion but in a year from now she hopes to meet the soldier comrades of her late husband.

Mrs. James G. Blaine has resumed the occupancy of the big house on Dupont circle which her late husband built at a cost of nearly $80,000 and subsequently leased to Mr. Z. L. Lester till it was rendered tenantless by fire. Mrs. Blaine, however, it is said, will not remain in Washington, her present stay here being simply for the reason that her large houses have remained so long unrented that they have become a serious drawback.

On Thursday next the president and Mrs. Cleveland will give the first state dinner of the season, Cabinet dinners will follow in quick succession, the postmaster general and Mrs. Bissell leading off.

BYRNES' RESIGNATION.

Not Generally Believed That He Wants To Leave the Department.

New York, Dec. 31.—Few people who read Supt. Byrnes' letter of resignation to Mayor-elect Strong and the statement he made later at his home could bring themselves to believe that he had any real desire to get out of the department.

Mr. Byrnes says himself that he is not sure that his action is final. He has left that for future determination. He would like very much to be called upon to reorganize the police force of this city, and is careful to state that he is the only man who has a plan for reorganization that is worth considering, and that Mr. Byrnes is the one man to carry it out.

He modestly adds to this that he has done three times as much work as any other superintendent, and is in reality the head and front of the present reform wave.

Reduction in Stamped Envelopes.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Third Assistant Postmaster General Craige has issued a circular informing postmasters of a reduction in the prices of stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers, after Jan. 1, 1895. The general public, however, will not derive much benefit from the change but buyers in large quantities will secure them a little cheaper.

All the Prisoners Left Jail.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 31.—All the prisoners who were confined in the county jail of Person county have made their escape. They were able to secure their liberty by cutting through the iron floor of the cage and then tunnelling through the brick wall. The sheriff is in close pursuit.

Naval Reserve Rendezvous.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 31.—Much interest is being manifested by the local division of the naval reserve of Connecticut in a proposed rendezvous here next summer of the naval battalions of Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Idaho's Mineral Production.

Boise, Idaho, Dec. 31.—Alfred Eoff, cashier of the Boise City National bank has prepared for Wells Fargo & Co., a statement of the mineral production of Idaho for 1894. The totals are: gold, $1,879,000; silver, $2,359,000; lead, $3,406,000; grand total, $7,644,000.

Fire at Sing Sing Prison.

Sing Sing, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Fire at Sing Sing prison destroyed the storehouse and laundry buildings. Some excitement among the convicts prevailed but no disorder. Loss $2,500; no insurance.

Shot and Killed Two Men.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—Frank Steinbank, a coal wagon driver shot and killed Frank McDonald and Patrick Sullivan last night in the southern suburbs of this city.

John Edward Heaton Dead.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 31.—John Edward Heaton, president of the Imperial Granum company, New Haven, is dead here, aged 84 years.

Six Men Badly Injured.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 31.—By an explosion of natural and sewer gas here six men were badly injured and a house utterly demolished.

IN THE LAND OF CAKES.

Curious Customs and Myths of New Year's Day Still Prevalent.

"Hogmanay," as the Scotch folk call their New Year's eve, is the greatest festival of the year in the "land o' cakes" and has many ancient and curious customs and superstitions connected with it. The origin of the name is uncertain, but it is pretty generally conceded to have been derived from the French words "au gui mener" (lead to the mistletoe), in allusion to the ancient Druidical custom of cutting the mistletoe from the oak on the night of the last day of the year. The sacred plant was brought by the priests into the towns and market places and given to the people as an amulet to preserve them from war and other calamities. While they had such a good old tongue as the Gaelic near at hand, it is not to be supposed that the pious Druids spoke to their votaries in the language of Johnny Crapaud. The intimate connection of Scotland and France during the middle ages will easily account for the introduction of the term "hogmanay."

The days about New Year's, which from the revelry and mummery that characterized them were called by the Scotch the "daft days," bear close resemblance to the "fetes des fous," which interfered so scandalously with the vigils in the French churches during the sixteenth century that they were finally put down by the bishop of Angres in 1598. During these "fetes des fous" bands of beggars clad in fantastic garbs broke into the churches on the eve of the New Year, and after singing their weird carols demanded alms of the worshipers.

The modern Scotch representatives of these obtrusive beggars were known as the "guisards" or "gyzars." These were harmless and entertaining maskers, who were generally admitted into the houses of the best families in the country, where, after singing their carols, they were permitted to dance with the members of the household.

Many assert that the hoghmen, or hillmen, were the good genii versus the trolls, or evil ones, who were the beings referred to; hence the ditty:

Hogmanay, Trollolay,
Gie me o' your white bread.
I'll hae nane o' your gray.

The white bread, signifying the good things of life, versus the gray, or evil ones. A very popular rhyme, with a moral, is one freely sung in the northeastern counties of Scotland:

Get up, gude wife, and binna sweir [lazy]
And deal your bread to them that's here,
For the time will come when ye'll be dead,
And then ye'll neither need ale nor bread.
My feet's cauld, my shoon's thin.
Gie's my cakes and let me rin.

Having chalked the doors with the New Year's numbers, they depart to gather coppers, cakes and fruit elsewhere.

At the stroke of midnight each member of the family party would quaff a full bumper of "hot pint" and wish the others a happy New Year and many of them. Then it was customary for the elders to sally forth with a hot kettle, bread and cheese, etc., and pay visits of greeting to the neighbors. The first party to enter a house were called the "first foot" and were warmly welcomed, as their arrival in that capacity indicated good luck. Much kindly rivalry ensued, and from midnight to 1 o'clock the streets were fairly swarming with would be "first footers." This custom was still prevalent in Scott's day.

Irish New Year's Cakes.

In County Antrim in Ireland among the Scotch-Irish oaten bannocks, with a hole in the middle, like our doughnuts, are specially baked for gift cakes. In other Irish counties a cake is thrown outside the door on New Year's eve "to keep out hunger" the ensuing year.

In the isle of Man a curious belief and custom existed till the middle of this century. In each home the housewife smoothed the ashes over the kitchen floor just before stepping into bed. If there were found in the morning on the surface of the ashes anything resembling the print that pointed toward the door, it indicated a death in the family within the year. But if the heel of the footprint were toward the door it was a sure proof that the family would be increased.

Welcome the Coming, Speed the Parting Guest.

All Gone.

Stuffer—The Gadsbys have an elegant New Year's lunch, old man.

Dashaway—Have you been there?

Stuffer—Oh, yes!

Dashaway—Then I'll get something to eat before I go.

Apropos.

"He was wonderfully careful in fixing himself up before he called on Miss Lordly New Year's day."

"Why didn't he do as the storekeepers do—display the sign, 'Holiday prices?'"

A NEW YEAR'S PRAYER.

Thou art our God, Redeemer and Creator;
Thou art "Our Father," dearest name of all.
Great in thy power and wisdom, in love greater,
Therefore we fear not on thy name to call.

Hear us, O Father, as we come confessing
The sins and follies of the bygone year.
Grant us forgiveness and with that thy blessing
Our faith to strengthen and our hearts to cheer.

Sweeten for us each bitter cup of duty
Or strengthen us their bitterness to quaff.
Give us to see the King in all his beauty
And to behold the land which is far off.

We thank thee for our being and well being.
Give us uplifting and upholding grace
To serve thee here until, earth's shadow fleeing,
We evermore shall see thee face to face.

The Little Stranger.

New Year's In Canada.

The young Canadian on New Year's morning, after he has taken breakfast with his father, mother, sisters and brothers, wends his way to the best looking girl in the range, and as he very well knows she can't refuse to kiss him on "le jour de l'an" presents himself at her door, there to be warmly greeted and invited to enter.

Taking off his snowshoes—it's easier and more "a la mode du Canadien" to climb over the crusty snowbanks than use a "traineau"—he accepts the invitation, and as he crosses the threshold he gives the girl, for whom he has long cherished a deep regard, a couple of smacks that cause the old folks in the kitchen to question each other as to the origin of the noise. Light drinks are served. That's what the young man does. The young girl waits.

But the old folks do not forget that the day is the first one of the year. So after the work of the household is over they put on their best bib and tucker and hitch up "Monplaisir," and they start out and begin the rounds of making calls, stopping at each house, the old man kissing the neighbor's old woman, and vice versa, rinsing it down with "a la votre" from the sideboard.

Conviviality reigns, good health is drunk, and alcoholism is unknown.

From the time the sun first casts its rays on a Canadian New Year's morning until a week and sometimes two weeks later a round of jollification exists among the French-Canadians of good standing. Every night a dinner is held at one of the "clique," and so on till each has had his "blow out," and finally all relapse into the old rut of common, everyday life, arising at the sound of the angelus in the morning and burning very few candles and still less kerosene in the evening.

What the New Year Brings.

Vacant chairs.
Good wishes without number.
Change, but not always silver.
January—and all the others.
Mistakes—we date our letters wrong.
Friends grown older and a few joyless.
Bills of every description, but every one too large.
Improvements that cause wonder and questionings.
Dividends without variety, all shrunk like old flannels.
"The new faces at the door, the new boot on the floor."
New friends? Yes, and worthy ones too. How have we existed without them?

NEW YEAR'S IN PARIS.

How Plethoric Pocketbooks Are Emptied on Poor People.

Every one utters a sigh of relief when New Year's is over. It is the day when millions of francs change pockets and the well to do the next morning think that the saying "It is better to give than to receive," is a poor solace for the contemplation of an empty pocket. Any man, woman or child having done anything directly or indirectly for the bourgeois appeals to him for his "etrennes." Ragpickers, street sweepers, gas men, telegraph boys, letter carriers, servants of one's own household, servants of houses in which you have been entertained during the year, all expect New Year's money, and the custom of giving has been one of so long standing that it is thought legally due, at least by those who receive. Men on that unfortunate day are more tired than women. They must give to every one, little and big, to their barbers, their bootblacks, to the men who serve out their drinks, to everybody in their employ. For rich bachelors it is the season of torture. They not only have the outlays of married men, but must make expensive presents in the shape of bonbonnieres filled with the most expensive bonbons and flowers to every woman whose dinners they have eaten and whose pipers have made them dance during the year. Not only must these perishing things have an intrinsic value for variety and originality, but they must bear the seal of some expensive house on the Grande boulevard, which, well aware that bargaining is not in order and that it is harvest time, makes no scruple about putting the most outrageous price on the bills. It is no wonder that many of them about New Year's are unexpectedly called away to the country or the deathbed of some distant uncle or cousin.

EMMA BULLET.

The Animals' Mass.

A very strange ceremony is observed in the Cevennes mountains every New Year's eve. This is the so called "animals' mass." The church where this takes place is described as "a poor little tumble down place, with lichen grown walls and a square, ungraceful steeple." While the "cracked bell tolls frantically" the mountaineers inside the church, dressed in their festal clothes and each one holding a lighted candle, sing the old Cevenol hymn beginning, "Night more beautiful than day," and the oxen, the cows, sheep and goats are driven to take their places in long rows before the open portico of the church. Mass is then celebrated in the usual manner, but when the "Ita messa est" is pronounced the priest once more raises the host, and chanting the "Magnificat" marches toward the door, followed by the whole congregation. The drivers and shepherds fall upon their knees, and an acolyte with a holy water sprinkler walks through the ranks of the bellowing and bleating animals and anoints them with the holy fluid. Moved by some unknown instinct or excited by this ceremony, the animals, which have been lying down, rise to their feet, while the venerable cure blesses them. The ceremony concludes with a loud hosanna, in which every one joins, and the sound, mingled with the voices of the animals, is echoed from the surrounding hills.

Advice.

"Papa, I've come to ask your advice."

"What is it, my dear?"

"I want to know what you think you had better give me for a New Year's present."

The New.

Only a night from old to new;
Only a sleep from night to morn.
The new is but the old come true.
Each sunrise sees a new year born.

—Helen Hunt.

RECLAIMED FROM DEATH.

The Terror of Man Thwarted.

In the Grasp of that Dread Disease, Consumption.—Life Given Back.—Almost Miraculous.

Fortunately, perhaps, the Consumptive does not realize his own condition. His is a disease of continual waste until he meets a death that is in reality one of starvation.

It is now generally conceded that this disease is incurable,—that is, by any known medicine. Change of climate, or some life-infusing food that will give new flesh, blood, and strength, and induce the various organs of the body to assume their normal functions,—this is the only hope.

The only way to do this effectually is to give the patient Bovinine, that great raw food product, the greatest concentration of the life-giving elements of raw beef known to modern science. In this connection the results obtained by Dr. J. H. Head of Atlanta, Ga., in the treatment of a case of consumption, are interesting.

Dr. Head relates briefly how a man about thirty-five years of age came to him for treatment. He had lost forty pounds in weight in six months; he suffered with a bad cough and experienced severe night sweats; he was unable to do any work; most of his family had died of consumption, and on examination his right lung was found to be seriously affected, and as the doctor remarked, "He was in a good way to have an early funeral."

But note what happened. He was given Bovinine. In two weeks he had gained seven pounds, his appetite had returned, he was able to do a good day's work, and most of the distressing symptoms had vanished; and at the time of writing the doctor felt sure of a complete cure.

This is but one of many similar cases. Bovinine will give new life and strength, make new blood and flesh, stop waste, ward off disease, and turn the current of life's river again into its natural channel. Give it one trial while there is yet hope.
